14 Therefore, ~~behold~~, I will proceed[✓] to do a marvellous work among this people, [even] yea, a marvellous work and a wonder, for the wisdom of their wise [men] and learned shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent [men] shall be hid.

✓ add

YLT renders the Masoretic text (M) as “Therefore, lo, I.” The Targum (T) has, “Therefore, behold, I shall again (Chaldee, ‘adding to strike’) strike this people with wonderful strokes; the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hidden.” The LXX (S) reads, “Therefore, behold, I will proceed to the removal of this people and I will remove them; and destroy the wisdom of the wise, and darken the understanding of the prudent.” The Peshitta (S) has, for the first “marvelous work,” create a division (BPE) / set apart (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Therefore behold I will proceed to cause an admiration in this people, by a great and wonderful miracle: for wisdom shall perish from their wise men, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid.” ¶ Regarding the wonderful wonder among these people see Psalm 72:18, and our notes under ISAIAH 29:17. Faussett well notes that the marvelous work and a wonder was associated with the strange work mentioned in ISAIAH 28:21. Govett quotes John 9:39: “And Jesus said, For judgment I am come into this world, that they which see not might see; and that they which see might be made blind.” While Jennings goes on to speak of “God giving His own Son” his words also certainly fit perfectly to the Book of Mormon that was sent forth for the very purpose of testifying of Christ, the Son of God, and the confounding of false teachings, and together with the Bible the Lord’s tool for the gathering of Israel in the last days: “[God] will add to all His marvelous works by another still more marvelous. So wonderful is this—so superhumanly wonderful—that when it comes, it shall destroy all ancient times, those who appear to be servants of the Lord and present themselves to labor in his vineyard are subject to the prophetic principle: ‘The laborer in Zion shall labor for Zion; for if they labor for money they shall perish’ (2 Nephi 26:31) ... The commandment to avoid priestcraft is a vital challenge to religious persons in every age of time. It is easier to have clean hands than to have a pure heart. It is easier to control our acts than to control our thoughts.” Oaks, Dallin H. Pure in Heart. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1988, pp. 16–18.

³¹ JS-H 1:19.

man's boasted wisdom, and so eclipse his prudence as to render it invisible, as the noon-day sun extinguishes the light of a taper." ¶ Therefore, I will proceed to do a marvellous work among this people, yea, a marvellous work and a wonder. It is interesting that in the Talmud tradition (Seder Mo'ed, Shabbath 138b) these words are applied to the Torah, its neglect and future study: "For Rab said: The Torah is destined to be forgotten in Israel, because it is said, Then the Lord will make thy plagues wonderful: now, I do not know what this wonder is, but when it is said, Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a wonderful work among this people, even a wonderful work and a wonder [and the wisdom of their wise men shall perish], it follows that this wonder refers to Torah" (Talmud, Soncino). As LDS we certainly understand this verse to be associated with Scripture, and more specifically, the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, which was written for the "convincing of both Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ." ¶ Elder LeGrand Richards had much to say about this glorious verse, including: "Could you imagine living upon the earth when the God of Heaven fulfills that promise made by the Prophet Isaiah and not wanting to know what that 'marvellous work and a wonder' is all about? No boy or girl or man or woman in this world, if they understood fully what God has done in restoring His truth to the earth in our day, could call it anything but 'a marvellous work and a wonder.' When the God of Heaven says that it will be a 'marvellous work and a wonder' in His eyes, then what ought it to be to those of us who are privileged to be partakers of it?"³² ¶ For the wisdom of their wise and learned shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent shall be hid. Elder Marion G. Romney explained: "Until we come to a knowledge of God, we will continue in our distraction, regardless of how much other knowledge we acquire. The Lord, knowing all things, foresaw our present state of confusion; and long ago, speaking about us through His prophets, Isaiah and Nephi, declared, 'The wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid' (ISAIAH 29:14; 2 Nephi 27:26). Confirming the fact, He has said in our day that the wisdom of men has perished and their understanding has come to naught. And He has specified as the reason for their loss of wisdom their forsaking of Him. His words are, 'They have strayed from mine ordinances, and have broken mine everlasting covenant; They seek not the Lord to establish his righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own God, whose image is in the likeness of the world' (D&C

1:15–16)."³³ Elder LeGrand Richards spoke at General Conference, "I am going to tell you one more experience. A few years ago two of the major churches on the west coast, including California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, and Nevada, were holding a convention here in Salt Lake. Their leader wrote a letter to President McKay and asked if he would send one of the General Authorities to attend their convention and talk for two hours in the morning session and tell them the story of Mormonism... I explained the restoration of the gospel, the difference between a restoration and a reformation... Then I held up the Bible. I said, 'Here is the Lord's blueprint. Isaiah said the Lord had declared the end from the beginning. It is all here. Now,' I said, 'you could take this, the Lord's blueprint, and try to fit it to every church in this world, but there is only one church that it will fit, and that is The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Now,' I said, 'I will proceed to illustrate to you what I mean.' I said that in Canon Frederick William Farrar's work Life of Christ (Cassell, 1902), he said there were two passages in the New Testament for which he could find no excuse. The first is John 10:16, where Jesus said, 'And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.' ... The other passage they couldn't understand was the one where Paul said, 'Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?' (1 Corinthians 15:29). [After explaining the meaning of these two scriptures Elder LeGrand Richards said] ... you can't look for the coming of the Savior as was promised by Peter and the prophets until there has been a restitution, and not a reformation.' When I concluded, the man in charge said, 'Mr. Richards, this has been one of the most interesting experiences of my entire life.' That is what Isaiah meant when he said, 'the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid.' (ISAIAH 29:14)."³⁴

15 And woe unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the LORD! And their works are in the dark; and they say, Who seeth us? and who knoweth us?

And woe unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the LORD! The LXX (5) reads, "Alas! for them, who deeply form a design, but not by the Lord." The

³² Elder LeGrand Richards in 1960, Brigham Young University Speeches of the Year. Provo, Utah: Brigham Young University Press, 1960–1966, pp. 6–7

³³ Romney, Marion G. Brigham Young University Speeches of the Year. Provo, Utah: Brigham Young University Press, February 11, 1964, p. 8.

³⁴ Elder LeGrand Richards, He Has Sent His Messenger to Prepare the Way, Ensign (CR), July 1973, p.76.

Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Woe to you that are deep of heart, to hide your counsel from the Lord.” ¶ And their works are in the dark; and they say, Who seeth us and who knoweth us? The LXX (G) reads, “Alas! for them, who form designs in secret, that their works may be in darkness; and who will say, ‘Who hath seen us, and who can find out us, or what we do?’” The Masoretic text (M) has and who knoweth us (וְיִדְעֵנּוּ). The Peshitta (S), for who knoweth us, has Who knows what we do corruptly? (Lamsa) / Who knows we have been perverted? (BPE) ¶ Nyman writes: “The Book of Mormon retains the word ‘and’ in introducing the verse, which indicates that it refers back to what has been said. The warning is to those who refuse the message of the ‘marvelous work and a wonder’—the Book of Mormon—which would come forth to correct the precepts of men...” Spencer W. Kimball taught: “Isaiah warned: ‘Woe unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the Lord, and their works are in the dark, and they say, Who seeth us? and who knoweth us?’ (ISAIAH 29:15). Likewise our Lord suggested that men ‘loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light’ (John 3:19–20).”³⁵

16 And they also say: Surely, your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter’s clay. But behold, I will show unto them, saith the Lord of Hosts, that I know all their works. For shall the work say of him that made it, he made me not? Or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, he had no understanding?

(Also see ISAIAH 45:9) And they also say: Surely, your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter’s clay. The Targum (T) has, “Why do ye seek to pervert your works? Behold, as the clay in the hand of the potter, thus are ye accounted before me.” The LXX (G) reads, “Are not you to be considered as the potter’s clay?” The BPE (S) has, for the first clause, “You are considered as the potters clay.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “This thought of yours is perverse: as if the clay should think against the potter.” ¶ Barnes explains: “The sense of the passage seems to be this: ‘Your “changing of things” is just as absurd as it would be for the thing formed to say to him that formed it, why hast thou made me thus? It is as absurd for you to find fault with the government of God as it would be for the clay to complain of want of skill in the potter. You complain of God’s laws, and worship Him according to the commandments of people. You complain of his requirements, and offer to him the service of the mouth and the lip, and withhold the heart. You suppose that God does not see you, and do your deeds in darkness. All this supposes that God is destitute of wisdom, and cannot see what is done, and it is just as absurd as it would be in the clay to complain that the potter who fashions it has no understanding.” ¶ But behold, I will show unto them, saith the Lord of Hosts, that I know all their works. Nothing is hid from the Lord. ¶ For shall the work say of him that made it, he made me not? The Targum (T) has, “Is it possible that the clay should say to its maker, Thou hast not made me?” The LXX (G) reads, “Shall the thing formed say to the former of it, thou hast not made me.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And the work should say to the maker thereof: Thou madest me not.” ¶ Or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, he had no understanding? The Targum (T) has, “Or should the creature say to its creator, Thou dost not understand me?” The LXX (G) reads, “Or shall the work say to the workman thou hast not made me wisely?” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Or the thing framed should say to him that fashioned it: Thou understandest not.”

vv. 17–24. Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field. The Book of Mormon will be searched by the deaf and by the blind. The poor and the humble will embrace the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Those who oppose the restored Gospel will make the Brethren and the Church an offender by a word—especially because they will twist these words. At the end, however, the house of Israel will no longer feel humiliated and ashamed. Those who had been blinded by the false traditions of the fathers will find understanding through the Book of Mormon and the restored Gospel of Jesus Christ.

17 ¶ But behold, saith the Lord of Hosts: I will show unto the children of men that [Is] it is not* yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field; and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest? .

* JST: restores “not” deleted in Book of Mormon.

But behold, saith the Lord of Hosts: I will show unto the children of men that it is not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field; and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest. The Targum (T) has, “Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall turn into (Chaldee, ‘to be’) a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be inhabited by many cities.” The LXX (G) reads, “Is it not a little while, ere Libanus shall be changed to a likeness of mount Carmel? And

³⁵ Spencer W. Kimball, The Miracle of Forgiveness, p.213.

Carmel be accounted a forest?" The Lamsa Peshitta (S) has, reared as a forest, instead of esteemed as a forest. The BPE (S) is essentially the same as the KJV: considered as a forest. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, "Is it not yet a very little while, and Libanus shall be turned into charmel, and charmel shall be esteemed as a forest?" Alexander explains regarding לֹא-עוֹד (not yet?): "The negative interrogation is one of the strongest forms of affirmation." Barnes suggests that the uncultivated Lebanon would turn fruitful: "This is evidently a proverbial expression, denoting any great revolution of things. It is probable that in the times of Isaiah the whole chain of Lebanon was uncultivated, as the word is evidently used here in opposition to a fruitful field. The word which is rendered 'fruitful field' (כַּרְמֶל) properly denotes 'a fruitful field,' or a finely cultivated country." ¶ Literal meaning. Cheyne says, "Most commentators prefer to take ISAIAH 29:17 figuratively. But a comparison of the parallel passage favors a combined literal and symbolical interpretation." Most LDS speak of the literal fulfillment of these promises associated with a period close to the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt explains: "As another evidence that the book of which Isaiah speaks was to come forth in latter times, he says in the seventeenth verse, is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as the forest?" 18th verse: And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness.' This book could not mean the New Testament, for when that was written it was about the time that Lebanon was to be forsaken by the Jews and become a desolation, a forest, or wilderness for many generations. 'Upon the land of my people shall come up thorns and briers.' (ISAIAH 32:13.) Hence the land of Palestine, which includes Lebanon, was, when the New Testament was written, about to be cursed. But immediately after the unlearned should read the book, 'Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as the forest.' The book, therefore, that Isaiah prophesies of is to come forth just before the great day of the restoration of Israel to their own lands; at which time Lebanon and all the land of Canaan is again to be blessed, while the fruitful field occupied by the nations of the Gentiles, 'will be esteemed as a forest;' the multitude of the nations of the Gentiles are to perish, and their lands which are now like a fruitful field, are to be left desolate of inhabitants and become as Lebanon has been for many generations past; while Lebanon shall again be occupied by Israel, and be turned into a fruitful field. These great events could not take place until the Lord should first bring forth a book out of the ground."³⁶ In Conference, Elder Mark E. Peterson testified: "A sacred book was to come forth... Where is that book? It is one of the signs of the times. Not only did the prophets predict its appearance, but Isaiah set a limit on the time of its publication. That time limit was related to the period when fertility would return to Palestine. Isaiah said that the book would come forth first, and then added that in 'a very little while . . . Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest' (ISAIAH 29:17). The time limit has expired. This new volume of scripture must have come forth before now or Isaiah was not a true prophet, for Palestine is fruitful again."³⁷ ¶ Simeon asks, "What is that book to which the attention of all men shall be called—" and we as LDS answer: the attention of men shall be called to the Book of Mormon together with the Bible as shown in Ezekiel 37.

18 And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity and out of darkness.

And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book. The Targum (T) has, "And at that time those who are like the deaf shall hear the words of the book." The LXX (G) reads, "And in that day the deaf shall hear the words of a book." Rawlinson says: "The spiritually deaf shall have their ears opened, many of them, and shall not only hear, but understand, the words of Scripture addressed to them by God's messengers." Delitzsch also has: "The people that are now blind and deaf, so far as the word of Jehovah is concerned, are changed into a people with open ears and seeing eyes." ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie wrote: "The gathering of Israel in the last days shall consist in bringing together 'the blind people that have eyes, and the deaf that have ears,' that is, the spiritually blind and deaf shall come to a knowledge of the things of God and they shall see and hear (ISAIAH 43). In large part the opening of the eyes of the blind and the unstopping of the ears of the deaf shall take place by means of the Book of Mormon. 'And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness' (ISAIAH 29:18)."³⁸ I am one who was blind to the things of God until I read the Book of Mormon.

³⁶ Pratt, Orson. Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, number 6, Prophetic evidence in favor of the Book of Mormon, Latter-day tracts, p. 90.

³⁷ Elder Mark E. Petersen, Conference Report, October 1965, Second Day-Morning Meeting, p.61.

³⁸ Bruce R. McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, 2nd ed., p.184.

¶ There is also a more literal fulfillment. Elder Orson Pratt explained, “‘In that day shalt the deaf hear the words of the book, the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity and out of darkness.’ A great many people, perhaps, would want this spiritualized; but, whether it is spiritualized or not, I can bear testimony to one thing which I have seen with my own eyes, and that is that those who were deaf, so deaf that they could not hear the loudest sound, have been instantaneously restored by the administrations of the Elders of this Church and thus the deaf, the literally deaf, have been enabled to hear the words of the book. The eyes of the blind, not those alone who are spiritually blind, but of those who are blind physically, should see out of obscurity and out of darkness, when that book was revealed. Now I know that this, too, has been the case, and many in this congregation know it and have seen it; some have seen those who were born blind restored to their sight by the power of God since this book came forth. Thus have been fulfilled, literally, the words of our text.”³⁹ My daughter Andrea has retinitis pigmentosa and my wife got her a copy of the Book of Mormon in Braille. So it is yet another way that this prophecy is fulfilled, as not all the blind or all of the deaf will be healed in this lifetime. ¶ And the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity and out of darkness. The KJV does not include the double-and that appears in the Hebrew. A good translation might be: “And out of obscurity, and out of darkness, the eyes of the blind shall see.” Both the DSS 1QIsa^a (א) וּמֵאֲפֶלֶת וּמִחוּשׁ, and the Masoretic text (מ) וּמֵאֲפֶלֶת וּמִחוּשׁ, retain this double-and construction. The Targum (ܬ) has, “And the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “And they in darkness, even they in thick darkness—the eyes even of the blind shall see.” Nägelsbach wrote: “Is not the purport of these two verses, 18 and 19, reproduced in the saying of Christ, ‘The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the Gospel preached to them’ (Matthew 11:5; Luke 7:22)?” Bruce R. McConkie explained: “Jesus, as he ‘targumed’⁴⁰ Isaiah’s meaning from Hebrew to Aramaic, did what only inspired interpreters can do: he expanded the words and interpreted the meaning of the original utterance. ‘I am sent by the Father—not only to proclaim how deliverance from sin may be found, but to preach the recovering of spiritual sight to those who are blind spiritually.’⁴¹ Through me they shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness.’ If a parallel passage for these added words is needed, it may be found in Isaiah’s prophecy about the latter-day coming forth of the Book of Mormon, for the promise is that through ‘the words of the book . . . the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness’ (ISAIAH 29:8).”⁴²

19 And the meek also shall increase,[✓] and [their] joy shall be in the LORD, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.

✓ add

The Targum (ܬ) has, “And those that have suffered affliction on account of the Word of the Lord shall increase their joy, and the poor of the sons of men shall rejoice in the Word of the holy One of Israel.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “And the distressed shall exult with joy because of the Lord; and the disconsolate among men shall be filled with joy.” The meek (עֲנָוִים) are the “poor afflicted, humble” (DBD). Rawlinson says, “The ‘evangelical prophet’ anticipates the gospel in this, among other points that he promises his choicest blessings, not to the rich and mighty, but to the poor and meek (compare ISAIAH 57:15; 61:1).” Elder Orson Pratt writes, “Now during the long night of darkness there have been some humble, meek persons who have had a degree of light; but as the Church of Christ had fled from the earth there was no one that had authority to baptize or administer the ordinances of the gospel to those meek persons; therefore their joy was imperfect: but Isaiah says, when the book is revealed, ‘the meek shall increase their joy in the Lord.’ This is what the book is calculated to produce; for by its contents the meek learn that the time is at hand for them to inherit the earth, according to the blessings of our Savior on the Mount: ‘Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth.’ This will be fulfilled after all the wicked nations are destroyed. ‘And the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.’ This also is promised as a result of the revelation of the book, and the means by which it is to be effected is by a general overthrow of the wicked; as, says Isaiah: ‘For the terrible one is brought to naught, and the scorner is consumed, and all that watch for iniquity are cut off; that make a man an offender for a word, and lay a snare for him that reproveth in the gate, and turn aside the just for a thing of naught.’ O how plainly it is declared that judgment was soon to fall upon all the wicked after the appearance of this book, this marvelous work and a wonder! And O how plainly it is also declared that the ³⁹ Pratt, Orson. July 18, 1875; Journal of Discourses, Vol. 4, p. 165.

⁴⁰ That is, paraphrased from Hebrew to Aramaic.

⁴¹ See Luke 4:18 ff.

⁴² Bruce R. McConkie, The Mortal Messiah: From Bethlehem to Calvary, pp.22–23.

deaf, the blind, the meek and the poor among men were to be greatly benefited by the book.”⁴³

20 For assuredly as the Lord liveth they shall see that the terrible one is brought to nought, and the scorner is consumed, and all that watch for iniquity are cut off;

For assuredly as the Lord liveth they shall see that the terrible one is brought to nought. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “For the oppressor is come to an end, and the plunderer is made to cease.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “The lawless one hath failed.” Instead of the terrible one the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has the oppressor. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “For he that did prevail hath failed.” ¶ And the scorner is consumed, and all that watch for iniquity are cut off. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And all that rose up early to act violently have come to an end.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And the haughty one is destroyed, and these are utterly cut off who maliciously commit iniquity.” Those who watch for iniquity, says Faussett, are those who “watch for opportunities of committing it.” Gill agrees and adds: “[These are those who] cannot sleep unless they commit it, and seek for and take all opportunities of doing it; or watch for iniquity in others, in Christ, and the professors of his religion [i.e., the Saints or followers of Christ]; or for anything they could call so, that they might have something to accuse them of.” Or, as we see in the next verse, those who make a man an offender for a word. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt wrote: “However much you may have erred, because you have been taught by the precepts of men; however much you may have walked in darkness and blindness, with the Prophets, seers, and revelations of God covered, and no voice of inspiration in your midst; however much you may have groped in outer darkness, yet if you have been meek before the lord, you will come to understanding when [the Book of Mormon] makes its appearance... when a certain book should come forth it should bless the meek and lowly in heart, for their joy should increase in the Lord. And the poor among men be gathered out from the nations.”⁴⁴

21 And they that make a man an offender for a word, and lay a snare for him that reproveth in the gate, and turn aside the just for a thing of nought.

And they that make a man an offender for a word. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “All that declare the sons of men guilty on account of their words.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And who by reasoning cause men to err.” Brenton’s Ⲭ renders it “And they that cause men to sin by a word.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “Those who cause men to sin by the word.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “That made men sin by word.” ¶ In New Testament times the Savior was constantly made an offender for a word. After the coming forth of the Book of Mormon the Prophet Joseph Smith was likewise made an offender for a word: so also today the Brethren are often accused. Ibn Ezra explains that to make a man an offender for a word means one who will “watch the words of man, and accuse him, in order to see him punished.” Alexander writes: “Ewald... takes מְבַדֵּק in the same sense with the English and many other early versions, which explain the clause to mean accusing or condemning men for a mere error of the tongue or lips.” Or better, for what the wicked believe is an error. The Geneva Bible notes correctly have: “They who went about to find fault with the prophets words, and would not abide admonitions, but would entangle them and bring them into danger.” The Prophet Joseph Smith wrote: “...our souls were vexed from day to day. We refer you to Isaiah, who considers those who make a man an offender for a word, and lay a snare for him that reproveth in the gate. We believe that the old Prophet told the truth: and we have no retraction to make. We have reproveth in the gate, and men have laid snares for us. We have spoken words, and men have made us offenders. And notwithstanding all this, our minds are not yet darkened, but feel strong in the Lord.”⁴⁵ Elder Dallin H. Oaks explained: “The Lord acts through his servants. That is the pattern he has established to safeguard our agency in mortality. His servants are not perfect, which is another consequence of mortality. But if we act against them, we are working against the Lord and his cause and will soon find ourselves without the companionship of his Spirit. There are other such teachings in ancient and modern scriptures. The prophet Isaiah denounced those who ‘make a man an offender for a word, and lay a snare for him that reproveth in the gate’ (ISAIAH 29:21; see also 2 Ne. 27:32). This modern revelation from the Doctrine and Covenants is to the same effect: ‘Cursed are all those that shall lift up the heel against mine anointed, saith the Lord, and cry they have sinned when they have not sinned before me, saith the Lord, but have done that which was meet in mine eyes, and which I commanded them. But those who cry transgression do it because they are the servants of sin, and are the children of disobedience themselves’” (see

⁴³ Pratt, Orson. Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, number 6, Prophetic evidence in favor of the Book of Mormon, Latter-day tracts, p. 90.

⁴⁴ Elder Orson Pratt, July 18, 1875; Journal of Discourses, Vol. 4, p. 166.

⁴⁵ TPJS, p. 124.

D&C 121:16–22.)⁴⁶ Elder Neal A. Maxwell warned us against fault finding, “In a church established, among other reasons, for the perfecting of the Saints—an ongoing process—it is naive to expect, and certainly unfair to demand, perfection in our peers. A brief self-inventory is wise before we ‘cast the first stone.’ Possessing a few rocks in our own heads, it is especially dangerous to have rocks too ready in our hands. (‘Not My Will, But Thine’, p. 74.)”⁴⁷ ¶ And lay a snare for him that reproveth in the gate, and turn aside the just for a thing of naught. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “The court of justice that is in the gate seeks to ensnare him, who reproves them with the words of the law (the Royal Polyglot omits בִּית דִּינָא, and reads, ‘They lay a snare for him who reproves them in the gate with the words of the law,’ &c.). They turn aside the just by false judgment.” The LXX (Ⓢ) reads, “But as for all them who reprove in the gates they will indeed lay a stumbling block, because of their having turned aside the righteous one for the unrighteous.” Brenton Ⓢ renders the last clause, “because they have unjustly turned aside the righteous,” while NETS Ⓢ has “and they have turned aside the just among the unjust.” Lamsa Peshitta (Ⓢ) has, “And lay a snare for him that reproves, and turn aside the righteous into darkness.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓢ) has, “And supplanted him that reproved them in the gate, and declined in vain from the just.” ¶ Rawlinson explains: “‘The gate’ was the place where judgment was given and public assemblies held.” Cheyne writes regarding the gate: “In the chief place of concourse, where, too, the judges sat. So Amos, ‘They hate him that reproveth in the gate’ (Amos 5:10).” Regarding the second half of this clause Delitzsch writes: “And thrust away the righteous, i.e., forced him away from his just rights (ISAIAH 10:2), בִּלְהוֹךְ, [for thing of naught—also see Genesis 1:2, without form], i.e., accusations and pretences of the utmost worthlessness; for these would all have been swept away... for with Isaiah בִּלְהוֹךְ is the synonym for all such words as signify nothingness, groundlessness, and fraud.”

22 Therefore, thus saith the LORD, who redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob: Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale.

Therefore, thus saith the LORD, who redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob: The LXX (Ⓢ) reads, “Therefore, thus saith the Lord respecting the house of Jacob, whom he set apart from Abraham.” Ironside says of ISAIAH 29:22–24, “Never, in times past, have these words had their fulfillment, but we may be assured that nothing that God has spoken will ever come to naught.” Barnes says, “The connection ... would seem to imply that there was a reference to the promise which was made to Abraham that he should have a numerous posterity (see ISAIAH 29:23).” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt makes this scripture clear: “After Isaiah had foretold the great change that was to happen to Lebanon, to the deaf, etc., when the book should be revealed, he then describes more particularly the great benefit the book should be to the house of Jacob. He says, ‘Therefore, thus saith the Lord, who redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob, Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face wax pale. But when he seeth his children, the work of mine hands in the midst of him, they shall sanctify my name, and sanctify the Holy One of Jacob, and shall fear the God of Israel.’ The house of Jacob has been made ashamed, and his face has waxed pale, ever since he was driven away from Lebanon or Canaan, but the Lord has now brought forth out of the ground book which shall, accompanied by His power, restore the tribes of Jacob from the four quarters of the globe, and establish them in the land of Palestine and Lebanon forever; and His holy name they shall no more profane, but shall be a righteous people throughout all their generations, while the earth shall stand, and they shall possess their promised land again in eternity, nevermore to pass away; therefore, they shall never again be made ashamed. It is in vain for the Gentiles to seek the conversion of Jacob, and to bring about their great redemption, only in the way that the Lord God of Israel hath predicted and appointed: they may call meetings and conventions to convert the Jews, but let them know assuredly that the book spoken of by Isaiah is to accomplish the salvation of the house of Jacob, and bring about the restoration of all Israel, while the Gentiles who will not receive it and be numbered and identified with the house of Jacob, must surely perish, yea, and they shall be utterly wasted with storm and tempest, with earthquakes and famine, with the flame of devouring fire, and their fruitful lands shall be esteemed as a forest, while Jacob shall dwell in safety for ever.”⁴⁸ Philip Reynolds explains, “Commentators note that there is no reference in the Old Testament to any incident in the life of the Patriarch [Abraham] to which this redemption can refer specially, but that there is a tradition that he, at some time, was threatened with the fire of a burning furnace. In the Book of Abraham, Pearl of Great Price, I think, we find the story of the redemption of Abraham to which ISAIAH (29:22) and Nephi here refer ... a time came, when the priests of Pharaoh seized Abraham, intending to take his life on the altar. But when he lifted up his voice to God, the ‘Angel of his (God’s) Presence’ appeared, unloosened the bands of the intended victim, promised him the Priesthood, and declared that: ‘Through thy ministry my name shall be known in the earth forever, for I am thy God’ ... It was thus that God redeemed Abraham by almighty power ...”⁴⁹ ¶ Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They of the house of Jacob shall not henceforth be confounded, neither shall their faces henceforth look dismayed (literally, ‘be changed’).” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Jacob will not be ashamed now, nor will he now change his countenance.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “Jacob shall not now be confounded, neither shall his countenance now be ashamed.”

⁴⁶ Dallin H. Oaks, The Lord’s Way, p.197–198.

⁴⁷ Maxwell, Cory H., ed. The Neal A. Maxwell Quote Book. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1997.

⁴⁸ Pratt, Orson. Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, number 6, Prophetic evidence in favor of the Book of Mormon, Latter-day tracts, p. 90–91.

¶ Alexander correctly explains לֹא-עַתָּה: “The Hebrew phrase not now does not imply that it shall be so hereafter, but on the contrary, that it shall be so no more. Redak has, “Since all Jews are descendants of Jacob, if there are wicked among them, it is as though Jacob is ashamed, as he would be were he alive, for a father is embarrassed if his son abandons the faith” (in Rabbi Rosenberg). Not just the Jews, but all of the house of Israel. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt explained, “Now how is this book to affect the house of Israel? Is it for their benefit particularly? They have been a long time scattered, a long time abroad among the nations; are they to be affected by this book that is spoken of by Isaiah? Yes. Read the 22nd verse, which I have already once read before you—‘Therefore, thus saith the Lord, who redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob, Jacob, shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale.’ Why? Because this book [has] come forth to bring the house of Jacob from all the nations and kingdoms of the earth; and this will commence just as soon as the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled; not until then. We must be warned first; we Gentiles must hear the word first; and when we count ourselves unworthy of eternal life, and fight against the book, and against the Zion and people of God, behold the Lord will then remember the house of Jacob, and they will no longer be ashamed.”⁵⁰ Why will Jacob not be ashamed? We find the answer in ISAIAH 29:23, because the children of Israel will turn to the Lord God.

23 But when he seeth his children, the work of mine hands, in the midst of him, they shall sanctify my name, and sanctify the Holy One of Jacob, and shall fear the God of Israel.

But when he seeth his children, the work of mine hands, in the midst of him. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “But when they of the house of Jacob shall see (literally, ‘in his seeing’) the mighty deeds which I shall do for their children, the kindness which I have promised Abraham, and his posterity after him in their own land.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But when his children shall see my works.” So also that the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has the children seeing the work of the hands of the Lord, and as a result, sanctifying of glorifying the Lord. Redak has “When Jacob sees his children, who are truly his children by following the ways of God” (in Rabbi Rosenberg). ¶ Elder Orson Pratt continues: “The lord says, in the 23rd verse, that Jacob, when he shall see his children, the work of his hands, in the midst of him, that is, gathered out from among the nations, they shall sanctify my name, and shall sanctify the Holy One of Jacob, and shall fear the God of Israel. Where will this work commence among the house of Israel? Among the remnant that we call the American Indians, who are the literal descendants of Israel.”⁵¹ ¶ They shall sanctify my name, and sanctify the Holy One of Jacob,⁵² and shall fear the God of Israel. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They shall sanctify my name among them; they shall say, Holy (ⲉⲗ after ⲕⲃⲓⲃ is omitted in the Royal Polyglot) is the holy One of Jacob; and concerning the God of Israel they shall say, He is mighty.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Because of me they will hallow my name. They will hallow the Holy One of Jacob, and tremble before the God of Israel.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has glorify instead of fear. Delitzsch well says, “The end of Israel will correspond to the holy root of its origin. Just as Abraham was separated from the human race that was sunk in heathenism, to become the ancestor of a nation of Jehovah, so would a remnant be separated from the great mass of Israel that was sunk in apostasy from Jehovah; and this remnant would be the foundation of a holy community well pleasing to God.” Elder Dallin H. Oaks said: “When Isaiah condemned the critics of his

⁴⁹ Reynolds, Philip C., ed. Commentary on the Book of Mormon. 6 vols. Salt Lake City, Utah, vol. I, pp. 400–401.

⁵⁰ Elder Orson Pratt, July 18, 1875; Journal of Discourses, Vol. 4, p. 166–168.

⁵¹ Elder Orson Pratt, July 18, 1875; Journal of Discourses, Vol. 4, p. 166–168.

⁵² Delitzsch, in defending the unity of Isaiah says, “There is the same interchange of Jacob and Israel here which we so frequently met with in chapters 40ff. And, in fact, throughout this undisputedly genuine prophecy of Isaiah, we can detect the language of chapters 40–66. Through the whole of the first part, indeed, we may trace the gradual development of the thoughts and forms which predominate there.”

day, he concluded with a prophecy. He said that in time the children of God would ‘fear the God of Israel’ and ‘sanctify [his] name.’”⁵³

24 They also that erred in spirit shall come to understanding, ✓ and they that murmured shall learn doctrine.

✓ know understanding

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And they who were not taught by the spirit of understanding shall have knowledge; and they who said, All these things are nothing, shall receive instruction.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And they who have erred in spirit will gain knowledge, and the murmurers shall be taught obedience, and the trifling tongues will learn to speak peace.” Instead of they that murmured shall learn doctrine, the Peshitta (Ⓟ) has those who lack wisdom will learn obedience. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “And they that erred in spirit, shall know understanding, and they that murmured, shall learn the law.” Who are those who murmured? The clear answer: the descendants of Israel. Barnes says, “All that the prophet teaches is, that at some future period in the history of the Jews, there would be such a reform that they should be regarded as the worthy descendants of the pious patriarch Jacob.” Gill explains, “The doctrine of the Messiah... which Christ ‘received’ from his Father, as the word (לקח) used signifies, and his disciples received from him, and the church has received from them, and has been transmitted to [the] Gentiles, and will be to the Jews in the latter day, who will learn the true knowledge of it.” And indeed, the Book of Mormon is given “... to the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that JESUS is the CHRIST, the ETERNAL GOD.” Elder Orson Pratt testimony feels me with joy: “Oh, How precious must be the contents of a book which shall deliver us from all the errors taught by the precepts of uninspired men! Oh, how gratifying to poor, ignorant, erring mortals who have murmured because of the multiplicity of contradictory doctrines that have perplexed and distracted their minds, to read the plain, pure and most precious word of God, revealed in the Book of Mormon! It is like bread to the hungry, like the cool refreshing fountain to him that is ready to perish with thirst.”⁵⁴

11 October 2012

⁵³ Dallin H. Oaks, The Lord’s Way, p.207.

⁵⁴ Pratt, Orson. Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, number 6, Prophetic evidence in favor of the Book of Mormon, Latter-day tracts, p. 91.

Isaiah 30

Kaiser opines: “When the great emperor Sennacherib began to close upon Jerusalem—if not before—Hezekiah sent an embassy to Pharaoh Shabako with a request for military assistance... But the Egyptian army that actually set out was defeated at Eltekeh. This seems to have sealed the fate of the allies [including other nations such as Philistia, Ammon, Moab, and others]... On the one hand the actual decision to send the embassy had been taken without consulting the prophet of Yahweh... The revolt of the Philistine cities, which seems to have lasted from 713–711, and in which Ashdod tried at least to involve Hezekiah, failed quite miserably; not only did Shabako refuse to send the reinforcing army but actually handed over... the ruler of Ashdod.” It is not certain, however, whether Hezekiah ever sought the aid of Egypt—as the kings of Judah who had preceded him had done. Alexander well says: “Egypt is mentioned in the first part of the chapter as the chosen ally of the people, and Assyria in the last part as the dreaded enemy. There is no need, however, of restricting what is said to that period exclusively.” ¶ Govett points these scriptures to former days, but also likens them to the challenging times before the coming of the Son of Man and to the dangers of leaning upon the Antichrist or upon Satan. The Prophet Joseph Fielding Smith asked: “Should we expect the Lord to come to judge the world without first giving it warning and preparing the means of escape for all who will repent?” And citing ISAIAH 30:1–17 answers: “In each instance [of warning] the call came through the opening of the heavens. Isaiah, Jeremiah, and other prophets were sent to warn Israel and Judah before the scattering and captivity came upon them.” Isaiah warns against those who lean on the strength of man, or Egypt (a symbol for that strength), and also cautions against those who despise His words and His prophets. Regarding the arm of flesh, Jenour well quotes Jeremiah as a summary of this chapter: “Thus saith the LORD; Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the LORD... Blessed is the man that trusteth in the LORD, and whose hope the LORD is” (Jeremiah 17:5, 7). In the millennial day the moon and the sun shall shine with incomparable strength. Great blessings are promised to those who heed the warning and return to the Lord. Christ lovingly invites us to heed the Spirit and partake of His blessings.

vv 1–7. Elder Marion D. Hanks loved ISAIAH 30. “Let me refer to a glorious expression in the book of Isaiah, written a long time before Christ, about seven centuries, which talks about listening. All of us need to cultivate the capacity to listen. And Isaiah, speaking in the name of the Lord, spoke to a people at a time when listening to the word of the Lord, to the whisperings of the Spirit, was rare—at a premium. He castigated the people and clearly identified their sins. I read from ISAIAH 30: ‘Woe to the rebellious children, saith the Lord, that take counsel, [They were listening, but to the wrong voices.] but not of me; and that cover with a covering, but not of my spirit, that they may add sin to sin: That walk to go down into Egypt, and have not asked at my mouth;¹ to strengthen themselves in the strength of Pharaoh, and to trust in the shadow of Egypt! Therefore shall the strength of Pharaoh be your shame, and the trust in the shadow of Egypt your confusion.’” After also quoting ISAIAH 30:9–10, 15 and 18 Elder Hanks continues: “The people of Israel were listening all right, but to the voices of pagan, materialistic Egypt. They had forsaken God for the siren sound of the great secular strength which Egypt could offer. They thought to defend themselves with the strength of Pharaoh. They trusted in chariots because there were many, and in horsemen because they were strong. They would not listen to the law of the Lord nor look to the Holy One of Israel. They admonished the seers to see not and the prophets to prophesy not unto them ‘right things,’ but to speak that which would tickle their ears and satisfy their unrighteous hearts. Their confidence was in temporal power, and in their idols of gold and silver.”²

1 ¶ WOE to the rebellious children, saith the LORD, that take counsel, but not of me; and that cover with a covering, but not of my spirit, that they may add sin to sin:

WOE to the rebellious children, saith the LORD, that take counsel, but not of me. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “but not of [in] my Word (Meimra, מִמְּרָא)” rather than “but not of me.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Ah rebellious children! saith the Lord, you have formed a design, but not by me.” The Douay-Rheims (ⵔ) has apostate instead of rebellious. This was one of the great pre-exilic sins of Israel, that of taking counsel, but not of the Lord. For instance, Ahab, King of Israel, “gathered the [false] prophets together, about four hundred men, and said unto them, Shall I go against Ramothgilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, Go up; for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king” (1 Kings 22:6). When King Jehoshaphat of Judah questions why King Ahab does not inquire of a true prophet of the Lord, the Kind of Israel answers: “There is yet one man, Micaiah the son of Imlah, by whom we may enquire of the LORD: but I hate him; for he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil” (1 Kings 22:8b). ¶ Faussett has: “God had prohibited such alliances with heathen nations, and it was a leading part of Jewish polity that they should be a separate people (Exodus 23:32; Deuteronomy 7:2).” With Cowles, we note that the Lord ceases to call the people “my children” or “my people,” as a sign of their rebelliousness. Regarding rebellious, סוֹרְרִים, Rashi relates it to סוֹר ³to turn away” (in Rosenberg). Luther translates סוֹרְרִים as “disobedient and self-willed”; Calvin as “obstinate and rebellious.” ¶ And that cover with a covering, but not of my spirit, that they may add sin to sin: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Who consult a consultation, but do not ask my prophets, that they may add sin to the sin of their soul.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And thou hast made covenants, but not by my spirit, that you may add sins to sins.” Instead of cover with a covering the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has who offer wine offerings (Lamsa) / who offer libations (BPE),⁴ or and they poured out drink offerings (Bauscher⁵). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has, “And would begin a web,” instead of “And that cover with a covering.” ¶ And that cover with a covering, מְסַכָּה. Lowth explains: “Hebrew means, [who ratify covenants]: [And] ‘who pour out a libation.’ Sacrifice and libation were ceremonies constantly used, in ancient times, by most nations, in the ratifying of covenants: a libation therefore is used for a covenant, as in Greek the word σπονδη,⁶ for the same reason, stands for both. This seems to be the most easy explication of the Hebrew phrase; and it has the authority of the Septuagint, ἐποιήσατε συνθηκας.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) also supports this translation. The term covering מְסַכָּה, can either mean libations or covering. ¶ Several modern translations focus on the idea of unholy alliances or unholy counsel: “Who make an alliance, but not of my Spirit (HCSB); “And who make alliances—but not by my Spirit” (ISV); “To make counsel, but not from Me” (LITV); “And make an alliance, but not of My Spirit” (NASB). Birks says, “This scheme of an Egyptian alliance was another idol, one of the heart, which they formed and moulded with equal care, poured into it, as a mould, costly sacrifices and efforts, and thereby ‘added sin to sin.’” ¶ Faussett has: “cover ... covering—that is, wrap themselves in reliances disloyal towards Jehovah. ‘Cover’ thus answers to ‘seek to hide deeply their counsel from the Lord’ (ISAIAH 29:15). But the Hebrew is literally, ‘who pour out libations’; as it was by these that leagues were made (Exodus 24:8; Zechariah 9:11), translate, ‘who make a league.’” We may note that cover with a covering may also make an interesting contrast with the idols made of wood that on the surface were covered with precious metals (see ISAIAH 30:22). ¶ Regarding the second acceptance, Wordsworth makes some interesting contrasts: “The vail (Heb. *masac*⁷) of the Tabernacle; and the covering (masac) of the Cloud which I provided for Israel in the wilderness, were ‘coverings of My Spirit,’ which is outraged, and is deserted for the help of idolatrous Egypt, from which I delivered them, and led them through the wilderness; and yet they now go back to trust in its shadow instead of in Mine!” Wade has, “Literally, weave a web (ISAIAH 25:7 Heb.), i.e. either, procure means of protection (cf. ISAIAH 22:8; 28:20), or, engage in political scheming.” ¶ But not of my spirit. Ibn Ezra explains, “But not of my spirit, that is, of my prophecy.” Gill explains this clause back to the counsel that did not come from the Lord: “They sought for a cover, a shelter, a protection from the enemy, but not from the Spirit of the Lord, in his word and prophets, who would have directed them to a more suitable and sufficient one.” The Lord through Micah complained, “If a man walking in the spirit and falsehood do lie, saying, I will prophesy unto thee of wine and of strong drink; he shall even be the prophet of this people” (Micah 2:11). That is, the people are apt to call someone a prophet because he teaches them to listen to a false spirit rather than to God (in the case of wine and strong drink, of coming plenty). This reprimand continues in the next chapter: “Thus saith the LORD concerning the prophets that make my people err, that bite with their teeth, and cry, Peace; and he that putteth not into their mouths, they even prepare war against him” (Micah 3:5). And we further read, “The heads thereof judge for reward, and the priests thereof teach for hire, and the prophets thereof divine for money: yet will they lean upon the LORD, and say, Is not the LORD among us? none evil can come upon us” (Micah 3:11). As a result, these false prophets will be

¹ See discussion on Jeremiah 42, below (ISAIAH 30:2).

² Marion D. Hanks. Brigham Young University Speeches of the Year. Provo, Utah: Brigham Young University Press, May 28, 1964, pp. 4–5.

³ Gesenius has for סוֹר, “to depart from God, i.e. to turn away from his worship.”

⁴ In Hebrew, libation is translated as קָרְבָּן, or Corban, “a gift,” or any type of sacrifice in a more generic way.

⁵ The Aramaic-English Interlinear Peshitta Old Testament, by Glenn David Bauscher, 2013. Bauscher translates נִקְיָהוּ as their oblations and נִקְיָה as drink offering.

⁶ LEH has, “agreement, pact, covenant (based on an accord between two parties, in opp. to διαθήκη where one party usually imposes its will upon the other).”

⁷ מְסַכָּה.

ashamed and confounded: “Then shall the seers be ashamed, and the diviners confounded: yea, they shall all cover their lips; for there is no answer of God” (Micah 3:7). ¶ Adding sin to sin (חַטָּאת עַל-חַטָּאת) is similar to the concept—and a play on words—of what we saw ISAIAH 29:1 (שָׁנָה עַל-שָׁנָה), adding year to year. That is, to continue leaning on a wrong tradition (ISAIAH 29:1) or behavior (sin). Barnes says, “They add to the sin of rebellion against God that of forming an alliance. Sins do not usually stand alone. When one is committed, it is often necessary to commit others in order to carry out and complete the plan which that contemplated.” ¶ In summary, we are to trust the Lord and His prophets; not the philosophies of men.

2 That walk to go down into Egypt, and have not asked at my mouth; to strengthen themselves in the strength of Pharaoh, and to trust in the shadow of Egypt!

That walk to go down into Egypt, and have not asked at my mouth. The Targum (ܬ) has, “Who go to descend into Egypt, but ask not the words of my prophets.” The LXX (6) reads, “They are setting out to go down to Egypt, without having consulted me.” Instead of walk to go down, the Peshitta (ܣ) has start to go down. In the Hebrew text we have הֹלְכִים, from הָלַךְ, which means to walk, go, journey or move about [Gesenius, HAL], so we are essentially talking of the same thing. The children of Israel, in pre-exilic days, often wanted to lean on Egypt. Descend or go down, לָרַדְתָּ, from a stream that does down (HAL). Some exegetes have suggested because they are going south, toward Egypt, or because they descend from the hills of Judea, or from a spiritual height to a lower one. Instead of going up to the Holy Temple, as it were, they are descending from it. Barnes says, “The journey to Egypt from Palestine is always represented as going down (Genesis 12:10; 42:3; 43:15; Numbers 20:15; Deuteronomy 10:22).” ¶ And have not asked at my mouth, וְפִי לֹא שָׁאֲלוּ, and my mouth not consult they, that is, they do not ask or inquire at my mouth. Alexander says, “To ask the mouth, or at the mouth, of the Lord is a phrase used elsewhere in the sense of seeking a divine decision or response.” The Targum (ܬ), of course, removes the anthropomorphic expression by making it sound as if it is the mouth of the prophets. Young says, “At one time Israel had been under the shadow of Egypt and Egypt had been her oppressor. From this dreadful oppression and bondage the Lord had delivered Israel and had warned her against returning to Egypt. ‘Ye shall henceforth return no more that way’ (Deuteronomy 17:16c).”⁸ ¶ These verses, about the people setting their hearts on Egypt, remind us of Jeremiah 42–43, where the captains of the forces of Judah—and all the people from the least even unto the greatest (Jeremiah 42:1b)—came to the Prophet Jeremiah to ask for the Lord’s blessing in escaping to Egypt. They asked God—in the most hypocritical way—to confirm their decision. “That the LORD thy God may shew us the way wherein we may walk, and the thing that we may do” (Jeremiah 42:3). They even reassured the Prophet Jeremiah: “The LORD be a true and faithful witness between us, if we do not [אִם-לֹא]⁹ even according to all things for the which the LORD thy God shall send thee to us. Whether it be good, or whether it be *evil*¹⁰ [אִם-טוֹב וְאִם-רָע], we will obey the voice of the LORD our God, to whom we send thee; that it may be well with us, when we obey the voice of the LORD our God” (Jeremiah 42:5b–6). So, how many times did they reassure the Prophet Jeremiah that they would be obedient? Nevertheless, they had already made up their minds as to what they wanted God’s answer to be. So it was that when the Prophet Jeremiah gave them an answer they did not like, they insulted him thus: “Thou speakest falsely: the LORD our God hath not sent thee to say, Go not into Egypt to sojourn there” (Jeremiah 43:2b). No, indeed what they wanted was to hear smooth things and the prophecy of deceits (see also

⁸ Actually, the whole verse is instructive here, especially as we shall also speak about leaning upon horses: “But he shall not multiply horses to himself, nor cause the people to return to Egypt, to the end that he should multiply horses: forasmuch as the LORD hath said unto you, Ye shall henceforth return no more that way.”

⁹ Recall that these words, if not, stand for an oath (ISAIAH 5:9). Remember that אִם stands for if, while לֹא for no, or negation. For more on oath formulas, see ISAIAH 22:14; and especially ISAIAH 62:8.

¹⁰ The word evil [רָע] is used in its archaic signification, i.e., to bring misfortune or challenge or difficulty or any sort of unwanted event. So these “pious” men were explaining to Jeremiah that they would be obedient to the word of the Lord that would come through the Prophet regardless of the consequences. Elder Dennis E. Simmons spoke of a truly righteous and faithful group of young men, Daniel and his companions: “Centuries ago, Daniel and his young associates were suddenly thrust from security into the world—a world foreign and intimidating. When Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego refused to bow down and worship a golden image set up by the king, a furious Nebuchadnezzar told them that if they would not worship as commanded, they would immediately be cast into a burning fiery furnace. ‘And who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands?’ The three young men quickly and confidently responded, ‘If it be so [if you cast us into the furnace], our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand.’ That sounds like my eighth-grade kind of faith. But then they demonstrated that they fully understood what faith is. They continued, ‘But if not [not the oath formula, but simply a statement that if this would not happen, לֹא יִהְיֶה—GB], ... we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.’ That is a statement of true faith” (“But if not ...,” April 2004 General Conference).

Jeremiah 5:31). On that occasion the Lord had promised the people great things if they would be obedient, very much as we find in this chapter of Isaiah—glorious blessings to the obedient. ¶ To strengthen themselves in the strength of Pharaoh, and to trust in the shadow of Egypt! The LXX (6) reads, “To be assisted by Pharaoh and protected by the Egyptians.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the first clause, “Hoping for help in the strength of Pharaoh.” ¶ The Assyrians would soon mock Israel for leaning on Egypt, “Lo, thou trustest in the staff of this broken reed, on Egypt; whereon if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so is Pharaoh king of Egypt to all that trust in him” (ISAIAH 36:6). Faussett explains that shadow is an “image [taken] from shelter against heat: protection (Psalm 121:5–6).” So also Cowles: “‘Trusting in the shadow of Egypt’ is more precisely seeking shelter under her shadow, in the shade of her protection.” ISAIAH 4:6; 25:4; 32:2; 49:2; and 51:16 also use the term shadow as affording protection.

3 Therefore shall the strength of Pharaoh be your shame, and the trust in the shadow of Egypt [your] confusion.

Therefore shall the strength of Pharaoh be your shame. The LXX (6) reads, “For the protection of Pharaoh will be your shame.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has confusion instead of shame. Egypt, in many scriptures, was synonymous with Babylon. So here Judah was being accused of putting her trust in the strength of Pharaoh and Egypt rather than in the Lord her God.

¶ Therefore...be. The Hebrew הַיָּהּ may properly be translated in a number of ways including therefore...be. Birks says, “The connective is rendered variously; ‘therefore’ A. V. ‘but’ (Rosenmüller, Henderson), ‘and’ (Alexander, Drechsler, Delitzsch). The first makes the causal relation too prominent, which has its proper Hebrew word, 29:14, 22; 30:7, 12, 13, 18. The main thought is that disappointment would be the natural and speedy result of their sin, and the causal relation is only implied. The word ‘so’ is thus the best rendering.” There is nothing wrong with the AV rendition, but Birks makes a vital point here, that the moment one translates from Hebrew to another language, the translator is forced to interpret, and indeed may not give a perfect translation. There are differences in nuance between such words as and, so, and therefore, and no single word in the English language can stand for all of these. ¶ And the trust in the shadow of Egypt [your] confusion. The LXX (6) reads, “And a disgrace to them who have trusted in Egypt.” Instead of trust in the shadow, the Peshitta (S) has shelter of the shadow. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And the confidence of the shadow of Egypt to your shame.” In the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) we have in the shadow of Egypt to your yearning, בְּצֵל מִצְרַיִם לְכַמָּה, while the Masoretic text (M) has in the shadow of Egypt to your confusion, בְּצֵל מִצְרַיִם לְכַלְמָה. ¶ Gill says, “They should be confounded, when they should find themselves unsupported by the Egyptians, in whom they put their confidence; so all such that trust in the creature, or in an arm of flesh, sooner or later are ashamed and confounded; but those that trust in the Lord never are, neither in this world, nor in that to come.” Govett points us to Ezekiel: “And all the inhabitants of Egypt shall know that I am the LORD, because they have been a staff of reed to the house of Israel. When they took hold of thee by thy hand, thou didst break, and rend all their shoulder: and when they leaned upon thee, thou brakest, and madest all their loins to be at a stand” (Ezekiel 29:6–7). Ezekiel describes Egypt as a staff of reed (in other words, something that would bend or break if we tried to lean upon it).

4 For his princes were at Zoan, and his ambassadors came to Hanes.

The Targum (T) has, “For their princes were in Tanes, and their messengers have reached Taphnes. The LXX (6) reads, “Because generals are unwelcome messengers at Tanis.” Instead of came to Hanes, the Peshitta (S) has shall act deceitfully (Lamsa) / shall be fatigued (BPE). The Lamsa Peshitta (S) translation is ambiguous and suggests that the ambassadors belong to Pharaoh rather than Judah. The Spanish Peshitta translation is not very clear either: “Porque él se encuentra en Zoán, pero sus príncipes y sus mensajeros perversos se fatigarán” (Peshitta BPE {S}), i.e., “Because he can be found in Zoan, but his princes and perverse messengers shall be fatigued.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “For thy princes were in Tanis, and thy messengers came even to Hanes.” ¶ Gill suggests that the ambassadors sent to Egypt were taken from the princes of Judah, and says, and that Zoan and Hanes, because the King of Egypt would be likely to be in one of these two places: “The Jews (T. Bab. Cetubot, fol. 112. 1. & Sota, fol. 34. 2.) say there is not a more excellent place in all Egypt than Zoan, because kings were brought up in it.”

5 They were all ashamed of a people [that] could not profit them, nor be an help nor profit, but a shame, and also a reproach.

They were all ashamed of a people [that] could not profit them. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “All of them go unto a people to be confounded.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “They shall labour in vain with a people who will be of no service for assistance.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) has them going to a people who cannot profit them. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has confounded instead of ashamed. ¶ Rawlinson says: “The reference is not to the ambassadors, who felt no shame in their embassy, and probably returned elated by the promises made them; but to the subsequent feelings of the Jewish nation, when it was discovered by sad experience that no reliance was to be placed on ‘the strength of Pharaoh ... Mr. Cheyne compares, very pertinently, an inscription of Sargon’s, where he says of the people of Philistia, Judah, Edom, and Moab, that ‘they and their evil chiefs, to fight against me, unto Pharaoh, King of Egypt, a monarch who could not save them, their presents carried, and besought his alliance’ (G. Smith, ‘Eponym Canon,’ p. 130, II 35–39). Egypt was, in fact, quite unable to cope with Assyria, and knew it.” ¶ Nor be an help nor profit, but a shame, and also a reproach. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “But for a shame and disgrace.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “They were no help, nor to any profit, but to confusion and to reproach.” ¶ Rawlinson writes: “A shame, and also a reproach. A matter of which they would themselves be ‘ashamed,’ and with which the Assyrians would ‘reproach’ them (as they did, 2 Kings 18:21, 24).”

6 The burden of the beasts of the south: into the land of trouble and anguish, from whence [come] the young and old lion, the viper and fiery flying serpent, they will carry their riches upon the shoulders of young asses, and their treasures upon the bunches of camels, to a people [that] shall not profit [them].

The burden of the beasts of the south: into the land of trouble and anguish. The Hebrew word here rendered as south [צָפֹנ] can also mean desert. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “They carry upon their beast of burden on the way southward, into a land of oppression and distress.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “This is the vision of the four footed beasts in the desert.” The BPE (Ⓢ) has essentially the same translation as the KJV, Prophetic burden of the beasts of the south; the Lamsa Peshitta (Ⓢ) has The prophecy concerning the oppressors of the south. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “The burden of the beasts of the south. In a land of trouble and distress.” ¶ Most of the exegetes and translators believe this verse is an oracle, prophecy or burden of the beasts of the south. Delitzsch, for instance, writes: “Isaiah breaks off his address to communicate an oracle relating to the Egyptian treaty, which Jehovah has specially commanded him to hand down to posterity...” ¶ The Targum (Ⓣ), however, represents a literal burden that is carried upon beasts of burden, rather than a masha (מָשָׂא) or oracle. So does Jenour: “This verse in the English Bible is very obscure, and seems to be the beginning of another prophecy, which it certainly is not; there being an evident connexion between it and the preceding. The translation I have given [i.e., “They shall carry the burden of the beasts of the south, to a land of trouble and anguish &c.”], makes, I trust, the meaning plain. Egypt is called a land of trouble and anguish, because the Israelites had there endured a cruel bondage. Also it abounded with lions of the largest description, and, more than any other country, with serpents and venomous reptiles; hence it is further characterized as the land from whence come the great lion, etc.” We may well have a play on words: as the camels carry a burden (מָשָׂא) on their backs and the prophet pronounces a burden (מָשָׂא) on the failure of this effort. ¶ From whence [come] the young and old lion, the viper and fiery flying serpent. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “A place of the lion, and the whelps of the lionesses, and serpents, and the flying basilisks.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “A lion and a lion’s whelp were in distress and difficulty; and from them went the asps and the brood of flying serpents.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “From whence come the lioness, and the lion, the viper and the flying basilisk.” So also Alexander, and many others including HALOT, explains that “לָבִיָּא וְלִישׁ” rather means lioness and lion. Birks well suggests that “The description of the desert alludes to Deuteronomy 8:15. They were reversing the steps of their great national deliverance. They were trusting in the shadow of that oppressor, from whose cruel yoke God had rescued their fathers. On this vain errand they were journeying south through that terrible wilderness, where their forefathers had been sustained by water from the rock, and manna from heaven. There was danger in the journey itself, and would be nothing at its close but shame and sorrow.” ¶ Skinner suggests that and fiery flying serpent [וְשֶׂרֶפְתָּן] is a winged seraph. Rashi (in Rosenberg) has, “The flying serpent, too, is a species of snake, not that it has wings with which to fly, but it jumps and springs long distances and throws a flame from its mouth.” The Book of Mormon Reference Companion has, “Associated with the Egyptian Sinai (ISAIAH 30:6), these serpents were considered extremely poisonous and came to represent agents of divine chastisement (2 Nephi 24:29). In recounting the proofs of God’s power manifested in the Exodus (1 Nephi 17:23–42), Nephi observed that because of the ‘iniquity’ of the Israelites God had ‘sent fiery flying serpents among them.’ But in his mercy God had also ‘prepared a way that they might be healed’ (1 Nephi 17:41). The means of healing consisted of a brass representation of a serpent twisted on a pole upon which the Israelites could gaze (Numbers 21:4–9). This brass serpent was interpreted by later Book of Mormon prophets to typify the Savior (Helaman 8:14–15; cf. John 3:14–15).¹¹ ¶ They will carry their riches upon the shoulders of young asses, and their treasures upon the bunches¹² of camels, to a people [that] shall not profit [them]. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They carry upon the shoulders of their young cattle their treasures, and they bring upon the bunches of camels whatever is in their treasures unto a people, that shall not profit them.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Who carried their wealth on asses and camels to a nation which could not profit them.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has beasts instead of young asses. Regarding the bunches of the camels [עַל־רִבְשֵׁת, and upon the bunches] Henderson writes: “That the hunch, or hump, of that animal is meant, there can be no doubt. It is of the shape of a pyramid, and sometimes of such a size as to occupy at its base nearly the entire back of the animal.” Rashi and Kara (in Rosenberg) explain that the רִבְשֵׁת,¹³ or camel’s hump, is frequently sore from burdens laid upon it and is often anointed with honey (רִבֵּשׁ), “as we say in Baba Mezia 38b: Honey that lost its sweetness is fit for the sores of the camels.” Most exegetes explain that the camels would be packed with the treasures and gifts to be taken by the ambassadors to be given to the Egyptians. What good, then, would come from all of these gifts? None, as they would be given to a people [the Egyptians] who would not profit them [Judah] at all.

7 For the Egyptians shall help in vain, and to no purpose: therefore have I cried concerning this, Their strength [is] to sit still.

✓ or, to her

For the Egyptians shall help in vain, and to no purpose: The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “In vain and to no purpose will the Egyptians help you.” Jenour beautifully says: “[The] prophet proclaimed to the Jews, that the way to be safe was, to wait quietly for that deliverance he had promised them. He taught them, that they would be strongest when they relied most implicitly upon the protection of Jehovah. And so it is with the Christian, “When he is weak, then he is strong” (2 Corinthians 12:10). When he most feels his helplessness, and relies most exclusively upon the grace of his Saviour, then he is most able to contend against his spiritual enemies. Yet it is a shocking abuse of this passage to infer from it, as some appear to have done, that the Christian is required to make no exertions on his part for the attainment of holiness, but to consider himself as entirely passive in the hands of his Lord. When truly we most feel our weakness we are strong; but not when we exert ourselves least. What says the apostle? Work out your salvation with fear and trembling, on this very ground, that it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do (Philippians 2:12).” ¶ Therefore have I cried concerning this, Their strength [is] to sit still. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Therefore I shall meet many of the slain: I will bring armed men upon them.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Announce to them, That this application of yours is vain.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲯ) instead has the Lord warning them that their trust has been vainly misplaced. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, for the last clause, “It is pride only, sit still.” Regarding קָרָאתִי, have I cried, Wildberger calls it the prophetic perfect,¹⁴ “What Yahweh announces is already a reality, even when the punishment remains to be unveiled...” The word strength in this clause is rather רַהַב,¹⁵ Rahab (also see ISAIAH 51:9, and Psalm 87:4; 89:10). Cheyne here writes, “The riddle of ‘Ariel’ [see ISAIAH 29] receives its counterpart in that of Rahab!” Many of the modern translation so translate it: “For Egypt helpeth in vain, and to no purpose: therefore have I called her Rahab that sitteth still” (ASV, also see AMP, ESV, GLB, GW, HCSB, ISV, LBLA, NASB, NBLH, RV). In addition, we have the Spanish 2009 LDS Edition, which offers a rendering that is very close to the ASV [except it translates וּמִצְרַיִם as and Egypt rather than for Egypt]: “Y Egipto en vano e inútilmente dará ayuda; por tanto, yo lo he llamado Rahab, la inmóvil” (Edición SUD 2009). Gesenius has for רַהַב: “a poetical name of Egypt (probably of Egyptian origin, but accommodated to the Hebrew language; however, no one has yet shewn a probable etymology in the Coptic language; see Jablonskii Opuscc. ed. te Water, i. 228) ... allusion is made to the Hebrew etymology in these words [i.e., quoted from ISAIAH 30:7], רַהַב הֵם שֹׁכֵת, ‘insolence, (i.e. the insolent) they sit still,’ i.e. boasting and

¹¹ Book of Mormon Reference Companion.

¹² Humps, e.g., “and their treasures upon the humps of camels” (ASV).

¹³ LXX (Ⲯ), Δαβασθή (Cyclopaedia of Biblical, Theological, and Ecclesiastical Literature).

¹⁴ We shall repeatedly see the prophetic perfect, or the speaking of a future even with so much surety, as if it had already come to pass.

¹⁵ רַהַב, also means pride, arrogance (HALOT, Gesenius, BDB). So it is that Wordsworth says, “‘Rahab and Babylon,’ the cities of Pride and Confusion.”

grandiloquent, they are altogether inactive; no doubt a proverbial expression.” The BDB and HAL also include the synonym arrogant for that of insolent. As a result, we also see translations that use these words: “For Egypt helpeth in vain, and to no purpose; therefore have I called her arrogancy that sitteth still” (JPS), and “For Egypt shall help in vain, and to no purpose; therefore have I named her, Arrogance, that doeth nothing.”

Rashi (in Rosenberg) explains that “שָׁבַת” means that their pride and haughtiness is fit to be curtailed... [and that] their pride is fit to be curtailed.” This clause about Egypt’s false strength may stand in juxtaposition to what God can offer Judah: “Be still, and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth” (Psalm 46:10); “Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD” (Exodus 14:13); and “Ye shall not need to fight in this battle: set yourselves, stand ye still, and see the salvation of the LORD with you, O Judah and Jerusalem: fear not, nor be dismayed; to morrow go out against them: for the LORD will be with you” (2 Chronicles 20:17).

vv. 8–17. Isaiah is commanded to write these words in a book. The children of Israel refuse instruction and reject the prophets and the gospel. Poor use of moral agency brings negative consequences. Leaning upon the strength of horses or the mighty nations would be of no avail to Israel who, in punishment for disobedience, would now flee from the enemies.

8 ¶ Now go, write it before them in a table, and note it in a book, that it may be for the time to come for ever and ever: ✓

✓ the latter-day

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Now go, write it amongst them upon a tablet, and mark it upon lines of a book, that it may be for a witness before me in the day of judgment for ever.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Now therefore sit down and write these things in a tablet and make a book that they may be for the appointed time even for the time to come.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) has book of the covenant rather than just book. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “Now therefore go in and write for them upon box, and note it diligently in a book, and it shall be in the latter days for a testimony for ever.” What is the prophet to write in a book? The exegetes are divided on this matter. For instance, Delitzsch suggests that it refers to the words already spoken (ISAIAH 30:6–7) while Barnes to what follows (ISAIAH 30:9). Rawlinson says: “Isaiah received a Divine intimation that the prophecy was to be put on record, doubly, upon a tablet and in a book. At the same time, the ‘rebelliousness’ of the people was further pointed out, and fresh threats (vv. 13, 14, and

17) were uttered against them.” Delitzsch opines that upon tablet (עַל-לִיָּה) ... and upon book (עַל-סֵפֶר) are a repetition of one thought, while others (e.g., Rawlinson and Gill) believe that the tablet is to be made visible to the people at the time and the book was to be kept for posterity. Delitzsch explains: “סֵפֶר could be used interchangeably with לִיָּה, because a single leaf, the contents of which were concluded, was called סֵפֶר (Exodus 17:14). Isaiah was to write the oracle upon a table, a separate leaf of durable material; and that “with them,” i.e., so that his countrymen might have it before their eyes (compare ISAIAH 8:1; Habakkuk 2:2). It was to be a memorial for posterity.” Here we have two very beautiful expressions: לַיּוֹם אַחֲרָיו, for [the] latter-day; and לְעַד עַד-עוֹלָם, for perpetuity perpetuity forever.

9 That this [is] a rebellious people, lying children, children [that] will not hear the law of the LORD:

The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Because this is a rebellious people—lying children, who would not hear the law of God.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “For it is a people that provoketh to wrath, and lying children, children that will not hear the law of God.” This is an allusion to ISAIAH 1:2b–3, “I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me. The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master’s crib: but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider.” In Zechariah 7:11 we read: “But they refused to hearken, and pulled away the shoulder, and stopped their ears, that they should not hear.” Daily we each make countless choices to either turn to God or turn our backs on Him. When we refuse to hear the word of God, whether it is from the Holy Scriptures or from the Holy Ghost, from the Brethren or from our Bishop or Branch President, we are turning aside from the path that we ought to follow. With Rawlinson and Delitzsch and many of the translators (e.g., Bishops, NASB, JPS, ISV, ESV, ASV, AMP), I prefer to translate כִּי as for, הוּא כִּי עַם מְרִי הוּא, For this [is] a rebellious people &c. Regarding lying children, Rawlinson has, “They professed devotion to God; but their acts contradicted their words.” See also, ISAIAH 59:3, 13; Jeremiah 9:3; Ezekiel 13:7, 9. Wildberger writes, “When [ISAIAH] uses עַם מְרִי (obstinate people), one sees a deep disappointment that he, or Yahweh himself, has experienced from Israel. One encounters similar vocabulary being used along with ¹⁶מַרְדָּ (rebelliousness) in Nehemiah 9:17.” Cowles comments: “Their sin involving not falsehood only but filial ingratitude...” In D&C we read: “And in nothing doth man offend God, or against none is his wrath kindled, save those who confess not his hand in all things, and obey not his commandments” (D&C 59:21).

10 Which say to the seers, See not; and to the prophets, Prophecy not unto us right things, speak unto us smooth things, prophesy deceits:

Which say to the seers, See not; and to the prophets, Prophecy not unto us right things. The Targum (T) has, “Who say to the prophets, Prophecy ye not: and as for doctrines, teach us not the doctrine of the law.” The LXX (G) reads, “Who say to the prophets, ‘Preach not to us,’ and to them who see visions, ‘Speak not to us.’” Instead of right things the Peshitta (S) has reproof. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Who say to the seers: See not: and to them that behold: Behold not for us those things that are right.” ¶ To seers see not, לֹא תִרְאוּ, לְרֹאִים לֹא תִרְאוּ.

Elder James E. Faust taught, after quoting this verse: “Nephi explained, ‘The guilty taketh the truth to be hard, for it cutteth them to the very center’ (1 Nephi 16:2).”¹⁷ Barnes says, “They were offended at their plainness and their reproofs of their vices; and they preferred the false prophets, who fell in with their prejudices, and who did not denounce the judgment of God for their crimes.” ¶ Speak unto us smooth things, prophesy deceits: The Targum (T) has, “Speak ye with us with signs, relate unto us various things.” The LXX (G) reads, “Nay, speak to us and tell us another error.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Speak unto us pleasant things, see errors for us.” King Ahab of Israel (see ISAIAH 30:1 notes) was an example of someone who sought to hear smooth things, even if they were false. Also see Hananiah, who falsely prophesied that the Babylonian yoke would be broken (Jeremiah 28). ¶ Delitzsch explains regarding ISAIAH 30:10b: “Their desire was to be entertained and lauded, not repelled and instructed.”

11 Get you out of the way, turn aside out of the path, cause the Holy One of Israel to cease from before us.

¹⁶ In their rebellion, בְּמַרְדָּם.

¹⁷ Elder James E. Faust, Unwanted Messages, Ensign (CR), November 1986, p.8.

The Targum (T) has, “Turn us from the right path, make us to cease from tradition; put at a distance from us the Word of the Holy One of Israel.” The LXX (G) reads, “And turn us from this way, and take from us this path, and take from us the oracle of Israel.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Take away from me the way, turn away the path from me, let the Holy One of Israel cease from before us.” ¶ Ibn Ezra explains: “Get you out of the way, etc. These words are addressed by the people to the prophets. Cause the Holy One, etc. Cause the mention or the name of the Holy One of Israel to cease.” The people did not want to hear the word of the Lord. While I was a counselor in a Modesto, California Ward, one man would cover his ears when letters were read from the Brethren defending the sanctity of marriage between a man and a woman. To cover our ears at the words of the Brethren is covering our ears at the words of the Lord.

12 Wherefore thus saith the Holy One of Israel, Because ye despise this word, and trust in oppression[✓] and perverseness, and stay thereon:

✓ or, fraud

Wherefore thus saith the Holy One of Israel, Because ye despise this word. The LXX (G) reads, “Therefore thus saith the Holy One of Israel, because you have disbelieved these words.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has rejected instead of despise. ¶ Prophecy in general—as well as this particular oracle about the absurdity of leaning upon Egypt. So also Ibn Ezra, who says, “Ye despise this word, the prophecy.” Alexander suggests: “The word here mentioned is no doubt the law of ISAIAH 30:9, both being common epithets of revelation generally, and of particular divine communications.”

¶ In this word, בְּדִבְרֵי. This may also be an allusion to the Word, or Christ (see ISAIAH 40:8) who was indeed rejected for the strength of Pharaoh. ¶ And trust in oppression and perverseness, and stay thereon: The LXX (G) reads, “And placed your hopes on a lie: and because thou hast murmured, and been confident in this matter.” The Peshitta (S) has murmured (BPE) / complained (Lamsa) and (BPE) / yet (Lamsa) trusted in it. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And have trusted in oppression and tumult, and have leaned upon it.” In ISAIAH 31:1 we read, “Woe to them that go down to Egypt for help; and stay on horses, and trust in chariots, because they are many; and in horsemen, because they are very strong; but they look not unto the Holy One of Israel, neither seek the LORD!” To stay וַתִּשָּׁעֲנוּ, means to lean upon, rely, have confidence in. The people are being denounced here for staying on Egypt or the arm of flesh, rather than upon their God.

13 Therefore this iniquity shall be to you as a breach ready to fall, swelling out in a high wall, whose breaking cometh suddenly at an instant.

The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Therefore this sin shall be unto you as a city laid waste, and made a ruinous heap, as a bending wall, whose breaking cometh very suddenly.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Therefore this sin shall be to you like the tottering wall of a fortified city, which hath been taken by surprise; the fall of which is instantaneous.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “Therefore shall this iniquity be to you as a breach that falleth, and is found wanting in a high wall, for the destruction thereof shall come on a sudden, when it is not looked for.” ¶ Henderson suggests that the materials may well be soft such as adobe,¹⁸ “As the Orientals most frequently constructed their walls of clay, or soft brick, dried in the sun, they are extremely liable to rend, and be washed down by rain (compare Psalm 62:3¹⁹).” Once a wall is breached or broken, a city quickly falls into the hands of the enemy (see our notes in ISAIAH 29:3). Kay well notes: “The expression lofty wall (as of a fortress, cp. ISAIAH 25:12) occurs in Proverbs 18:11: ‘A rich man’s wealth is his strong city, and as a lofty wall in his own conceit.’ It is added (v. 12), ‘Before destruction (or, a breach, s. w.) the heart of man is haughty.’” So we understand what a breach in a wall means, but what is the significance of this verse? Who will experience this breach? Israel wanted to lean upon the strength of Egypt (or the world) yet the might and the proud nations would all fall like mighty towers (ISAIAH 30:25). Destruction tends to come quickly and often unexpectedly. We can be safe if we put our trust in the Lord.

14 And he shall break it as the breaking of the potters’ vessel[✓] that is broken in pieces; he shall not spare: so that there shall not be found in the bursting of it a sherd to take fire from the hearth, or to take water [withal] out of the pit.

✓ the bottle of potters

And he shall break it as the breaking of the potters’ vessel that is broken in pieces; he shall not spare: The ¹⁸ Our farmhouse in San Javier was made of adobe and the 2010 earthquake (8.8 on the Moment Magnitude Scale) brought portions to the ground and basically made it uninhabitable. It was constructed in the early twentieth century.

¹⁹ “As a bowing wall shall ye be” (AV).

Targum (ⲧ) specifies that the potters’ vessel shall be of clay broken without compassion. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And its fall shall be like the breaking of an earthen vessel, the fragments of which are so small.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “And it shall be broken small, as the potter’s vessel is broken all to pieces with mighty breaking.” Jerusalem would be likewise broken. Henderson has, “The meaning is, that, in punishment of their apostasy from God, the Jews should, as it respected their public affairs, experience a complete overthrow.” ¶ So that there shall not be found in the bursting of it a sherd to take fire from the hearth, or to take water [withal] out of the pit. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And among its fragments there shall not be found a potsherd to take fire from the hearth, or to draw (the Royal Polyglot and the Biblia Magna, reads correctly לְמִזְלָה, ‘to draw’) water from the cistern.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “That there cannot be found among them a sherd on which thou canst carry fire or with which thou canst scoop up a little water.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) also makes it clear that the fragments would be so broken up that they could not be used to scoop up fire or water. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “And there shall not a sherd be found of the pieces thereof, wherein a little fire may be carried from the hearth, or a little water be drawn out of the pit.” ¶ Alexander explains: “Sherd is an old English word, now seldom used, meaning a broken piece of pottery or earthenware, and found more frequently in the compound form of potsherd. A potter’s vessel, literally, vessel of the potters.” Rawlinson says, “From comparing Judah’s fall and ruin to the shattering of a lofty wall, he suddenly turns to a comparison of it with the breaking to pieces of an earthen pitcher. Judah shall be so broken as when the pitcher is crushed into minute fragments, so that there is no piece large enough to convey a coal from one fire for the lighting of another, or to be of even the least use for drawing water from a well.” Delitzsch goes beyond the destruction of Jerusalem: “It is the captivity which is here figuratively threatened by the prophet; for the smashing had regard to Israel as a state.”

15 For thus saith the Lord GOD, the Holy One of Israel; In returning and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength: and ye would not.

For thus saith the Lord GOD, the Holy One of Israel; In returning and rest shall ye be saved. The Targum (ⲧ) makes the returning to the law explicit, with a promise of rest and redemption. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Thus saith the Lord, Lord. The Holy One of Israel, when thou shalt return sighing, then thou shalt be saved.” The Peshitta

(S) has repent for in returning. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the second clause, “If you return and be quiet, you shall be saved.” ¶ In returning, or בְּשׁוּבָה, or in turning again to the Lord, man can find peace and safety, and in no other way. We see this also in: “Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee” (ISAIAH 26:3). This is an invitation to find joy in walking with God—and the spiritual, emotional and temporal safety that this provides. ¶ Young well says regarding rest נִחַת, “Isaiah had commanded Ahaz to be still (ISAIAH 7:14), but Ahaz would not do so.” King Ahaz did not have the faith to be still in the Lord. ¶ In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength: and ye would not. The Targum (T) has, “Ye shall be quiet, and ye shall dwell in safety, and be mighty; but ye would not.” The LXX (G) reads, “And thou shalt know in what a situation thou wast, when thou didst trust in these vanities.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “in silence and in hope shall your strength be. And you would not.” We likewise see this earlier in Isaiah: “Or let him take hold of my strength, that he may make peace with me; and he shall make peace with me” (ISAIAH 27:5). ¶ And in confidence, וְבִבְטָחָה... your strength, וְבִגְבוּרַתְכֶם... Wildberger²⁰ points out: “Isaiah wants to be so exact about the way he differentiates trust [confidence] in Yahweh over against trust [confidence] in one’s own plans that he never, in any formal sense, uses the same verb to describe both true and false trust. As can be seen most clearly in 32:9 ff., Isaiah uses בָּטַח from the outset to describe reprehensible behavior, from which one has to protect oneself. By contrast, he does speak about בִּטְחוֹה (trust) [i.e., confidence] in a positive sense in ISAIAH 30:15.” The Lord, also, through Jeremiah, teaches the strong not to rely in strength: וְאַל-יִתְחַלֵּל הַגִּבּוֹר בְּגִבּוּרָתוֹ (and not let the mighty man glory in his might), save it be the strength of the Father and of the Holy One of Israel. If we do this, “then shall [our] confidence (בְּטָחָה) wax strong in the presence of God” (D&C 121:45b). The whole idea of in quietness (בְּהַשְׁקָט) reminds us of the still small voice of the comforter, “The Holy Ghost shall be thy constant companion” (D&C 121:46a). Also, “Forasmuch as this people refuseth the waters of Shiloah that go softly” (ISAIAH 8:6a). ¶ And ye would not. In His mortal ministry, the Savior seemed to be expanding on these very words in Isaiah: “O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not!” (Luke 13:34).

16 But ye said, No; for we will flee upon horses; therefore shall ye flee: and, We will ride upon the swift; therefore shall they that pursue you be swift.

The LXX (G) reads, “Your strength was vain, yet you would not hearken, but said, ‘We will flee on horses.’ Therefore flee you shall. And, ‘We will mount swift coursers,’ therefore swift shall be your pursuers.” The BPE (S) has, “But ye said, ‘It shall not be so, we shall ride upon horses and will hurry to flee’; so they will flee, but those who pursue will also hurry.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “But have said: No, but we will flee to horses: therefore shall you flee. And we will mount upon swift ones: therefore shall they be swifter that shall pursue after you.” In essence, then, the people are saying לא, or no, to this invitation to lean upon the Holy One of Israel. Ibn Ezra has: “You fled²¹ without a cause, you will therefore be compelled to flee by your pursuers.” ¶ Redak (in Rosenberg) explains: “If the enemy attacks us, we will have horses upon which to flee.” As Rawlinson mentions, “‘The swift’ (קָלִי) seems to be a mere variant for ‘horse,’ the parallelism being, as so frequently, ‘synonymous.’” Regarding swift יָקִילוּ, see my notes on ISAIAH 18:2. Gill explains that the time did come when they had to escape—whether in horses or camels—from the enemy: “This was fulfilled long after, when the city was taken by the Chaldeans (see 2 Kings 25:4)... [who] are represented as very swift (Jeremiah 4:13²²).” Keith points us to Amos 2:14–16: “Therefore the flight shall perish from the swift, and the strong shall not strengthen his force, neither shall the mighty deliver himself: Neither shall he stand that handleth the bow; and he that is swift of foot shall not deliver himself: neither shall he that rideth the horse deliver himself. And he that is courageous among the mighty shall flee away naked in that day, saith the LORD.” ¶ In the Hebrew Scriptures horses, horsemen, and chariots are often given as a symbol of leaning on the strength of beasts rather than the strength of God. For instance, we read: “And I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen; and I will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, every one by the sword of his brother” (Haggai 2:22); and “Woe to them that go down to Egypt for help; and stay on horses, and trust in chariots, because they are many; and in horsemen, because they are very strong; but they look not unto the Holy One of Israel, neither seek the LORD!” (ISAIAH 31:1). Cheyne and Skinner²³ well point out that horse and flee rhyme in Hebrew, flee upon horse, על־סוס ננוס. Indeed, for we have rather than horses, סוסים, the word horse in the singular in the Hebrew. Both horse and flee end with the same sound: sus, nanus. Nägelsbach explains that Drechsler thinks that while the Israelites had intentions to flee on horses and ride on the swift, “then it must be said in opposition: therefore shall ye flee on foot.” Nägelsbach goes on to say that “horses will serve you only for flight.” Either way, by foot or on horseback, the people of Jerusalem would be fleeing from the enemy.

²⁰ See also, Wildberger note on ISAIAH 10:20.

²¹ See my notes on Leviticus 26:8 in the next verse.

²² קָלִי מִנְּשָׂרִים סוּרִי, “Swifter than eagles are his horses,” (Leeser).

17 One thousand [shall flee] at the rebuke of one; at the rebuke of five shall ye flee: till ye be left as a beacon upon the top of a mountain, and as an ensign on an hill.

✓ or, a tree bereft of branches, or, boughs: or, a mast

One thousand [shall flee] at the rebuke of one; at the rebuke of five shall ye flee: The LXX (6) reads, “A thousand shall flee at the voice of one; and at the voice of five, many thousands shall flee.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has fear instead of rebuke in both instances. This curse for disobedience is a direct allusion to the blessing for obedience found in Rain in due Season: “And five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight: and your enemies shall fall before you by the sword” (Leviticus 26:8, also see Deuteronomy 32:30, Joshua 23:10). We also read in Rain in due Season: “And upon them that are left alive of you I will send a faintness into their hearts in the lands of their enemies; and the sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them; and they shall flee, as fleeing from a sword; and they shall fall when none pursueth” (Leviticus 26:36). The picture I have had in my mind for decades is that of the sound made by a falling leaf that is torn off a tree during the fall season. The Targum Pseudo-Jonathan (1), likewise, renders it:

קל טרפא נתיר מן אילן, “[and the] sound [of a] leaf falling from [the] tree... shall put them to flight.”²⁴

After writing my comment on the falling leaf from a tree I read in Gill: “either the sound of a leaf that falls from the tree, as the Targum of Jonathan, or which the wind beats one against another, as Jarchi [i.e., Rashi], which makes some little noise; even this should terrify them, taking it to be the noise of some enemy near at hand, just ready to fall on them; such poor faint hearted creatures should they be” (emphasis added). Many render נָדָה shaken as driven away [see HAL], especially by the wind: HCSB renders shaken leaf as “wind-driven leaf.” Several translations render it “driven leaf” (ASV, RV, AMP, JPS, Darby, ESV, LITV, MKJV, NASB). YLT renders it “the sound of a leaf driven away.” This, then, may represent a leaf that is already fallen but carried away from one place to another by the wind. Either way, the amount of sound made by such a shaken leaf (עֲלֵה) is for all practical purposes absolutely imperceptible. ¶ Till ye be left as a beacon upon the top of a mountain, and as an ensign on an hill. The Targum (1) has signal fire for the first beacon. Chilton’s 1 translation uses bonfire, while Stenning’s 1 translation uses the same term as in the KJV, beacon. The LXX (6) reads, “Until you be left like a beacon on a mountain, and like a flag staff upon a hill.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Till you be left as the mast of a ship on the top of a mountain, and as an ensign upon a hill.” In other words, until you be left desolate, alone.

vv. 18–26. We seem to transition in these verses from God’s mercy despite our weakness, to the blessings that will be poured out in the latter-day and in the millennial day. Ironside well says, of these verses, “Surely no one can think that these words have ever been fulfilled in the past [but rather point to “Israel’s glorious portion in the day” when they return to the Lord].”

18 ¶ And therefore will the LORD wait, that he may be gracious unto you, and therefore will he be exalted, that he may have mercy upon you: for the LORD [is] a ²³ Skinner further adds, “In ISAIAH 36:8 the Rabshakeh seems to taunt the Judeans with their childish fondness for horsemanship” (emphasis added). I have, from my youth, had a great passion for horsemanship. I find Skinner’s comments particularly interesting because it has taken me so long to push away this passion and more fully replace it with my love for the Holy Scriptures. While at times I feel some nostalgia for horses, when this happens I think, “When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things” (1 Corinthians 11:13). In a recent conversation with my father during a visit to Santiago (15 December 2012), he reminded me that it is better that I dedicated my life to something useful at the University of California—rather than to teaching horsemanship to the rich. As a youth I asked my parents whether as an adult I might have half an hour a day to ride horses. I realize, of course, that all these things are a question of balance. After I retire I may well have a little time for horsemanship as I have a God-given talent in that field. Indeed, “To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven” (Ecclesiastes 3:1).— 11 January 2013.

²⁴ Etheridge, John Wesley, Targum Pseudo-Jonathan and Targum Onkelos, Newsletter for Targumic and Cognate Studies. URL accessed 25 October 2012: <http://targum.info/targumic-texts/pentateuchal-targumim/>.

God of judgment: blessed [are] all they that wait for him.

And therefore will the LORD wait, that he may be gracious unto you. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And therefore the Lord will shew you pity, and he that is mighty will compassionate you.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “But again the Lord will wait to be gracious to you.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) has “The Lord will begin to show them (BPE) / you (Lamsa) mercy.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, for the second clause, “That he may have mercy on you.” Some exegetes translate and therefore לְכֵן, as yet therefore (Faussett—leaning on Gesenius), yet or nevertheless (Gill), however (HAL), giving better sense to the transition. So also Geneva, “Yet therefore”; GNB, “And yet”; and ISV, “Nevertheless.” It means that despite the disappointments that God has experienced with His people, He will be slow to punish or that He will remember His people in the latter times (or both). Alexander thinks this verse refers back to an earlier one and does not follow directly to what has been said: “On the whole, the simplest and most probable conclusion seems to be that לְכֵן has its usual meaning, but refers, as in many other cases, to a remoter antecedent than the words immediately before it. As if the Prophet paused at this point and reviewing his denunciations said, Since this is so, since you must perish if now dealt with strictly, God will allow you space for repentance, he will wait to be gracious, he will exalt himself by shewing mercy.” Rashi (in Rosenberg) suggests that the Lord will wait to bring the good upon His children that He might have brought to them sooner had they been obedient. Kay says, “the Lord will wait, in resolute self-withdrawal, looking for the time when your penitence will permit Him to be again gracious unto you.” ¶ Speaking of this verse, Elder Marion D. Hanks exhorted that we liken this verse unto ourselves when we are in a position of power or authority: “But we must take people—boys and girls, men and women—where they are, as they are, in the imperfect conditions that so widely exist, in the personal imperfections which are universal. We cannot escape responsibility for our families and others whom we might touch, nor ever cease pulling for them and praying for them and trying to help them. If they make wrong decisions, follow the false programs that many of their peers pursue, still we will love them and suffer with them and work with them and wait for them, even as the father in the Lord’s parable waited for the prodigal who finally came to his senses and headed home: ‘When he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him’ (Luke 15:20). We will watch and pray, even as the Lord himself waits with godly mercy, as He declared through His prophet

2,700 years ago: ‘And therefore will the Lord wait, that he may be gracious unto you, and therefore will he be exalted, that he may have mercy upon you’ (ISAIAH 30:18).²⁵ It is not that punishment will be removed altogether. Sometimes we must receive chastisement: “And [though] the Lord give you the bread of adversity, and the water of affliction” (ISAIAH 30:20a). ¶ Wordsworth, in fact, correctly believes that true repentance must come first: “The Prophet beholds the People turning to God with penitential cries and tears, and he announces to them the blessed consequence of their repentance. This was exemplified in a remarkable manner in the person of Hezekiah, the King of Judah (and doubtless in the persons of many of his nobles and people), who at first had shown a great lack of trust in God (see 2 Kings 18:14, 16), and resorted to Egypt and Ethiopia for help (see above, on chapters 18—20; and 2 Kings 18: 21), but afterwards turned to God, in his double distress, with prayers, and cries, and tears (2 Kings 19:15–19 ; 20:3–5; and above, 25:8; and below, 38:14–17). The words (which are here spoken by the Prophet) were fully verified in Hezekiah: ‘Thou shalt weep no more: the Lord will be very gracious unto thee; at the voice of thy cry, when He shall hear it. He will answer thee.’ The speed of the answer to Hezekiah’s prayers is noticed in 2 Kings 20:4.” ¶ And therefore will he be exalted, that he may have mercy upon you: for the LORD [is] a God of judgment: The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “For the Lord is the God who doeth judgment.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “And will therefore be exalted for compassionating you. Because the Lord your God is judge.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has the Lord sparing instead of its synonym, showing mercy. Alexander writes: “That the clause does not relate to righteousness or justice in the strict sense, appears plain from the added benediction upon those who trust Jehovah. One point is universally admitted, namely, that somewhere in this verse is the transition from the tone of threatening to that of promise. The question where it shall be fixed, though interesting, does not affect the general connection or the import of the passage as a whole.” Henderson says: “The last words of this verse shew that it is not a continuation of the threatening, but contains a promise of mercy. מְשַׁפֵּט²⁶ is, therefore, to be taken in the strict sense of rectitude, and not in that of punishment.” Calvin explains that judgment “denotes not only punishment, but also the moderation which is exercised in chastening. In like manner Jeremiah says, ‘Chasten me, O Lord, but in judgment [מִשְׁפָּט]’, not in thy wrath, lest thou crush me’ (Jeremiah 10:24). And again, I will not consume thee, but will chastise thee in judgment (Jeremiah 30:11).” ¶ Blessed [are] all they that wait for him. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Blessed are the righteous who wait for his salvation.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Happy are they who wait for him.” This idea of waiting upon the Lord is further developed in ISAIAH 40. ¶ Birks writes: “However severe God’s discipline, its design was gracious. His dealings are full of wisdom, like our Lord’s absence during the sickness of Lazarus, to make the blessing afterward more glorious and Divine. There is, on His part, no slackness or indifference, but the calm waiting of an ever-patient love.” Elder Robert D. Hales taught: “In the scriptures, the word wait means to hope, to anticipate, and to trust. To hope and trust in the Lord requires faith, patience, humility, meekness, long-suffering, keeping the commandments, and enduring to the end.”²⁷

²⁵ Elder Marion D. Hanks, Seeing the Five A’s, Ensign (CR), November 1977, p.36.

²⁶ Normally translated as judgment.

19 For the people shall dwell in Zion at Jerusalem: thou shalt weep no more: he will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry; when he shall hear it, he will answer thee.

For the people shall dwell in Zion at Jerusalem: thou shalt weep no more: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, in the first clause, “For the people of Zion shall dwell in Jerusalem.” (Chilton’s Ⲯ translation is similar.) Stenning’s Ⲯ translation renders it, “For, O people in Zion, inhabitant of Jerusalem.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Because a holy people will dwell in Sion, and Jerusalem with weeping cried, ‘Have mercy upon me.’” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “For the people of Sion shall dwell in Jerusalem: weeping thou shalt not weep.” ¶ Cheyne writes, “...to prevent any misunderstanding, or, with affectionate emphasis, the prophet adds, ‘in Jerusalem.’” Kay says, “...In Zion (and not only in Zion mystical, but literally) in Jerusalem.” LDS do make a distinction between Zion in the American West and Zion in Jerusalem, even though the names may sometimes be used interchangeably. In its full sense, this prophecy will be fulfilled during the millennium and thereafter, at a time when “He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord GOD will wipe away tears from off all faces” (ISAIAH 25:8). We also read “For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes” (Revelation 7:17); and “And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away”

²⁷ Hales, Elder Robert D. 2011 October General Conference, Sunday morning session.

(Revelation 21:4). ¶ He will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry; when he shall hear it, he will answer thee. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “He will assuredly shew thee compassion: the voice (the Royal Polyglot puts in after קל the word קנל, ‘thy crying’) of thy prayer He will hear, and He will answer (Chaldee, ‘he will do’) thy supplication.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Therefore he will have mercy upon thee. When he heard the sound of thy cry, he hearkened to thee.” Compare with “Then shalt thou call, and the LORD shall answer; thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I am” (ISAIAH 58:9a); and “And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear” (ISAIAH 65:24).

20 And [though] the Lord give you the bread of adversity, and the water of affliction, yet shall not thy teachers be removed into a corner any more, but thine eyes shall see thy teachers:

✓ or, oppression

And [though] the Lord give you the bread of adversity, and the water of affliction. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And the Lord shall give unto you the treasures of the enemy, and the spoil of the oppressor.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “When the Lord shall have given you bread of affliction and stinted water.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “And the Lord will give you spare bread, and short water.” ¶ Alexander suggests: “The true connection seems to be, that God would afflict them outwardly, but would not deprive them of their spiritual privileges; or, as Cocceius says, there should be a famine of bread, but not of the word of the Lord (Amos 8:11).” ¶ Yet shall not thy teachers be removed into a corner any more, but thine eyes shall see thy teachers: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And He will no more take away His Shekinah from the house of the sanctuary, and thine eyes shall behold my Shekinah in the house of the sanctuary.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “They who lead thee astray shall no more come near thee.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “Nor shall their eyes see those who turned their way (or, made them lose their way).” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “And will not cause thy teacher to flee away from thee any more, and thy eyes shall see thy teacher.” A number of translators of the Masoretic text (ⲙ) have followed after the Targum (Ⲯ) שכינתיה, Shekinah, or “the presence of the Lord.”

¶ Thy teachers, מוריך. A number of translators have suggested that rather than thy teachers, the Hebrew ought to be rendered thy Teacher, meaning the Holy One of Israel, or Christ, who will be plainly manifest and no longer put away or hidden. For instance: “yet shall not thy Teacher hide Himself any more, but thine eyes shall see thy Teacher” (JPS, also see this line of thought from NBLH, NASB, LBLA, HCSB, ESV, ERV, CEV, AMP). Our LDS footnote on ISAIAH 30:20b also suggests that מוֹרֵי stands as an allusion for “the LORD.” ¶ Keith applies ISAIAH 30:20 to the restoration: “As evil leaders and false teachers are often represented as among the greatest of the nation’s curses; so, when finally restored, and when their judgments shall be past, among their greatest blessings will be that of faithful teachers.” ¶ To be removed into a corner (כַּנִּי), or to be hidden. This comes from the Hebrew כָּנָה, to remove to the four corners of the earth, to cover or hide (HAL). In the millennial day the Lord will be present and visible to all. But meanwhile, in applying these scriptures unto us, when we turn our back on the Lord, we may say that we have removed Him into a corner or hidden Him from us. This is also true when we turn our backs on the prophets that He has given us as guides. ¶ Elder Marion G. Hanks loved ISAIAH 30 and particularly ISAIAH 30:20: “I interpret [wisdom] to be the capacity to recognize which things in life really matter most and to identify oneself with them, to choose them. In the thirtieth chapter of the book of Isaiah is a marvelous statement which I have loved since first I read it. The Lord seriously rebukes rebellious Israel. He recognizes their failings, their unfaith, their unwillingness to rely upon Him, their insistence upon self-reliance to the exclusion of humility before Him, but then comforts them and blesses them with this marvelous promise: ‘And though the Lord give you the bread of adversity, and the water of affliction, yet shall not thy teachers be removed into a corner any more, but thine eyes shall see thy teachers: And thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left’ (ISAIAH 30:20–21). I believe it is possible for anyone ... to discover for himself what things really matter in this world. I think he may learn it through teachers and through the voice which speaks behind us.”²⁸ The voice that speaks behind us is the Holy Ghost.

21 And thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, This [is] the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left.

The LXX (6) reads, “Because thine eyes will see them who are leading thee astray and thine ears will hear the words of the deceivers behind thee who say, This is the way let us walk in it, whether to the right or left.” After the words walk ye in it, the Peshitta (5) admonishes men to stay on the path and not deviate from it to the right nor to the left. The Douay-Rheims (2) has, “And thy ears shall hear the word of one admonishing thee behind thy back: This is the way, walk ye in it: and go not aside neither to the right hand, nor to the left.” Monte S. Nyman says, “Elder Thomas S. Monson cited this verse as a reference to the ‘still, small voice which testifies of truth’ (CR, April 1975, p. 23).” So also Faussett, who rightfully points us to a scripture about the Holy Ghost: “Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will shew you things to come” (John 16:13). When we hear or read the Word—scriptures as well as addresses from the prophets who seek to guide us in the proper path—the Holy Ghost bears witness that what they have said is true. To turn to the right or to the left means to deviate from the straight and narrow path. Of King Josiah we read: “And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, and walked in all the way of David his father, and turned not aside to the right hand or to the left” (2 Kings 22:2; see also 2 Chronicles 34:2). In Proverbs we read this beautiful admonition: “Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee. Ponder the path of thy feet, and let all thy ways be established. Turn not to the right hand nor to the left: remove thy foot from evil” (Proverbs 4:25–27). Wordsworth beautifully taught: “Its larger fulfilment [of these verses] was in the coming of Christ. Then the Lord had waited for many generations to be gracious; and blessed were all they who waited for Him (v. 18). Blessed were they, who, like Simeon, and Anna, and many others, ‘waited for the consolation of Israel’ (Luke 2:25, 38). Then the people saw their Teacher, and He established a Visible Church, wherein His Word is preached, and His Sacraments are administered in the whole world. Then the Word went forth, saying, ‘This is the way: walk ye in it.’ The Gospel is specially called ‘the WAY’ in Holy Scripture... It extends to the times of the Messiah, and even to His Second Advent.” So also Skinner, who says that this verse represents “Jehovah, walking like a Father behind His children.” Skinner continues, “when ye turn] Whenever your steps leave the straight path off righteousness, the warning voice will check you.” ¶ Elder Marion D. Hanks quoted this verse of Isaiah and taught: “That was their promise. We have the same promise, that if we will listen to the law of the Lord, if we will see through the eyes of the seer, if we will hear the words of the prophets when they testify to us right things, if we will listen to the oracles—past and present—to wise teachers, humble parents, honest friends; if we will listen to the voice of the Spirit, to the still, small voice, then we will learn the right way and to walk in it.”²⁹ President Thomas S. Monson invited: “Like the peal of a remembered bell will be the truth of the gospel of Jesus Christ to the soul of him who earnestly seeks. Many of you have traveled long in a personal quest for that which rings true. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints sends forth to you an earnest appeal. Open your doors to the missionaries. Open your minds to the word of God. Open your hearts—even your very souls—to the sound of that still, small voice which testifies of truth. As the prophet Isaiah promised, ‘Thine ears shall hear a word..., saying, This is the way, walk ye in it’ (ISAIAH 30:21).”³⁰ In Rain in Due Season there is a special promise given for walking in the way: “And I [the Lord] will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people” (Leviticus 26:12, emphasis added).

²⁸ Marion D. Hanks. Spiritual Constraints In Our Changing Times. Brigham Young University Speeches of the Year. Provo, Utah: Brigham Young University Press, January 4, 1961, pp. 3–8.

22 Ye shall defile also the covering of thy graven images of silver, and the ornament of thy molten images of gold: thou shalt cast them away as a menstruous cloth; thou shalt say unto it, Get thee hence.

- ✓ the graven images of thy silver
- ✓ ✓ scatter

Ye shall defile also the covering of thy graven images of silver, and the ornament of thy molten images of gold: The LXX (6) reads, “Therefore thou wilt defile thine idols plated with silver, and cut to pieces those overlaid with gold.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “And thou shalt defile the plates of thy graven things of silver, and the garment of thy molten things of gold.” Henderson explains: “The Jews, convinced of the abominable evil of idolatry, would cast away their idols with feelings of utter disgust.” Faussett has: “Hezekiah, and afterwards Josiah, defiled [the graven images] (2 Kings 23:8, 10, 14, 16; 2 Chronicles 31:1; compare ISAIAH 2:20; Deuteronomy 7:25).” The expression and defile טָמֵא, from the root טָמָא, also has an acceptation that means “to declare unclean” as in Leviticus 13:3–59; 20:25 (HAL, Gesenius). Wordsworth talks of our hidden idols: “Ye will defile the covering or veil by which your idolatrous images were shrouded from the eye in their secret shrines,” and then goes on to quote Deuteronomy: “Cursed be the man that maketh any graven or molten image, an abomination unto the LORD, the work of the hands of the craftsman, and putteth it in a secret place” (Deuteronomy 27:15a). This, then, is a command to declare all graven images unclean and thus to throw them away from our lives. Each one of us has to throw away those things that turn us to the right or to the left of the straight and narrow path. We are to do this with vigor. ¶ Thou shalt cast them away as a menstruous cloth; thou shalt say unto it, Get thee hence. The Targum (7) has, “Ye shall abominate it, as they abominate the impurity of a monstrous woman, thus ye shall abominate it.” The LXX (6) reads, “And scatter them like polluted water and cast them out as dirt.” The Peshitta (5) explains that they shall be cast out as the waters of a menstruous woman, and thrown away as waste. The Douay-Rheims (9) has, for the first clause, “And shalt cast them away as the uncleanness of a menstruous woman.” The idea of this passage is that we should truly put away our sins. Lowth writes: “The very prohibition of Moses, Deuteronomy 7:25, only thrown out of the prose into the poetical form: ‘The graven images of their gods ye shall burn with fire: thou shalt not desire the silver or the gold that is on them; nor take it unto thee, lest thou be snared therein; for it is an abomination to JEHOVAH thy God.’” Cowles teaches: “The ‘covering of their graven images’ is specified because this was often exceedingly rich, of gold and silver, very attractive therefore, and the last thing to be given up. Considered as a special prophecy, this had a very striking fulfillment when the Jews returned from Babylon. But in the spirit of it, it is fulfilled in the case of every real penitent. He loathes his former sins and thrusts them away with all his heart.”³¹ So he ought to do; and more than this, so he actually does if his penitence is sincere.” ¶ Menstruous cloth (see ISAIAH 64:6, filthy rags). According to the law of Moses, a woman was considered unclean during menstruation (Leviticus 15:19). A menstrual cloth was used to contain the blood discharge over this period, before the advent of many of today’s disposable sanitary products. Leviticus 19 ff. and 20:18 also explain that in the Mosaic Law, those who would come in contact with the menstrual blood would be unclean. (With our two older children we used cloth diapers. Only part way through our third child did we switch to disposable diapers.) ¶ Get thee hence. The Geneva Bible notes have: “Showing that there can be no true repentance, unless both in heart and deed we show ourselves enemies to idolatry.” This is a commandment of great force, a discarding of that which is unrighteous. When Christ was tempted by Satan he quoted Isaiah: “Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve” (Matthew 4:10). Elder Jeffrey R. Holland addresses this issue squarely in a powerful General Conference address, of which I only quote one paragraph: “Above all, start by separating yourself from people, materials, and circumstances that will harm you. As those battling something like alcoholism know, the pull of proximity can be fatal. So too in moral matters. Like Joseph in the presence of Potiphar’s wife, just run—run as far away as you can get from whatever or whoever it is that beguiles you. And please, when fleeing the scene of temptation, do not leave a forwarding address.”³²

²⁹ Marion D. Hanks. Brigham Young University Speeches of the Year. Provo, Utah: Brigham Young University Press, May 28, 1964, pp. 4–5.

³⁰ President Thomas S. Monson, Dedication Day, Ensign (CR), November 2000, p.64 (also see, The Way Home, Ensign (CR), May 1975, p.15).

³¹ So in Alma 22:18 Lamoni’s father says, “I will give away all my sins to know thee.”

23 Then shall he give the rain of thy seed, that thou shalt sow the ground withal; and bread of the increase of the earth, and it shall be fat and plenteous: in that day shall thy cattle feed in large pastures.

Then shall he give the rain of thy seed, that thou shalt sow the ground withal. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Then shall there be rain for the seed of thy land.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “And rain shall be given to thy seed, wheresoever thou shalt sow in the land.” This is a direct allusion to the Rain in Due Season chapters as well as to Leviticus 26:4, more specifically. Obedience brings blessings as well as peace and joy. Gill says, “... the earth, being watered with rain, should give its increase of corn, of which bread should be made; so that there would be seed to the sower, and bread to the eater,³³ as in ISAIAH 55:10.” Regarding bread and fat, Wesley says: “Which shall be the fruit of thy own land and labour: and excellent for quality, which is called, fat, Deuteronomy 32:14, and abundant for quantity.” ¶ And bread of the increase of the earth, and it shall be fat and plenteous: The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And corn and fruit shall increase in the land, and there shall be sustenance and goodness.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And the bread of the increase of thy land shall be both abundant and nutritive.” Instead of bread, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has grain. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “And the bread of the corn of the land shall be most plentiful, and fat.” In the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⓢ) we have it shall be fat, while in the Masoretic text (Ⓜ) we have, and it shall come to pass [that it shall be] fat, פֶּתִיחַ יִשְׂרָאֵל. It is interestingly to us as LDS that most translations leave the and yet drop the ³³ Bread to the eater means food in general, but can also mean flower—whether made from wheat or corn or other agronomic crops—and seed to the sower means that crops also provide the seeds for planting next year. For people during famine, it was a great temptation to eat their seeds now and be left without anything to plant in the future.

³² Elder Holland, Jeffrey R. Place no more for the enemy of my soul. General Conference, April 2010.

יָיָא (it came to pass / it shall come to pass) that appears in the literal text. ¶ In that day shall thy cattle feed in large pastures. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And at that time, the just shall be nourished from their cattle, with the marrow of the tender and the fat ones.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And thy cattle shall feed in rich and large pastures.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) has fertile pastures (BPE) / rich pastures (Lamsa), The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “The lamb in that day shall feed at large in thy possession.” Note the use of the expression, פֶּתִיחַ יִשְׂרָאֵל, in that day, which points to the latter day. Barnes explains: “This is a description of security when their cattle should be permitted to roam at large, and have abundant pasturage—an image of prosperity that would be very gratifying to a people whose main conception of wealth consisted in abundance of flocks and herds.”

24 The oxen likewise and the young asses that ear the ground shall eat clean[✓] provender, which hath been winnowed with the shovel and with the fan.

✓ or, savoury, HEB., leavened

The oxen likewise and the young asses that ear the ground shall eat clean provender. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And the oxen and the asses, with which they plough the ground, shall eat fattening meslin.³⁴” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Your bulls and your cattle which till the ground shall eat provender.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) also has oxen and young bull tilling the ground. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “And thy oxen, and the ass colts that till the ground, shall eat mingled provender.” ¶ That ear the ground, פֶּתִיחַ יִשְׂרָאֵל. This is an expression for the oxen or cattle that work (עָבַד, Gesenius) the ground, i.e., plow, rake, or otherwise till the ground (HALOT). Bullinger explains, “Ear. Old English = to plough: from Anglo-Saxon erian: and this from the Latin arare: the Aryan root AR entering into many words with a cognate reference. ARt (ploughing being the oldest art); oAR (with which the water is ploughed); ARtos (Greek for bread); eARth; ARatrum (Latin, a plough); ARare (to plough). The verb ‘ear’ is found only here, Deuteronomy 21:4; and 1 Samuel 8:12. The noun ‘earing’ occurs in Genesis 45:6, and Exodus 34:21” (CBNotes). Likewise, in Spanish we use arar for plowing, and arado for the plow. ¶ Savoury provender.

³⁴ Stenning calls it savory provender, while Chilton renders it as mixed provender, which from an agronomical perspective would be mixed grasses. Faussett spells it maslin when speaking about מַסְלִין and say, “Or else, well-fermented maslin, that is, provender formed of a mixture of various substances: grain, beans, vetches, hay, and salt.”

The margin ||, savory or fermented (leavened) feed, makes the most amount of sense in this verse and is preferred by numerous translators, “The oxen likewise and the young asses that till the ground shall eat savory provender (ASV, also JPS, AMP; finest grain, CEV; with many others having salted or seasoned). YLT talks about fermented feed, “Fermented provender do eat.” This verse seems to be speaking of the fermentation process that takes place when silage is prepared.³⁵ Faussett writes, “The Arab proverb is, ‘Sweet provender is as bread to camels – salted provender as confectionery.’³⁶ The very cattle shall share the coming felicity. Or else, well-fermented maslin, that is, provender formed of a mixture of various substances: grain, beans, vetches, hay, and salt.” Wordsworth, brilliantly continues with his likening of this chapter to spiritual matters: “The clean provender, or the salted fodder well winnowed, represents the sound, wholesome, and pure doctrine, ‘seasoned with salt’ (Colossians 4:6; Cp. Mark 9:50), purged from all adulterations of God’s Word, on which they feed, that they may have strength to labour in His husbandry.” ¶ Which hath been winnowed with the shovel and with the fan. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Mixed with winnowed barley.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has, “As it was winnowed in the floor.” In order to make silage, the hay is first harvested. Man does the winnowing with the shovel (or the combine, today) and with the fan (to separate the grains from the chaff). Winnowing separates the grain from the chaff (hay). The pitch fork was used to through the matter up and with the help of the wind or air, separate the grain from the chaff.

25 And there shall be upon every high mountain, and upon every high hill, rivers [and] streams of waters in the day of the great slaughter, when the towers fall.

✓ lifted up

³⁵ “During the ensiling process, some bacteria are able to break down cellulose and hemicellulose to various simple sugars. Other bacteria break down simple sugars to smaller end products (acetic, lactic and butyric acids). The most desirable end products are acetic and lactic acid. As the bacteria degrade starches and sugars to acidic and lactic acids, dry matter is lost. Attention to details such as speed of harvesting, moisture content, length of chop, silage distribution and compaction can greatly influence the fermentation process and storage losses. Efficient fermentation ensures a more palatable and digestible feed, which encourages optimal dry matter intake that translates into improved animal performance. Making consistent, high-quality silage requires sound management decisions and attention to details.” Schroeder, J.W., North Dakota State University Extension Dairy Specialist. “Silage Fermentation and Preservation.” AS-1254, June 2004, <http://www.ag.ndsu.edu/pubs/ansci/dairy/as1254w.htm> (URL accessed 5 November 2012).

³⁶ Or as quoted by Henderson, “Sweet provender is the food of the camels; salted provender their dessert.”

And there shall be upon every high mountain, and upon every high hill, rivers [and] streams of waters. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And there shall be on every lofty mountain, and on every high hill streams of water in that day.” Israel’s blessing is also described in Joel: “And it shall come to pass in that day, that the mountains shall drop down new wine, and the hills shall flow with milk, and all the rivers of Judah shall flow with waters, and a fountain shall come forth out of the house of the LORD, and shall water the valley of Shittim” (Joel 3:18). Slotki/Rosenberg writes: “Even on the Judean mountains and hills, which might be expected to be dry and barren, there will flow streams and watercourses that will fructify them as well as the plains and valleys.” Alexander writes: “J. D. Michaelis connects this with what goes before, and understands it as a description of the height to which agriculture would be carried, by means of artificial irrigation... The simple meaning seems to be that water shall flow where it never flowed before, a common figure in the Prophets for a great change, and especially a change for the better. The same sense is no doubt to be attached to the previous descriptions of abundance and fertility.” ¶ In the day of the great slaughter, when the towers fall. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “In the day of the great slaughter, at the falling of the princess/armies.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “When many shall be perishing / And when towers may be falling.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has, “In the day of the slaughter of many.” Now we hear more about an idea planted in ISAIAH 30:13 and developed further in ISAIAH 30:27–28, 30–33. The breach can stand no longer and the building—the big and spacious building and all it represents—collapses and the arrogant nations fall. For מִגְדָּלִים [i.e., towers] ... Lowth³⁷ has, instead of towers: “When the mighty fall] מִגְדָּלִים migdalim, μεγάλους, Sym.; μεγαλυνομενους, Aquila; רַבְרַבִּין [רַבְרַבִּין] rabrebin, Chaldee; all signifying mighty sizes.” McFadyen suggests the towers stand for the “proud heathen.” Delitzsch says, regarding the falling towers, that these represent: “All the bulwarks of self-confidence, self-help, and pride (ISAIAH 2:15; Micah 5:9–10).” Wesley has, regarding the towers: “The mighty potentates, who fought against God’s people.” Rawlinson writes: “In this allegorical intention the waters stand for the streams of God’s grace. In the day of the great slaughter. Equivalent to ‘the day of vengeance’ (ISAIAH 34:8) the day when God shall tread down his enemies. The prophet passes from the immediate effect of Judah’s repentance to a broader view of what shall happen when God’s kingdom is established upon the earth. When the towers fall; i.e.

³⁷ See Lowth’s new translation, not his exegetical comments.

when there shall be a general ‘pulling down of strong holds,’ and a ‘casting down’ of every high thing that exalts itself against (2 Corinthians 10:4–5).” The words from ISAIAH 18:5, about the pruning out of that which is not good, also come to mind. Wordsworth has: “By the preaching of the Gospel, the towers fall, the strongholds of Satan are cast down, and ‘every thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God’ (see 2 Corinthians 10:4–5); as the walls of Jericho fell at the sound of the trumpets, blown by the Priests, marching before the Ark of God.” Certainly, in this sense of the word, the walls that prevented the preaching of the gospel in parts of the world have begun to come down, one by one.

26 Moreover the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of seven days, in the day that the LORD bindeth up the breach of his people, and healeth the stroke of their wound.

Moreover the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of seven days. (See ISAIAH 24:23.) The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Moreover the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall in future shine three hundred and forty-three times more brightly, as the light of seven days.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun; and the light of the sun shall on that day be seven fold.” The Talmud tradition (Seder Mo’ed, Pesachim 68a, see also Seder Nezikin, Sanhedrin 91b) has: “It is written, Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed;³⁸ whereas it is written, Moreover the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of the seven days? There is no difficulty: the former refers to the world to come; the latter to the days of the Messiah” (Talmud, Soncino). A footnote in the same, attributed to Rashi (Sanhedrin 91b), explains that the time will come when the light will emanate from the presence of the Lord. Wade explains: “The light of the full moon was thought to be normally one-seventh of that of the sun (Enoch 73:3). ¶ Light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, אֹרֶךְ-הַלְבֵנָה כְּאֹרֶךְ-הַחֶמֶה. Or rather, literally, “the light of the full moon shall be as the light of the sun’s glow.” Whitehouse writes, “Poetical names are given to the moon³⁹ and the sun, viz. ‘the pale one’ and ‘the glowing one.’” LITV renders it as: “And the moonlight shall be like the light of the sun &c.” Faussett, like many others, supposes the light to be a manifestation of spirituality and joy and take this passage to be an “Image from the heavenly bodies to express the increase of spiritual light and felicity. ‘Sevenfold’ implies the perfection of that felicity, seven being the sacred number. It shall also be literally fulfilled hereafter in the heavenly city (ISAIAH 60:19–20; Revelation 21:23–24; 22:5).” Barnes writes, “That this refers to the times of the Messiah there can be little or no room to doubt. It is language such as Isaiah commonly employs to describe those times; and there is a fullness and splendor about it which can suit no other period.” Birks well says, “As it denotes a change inconceivable by man, it may represent blessings inconceivable by him here, in that state in which things that it hath not entered into the heart of man to conceive are prepared.” ¶ In the day that the LORD bindeth up the breach of his people, and healeth the stroke of their wound. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “In the day that the Lord shall turn the captivity of His people, and heal the sickness caused by His blow.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “When the Lord will heal the bruises of his people, and when he will cure thy painful wound.” Instead of stroke, the Peshitta (Ⲯ) has pain. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has wound instead of breach. This will be a glorious day of restoration. Ibn Ezra explains: “When the Lord heals the wounds of Israel.” Henderson says, “The שִׁבְרָה, breach, is that described in ISAIAH 30:14.” Indeed, the Hebrew appears in ISAIAH 30:13 as “whose breaking” [שִׁבְרָה] and ISAIAH 30:14, “as the breaking of” [כְּשִׁבְרָה] and here in this verse, breach [אֶת-שִׁבְרָה]. The Hebrew has many meanings including shattered, broken (HAL). The expression translated as “as a breach” in ISAIAH 30:13, however, is כְּפֶתַח, and comes from a hole or crack as in a breached wall (HAL). These are but two of many words in Hebrew translated as breach. Birks writes: “The same thought appears in Hosea 6:1. ‘He hath torn, and he will heal us, hath broken and will bind us up.’” The stroke of her wound may represent a spiritual healing on the one hand (by returning to the Lord) and on the other a healing from that last awful future siege of Jerusalem.

vv. 27–33. There is a strong allusion in some of these verses to the Assyrian attack upon Israel and Jerusalem. The language seems to also point to the Second Coming of our Lord and Savior.

27 ¶ Behold, the name of the LORD cometh from far, burning [with] his anger, and the burden [thereof] heavy: [thereof] his lips are full of indignation, and his tongue as a devouring fire:

³⁸ See ISAIAH 24:23.

³⁹ Instead of the more usual חֹדֶשׁ and חֹדֶשׁ (new moon) for the moon and שֶׁשׁ for the sun.

- ✓ or, grievousness of flame
- ✓ ✓ heaviness

Behold, the name of the LORD cometh from far, burning [with] his anger, and the burden [thereof is] heavy: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Behold, the Name of the Lord shall be revealed, as the prophets of old have prophesied concerning Him.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Behold the name of the Lord cometh for a time, a burning wrath.” Instead of burden is heavy, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has exaltation is glorious (BPE) / train is glorious (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the second half, “His wrath burneth, and is heavy to bear.” ¶ Behold, the name of the LORD, הִנֵּה שֵׁם יְהוָה. This beautiful expression is similar to what the Targum (ⲧ) often uses to express the idea of the שְׁכִינָה, Shekinah. We, however, would understand it as the presence of the Lord. Alexander writes, “According to Raymund Martini, the expression was applied by the old Jews to the Messiah.” Skinner says, “the name of the Lord” appears here to be synonymous with what is elsewhere called the ‘glory of Jehovah’ (cf. the parallelism, ISAIAH 59:19; Psalm 102:15), i.e., the visible manifestation of His presence... Amongst the later Jews the expression ‘the Name’ was commonly used, out of reverence, to avoid the use of the Tetragrammaton (cf. Leviticus 24:11).” Rashi explains that the name of the LORD “here is synonymous with God’s power and glory” (in Slotki/Rosenberg). Wordsworth writes about this clause: “See Revelation 19:16, describing the Victory of Christ: ‘He hath on His vesture and on His thigh a NAME written, King of kings, and Lord of lords.’” Govett brilliantly writes: “The 27th verse represents the Saviour as coming from afar, as he said himself, ‘A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return’ (Luke 19:12). His coming is a day of wrath to his enemies, ‘The great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?’ ‘By the name of Jehovah,’ says Eusebius, ‘Christ is indicated. And when he cometh and revealeth his second glorious appearance, then shall follow those avenging Powers whom the present passage calls the anger and wrath of God, by whom punishment will be inflicted on the wicked...’” ¶ His lips are full of indignation, and his tongue as a devouring fire: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “His wrath is mighty, and too heavy to bear. His curse shall go forth from before Him upon the wicked, and His word as a consuming fire.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “The oracle of his lips with glory is an oracle full of indignation, and the fury of the wrath devoureth like fire.” Skinner says “... the figure of the storm is inseparably blended with an anthropomorphic representation of Jehovah.”

28 And his breath, as an overflowing stream, shall reach to the midst of the neck, to sift the nations with the sieve of vanity: and [there shall be] a bridle in the jaws of the people, causing [them] to err.

And his breath, as an overflowing stream, shall reach to the midst of the neck. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And His word is an overwhelming river reaching unto the neck: He shall slay the mighty.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And his breath is like a sweeping flood in a valley, which will reach up to the neck.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has an overflowing torrent instead of stream. We here find a strong allusion to the Assyrian invasion of Jerusalem (i.e., see ISAIAH 8:7–8). The Lord permitted Israel to be attacked by Assyria in former days—and only intervened at the very last moment, when the flood waters had reached to her neck, on the very eve of the attack on Jerusalem. Similarly, in the latter days, Jerusalem would once again be surrounded—this time by the nations of the world—and once again these waters will be up to her neck before the Lord will intervene in her favor: “Behold, the day of the LORD cometh, and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall the LORD go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south. And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains” (Zechariah 14:1–5a). Alexander thinks “the whole verse as a threatening against Jehovah’s enemies.” On the power of the Lord’s breath, see ISAIAH 11:4b: “And he shall smite the earth: with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked.” ¶ To sift the nations with the sieve of vanity: and [there shall be] a bridle in the jaws of the people, causing [them] to err. See also, regarding such a bridle, ISAIAH 37:29. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “He will assuredly agitate the nations with the agitation of vanity: and there shall be a bridle of error in the jaws of the people.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And swell to confound nations for their vain errors.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has “to cause terror upon the nations because they have vainly gone astray” (Lamsa) / “to confuse the nations because of their erring vanity” (BPE). Furthermore, instead of jaws of the people, the Peshitta (S) has jaws of the nations. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “To destroy the nations unto nothing, and the bridle of error that was in the jaws of the people.” While the Lord permits the nations to carry out the work of destruction, it ought to be clear that He will not cause the nations’ hearts to be hardened against latter-day Israel any more than he hardened the heart of Pharaoh against Israel when she dwelt in Egypt (see JST notes throughout Exodus, e.g., 7:13a ff.). The bridle of vanity is placed on the nations of the world through Satan’s influence. Rawlinson explains: “One of the Divine purposes, in all violent crashes and revolutions, is ‘to sift nations to separate in each nation the good from the bad, the precious from the vile; and this is done with the sieve of vanity,’ i.e. the sieve which allows the good corn to pass through, separating from it, and keeping back, all that is vile and refuse” (compare to Amos 9:9). Alexander writes: “Most interpreters prefer the more specific sense of leading astray, or in the wrong direction, with particular allusion, as J. D. Michaelis supposes, to the fact that Sennacherib was misled by a false report respecting Tirhakah, the king of Ethiopia.” With an allusion to the nations who will gather to fight against Israel in the last days, Govett says: “Here the reason of the delusion [causing them to err] is specified—because the Gentiles will then have rejected nationally the revelation of Christ, therefore will he send them this potent deceiver. Prime movers in the delusion shall be evil spirits ‘working miracles,’ to gather together all nations against Jerusalem, as is here represented by Isaiah. That dreadful day is further described in its terrible artillery of wrath, mighty voices, as the archangel’s trumpet, devouring fire, thunder and hailstones. So St. John, describing the seventh and ‘last trump,’ ... ‘when the nations are angry and his wrath is come,’ adds, ‘And there were lightning and voices, and thunders, and an earthquake, and great hail’ (Revelation 11:15–19).”

29 Ye shall have a song, as in the night [when] a holy solemnity is kept; and gladness of heart, as when one goeth with a pipe to come into the mountain of the LORD, to the mighty One of Israel.

✓ Rock

Ye shall have a song, as in the night [when] a holy solemnity is kept. The Targum (T) has for the second clause, “When the festival is sanctified.” The LXX (G) reads, “When error shall pursue them and overtake them, before their face ought not you to rejoice continually and continually go to my solemnities like them who are celebrating a festival?” The Lamsa Peshitta (S) has, “You shall have a song, even a garland which is sanctified in the night when a holy solemnity is kept.” The BPE (S) has, “To you a song shall be a consecrated crown in the feast day.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has sanctified instead of holy. After the horror; a time of rejoicing. From ISAIAH 54 the words of the Lord majestically echo: “In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the LORD thy Redeemer” (ISAIAH 54:8). ¶ As in the night [when] a holy solemnity is kept. Ibn Ezra explains this of “the night of the Passover.” So does Rashi (in Rosenberg): “On the night of the Passover shall this joy come to you.— [Rosenberg adds, Rashi from unknown Midrashic source. The only Midrashic work that states that the downfall of Sennacherib’s camp occurred on the night of Passover is Midrash Panim Acherim, second version, on Megillath Esther, ch. 6, p. 37. In no place, however, is there any indication that this verse connects the downfall of Sennacherib with that date, except in reference to what Rashi cites further. Perhaps Rashi, as well as Ibn Ezra and Redak, was in possession of a Midrash, since lost.]” Most exegetes are divided between the Feast of Tabernacles and the Passover. ¶ *And gladness of heart, as when one goeth with a pipe*⁴⁰ to come into the mountain of the LORD

[בְּהַר-יְהוָה], to the mighty One of Israel. The Targum (T) has, “With joy of heart, as when they march with thanksgivings and the pipe, to enter the holy mountain of the Lord, to appear before the mighty One of Israel.” The LXX (G) reads, “Like them who are gladdened you should go with instrumental music to the mount of the Lord, to the God of Israel.” The Lamsa Peshitta (S) has, “And gladness of heart, as when one walks rejoicing to come to the mountain of the LORD, to the mighty One of Israel.” The BPE (S) has, “And shall have rejoicing of heart as one who walks in rejoicing until coming upon the mount of Yahweh, the Mighty of Jacob.” ¶ With a pipe [or, with a flute], בְּחִלְלִי. The rejoicing is accompanied by song and flute. Rawlinson, leaning on Vitranga, explains: “Joyful processions from the country districts to Jerusalem are alluded to. These were commonly headed by a piper or a band of pipers (Vitranga). They took place several times in the year at each of the three great feasts, and irregularly when any district sent up its firstfruits to the temple treasury. (Nehemiah 10:35–37).” This reminds me of a trip to the temple from San Javier to Santiago, during my 2002 Sabbatical leave, with the branch members singing one hymn after another on the bus. Kay writes, “It is said that each band of pilgrims on its way to Jerusalem was headed by a person who played the flute.” ¶ To the mighty One of Israel. Or rather, as in the margin ||, To the Rock of Israel, another title for Jehovah, אל-צור ישראל. Contrast with ISAIAH 1:24, where mighty is used, “אֲבִיר יִשְׂרָאֵל.” Alexander writes, “The Rock of Israel is not mount Zion or Moriah, but Jehovah himself, to whose presence they resorted, as appears from 2 Samuel 23:3.” So also Cheyne, who says, “‘Rock’ was one of the synonyms for Jehovah; so ISAIAH 17:10; 44:8, comp. Deuteronomy 32 (six times).” For instance, “He is the Rock, his work is perfect: for all his ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he” (Deuteronomy 32:4).

⁴⁰ Musical instrument.

30 And the LORD shall cause his glorious voice ✓ to be heard, and shall shew the lighting down of his arm, with the indignation of [his] anger, and [with] the flame of a devouring fire, [with] scattering, and tempest, and hailstones.

✓ the glory of his voice

And the LORD shall cause his glorious voice to be heard, and shall shew the lighting down of his arm, with the indignation of [his] anger. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And the Lord shall proclaim the brightness of the voice of His Word, and He shall reveal the strength of His arm in the fury of His anger (Chaldee, ‘in the strength of His anger’).” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “When the Lord shall cause the glory of his voice to be heard—when, to display the fury of his arm with wrath and indignation.” Instead of lighting down of his arm the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has the blow of his arm. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, beginning with the second clause, “And shall shew the terror of his arm, in the threatening of wrath.” ¶ Shew the lighting down of his arm. Other helpful renderings include: “And the Lorde shall cause his glorious voyce to be hearde, and shall declare his stretched out arme with a terrible countenance” (Bishop’s Bible); “The LORD will get furious. His fearsome voice will be heard, his arm will be seen ready to strike” (CEV); “And the LORD will cause His voice of authority to be heard, And the descending of His arm to be seen in fierce anger” (NASB). ¶ The arm of the Lord is often given as an illustration of action. In this case, of vengeance on behalf of His people. ¶ And [with] the flame of a devouring fire, [with] scattering, and tempest, and hailstones. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And in flames of fire, destroying the graven images with scattering (בִּירֵר, ‘scattering,’ is omitted in the Royal Polyglot), and storm, and hailstorms.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And consuming fire, he shall utter tremendous thunder, accompanied with a furious tempest of rain and hail.”

Instead of scattering, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has violent rain (BPE) / rainstorm (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “And the flame of devouring fire: he shall crush to pieces with whirlwind, and hailstones.” These words remind us of D&C 43:23–25. Alexander helps us notice that and hailstones are literally and stone of hail,

וְאֶבֶן בָּרָד. By the way, I have noticed that while stone in English usually refers to something relatively small, in Hebrew these אֶבֶן may be of considerable size.⁴¹

Rather than scattering, for נִפְץ, many translate as a cloudburst or thunderclap, the terrible sound of thunder in a lightning storm. Such lightning and rain storms are often followed by hailstones. Young says, “The image is that of a theophany, in which a storm is an accompanying factor. Many commentators think that there is a specific allusion here to the thunder... [and this] may be, but the heart of the thought is not the storm but the appearance of God.”

31 For through the voice of the LORD shall the Assyrian be beaten down, [which] smote with a rod.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For through the voice of the Word of the Lord the Assyrian shall be broken, he that smote by his power.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For by the voice of the Lord the Assyrians shall be beaten down by the stroke with which he will smite them.” Similarly, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has Assyria beaten by the rod. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “For at the voice of the Lord the Assyrian shall fear being struck with the rod.” While the Assyrian beat her enemies with the rod (see also ISAIAH 10:24), now the Lord would, through the power of His mouth—and also the rod as we see in the next verse—defeat her and all that fight against His people. Such reversals of language are very typical of the Prophet Isaiah.

32 And [in] every place where the grounded staff shall pass, ✓ which the LORD shall lay upon him, ✓ [it] shall be with tabrets and harps: and in battles of shaking will he fight with it. ✓ ✓ ✓

✓ every passing of the rod founded

✓ ✓ cause to rest upon

✓ ✓ ✓ or, against them

⁴¹ For instance, the large rocks that compose the Wailing Wall are referred to as stones, e.g., see the book, Touching the Stones of Our Heritage, which Linda & I purchased while in Israel this year (we got it at Yad Vashem, יָד וַשֵּׁן, on 9 September 2012).

And [in] every place where the grounded staff shall pass, which the LORD shall lay upon him. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And it shall come to pass, that the Lord shall cause the rest of the vengeance of His might in every pass (or, ‘ford’) of their princes and mighty ones, even amongst them.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “This indeed he shall have from all around him—from every place whence they had a hope of that assistance on which he relied.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “And it shall come to pass that because of all his works, the rod of oppression that Yahweh shall inflict upon her.” Lamsa (Ⲥ) has “And in all his works, the staff of affliction which the LORD shall lay upon him.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “And the passage of the rod shall be strongly grounded, which the Lord shall make to rest upon him.” YLT renders מוֹסְדָּה as settled, appointed or ordained; AMP, punishing; ASV & HCSB, appointed. The idea is that the rod is an appointed punishment. Assyrian here also stands for the world in the latter days. Cowles says, “What our translators understood to refer to the place where the staff should pass, is now generally admitted to refer to the passing or coming down of the rod itself.”

¶ The grounded staff, מוֹסְדָּה מִיָּדָה. Lowth writes, “The Syriac has דְּשׁוּעַ בְּרָדָה, virga domans, vel objectionis.” Clarke, who quotes Lowth, adds: “the taming rod, or rod of subjection.” Duhm suggests that the Hebrew word מוֹסְדָּה, ought instead to be read as מוֹסְרָה (with the ד changed to ר). If we follow HAL, מוֹסְרָה is from מוֹסֵר, i.e., discipline or chastisement. With this change, Whitehouse explains, “Duhm has restored to us the probable reading, and we should accordingly render: ‘and every passing over (= stroke) of the staff shall be his (i.e., Assyria’s) chastisement.’” In other words, “And every stroke of the staff shall be her chastisement.” Likewise, Lowth observes: “—*The rod of correction*⁴²] For מוֹסְרָה, the grounded staff, of which no one yet has been able to make any tolerable sense, Le Clerc conjectured מוֹסְרָה, of correction; (see Proverbs 22:15 {שִׁבְטֵי מוֹסֵר, rod of correction}); and so it is in two MSS. (one of them ancient), and seems to be so in the Bodley MS. NASB (also see ISV and some others) thus reads: “And every blow of the rod of punishment &c.” Gill writes: “which smote with a rod; other nations, particularly the Jews, whom the Assyrian is expressly said to smite with a rod; and because he was an instrument in God’s hand for the chastising of that people, he is called the rod of his anger, ISAIAH 10:5⁴³ but now he that smote shall be smitten himself; him whom God used as a rod to correct others, he will smite with his rod, for his own correction: for this may be understood of God, and be rendered thus, ‘with a rod, he,’ that is, God, ‘shall smite’ the Assyrian, as before; so Aben Ezra and Kimhi.” Kay writes, “The ‘mighty staff,’ sent forth from Zion (Psalm 110:2)—mightier by far than that which Moses lifted over the Red Sea (Exodus 14:16)—shall take effect on each enemy in succession, and be welcomed by the Church with jubilant anthems, like those which rose on the eastern shore of the Red Sea (Exodus 15:20), or those which attended the ark on its way to Zion (2 Samuel 6:5).” Barnes has: “Who was accustomed to smite as with a rod; that is, his government was tyrannical and severe. As he had been accustomed to smite in that manner, so he would now meet the proper reward of his oppression of the nations.” ¶ [It] shall be with tabrets and harps: and in battles of shaking will he fight with it. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The house of Israel shall praise with tabrets and harps, because of the mighty war which shall be waged for them against the people.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “They will with timbrels and the kithara fight against him, after his rout.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “Shall be at the sound of tabrets and harps, and He shall fight against her in violent battle.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “With timbrels and harps, and in great battles he shall over throw them.” Alexander explains it: “The sense would seem to be that every passage of Jehovah’s rod (i.e. every stroke which passes from it to the object) will be hailed by those whom the Assyrian had oppressed, with joy and exultation... [so that] every stroke would be attended with rejoicing on the part of the spectators, and especially of those who had been subject to oppression.”

33 For Tophet [is] ordained of old; yea, for the king it is prepared; he hath made [it] deep [and] large: the pile thereof [is] fire and much wood; the breath of the LORD, like a stream of brimstone, doth kindle it.

✓ from yesterday

For Tophet [is] ordained of old; yea, for the king it is prepared; he hath made [it] deep [and] large: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For hell is made ready from eternity on account of their sins; yea, the eternal King hath prepared it deep and wide.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Of thee he will previously demand (and hast thou not provided for his reign) a deep valley and wood laid up in piles.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) has, “For he has prepared his punishment of old; yea, it is prepared to be executed; he has made it deep and large in his dwelling place.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “Because he prepares the provisions before the beginning of days. Yes, he had prepared her to give counsel, and he deepened and widened his abode.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, following the margin ||, “For Topheth is prepared from yesterday, prepared by the king, deep, and wide.” ¶ Keith well says, regarding the end of days, and quotes Joel also: “... is confirmed by what is said in Joel of the scene of the same events, the last and terrible destruction of the enemies of God : ‘Behold in those days and at that time—the great day of the Lord—when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem, I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, and will plead with them there.’ This valley is united with that of Hinnom, in which Tophet is situated. There, as on a vast funeral pile—as in a grave deep and large—shall the enemies of Judah perish.” Jennings writes: “As to the word ‘Tophet,’ we find it elsewhere in just one [but see others, below] place, Job 17:6⁴⁴; and there it has been completely misunderstood by the translators of the Authorized Version, who render it ‘tabret,’ and thus alter the force of the verse entirely, reading it: ‘And aforetime I was as a tabret.’ The Revised gives the opposite, the correct, meaning: ‘And I became an open abhorring,’ and in the margin ||, ‘One on whose face they spit.’ It thus bears in it the sense of vomiting, or abhorring as the vilest of the vile. Thus the very word ‘Tophet’ speaks that awful truth that what answers to this Tophet will contain only that which is so utterly abhorrent to God that He speaks of it as ‘vomit.’ But that is precisely the repellent figure that our Lord used in His letter to the Church in Laodicea, in which many of us recognize the professing Church of our very day: ‘I will spue thee out of My mouth.’ Could anything speak more strongly of utter abhorrence? It is the perfect parallel to ‘Tophet.’ ... Mark another significant correspondence: this Tophet had been prepared ‘long ago’—a word that is strongly suggestive of what had taken place before the day of man altogether. Before man had come upon the scene, before he fell in disobedience and so came under the penalty of the first death, Tophet had been ‘prepared.’ But that inevitably suggests that there had been a prior fall—a prior sin in a pre-Adamite era; and this, the word of our Lord distinctly confirms: ‘Then shall He say to them on the left hand, Depart from Me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels’ (Matthew 25:41).” Regarding Tophet, ISBE has, “Topheth, (תֹּפֶת, etymology uncertain; the most probable is its connection with a root meaning ‘burning’ – the ‘place of burning’; the King James Version, Tophet, except in 2 Kings 23:10): The references are to such a place: ‘They have built the high places of Topheth, which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to burn their sons and their daughters in the fire’ (Jeremiah 7:31). On account of this abomination Topheth and the Valley of Hinnom should be called ‘The valley of Slaughter: for they shall bury in Topheth, till there be no place to bury,’ the Revised Version margin || ‘because there shall be no place else’ (Jeremiah 7:32); see also Jeremiah 19:6, 12–14. Josiah is said to have ‘defiled Topheth’ as part of his great religious reforms (2 Kings 23:10). The site of this shameful place would seem to have been either at the lower end of the VALLEY OF HINNOM (which see), near where Akeldama is now pointed out, or in the open ground where this valley joins the Kidron.” ¶ For the king לְמֶלֶךְ. Indeed, here we have a word that may be translated as king, or as Moloch. While most translate as king, AMP translates: “For Topheth [a place of burning and abomination] has already been laid out and long ago prepared; yes, for the [Assyrian] king and [the god] Molech it has been made ready, its pyre made deep and large, with fire and much wood; the breath of the Lord, like a stream of brimstone, kindles it.” ISBE has, regarding Moloch, “The place where it was practiced from the days of Ahaz and Manasseh was the Valley of Hinnom where Topheth stood, a huge altar-pyre for the burning of the sacrificial victims.” Rawlinson cleverly notes: “Isaiah seems to use [Tophet] generically, as if there were many Tophets. For the king it is prepared; literally, it also is prepared for the king in the Hebrew ‘for the melech,’ which is the same word as ‘Moloch,’ who was looked upon by his worshippers as ‘the king’ κατ’ ἐξοχήν. Isaiah means to say, ‘As the Tophet of the Vale of Hinnom is prepared for a king (Moloch), so this new Tophet is prepared for another king (the King of Assyria).’ He hath made it deep and large a vast burning-place for a vast multitude (2 Kings 19:35), with the fire and the wood ready, only awaiting the breath of Jehovah to kindle it. As the bodies of great malefactors were burnt, (Joshua 7:25) and not buried, so the prophet consigns to a great burning the hundred and eighty-five thousand Assyrian corpses, of which it would soon be necessary to dispose in some way.” Regarding this whole verse Henderson says: “The whole passage furnishes one of the finest specimens of figurative description to be met with in the Bible; and the vengeance taken on the impious king of Assyria and his army, as here set forth, is emblematical both of the destruction of Antichrist, as described in the Apocalypse, and of the wicked generally in the world to come.” ¶ The pile thereof [is] fire and much wood; the breath of the LORD, like a stream of brimstone, doth kindle it. The Targum (T) has, “A fiery pyre as of abundance of fuel burns in it: the Word of the Lord, like an overwhelming torrent of brimstone, shall kindle it.” The LXX (G) reads, “The wrath of the Lord will be fire and wood in abundance like a valley burning with brimstone.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “The wood and the fire are plentiful; the breath of the LORD, like a stream of brimstone, does kindle it.” The BPE (Ⲫ) has, “Much wood and fire; the breath of Yahweh shall be as a stream of sulfur that burns there.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) renders it, “The nourishment thereof is fire and much wood: the breath of the Lord as a torrent of brimstone kindling it.” Barnes explains: “The pile thereof – The wood that was collected there to be consumed. The breath of the Lord – As if Yahweh should breathe upon it, and enkindle the whole mass, so that it should burn without the possibility of being extinguished. The meaning is, that the destruction of the Assyrian would as really come from Yahweh as if he should, by his own agency, ignite the vast piles that were collected in the valley of Hinnom. Like a stream of brimstone – Brimstone, or sulphur, is used in the Scriptures to denote a fire of great intensity, and one that cannot be extinguished (see Genesis 19:24; Psalm 11:6; Ezekiel 38:22; Revelation 9:17–18).” In terms of the latter days, it seems to speak of the burning fire that will consume the earth, but not the righteous (ISAIAH 33:14). Many exegetes give this verse the meaning of how hell-fire will be for the wicked. From modern revelation, however, we know that this is only representative of the punishment, and is not a literal one. In D&C 19:4–20 we read of the true nature of God’s punishment if we do not repent.

⁴² Rather than grounded.

⁴³ Also see ISAIAH 10:24.

⁴⁴ And Tophet, תֹּפֶת. Also see Barnes on this verse, with similar points made.

23 October 2011

Isaiah 31

Intimately related to ISAIAH 30, this chapter is yet another warning for Judah to lean on the Lord and not upon Egypt.

vv. 1–5. A warning against going to Egypt for support is reiterated. Instead, man ought to lean on the Lord who is able to protect and save.

1 ¶ WOE to them that go down to Egypt for help; and stay on horses, and trust in chariots, because [they are] many; and in horsemen, because they are very strong; but they look not unto the Holy One of Israel, neither seek the LORD!

WOE to them that go down to Egypt for help; and stay on horses, and trust in chariots, because [they are] many. The LXX (6) reads, “ALAS! They went down to Egypt for help! They trusted in horses and chariots; for they have many.” In the Masoretic text (מ) the preposition to in to Egypt is implied (מִצְרַיִם), while in the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) it is spelled out, לְמִצְרַיִם. Also, in the Masoretic text (מ) we have, on [the] chariot (where the the is implied), עַל-רֶכֶב, while in the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) we have on the chariot, עַל הֶרֶב, spelled out. ¶ The LXX (6) reads, ALAS!, as we have noted, based on the הִי, HOI we have discussed in ISAIAH 18 and elsewhere. ¶ Here we are reminded of the injunction in Deuteronomy 17:16 of not leaning on horses nor on Egypt, “But he shall not multiply horses to himself, nor cause the people to return to Egypt, to the end that he should multiply horses: forasmuch as the LORD hath said unto you, Ye shall henceforth return no more that way.” Nägelsbach well says: “We must understand by ‘those that go down,’ not only those physically going down to Egypt, but also those that accompanied them in spirit and shared their intention.” For the expression to go down to Egypt see discussion in ISAIAH 30:2. ¶ Upon chariot, עַל-רֶכֶב. Cowles suggests: “The word rendered chariots is singular. Etymologically it means a riding, and as has been noted (ISAIAH 21:7) seems often, as here, to mean cavalry. The ancients placed great reliance on horses of war...” To stay on horses means to lean on, to find support and comfort on horses (and chariots). A more sure way is to lean on the Lord: “Who is among you that feareth the LORD, that obeyeth the voice of his servant, that walketh in darkness, and hath no light? let him trust in the name of the LORD, and stay upon his God” (ISAIAH 50:10). Several exegetes—including Henderson and Alexander—note that Egypt was well known for her horses, and by implication leaning on Egypt meant leaning on horses. ¶ And in horsemen, because they are very strong; but they look not unto the Holy One of Israel, neither seek the LORD! The Targum (T) has, beginning with the second clause, “But they stay not themselves upon the Word of the Holy One of Israel, neither seek instruction from the Lord (Chaldee, ‘from before the Lord’).” The LXX (6) reads, “And their cavalry is very numerous; and did not rely on the Holy One of Israel, nor did they ask counsel of the Lord.” Instead of look, the Peshitta (S) has trust. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And have not trusted in the Holy One of Israel, and have not sought after the Lord.” As a horse trainer and dressage rider I understand what it is to have a horse sensitive to every twitch in my own musculature, or slight shift in weight or movement of my leg, so the horse is merely a powerful and muscular extension of my own body. The feelings of power and euphoria are pronounced upon training and riding such horses. But what is all that compared to knowing that Heavenly Father has heard my prayer and having Christ speak to me through the Spirit of God—to give instruction, admonition and peace? All have been commanded to: “...stay themselves upon the God of Israel; The LORD of hosts is his name” (ISAIAH 48:2b). This idea that they do not seek the Lord is very close to that also found in ISAIAH 48, that they: “...swear by the name of the LORD, and make mention of the God of Israel, but not in truth, nor in righteousness” (ISAIAH 48:1b). Furthermore: “O that cunning plan of the evil one! O the vainness, and the frailties, and the foolishness of men! When they are learned they think they are wise, and they hearken not unto the counsel of God, for they set it aside, supposing they know of themselves, wherefore, their wisdom is foolishness and it profiteth them not. And they shall perish. But to be learned is good if they hearken unto the counsels of God” (2 Nephi 9:28–29). See also Jeremiah 9:23–24. There is much danger in leaning on the philosophies of man or intellectual idolatry. Jennings well says, “We each have the danger of that ‘woe’ being on us for we each have our ‘Egypt.’”

2 Yet he also [is] wise, and will bring evil, and will not call back[✓] his words: but will arise against the house of the evildoers, and against the help of them that work iniquity.

✓ remove

Yet he also [is] wise, and will bring evil, and will not call back his words: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And also He in His wisdom will bring evil on account of what he is doing (according to the Royal Polyglot, דַּעֲבָרָהָא, i.e., ‘on account of transgression’); and He will not make to fail His words (Chaldee, ‘to make cease’).” The LXX (Ⲙ) reads, “Therefore he in his wisdom brought evils on them: and that his word may not be slighted.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “Yet in his wisdom, he will bring a calamity, and will not alter his words.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “But he that is the wise one hath brought evil, and hath not removed his words.” ¶ Calvin writes: “By calling God ‘wise,’ he does not merely bestow on him the honour of an attribute which always belongs to him, but censures the craftiness of those whom he saw to be too much delighted with their own wisdom.” ¶ The ‘evil’ spoken about here represents the consequences of our moral agency. The Lord here tells us that there are times when he will not call back His words—when the consequences for our actions will be carried out. When the Lord calls back His words, in the KJV, this is unfortunately translated as the Lord repenting [נָחַם]. In 13 out of 17 instances where the word repented appears in the Old Testament, it is associated with the Lord and means to be moved with compassion. In one case, the Hebrew has been corrupted and there gladly is a JST. In two of the remaining instances where נָחַם is used of mortals, it also means to be moved with compassion. Only in Jeremiah 8:6 is נָחַם used as a synonym to שׁוּב, turn or return unto the Lord.¹ The word repent (rather than

¹ People cannot just say, “I will repent later.” The Prophet Joseph Smith taught: “We should take warning and not wait for the death-bed to repent; as we see the infant taken away by death, so may the youth and middle aged, as well as the infant be suddenly called into eternity. Let this, then, prove as a warning to all not to procrastinate repentance, or wait till a death-bed, for it is the will of God that man should repent and serve Him in health, and in the strength and power of his mind, in order to secure His blessing, and not wait until he is called to die” (History of the Church, 4:553–54; punctuation modernized; from a discourse given by Joseph Smith on March 20, 1842, in Nauvoo, Illinois; reported by Wilford Woodruff). In the Book of Mormon we read: “For behold, this life is the time for men to prepare to meet God; yea, behold the day of this life is the day for men to perform their labors. And now, as I said unto you before, as ye have had so many witnesses, therefore, I beseech of you that ye do not procrastinate the day of your repentance until the end; for after this repented) does have the שׁוּב meaning in both instances. In one of these the Lord complains that He ought not to be misunderstood: “God is not a man, that he should lie; neither the son of man, that he should repent [נָחַם]: hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?” (Numbers 23:19). ¶ The Lord, through His prophets, warns that our choices can bring negative consequences. If we make a path correction, if we turn the right way, we can often avert these consequences. On the way to work this morning,² I saw a sign that caught my attention: “Turn to Jesus.” Well said! So it is that in Jeremiah we read: “If that nation, against whom I have pronounced [spoken against in warning], turn [שׁוּב; and turn, from שׁוּב] from their evil, I will repent [נָחַם; and I will be moved with compassion, from נָחַם] of the evil³ that I thought to do unto them” (Jeremiah 18:8). ¶ At our slightest show of repentance the Lord blesses us and forgives us. After all, He taught us to forgive 70 times 7.⁴ He is the master forgiver. But in this verse it is clear that the Lord’s patience will not last forever. In Ezekiel 24:14, we read “I the LORD have spoken it: it shall come to pass, and I will do it; I will not go back, neither will I spare, neither will I repent [moved with compassion] ...” Why? Because the Lord, who can see the future as well as the past, knows that in this instance there will be no coming repentance. This is precisely, then, what the expression and will not call back his words mean. ¶ But will arise against the house of the evildoers, and against the help of them that work iniquity. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “help the work (literally, ‘the wearisome labor’) of a lie,” rather than work of iniquity. The LXX (Ⲙ) reads, “He will rise up against the houses of wicked men and against this hope of theirs which is vain.” Regarding the house of the evildoers and them that work iniquity, Henderson writes: “The בֵּית מְרִעִים and פְּעֻלַּי אֲנִי are synonymous, and designate the rebellious Jews. By day of life, which is given us to prepare for eternity, behold, if we do not improve our time while in this life, then cometh the night of darkness wherein there can be no labor performed” (Alma 34:32–33). So, let us always remember this invitation to come unto Christ and turn our hearts and our lives to Him: “Therefore also now, saith the LORD, turn ye even to me with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning: And rend your heart and not your garments, and repent, and turn unto the LORD, your God; for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness; and he will turn away the evil from you” (JST Joel 2:12–13).

² 1 February 2013.

³ Regarding the archaic use of the word evil see notes under ISAIAH 30:2.

⁴ This spirit of forgiveness greatly irritated Jonah who was weary of the Lord’s forgiveness of others. Yet, what the Lord wants for us is precisely a turning of our hearts. He never ceases to invite us and call upon us to turn and repent.

עֲזָרָה [help, aid, HAL, from עָזַר] the Egyptians are meant.”

3 Now the Egyptians [are] men, and not God; and their horses flesh, and not spirit. When the LORD shall stretch out his hand, both he that helpeth shall fall, and he that is holpen shall fall down, and they all shall fail together.

Now the Egyptians [are] men, and not God; and their horses flesh, and not spirit. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And the Egyptians are men, and none of them a mighty one, and their horses are flesh, and not spirit.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Against an Egyptian—a man, not a god—against the flesh of horses in which there is no help.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, for the first half, “Egypt is man, and not God.” Man, when he fears man, makes giants or gods of men. So it was when Moses sent twelve spies into Canaan. While Caleb came back ready to trust in the Lord and go into battle, the rest were filled with cowardice: “But the men that went up with him [Caleb] said, We be not able to go up against the people; for they are stronger than we. And they brought up an evil report of the land which they had searched unto the children of Israel, saying, The land, through which we have gone to search it, is a land that eateth up the inhabitants thereof; and all the people that we saw in it are men of a great stature. And there we saw the giants, the sons of Anak, which come of the giants: and we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight” (Numbers 13:31–33). Redak, following Psalm 33:17 has (in Rabbi Rosenberg): “A horse is a vain thing for safety.” ¶ Regarding spirit, רוּחַ, it is not just spirit, but the Spirit of God, רוּחַ אֱלֹהִים. The expression is in contraposition to mortal beings such as men and beasts. It is in no way meant to indicate that God is a Spirit (John 4:24a) as our AV incorrectly translates—through a false ellipsis—our received Greek text⁵ πνεῦμα ο θεος. Instead read: God is spirit (see also ESV, HCSB, ISV, NASB), just as God is love and mercy and numerous other qualities. ¶ When the LORD shall stretch out his hand, both he that helpeth shall fall, and he that is holpen shall fall down, and they all shall fail together. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And the Lord shall deal the stroke of His power, and he that helpeth shall stumble, and he that is holpen shall fall, and all of them together shall be destroyed.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “When the Lord shall lay his hand upon them, then shall these helpers fail and be all destroyed together.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has annihilated (Lamsa) / exterminated (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “And the Lord shall put down his hand, and the helper shall fall, and he that is helped shall fall, and they shall all be confounded together.” ¶ In other words, Egypt (who helpeth) would extend a hand to help but would fall along with Israel (the holpen). The Lord stretching forth His hand is equivalent to the manifesting of His power. Once again, it is best to liken these scriptures unto us by thinking of Egypt as any force representing the arm of flesh and leaning on the learning of man. Regarding the words helpeth and holpen [both from the same root, help, עָזַר] Henderson writes: “In עֲזָרָה and עָזַר is an elegant paronomasia.” The KJV retains this paronomasia in English.

4 For thus hath the LORD spoken unto me, Like as the lion and the young lion roaring on his prey, when a multitude of shepherds is called forth against him, [he] will not be afraid of their voice, nor abase himself for the noise[✓] of them: so shall the LORD of hosts come down to fight for mount Zion, and for the hill thereof.

✓ or, multitude

For thus hath the LORD spoken unto me, Like as the lion and the young lion roaring on his prey, when a multitude of shepherds is called forth against him. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Because the Lord hath thus said to me, ‘As the lion or the young lion will roar over the prey which he hath taken; and will repeat his roaring over it, until the mountains are filled with his voice.’ Instead of called forth against him, The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has shout at him. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “For thus saith the Lord to me: Like as the lion roareth, and the lion’s whelp upon his prey, and when a multitude of shepherds shall come against him.” ¶ A lion is not easily deterred or frightened by a bunch of shepherds when he has gotten himself a prey to eat. If anything, these shepherds could represent the next meal. Alexander writes: “Growl is to be preferred to roar, not only for the reason given by Bochart, that the lion roars before, not after it has seized its prey, but because הִנָּה more properly denotes a suppressed or feeble sound.” So also Cowles: “[The lion] has his lamb already by him and growls over it (so the Hebrew); bidding defiance to [whatever number of] shepherds would fain rescue the lamb. So God covers his people and defies all foreign assailants.” Henderson says, “The image of a lion, to represent the power of God, is not infrequent, Hosea 5:14; 11:10; 13:7–8; Amos 3:8; Revelation 5:5.” ¶ [He] will not be afraid of their voice, nor abase himself for the noise of them: so shall the LORD of hosts come down to fight for mount Zion, and for the hill thereof. The Targum (Ⲯ) has in the second clause, “Thus shall the kingdom of the Lord of hosts be revealed encamping upon the mountain of Zion, and upon its hill.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And the multitude are subdued and terrified at his wrath: so will the Lord of Hosts descend to encamp on this mountain—on this Sion—on the summits thereof.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “He will not fear at their voice, nor be afraid of their multitude: so shall the Lord of hosts come down to fight upon mount Sion, and upon the hill thereof.” ¶ The Lord will not be any more afraid of men than a lion is frightened by shepherds when He defends Jerusalem against the nations (to be applied as well to Hezekiah’s time as to the end of days—in that last great siege. It is not uncommon for Isaiah to give us a comforting scene from that day or the end of days in the middle of prophecies on other topics.

⁵ But see the JST restoration: “For unto such hath God promised his Spirit. And they who worship him must worship in spirit and in truth.”

5 As birds flying, so will the LORD of hosts defend Jerusalem; defending also he will deliver [it; and] passing over he will preserve it.

As birds flying, so will the LORD of hosts defend Jerusalem. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “As a bird by flying, so the power of the Lord of hosts shall be revealed.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “As birds hover over their young, so will the Lord of Hosts protect Jerusalem.” Instead of defend Jerusalem, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has alight (Lamsa) / descend (BPE) upon Jerusalem. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, in some versions, incorrectly translated as birds dying when the Vulgate (ⲱ) clearly has flying, “Sicut aves volantes.” Ibn Ezra writes regarding defend or ⲙⲓⲛ [from ⲙⲓⲛ, HAL]: “He will cover. Compare ⲙⲓⲛ ‘shield’⁶ (Genesis 15:1). As the birds cover with their wings their young ones, in order to protect them, so will the Lord, etc.” Cheyne says: “Jehovah is like a lion to his foes, but like a mother-bird to his own. Strong and bold and courageous as the lion, tender and provident as the bird, but, unlike even the eagle, able under all circumstances to repel the assailant.” ¶ As birds fly, ⲉⲃⲟⲩⲧ ⲉⲃⲟⲩⲧ. A number of exegetes make a point that these are mother birds with motherly instincts. Young says, “It is probably correct to say that the feminine form of the particle⁷ alludes to the care of mothers for their young. God cares for Jerusalem as mother birds watch over their young in the nests.” Henderson explains regarding ⲉⲃⲟⲩⲧ, [from ⲉⲃⲟⲩ] or hover over something (HAL) “ⲉⲃⲟⲩ is here used in the sense of covering, compare ⲉⲃⲟⲩ [to make dark, cloud, HAL]; and not in that of flying, as given in our common version, which does not furnish a suitable point of comparison. The image is taken from the protection which birds afford to their young, by throwing their wings over them.” Henderson, Wildberger and Nägelsbach point us to Deuteronomy 32:11. In context, this beautiful scripture reads: “For the LORD’s portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance. He found him in a desert land, and in the waste howling wilderness; he led him about, he instructed him, he kept him as the apple of his eye. As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings: So the LORD alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him. He made him ride on the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increase of the fields; and he made him to suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock” Deuteronomy 32:9–13.” And once again, we hear in our minds Matthew 23:37b. I daily see our queltchues (southern lapwing or Vanellus chilensis) who fiercely defend their territory, their nest and their chicks against much larger birds such as the bandurria (Theristicus melanopis melanopis or black-faced ibis) and even people. They look quite aggressive as they spread their wings in warning (although the ones in the front of our yard have come to know me and accept my presence). ¶ Defending also he will deliver [it; and] passing over he will preserve it. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “He shall protect, He shall deliver, He shall save, and He shall make to pass away.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “He will hover over it and spring forward, and will protect and save it.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has “he shall alight to deliver, rescue, and help” (Lamsa) / “he shall protect, liberate, rescue and sustain” (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Protecting and delivering, passing over and saving.” Alexander writes, “ⲉⲃⲟⲩ is the verb used to denote the passing over of the houses in Egypt by the destroying angel (hence ⲉⲃⲟⲩ, passover), to which there may be an allusion here.” In the DSS 1QIsa^a (ⲱ) we have and deliver, ⲉⲃⲟⲩⲧ, while the Masoretic text (ⲙ) has and preserve, ⲉⲃⲟⲩⲧ.

vv. 6–9. Men are commanded to turn to the Lord and cease from their apostasy and revolt. The Assyrian will fall, not because of man, but because of the might of the Lord. The King of Asshur will flee in terror. The Lord will protect Jerusalem.

⁶ See HAL ⲙⲓⲛ, shield, protection, or covering.

⁷ ⲉⲃⲟⲩⲧ is feminine for fly, while ⲉⲃⲟⲩ is the masculine.

6 ¶ Turn ye unto [him from] whom the children of Israel have deeply revolted.

The Targum (T) has, “Return to the law; for you have multiplied sin (or, ‘greatly sinned’ or ‘added sin to sin,’ the Royal Polyglot has אֲתִנִּיתִין לְמִטְעִי, ‘you have greatly erred’), O sons of Israel!” The LXX (G) reads, “Therefore turn to him, O children of Israel, who are taking deep and wicked counsel.” The Lamsa Peshitta (S) has, “Repent, O children of Israel, for you have made your punishment severe.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Return as you had deeply revolted, O children of Israel.” Here we have a lovely invitation to turn unto [לְאֲשֶׁר] Christ, He whom the children of Israel had turned their backs to then. And as we liken it to today, let us turn unto Christ who the nations have turned their back to. שׁוּבוּ is the command form—turn ye!

7 For in that day every man shall cast away his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, [✓] which your own hands have made unto you [for] a sin.

✓ the idols of his gold

The Targum (T) has, “At that time each man shall abhor the idols of their silver and the idols of their gold, which your hands have made for you for a god (literally, ‘sin’).” The LXX (G) reads, “Because men will in that day reject the works of their hands—their idols of silver and gold which their hands have made.” Instead of cast away, the Peshitta (S) has, despise. The day would come when Israel would indeed put away and despise her idols to embrace the Lord. Anything that separates us from our God is our idol. Henderson writes: “This verse contains an assurance that such conversion [as mentioned in ISAIAH 31:6] would take place; and that the Jews would bring forth fruits meet for repentance.”

¶ Sin, חַטָּא [offence, sin, HAL). Cowles has: “‘Made for yourselves as a sin,’ implies that this was their great sin and occasion of more sinning. This abbreviated expression calls the idol their sin occurs (Deuteronomy 9:21) where Moses said, ‘I took your sin, the calf which ye had made, burnt if with fire’ etc. Also Amos 8:14 ‘They that swear by the sin of Samaria,’ i.e., her idol god.”

8 Then shall the Assyrian fall with the sword, not of a mighty man; and the sword, not of a mean man, shall devour him: but he shall flee from [✓] the sword, and his young men shall be discomfited. [✓]

✓ or, for fear of

✓ ✓ or, tributary, HEB., for metling, or, tribute

Then shall the Assyrian fall with the sword, not of a mighty man; and the sword, not of a mean⁸ man, shall devour him: The Targum (T) correctly has, “not of man,” and adds, “not of a man.” The LXX (G) likewise reads, “Therefore Asshur shall fall—not by the sword of a man of valour, nor shall the sword of a mortal devour him.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And the Assyrian shall fall by the sword not of a man, not a human sword.” Indeed, the AV is far from being literal here, as neither the words mighty or mean appear in this verse. Rather, there are two negations, the first is that Assyrian will not fall by the sword of man (לֹא-אִישׁ), and repeated again, with a different term for man (לֹא-אָדָם). Most exegetes have correctly suggested that in this instance לֹא-אָדָם means not human. This seems to be a double emphatic exclamation that Assyria would fall, but not by the sword of man but by the instrumentality of God. ESV has a literal translation: “And the Assyrian shall fall by a sword, not of man; and a sword, not of man, shall devour him” AMP has, “Then the Assyrian shall fall by a sword not of man; and a sword, not of men [but of God], shall devour him.” HCSB has: “Then Assyria will fall, but not by human sword.” We read of the Assyrian defeat: “Then the angel of the LORD went forth, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians a hundred and fourscore and five thousand: and when they [the Israelites] arose early in the morning, behold, they [the Assyrians] were all dead corpses” (ISAIAH 37:36; also see 2 Kings 19:35) ¶ But he shall flee from the sword, and his young men shall be discomfited. The Targum (T) has, “And he shall betake himself to flight as from before those who slay with the sword, and his heroes shall be for destruction.” The LXX (G) reads, “And he shall flee—(not from the face of the sword) and the young men shall be for destruction.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And he shall flee not at the face of the sword: and his young men shall be tributaries.” ¶ But for he shall flee from face of the sword. The Masoretic text (M) reads וְנָס לִפְנֵי חֶרֶב while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) has, וְנָס וּלְוָא מִפְּנֵי חֶרֶב. There are no real differences⁹

⁸ The word mean here signifies, insignificant, but as we have said, it is not in the Hebrew text, but rather, an unfortunate gloss.

⁹ Emanuel Tov explained, in a personal letter dated 31 January 2013: “These two words [are] pronounced in the same way and interchange all the time. In this verse in particular such an interchange is expected, between these two expressions, although there is a question as to whether (1) he shall flee is meant (most translators) or (2) not flee (ABP {LXX (6)}) / or (3) flee but not escape the sword (DRB, NASB). If the first interpretation is accepted, it seems to refer to the King of Asshur (see ISAIAH 30:33). The King of Assyria did flee back to his home. If the second, it may refer to the Assyrian army who would not flee but instead perish by the sword of the angel of the Lord. If the third, it fits the idea that those who did not flee would be put to work as forced labor, slaves or tributaries (לְמִסִּים). Alexander says, regarding the third option (but without favoring it): “For לָרָ, a few manuscripts and one of the earliest editions read לָרָ, not from the sword, i.e. he shall flee when no man pursueth (Proverbs 28:1).” A strong argument for the first, or most common interpretation, that the King of Asshur would flee, is that the same idea is contained in the next verse, “And he shall pass over to his strong hold for fear.” ¶ And his young men shall be discomfited. Or, as most translators have, tributaries. Regarding the issue of tributaries, Alexander has: “... in every other case the expression [i.e., לְמִסִּים] means to become tributary, with a special reference to the rendering of service to a superior. The objection that the prophecy, as thus explained [i.e., that Assyria’s young men would become tributaries], was not fulfilled, proceeds upon the false assumption that it refers exclusively to the overthrow of Sennacherib’s host, whereas it describes the decline and fall of the Assyrian power after that catastrophe.” The young men may have become tributaries to Babylon, or other nation.

9 And he shall pass over to his strong hold for fear, וְיָבוֹר וְיָבוֹר and his princes shall be afraid of the ensign, saith the LORD, whose fire [is] in Zion, and his furnace in Jerusalem.

✓ his rock shall pass away for fear ✓ ✓ or, his strength

And he shall pass over to his strong hold for fear. The Targum (T) has, “And his princes shall flee through fear, they shall move away.” The LXX (6) reads, “For with a rock they shall be enclosed as with a rampart.” The Peshitta (S) has something like, “And he shall abide in his rocky abode.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And his strength shall pass away with dread.”

¶ יָבוֹר, to travel, move (HAL). Bullinger’s Companion Bible Notes does well in pointing out that the expression pass over (“cross over, or retreat”) in this verse comes from a different source than in ISAIAH 31:5. Here it is יָבוֹר, from עָבַר; there it is פָּסַח. We read that after the angel of the LORD killed the Assyrian army, that then: “So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at Nineveh.” This is what is meant by he shall pass to his strong hold for fear. Cowles suggests: “The words for ‘strong hold’ means primarily a rock; sometimes a fortress built (as they often were) upon a high rock.” Barnes likewise observes: “The word rendered ‘stronghold’ (Hebrew, ‘His rock’) denotes his fortifications, or the places of strength in which he trusted ... This appears to have been most strikingly fulfilled (see ISAIAH 37:37).”

¶ And his princes shall be afraid of the ensign, saith the LORD. The Targum (T) has, “And his princes shall be broken on account of the miracle, saith the Lord.” The LXX (6) reads, “And shall be subdued; and he who fleeth shall be taken.” The Peshitta (S) has something like, “And his princes shall be defeated from before the ensign.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And his princes fleeing shall be afraid: the Lord hath said it.” Jennings suggests: “ISAIAH 11¹⁰ of our prophet will be enough to tell us who is thus symbolized. It is Messiah! It is Christ whose Feet are now again on Olivet. Well may even the victorious besiegers of Jerusalem flee!” ¶ Whose fire [is] in Zion, and his furnace in Jerusalem. The Targum (T) has, “Whose splendour is in Zion to them that obey the law, and whose burning furnace of fire is in Jerusalem for them who transgress His word.” The LXX (6) reads, “Thus saith the Lord, ‘Happy he who hath a seed in Sion and a family in Jerusalem!’” Alexander writes, “The true explanation of the clause seems to be that which supposes an allusion both to the sacred fire on the altar, and to the consuming fire of God’s presence, whose altar flames in Zion and whose wrath shall thence flame to destroy his enemies.

Compare the explanation of the mystical name Ariel in the note on ISAIAH 29:1.” Delitzsch sees an allusion to the Passover: “We cannot suppose that the allusion here is to the fire and hearth of the sacrifices; for תַּנּוּר does not mean a hearth, but a furnace (from נָרָ, to burn).

The reference is to the light of the divine presence, which was outwardly a devouring fire for the enemies of Jerusalem, an unapproachable red-hot furnace.” Keith, regarding fire [is] in Zion, and his furnace in Jerusalem suggests: “[This] refers to the fact that it is there that by fire the Lord shall plead with all flesh, when he will come with the fire of a devouring flame. It is equivalent with the last clause of the previous chapter which makes Tophet, beside Jerusalem, the scene of the outpouring of the vial of divine wrath.”

25 October 2011

2x lo' לָרָ], especially in the large Isaiah scroll. The reading of the scroll looks like a variant, a secondary one.”

¹⁰ ISAIAH 11:10, נִסִּי, ensign.

Isaiah 32

The Assyrian overthrow is representative of the overthrow of mystic Babylon and a triumph of God. The verses that describe wrath take us back to Isaiah's time, with a warning of the coming of Babylon upon the careless who think "all is well." Finally, we have the downpour of the Spirit of God once again upon the earth through the restoration of the Gospel in the Latter-days and eventually, the millennial reign of Christ. In the Journal of Discourses, Elder Orson Pratt spoke extensively and movingly on ISAIAH 32:13–20 and the blessings of turning a desert and wilderness into a prosperous and peaceful land. While as LDS we can certainly liken these scriptures unto us no doubt they also speak of the blessings that would fall upon the Holy Land, and the restitution of Israel and the Millennial day as well. Elder Pratt teaches that ISAIAH 32 and 35 are intimately connected to each other (Pratt, Elder Orson, JD 18:144). In 1875 he taught: "Preparatory to the time when God will come with vengeance to sweep away wickedness from the face of the earth, the house of Israel will be gathered back to their own lands, and the people of God will be permitted to dwell in the wilderness, and that wilderness will become a fruitful field. It is even said that the desert should rejoice because of those who are gathered, and should blossom as the rose. Now that is something that has been fulfilled during the last quarter of a century, here in this wilderness, barren, desert country. The great latter-day work has commenced, the kingdom of God has been reorganized on the earth; in other words, the Christian Church in all its purity and with all its ordinances, has been reorganized upon the face of the earth, and the time has at length come when the Spirit of God has been poured out from on high. Until that period arrived, there was no hope for Israel, no hope for the land of Palestine, no hope for the redemption of the tribes scattered in the four quarters of the earth; but when the wilderness should become as a fruitful field, when the spirit should again be poured out from on high, through the everlasting Gospel of the Son of God, then the people should be gathered together by the commandment of the Lord. As is here stated, his Spirit should be the instrument in gathering them together" (Pratt, Elder Orson, JD 18:145).

vv. 1–8. Govett writes: "It should be noted, that this chapter is a continuation of the last; for the destruction of Christ's foes is the time of his commencing reign. The gathering up of the tares and binding them in bundles to burn, is the time of the ingathering of the wheat into the garner. Who, then, is the king that shall in that day rule righteously, but Christ? Who 'his princes,' but the twelve apostles? ... No false names any longer shall be used to gloss over iniquity, but all the workers of wickedness shall be cut off." Keith well says: "In contrast with the previous state of ignorance and perverseness when the vision is to them, as it has now been so long, as a sealed book, and they do not hear the word of the Lord,—in the day when the king shall reign in righteousness, the eyes of men shall not be dim, and their ears shall hear." ISAIAH 32:4–8 speaks of a time when false doctrine will no longer be taught and celebrated.

1 ¶ BEHOLD, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Behold, a King shall reign in truth, and the righteous shall be magnified to execute just vengeance on the people." The LXX (Ϟ) reads, "For behold a righteous king shall reign and chiefs shall rule with justice." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has justice for righteousness. The expression a King (מֶלֶךְ) is the correct translation for the Masoretic text (מֶלֶךְ), rather than the King (הַמֶּלֶךְ). The Geneva Bible (1587)—along with several others—does well in capitalizing King: "Beholde, a King shall reigne in iustice, and the princes shall rule in iudgement." Of the Jewish authors, Abarbanel (in Slotki/Rosenberg) believes this to be a prophecy about the Messiah. Keith writes: "The passage opens with the expression 'behold' [הִנֵּה], implying that some remarkable announcement—one worthy of attention—followed. ¶ A number of exegetes mention the ל before righteousness: לְצַדִּיק. Young says: "The preposition ל may express the purpose of the reign or the manner of the reign. Hence, we may either translate 'for righteousness' or 'according to righteousness,' as in ISAIAH 11:4. The common English versions give 'in righteousness,' but this would normally be expressed by the preposition כ. Whether Isaiah is stating that the king will reign for the purpose of righteousness or according to righteousness is [not clear]. In either case the word righteousness is placed in the foreground, for the reign of this king is wholly contrary to the reigns of ordinary kings." To me, the ל seems to indicate a similar sentiment as after the manner, as we see in 2 Nephi: "And it came to pass that we lived after the manner of happiness” (2 Nephi 5:27). Thus, “Behold, a King shall reign after the manner of righteousness, &c.” Gladly, I found this early translation to back up my feelings: “Beholde, a kyng shall gouerne after the rule of righteousness,” ¶ Lowth has: “An ancient manuscript has וְשָׂרִי, and his princes.” (Bishops’ 1568). BYU Professor Craig Ostler explains: “Jesus Christ’s government will include other rulers, or, as the Bible refers to them, princes. Isaiah declared, ‘Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment.’ Latter-day revelation broadens our understanding of Isaiah’s messianic declaration: ‘For in my own due time will I come upon the earth in judgment, and my people shall be redeemed and shall reign with me on earth’ (D&C 43:29). The Savior clarified that among these ruling princes would be the twelve apostles who were with him during his mortal ministry in Jerusalem. He explained that at the day of His coming these apostles would be ‘clothed with robes of righteousness, with crowns upon their heads, in glory even as I am, to judge the whole house of Israel, even as many as have loved me and kept my commandments, and none else’ (D&C 29:12). Mormon identified the twelve Nephite disciples chosen by Christ during his ministry in the Americas as the judges over the remnant of his people. The Prophet Joseph Smith suggested that ‘Christ and the resurrected Saints will reign over the earth during the thousand years. They will not probably dwell upon the earth, but will visit it when they please, or when it is necessary to govern it’ (Smith, History of the Church, 5:212).”¹ Henderson likewise has: “The princes or rulers spoken of, are the Apostles, who, as our Saviour declares, were in the παλιγγενεσία, or new state of things [and would] ‘sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel’² (Matthew 19:28).”

¹ Ostler, Craig J. Isaiah’s Voice on the Promised Millennium. Sperry Symposium Voices of Old Testament Prophets: The 26th Annual Sidney B. Sperry Symposium.

² Elder Orson Pratt taught: “...when we lay our bodies down in the grave, go to our former abode where we once were, to the mansions prepared, and that we will join with the heavenly hosts. We will not forget the earth; it is our native abode; but instead of forgetting it, we will join with them in their new song, and with them we will look forward with joyful anticipation to the day when we shall return to reign on the earth, having been made kings and priests unto our God. And Jesus and the Twelve Apostles will be in our midst. And we have an account of their thrones. ‘And Jesus said unto them, Verily, I say unto you, that ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.’ Then the twelve tribes will come back, and twelve men sitting on twelve thrones, in the land of Palestine, will reign over them. The Twelve disciples raised up in this land, 1800 years ago, are to have their thrones; who, after being judged themselves by the Twelve at Jerusalem, will sit upon their thrones and will judge the remnant of the tribe of Joseph. And they will have that work to do in the eternal worlds. The Priesthood is not given for a few years and then to cease; but all the servants of God who have ministered here below by

2 And a man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.

✓ heavy

And a man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And the just that were hidden because of the wicked, as those who hide themselves on account of a storm, shall return, and be magnified.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And this man will be one who hideth his words, and he will be hid as from a rolling flood.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “And a man shall be as when one is hid from the wind, and hideth himself from a storm.” Henderson well explains that the אִשׁ (see Zechariah 6:12) here mentioned is the Christ, the King, the very Messiah alluded to in ISAIAH 32:1. And though mortal man is indeed nothing beside the Lord, I do believe that through the how beautiful are the feet principle that the Savior shares many of the positive attributes that are rightfully His with His righteous servants and disciples who will be “clothed with robes of righteousness” (D&C 29:12). The atonement of Jesus Christ is this refreshing comfort from the winds and tempests of life. ¶ *As rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.*³ The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And their instruction shall be received quickly, like the waters that flow into a dry land, like the shadow of a great rock in a parched land.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And he will be seen on Sion like a glorious stream in a thirsty land.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “As rivers of waters in drought, and the shadow of a rock that standeth out in a desert land.” In the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲯ) we have in [the] shade, בְּצֵל, while the Masoretic text (ⲙ) as [the] shade, בְּצֵל. Regarding the rivers of water Wordsworth beautifully ties it to John 4:14, wherein the Savior says: “But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life.” Lowth observes: “The shadow of a great projecting rock is the most refreshing that is possible in a hot country; not only as most perfectly authority of the Priesthood will continue their work among immortal beings, and among those living who will not have been changed to the immortal state” (JD 19:177).

³ The Prophet Joseph Smith, speaking of the Constitution of the United States said—because of the religious freedom it provides—“is to all those who are privileged with the sweets of liberty, like the cooling shades and refreshing waters of a great rock in a thirsty and weary land” (TPJS, p. 147).

excluding the rays of the sun, but also having in itself a natural coolness, which it reflects and communicates to every thing about it.” In Matthew 7:24 we read: “Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock.” Christ and His gospel are that rock. Wordsworth beautifully points us to Psalm 63:1 “O God, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and thirsty land, where no water is,” and says that: “... the same phrase is used, and is applied to God.” Kay says, “This description [i.e., ISAIAH 32:1–2, if it were not about Christ—the Son of God made flesh] is the more remarkable, because the chief sin, against which Israel is warned throughout these chapters, is, trusting in arm of flesh... There is but one explanation. The Righteous King is IMMANUEL.” Kay points us to Jeremiah: “Blessed is the man that trusteth in the LORD, and whose hope the LORD is. For he shall be as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit” (Jeremiah 17:7–8; also see Psalm 1:3).

3 And the eyes of them that see shall not be dim, and the ears of them that hear shall hearken.

The Targum (𐤒) has, “And the eyes of the righteous shall not be shut, and the ears of those who receive instruction shall hear.” The LXX (Ⲑ) reads, “And they shall no more put confidence in men; but shall apply their ears to hear.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, not just hearken, but “hearken diligently.” Orelli well says that this verse is the antithesis of ISAIAH 6:9. Redak (in Rabbi Rosenberg) explains that “This prophecy resembles that of ISAIAH 29:18.” So also Jennings who says: “The key [to understanding this verse] lies in ‘the King’ being revealed, and as He is thus revealed, so is everything in His kingdom exposed in its true colors. Those eyes that were in the prophet’s commission to be closed (ISAIAH 6), shall then discern the truth... that Christ was and is to be found only in Jesus of Nazareth.” Regarding ISAIAH 32:3–4, Henderson suggests: “The meaning of the verses is, that the impediments to spiritual perception and obedience being removed, the subjects of Messiah’s reign would be endowed with true knowledge and right dispositions. Even those who might seem to labour under insuperable difficulties would surmount them with ease.”

4 The heart also of the rash 𐤒 shall understand knowledge, and the tongue of the stammerers shall be ready to speak plainly. 𐤒 𐤒

- 𐤒 hasty
- 𐤒 𐤒 or, elegantly

The heart also of the rash shall understand knowledge. The LXX (Ⲑ) reads, “And the heart of the weak will listen attentively.” Instead of ready the Peshitta (Ⲑ) has hasten (Lamsa) / hurry (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has fool for rash. Wildberger well writes: “It is to be noted that the heart is to attain such wisdom and knowledge. The (𐤒) (heart) is actually the organ of (𐤒) (wisdom): 𐤒 𐤒 𐤒 𐤒 (Proverbs 14:33a [Wisdom resteth in the heart of him that hath understanding]) or 𐤒 𐤒 𐤒 𐤒 (Proverbs 15:14 [The heart of him that hath understanding seeketh knowledge]; cf. also passages such as Proverbs 2:10; 16:23; Ecclesiastes 1:16).” The teaching of false doctrines may well be what is intended in these verses. We need to once again remember that “to be learned is good if [we] hearken unto the counsels of God” (2 Nephi 9:29). Jennings says: “The ‘rash’ or ‘hasty,’ [margin] of ISAIAH 32:4, are those who think it waste of time to meditate, ponder, consider; but rush to conclusions justified only their ignorance, prejudice and conceit.” I also like what Horsley says here, that instead of the heart of the rash it should read the heart of the well instructed, i.e., the heart of the learned. Nephi tells us: “O that cunning plan of the evil one! O the vainness, and the frailties, and the foolishness of men! When they are learned they think they are wise, and they hearken not unto the counsel of God, for they set it aside, supposing they know of themselves, wherefore, their wisdom is foolishness and it profiteth them not. And they shall perish. But to be learned is good if they hearken unto the counsels of God” (2 Nephi 9:28–29). Young well says: “It may be noted that the eyes, ears, and heart, mentioned in this and the preceding verse, correspond to the same organs mentioned in both ISAIAH 6:9 and 6:10.” ¶ And the tongue of the stammerers shall be ready to speak plainly. The Targum (𐤒) has, “And the tongue of those that was tied shall be ready (Chaldee, ‘shall hasten’) to speak plainly (Chaldee, ‘white things’). The LXX (Ⲑ) reads, “And trifling tongues will soon learn to speak peace. The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, “And the tongue of stammerers shall speak readily and plain.” The description or stammerers is here a spiritual one. The tongue will now, in contrast to the past, speak rightly. Luther says: “He properly calls the ungodly teachers stammerers in the metaphorical sense ... they perform the act of speaking and yet say nothing.”

5 The vile person shall be no more called liberal, nor the churl said [to be] bountiful.

The Targum (T) has, “And the wicked man shall no more be called just, and he that transgresses against His Word shall not be called mighty.” The LXX (G) reads, “And they will no more order the fool to govern, nor shall thy servants any more command silence.” The Peshitta (S) has “The imprudent shall not longer be called governor, nor the unworthy, liberator” (BPE) or, “The fool shall be no more called ruler, nor shall the vain man be called a saviour” and (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “The fool shall no more be called prince: neither shall the deceitful be called great.”

Cowles says, regarding the vile person, נָבֵל, “Men no longer call a *nabal*⁴ (the ‘fool’ of Scripture) a noble man.” Many (AMP, ASV, ERV, ESV, HCSB, ISV, and LITV to name a few) translate נָבֵל as fool in these verses (ISAIAH 32:5–6) rather than vile. Both Gesenius and HAL also provide for נָבֵל an acceptance of a person who is an unbeliever or detractor from the truth, which fits very well with these verses which focus on the teaching of false and apostate doctrines. Horsley well says: “The foolish preacher of infidelity [towards God] shall no longer have the praise of greatness of mind; nor shall the atheistic churl, who envies the believer in his hope ... be held in esteem as a patriot struggling for the freedom of mankind held in thralldom⁵ by superstitious fears. They and their absurd impious doctrine shall appear to the world in the proper light, and they shall be held in general contempt and detestation.” Skinner explains: “The fool here depicted is a free-thinker, a practical atheist, as in Psalm 14:1 [“The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God” (Psalm 14:1a).].” Although Jennings writes the following thinking of ISAIAH 32:7–8, I believe it can better be applied to ISAIAH 32:5: “[This verse] deals with the man who is termed a ‘success’ in this world, for he attains his end, although by very evil means... He has, it is true, crushed the poor who stood in his way, but he has attained to the wealth that has been his magnet; now the ruin of those poorer rivals is forgotten, and by the very wealth that he has thus obtained he is able to purchase the name of ‘philanthropist’ or ‘noble.’” ¶ Lowth quotes Secker here: “Of the four sorts of persons mentioned [in ISAIAH 32:5] three [vile, churl, liberal] are described in verses 6, 7, and 8, but not the fourth [bountiful, שׂוֹעַ].” Orelli says, “The stammerers also are here to be understood spiritually of those who are unable to give plain and clear expression to God’s will, and to honour God by their praises.” Ironside says, regarding the churl וְלִכְלִי, “... the crafty one, who plays fast and loose⁶ with divine truth, need not expect to find spiritual illumination as he pursues his self-chosen way.” Young thinks that crafty or deceitful are good translations of כְּלִי. TSK points us to two additional scriptures that fit well with this passage: ISAIAH 5:20, “Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!” Rather, it shall be as in Malachi 3:18: “Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.” Wordsworth says: “The prophet is not speaking so much of social duties between man and man, as of religious obligations of man to God.” Delitzsch says: “Nobility of birth and wealth will give place to nobility of character.” Birks says: “This reign of the promised Messiah is to be marked by a higher and purer standard of moral uprightness and benevolence. Hateful sins shall no longer be disguised under specious titles. The flatteries of the world shall cease. When vice and folly are on the throne, men call evil good, and good evil... But in these days of Messiah counterfeits of goodness will be exposed, and sin be seen in its true light.” Calvin suggests: “... by means of the gospel, by which he drags into light the disgraceful actions which were formerly concealed, and openly shews what they really are, so that no man, unless he choose it, can be deceived by their outward appearance. And this is the reason why the gospel is so much hated by the world; for no man can patiently endure to have his ‘hidden thoughts’ and concealed baseness ‘revealed’ (Luke 2:35) ... In this passage, therefore, we are brought to the judgment-seat of Christ, who alone, by exposing hypocrisy, reveals whether we are covetous or bountiful.”

6 For the vile person will speak villany, and his heart will work iniquity, to practise hypocrisy, and to utter error against the LORD, to make empty the soul of the hungry, and he will cause the drink of the thirsty to fail.

For the vile person will speak villany, and his heart will work iniquity. The Targum (T) has, “For the wicked will talk wickedness, and in their heart they meditate violence.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “For the fool will speak foolishly, and his heart will devise vain things.” For the first clause the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has “For he who lacks understanding will speak folly.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has fool for vile. In the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲙ) we have plot iniquity, חושב, while the Masoretic text (ⲙ) has work iniquity, יעשה. Regarding כִּי נָבֵל נִבְלָה יִדְבֹּר, “For the fool will speak folly” (ASV), Wildberger says: “The נָבֵל (fool) is no longer one who wants to take the place of the noble person but is now one who speaks נִבְלָה (foolishness) ... נָבֵל (fool) has moved now into the ethical realm [because the] OT thought wickedness is also foolishness.” ¶ All three clauses in this verse point against those who teach false doctrines and are a stumbling block to those who seek for the truth. In Alma we read: “And it is requisite with the justice of God that men should be judged according to their works; and if their works were good in this life, and the desires of their hearts were good, that they should also, at the last day, be restored unto that which is good” (Alma 41:2) and likewise for those who desire evil. In the end all will be restored to what they really are, as we read in this verse of Isaiah. Alma continues: “The one raised to happiness according to his desires of happiness, or good according to his desires of good; and the other to evil according to his desires of evil; for as he has desired to do evil all the day long even so shall he have his reward of evil when the night cometh” (Alma 41:5). ¶ To practise hypocrisy, and to utter error against the LORD. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “To practice falsehood, and to speak revolt against the Lord.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “That he may commit iniquity, and utter error before the Lord.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) is missing “against the Lord.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, for the second clause, “And speak to the Lord deceitfully.” This is nothing more than priestcraft and the teaching of false doctrines, “to practice hypocrisy, and to utter error against the LORD.” So also Luther, who believes this verse describes those who falsely claim to have a right to speak in the name of Christ. Jennings well says, “[That the evil] would also rob the spiritually poor of the truth, and bring him to ruin by speaking falsely against the Lord, denying His essential deity, or the value of His blood, and in so doing take away true food from the hungry, and true refreshment from those perishing with thirst. Have we not seen this in our day?” Regarding hypocrisy הִנְיָ the TLOT renders it to be perverted and TWOT has profaned, corrupt. It is also rendered to practice ungodliness (ESV, ISV). Cheyne, regarding error or תוֹעֵבָה says, “Dr. Weir renders ‘heresy.’ In fact, in Rabbinic Hebrew and in Aramaic the stem does acquire the meaning of heresy (and in Assyrian, of madness).” Wildberger well says: “... it is worth noting that אֶל־יְהוָה (against Yahweh) ... One need not articulate it in so many words, but every aspect of ‘foolishness’ is directed against Yahweh, whereas the right order that wisdom calls for is naturally the order God establishes; every disruption of right order distorts the relationship with God.” Calvin continues with his earlier thoughts: “I think that the Prophet means ... that Christ is the Judge of the world, and therefore, when he shall ascend the judgment-seat, he will shew what is the disposition of every person; for, so long as he does not exercise the office of a judge, everything remains in confusion, the wicked are applauded, because they have the appearance of piety, and the most excellent men are despised. But Christ will openly display the life of every person ...[and] ‘reveal the secret thoughts of the heart, and bring every hidden thing to light’ (Luke 2:35).” ¶ To make empty the soul of the hungry, and he will cause the drink of the thirsty to fail. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “To weary the soul of the righteous, who long after instruction, as the hunger after bread; and after the words of the law, which are like water to him that is athirst, they purpose to make to cease. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “In order to scatter hungry souls: and the thirsty souls he will send away empty.” For the last clause, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has something like, “And to deny drink from the thirsty.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, for the second clause, “And take away drink from the thirsty.” “To make empty the soul of the hungry” seems to me to be the teacher of false doctrines who lead people away from Christ and His restored Church. So also those who “cause the drink of the thirsty to fail.” Both the hungry and thirsty for spiritual matters may so continue because of the distractors. In Amos 8:11 we have: “Behold, the days come, saith the Lord GOD, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the LORD.” Even today, when the Gospel of Jesus Christ has been restored in its splendor we have many who do not recognize it. In D&C we read: “For there are many yet on the earth among all sects, parties, and denominations, who are blinded by the subtle craftiness of men, whereby they lie in wait to deceive, and who are only kept from the truth because they know not where to find it (emphasis added, D&C 123:12). And as a result, the Lord commands us: “that we should waste and wear out our lives in bringing to light” (D&C 123:13b) and “let us cheerfully do all things that lie in our power; and then may we stand still, with the utmost assurance, to see the salvation of God, and for his arm to be revealed” (D&C 123:17b). Young says: “The first part of the verse ... presents the fool as opposed to God, and then in the second part as really opposed to man also.”⁷

⁴ Kay makes the interesting observation (in ISAIAH 32:6, but for our purposes fits best here): “Nabal refused ‘bread and water’ to David in the wilderness (1 Samuel 25:10–11).”

⁵ Now spelled thralldom, meaning moral or mental servitude, slave or serf.

⁶ An expression that means irresponsible and reckless.

7 The instruments also of the churl [are] evil: he deviseth wicked devices to destroy the poor with lying words, even when the needy speaketh right.

The Targum (T) has, “And the wicked, whose works are evil, take counsel with sinners to destroy the poor with lying words, and the words of the needy in judgment.” The LXX (G) reads, “For the counsel of the wicked will devise unlawful devices to destroy the poor with unjust pleas; and to baffle the pleas (Brenton, ‘cause,’) of the poor in judgment.” Instead of churl (scoundrel, BDB), the Peshitta (S) has unworthy (BPE) / vain (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “The vessels of the deceitful are most wicked: for he hath framed devices to destroy the meek, with lying words, when the poor man speaketh judgment.” One way to view this as Redak in Rosenberg suggests: “The deceitful, or stingy person, who does not directly rob them, but engineers their destruction by perverting justice, and with his lies, perpetuates their exploitation.” Horsley well says: “‘He deviseth subtleties to ensnare the meek with speeches of deceit, but in the word of the poor man there is judgment.’ The subtleties (זמרות),⁸ see Psalm 10:4 [where it means thoughts] and speeches of deceit, are those refined theories and sophisticated arguments by which atheism and infidelity [towards God] is supported; which being uttered to the world in an imposing strain and philosophical penetration, are too often so far successful as in some degree to perplex and disquiet the modest and unassuming, who in diffidence of themselves pay too much deference to the proud claims of others.”

8 But the liberal deviseth liberal things; and by liberal things shall he stand.

Liberal, in this context, means generous. The Targum (T) has, “But the righteous counsel truth, and in their truth they shall be established.” The LXX (G) reads, “But the pious have counselled with understanding; and their counsel shall be established.” Instead of liberal (נָדָב, from the root, נָדַב, willing, noble, generous, BDB, Gesenius), the Lamsa Peshitta (S) has great. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “But the prince will devise such things as are worthy of a prince, and he shall stand above the rulers.” Keith writes: “... the truly liberal man shall stand, that is, shall be established or continue (margin ||). With the measure that he metes shall it be measured to him again.” ¶ Barnes says about shall he stand, נָקַד, “Margin ||, ‘Be established.’ That is, according to the connection, he shall be confirmed, or approved in the government of the virtuous king referred to.” Gill, leaning on Gataker says, be established (stabilietur). I wonder if this expression is synonymous to “be lifted up in the last days” (Alma 37:37). The Prophet Brigham Young, in speaking about the importance of paying our tithing and fast offerings—and being grateful for the many blessings that God has given us—taught: “[God] will bless any man, any family, or any people who is liberal. As it is written in the good book, ‘The liberal man deviseth liberal things,’ and if he deviseth liberal things by his liberality he shall stand. The Lord will bless that people that is full of charity, kindness and good works. When our monthly fast days come round, do we think of the poor? If we do, we should send in our mite, no matter what it is. What is it to give ten or twenty pounds of flour, or a hundred pounds of flour? What is it to give a little meat, or sugar, or a little money, or whatever is wanted? Does it impoverish us? It does not. If this people have not been sustained by the hand of the Almighty, I ask how they have been sustained? Could any other people have lived in these valleys except the Latter-day Saints? No, they could not. The elements would not have produced the corn, the wheat, the oats, the rye, the peas, the barley, the vegetables and the fruit.”⁹ Elder George Q. Cannon likewise taught: “We should feel to say that ‘anything which benefits my brethren and sisters, whether it furthers my interests or not, let it be done; let the community be blessed, whether my personal interests are prospered or not by the course taken.’ The person who cherishes this feeling will be sure to receive temporal prosperity. I know we live in the kingdom of God and serve a liberal Master, and though we may be called upon to make what we may view as sacrifices, if we do so willingly and liberally, God will give to us a liberal reward. ‘The liberal deviseth liberal things, and by liberal things shall he stand,’ was said by one of old, and can be said in truth of the day in which we live. If we act upon this principle, God will deal with us in a similar manner. I know this to be true, and that God will reward us with every blessing we need, as a people, if we take the course that is pointed out.”¹⁰ Elder George A. Smith taught: “The foundation being laid [to the great latter-day work], then the work has to be done. In order to be participators in this, we must be honest with ourselves, with our brethren, and with the poor among the Lord’s people. If we are, the blessings of God will flow upon us, and our knowledge will increase, and all the light and intelligence that we desire from God will be poured out upon us, and our means will increase, and our substance will be blessed unto us. But if we adopt the other principle, although men do it from covetousness, it is the identical way to become poor. The Prophet said, The liberal deviseth liberal things, and by his liberality he shall stand. This is the truth: it has been so among all generations, and with this people from the beginning.”¹¹

⁷ President Benson made similar distinctions when speaking about pride (see Beware of Pride, April 1989 General Conference), as enmity toward God and toward man.

⁸ Here זמרות, rendered as wicked devices in the AV, means vain imaginations or wicked thoughts (see 1 Nephi 12:18; Proverbs 6:18; 2 Corinthians 10:5). As Bishops 1568 Bible says, this is done that the wicked man may “beguile the poore with deceitfull words.” YLT 1898 has, “counselled wicked devices, To corrupt the poor with lying sayings...”

⁹ Young, President Brigham. Journal of Discourses 13:279.

vv. 9–20. Govett has: “The ninth verse reverts to the time of the great tribulation, in which the condition of females will be peculiarly helpless and sad; and the desolation of Judea is depicted ... [which] shall last ‘Until the Spirit be poured out from on high ... Of the Spirit’s outpouring, Joel testifies. ‘And it shall come to pass afterwards, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh.’ And in a following verse he gives the signs which shall precede the Saviour’s [second] coming [and] the world being thus restored to the purity of Eden... the world shall be full of holiness, it shall be also full of peace.” Elder Orson Pratt taught: “It is very evident from these predictions of the Prophet Isaiah, that he, by that spirit which opens the future, was able to see the calamities that would come upon the house of Israel, and not only upon the people, but also upon the Promised Land, the land of Canaan, now called Palestine. A curse was predicted upon that land, that instead of bringing forth those things that were necessary to sustain a people, it should bring forth briars and thorns. We are also told that this desolation should remain for a long period, until the Spirit should be poured out from on high, until, in the purposes of the Most High, he should pour out his Spirit, and that would produce a great change upon that land, but until that time it was to be desolate. All the houses of joy in the Jewish city were to be desolate, and, as it is recorded in other passages in Isaiah, they were to be the desolations of many generations. Not the desolation of seventy years, as happened to Israel in their Babylonish captivity, which only comprised about one generation, but the desolations were to be for many generations, during which that land was to lie uncultivated. The latter rains were to be withheld, and the land was to become dry and parched up, bringing forth thorns and briars, and this was to continue until the Lord poured out his Spirit from on high. It seems, then, that the Lord had a particular set time in his own mind, when he would again pour out his Spirit from on high upon his people, and more especially upon the house of Israel; and when that time arrives, there will not only be a great moral reformation among the people, but we are told that the revolution will extend to the land also, for the Prophet says here, that when the Spirit is poured out from on high, the wilderness shall be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be counted for a forest.”¹² Elder Orson Pratt also applies the latter verses to the Saints gathered in the Wasatch Front in Utah.

9 ¶ Rise up, ye women that are at ease; hear my voice, ye careless daughters; give ear unto my speech.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Ye provinces that dwell at ease: arise, hear my voice. Ye cities that dwell in safety, listen to my word.” Chilton (Ⲯ) renders כְּרִכִּין, fortresses instead of cities. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Arise ye rich women and hear my voice, hearken to my words ye daughters of hope!” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has something like, “Rise up, O you rich women; heed my voice, O you daughters that publish glad news, give ear to my speech.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “Rise up, ye rich women (or, Mulieres opulent, Vulgate ⲩ), and hear my voice: ye confident daughters, give ear to my speech.”

קום, rise. In ISAIAH 52:2 we see a different sort of rising (קומי) than here, one of cheerfulness—taken from bondage and captivity to freedom: “Shake thyself from the dust; arise, and sit down, O Jerusalem: loose thyself from the bands of thy neck, O captive daughter of Zion.” But here in ISAIAH 32 we see that the women will rise (קמנה) to go into captivity and bondage.

Wordsworth says: “The Prophet, having reproved the skeptical and worldly spirit of the men of Jerusalem, passes on to censure the voluptuousness of the women, as he had done before (ISAIAH 3:16–26).” Similarly, Nägelsbach says: “As in [ISAIAH 3], so here the Prophet addresses men and women separately, having in mind especially those of the higher, and highest ranks.” Skinner suggests: “The women are addressed partly as representing best certain aspects of the public mind, luxury and complacent ease (ISAIAH 3:16 ff.; Amos 4:1 ff.); partly because of their function as mourners¹³ in

¹⁰ Cannon, Elder George Q., Journal of Discourses 26:47.

¹¹ Smith, Elder George A., Journal of Discourses 7:62.

¹² Pratt, Elder Orson. “Fulfillment of Prophecy,” 30 August 1875. (JD 18:144, OP), pp. 143–144.

¹³ Wildberger does well in pointing out: “women who are mourners by trade are not meant [here].” In Chile, women who were hired to weep at funerals were called lloronas. That was their trade.

seasons of calamity (Jeremiah 9:20).” McFadyen suggests that the women alluded to are aristocrats (see ISAIAH 32:14). Thompson likewise suggests: “A minatory address to the fashionable women of Jerusalem,” and compares it to ISAIAH 3:16 ff. Also Wade, who says, “A prediction, addressed to the luxurious ladies of Jerusalem.” Ironside explains that these “lived only for the present moment.” Jennings suggests that “women are here addressed because of the peculiar sensitiveness of the feminine temperament, quick to catch the first sight of coming danger and to take alarm. Even these see no cause for anything but confidence and pleasure.” Women generally seem more sensitive to the things of the spirit so it is ever more striking when they ignore or reject the warnings of the Lord or His servants.

10 Many days and years shall ye be troubled, ye careless women: for the vintage shall fail, the gathering shall not come.

The Targum (T) has, “Those who dwell at ease shall be agitated for days and years, because the corn¹⁴ is come to an end, and there is no fruit to gather.” The LXX (G) reads, “Make mention of a day of a year in sorrow, with hope. The vintage is destroyed; it hath failed! must it never come again any more?” The Peshitta (S) has, “The days of the year shall be angry against those who publish (Lamsa) / proclaim (BPE) good news.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “For after days and a year, you that are confident shall be troubled: for the vintage is at an end, the gathering shall come no more.” ¶ Regarding the expression days and years Kay explains: “Literally, ‘days upon a year¹⁵,’ that is, probably, ‘the days mounting up to years;’” Rashi (in Rabbi Rosenberg) explains: “‘Add year to year,’ and your sins are constantly becoming more serious,” and thus makes this expression very similar to that of ISAIAH 29:1. Skinner gives an alternative opinion when he states: “days beyond a year] ‘in a little more than a year,’ ... the context shows that it fixes the point of time when ease and security give place to anxiety.” So also Young, “Within a little more than a year.” ¶ The vintage is the vendimia or the harvest of wine grapes followed by the making of wine. The gathering, in contrast, is the harvest of other crops including grains, vegetables, fruits and nuts. The warning here is that all of these would cease. Redak (in Rosenberg) suggests that the enemy would destroy the crops and take the people into exile.

¹⁴ Not maize, but rather grains.

¹⁵ Days upon a year, יָמִים עַל-שָׁנָה.

11 Tremble, ye women that are at ease; be troubled, ye careless ones: strip you, and make you bare, and gird [sackcloth] upon [your] loins.

The Targum (T) has the first clause as, “They that dwell at ease shall be broken, they that dwell in safety shall tremble.” The LXX (G) reads, “Be confounded; be grieved, ye confident women! strip; make yourselves bare; gird your loins.” The Peshitta (S) has something like, “Shudder, O you rich women; be troubled (Lamsa) / be indignant (BPE), O you who publish glad tidings.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Be astonished, ye rich (or, opulent, Vulgate V) women, be troubled, ye confident ones: strip you, and be confounded, gird your loins.” ¶ The ESV suggests: “Tremble, you women who are at ease, shudder, you complacent ones; strip, and make yourselves bare, and tie sackcloth around your waist.” Rashi (in Rabbi Rosenberg), leaning on the Targum (T) has “... and so did Jonathan (T) render: Undress and bare yourselves and gird on your loins. Since they will undress and bare themselves of their garments, they will not gird on their garments but on their loins.”

Henderson opines: “פָּשַׁט [to take off, as in to remove clothing, HAL, פָּשַׁטָה] is very appropriately employed to denote the removal of the splendid garments in which the persons here addressed were arrayed, in order that, in their stead, they might put on sackcloth.” Cowles explains: “These are the usual manifestations of grief. Lay off your proud and gay apparel; put on the coarse sackcloth of mourning.” Wildberger would also consider the expression an implied ellipsis: “One of the rituals connected with mourning for one who has died is to gird one’s loins with sackcloth. ‘Sackcloth’ is not actually in the text, but one should think of it as the object of חָנַדָה (bind on) (cf., e.g., Jeremiah 4:8; 6:26; 49:3; Joel 1:8).¹⁶ In order to put on the proper mourning garments, one must remove one’s regular clothing, thus: ‘Undress yourselves and strip yourselves!’” Even so, Wildberger suggests that the sackcloth only went on the waist. Whitehouse, leaning on Wellhausen (author of Remains of Arabic Heathendom, 2nd Edition, p. 177) explains: “Even stripping the person bare, to which Isaiah makes reference, is not uncommon trait among Arab women as a sign of grief at the news of death. Wellhausen quotes from the Kitab al aghani, 15:139, the incident that after the death of Amir, son of al Tufail, in the land of Salul, a tall woman of that country stripped herself half naked and announced the news in short rhymes to her fellow tribesmen, after which there arose universal lamentation. Here the sorrowing of the women is for the charming lands, perhaps the gardens or estates attached to the summer-houses and winter-houses which the wealthy Israelites at the time possessed (Amos 3:15; ISAIAH 9:9–10), ere long to be utterly destroyed. Cf. Jastrow, ZATW., 22:317 ff.” We also find the custom described as pertaining to the Bedouins: “No one mourns for the dead except his mother, wife, sister, or daughter. In the tent they may utter, quietly, only one cry, then they go outside the camp, lament twice more, tear their dress at the breast, scratch their faces... throw dust all over themselves ... wind a white band ... around their forehead, weep, and then return to the camp.”¹⁷ Wordsworth suggests that the mourning in this Isaianic verse would take place related to exile: “This is a prophecy of what would happen to the women of Jerusalem when led captives.” In Rain in Due Season we read: “Therefore shalt thou serve thine enemies which the LORD shall send against thee, in hunger, and in thirst, and in nakedness” (Deuteronomy 28:48a). See also ISAIAH 47:1–3. This is a prophetic vision of what would soon happen to the daughters of Israel when taken captive by Babylon.

¹⁶ In each of these instances we have the word sackcloth spelled out and not just elliptical: שָׂק / שָׂקִים.

12 They shall lament for the teats, for the pleasant fields, [✓] for the fruitful vine.

✓ fields of desire

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “They beat the breasts for the pleasant fields (Chaldee, ‘fields of desire’), for the fruit laden vines.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And beat your breasts, for the lovely field—for the fruitful vine.” Instead of lament for the teats, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) also has “beat upon your breasts.” A sign of mourning for things missed, in this case the pleasant fields and the fruitful vines. The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “Mourn for your breasts, for the delightful country, for the fruitful vineyard.” Redak (in Rabbi Rosenberg) believes that “they will lament their dried-up breasts [which will no longer supply milk for their infants]. So also Kay, who says: “They lament for the breasts; since God has withdrawn the ‘blessings of the breasts and of the womb’ (Genesis 49:25), giving them ‘a miscarrying womb and dry breasts’ (Hosea 9:14).” ¶ Regarding סִפְּדִים Henderson writes: “The primary signification of סִפְּדִים is that beating.” Gesenius writes: “סִפְּדִים fut. סִפְּדִי TO BEAT the breast, as a sign of grief; especially for the dead.” In this verse we have a triple repletion of the word עַל so that in the first instance it means upon the breast and in the second and third, over, as in mourning over, or mourning because, or even mourning for. The ASV reads (also see JPS, and in most other translations, beat): “They shall smite upon the breasts for the pleasant fields, for the fruitful vine.” Wordsworth explains: “Compare to Nahum 2:7, where the captive maidens of Nineveh are compared to ‘doves tabering¹⁸ on their breasts.’” Wordsworth also gives Luke 23:48 as yet another example of beating upon the breast, this time in reference to the last moments in our Saviors mortal journey.

13 Upon the land of my people shall come up thorns [and] briars; yea, upon [✓] all the houses of joy [in] the joyous city:

✓ or, burning upon

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Upon the land of my people thorns and thistles shall come up, yea, in all the houses of joy in the fortified city.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “In this land of my people shall spring up the thorn and the briar, and joy shall be taken from every dwelling. O rich city! O houses wholly forsaken!” Instead of joyous, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has powerful (BPE) / mighty (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, for the second half, “how much more upon all the houses of joy, of the city that rejoiced?” It is clear that these verses relate to Judah and Jerusalem as the term עַמִּי, my people is used.

¶ Ironside writes: “Jerusalem means, ‘Founded in peace,’ but this city has suffered more from war and strife than perhaps any other single city in the history of the world, and still greater horrors are in store for it in the future, immediately before the return of the Lord to reign as King on Mount Zion. It will never know lasting peace until that day.” In D&C the Savior says: “My people must be tried in all things, that they may be prepared to receive the glory that I have for them, even the glory of Zion; and he that will not bear chastisement is not worthy of my kingdom” D&C 136:31). In Rain in Due Season we read that in disobedience “Cursed shall be thy basket and thy store” (Deuteronomy 28:17) and “Cursed shall be... the fruit of thy land, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep” (Deuteronomy 28:18).

14 Because the palaces shall be forsaken; the multitude [✓] houses of the city shall be left; the forts and towers [✓] shall be for dens for ever, a joy of wild asses, a pasture of flocks;

¹⁸ Tabering. “Tabering playing on a small drum or tabret. In Nahum 2:7, where alone it occurs, it means beating on the breast, as players beat on the tabret.” Dictionary.com. Easton's 1897 Bible Dictionary. <http://dictionary.reference.com/browse/tabering> (accessed: March 06, 2013).

¹⁷ Musil, Alois. The Manners and Customs of the Rwala Bedouins, New York, The American Geographical Society, 1928, p. 671.

✓ or, cliffs and watchtowers

Because the palaces shall be forsaken; the houses of the city shall be left. Here is another interesting example of the JST, houses being preserved by other ancient manuscripts, some in the precise place where the JST has it, while others in the same verse albeit a different place. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “For the house of the sanctuary shall be laid waste; the noisy city shall be desolate, in which they worship: the house of our strength and hiding place shall be searched out, dug up, desolate and waste unto a time.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “They shall abandon city, riches, lovely houses.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “For the house is forsaken, the multitude of the city is left.” As Rabbi Rosenberg notes, the Targum (ⲧ) explains the palace as the temple. Rashi and Ibn Ezra (in R. Rosenberg) think it of the king’s palace. Cowles explains: “... the city, once thronged with people, is now forsaken and left desolate.” The city here spoken off is principally Jerusalem itself. ¶ The forts and towers shall be for dens for ever, a joy of wild asses, a pasture of flocks. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “The place which was a house of joy and gladness for kings is now become a spoil for armies.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And until the age the villages shall be dens—the joy of wild asses, the pastures of flocks.” Instead of forts and towers, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has beautiful houses.

Furthermore, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) explains that these houses have become a place for pasture and drink for these wild asses and flocks. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, for the first half, “Darkness and obscurity are come upon its dens for ever.” Henderson explains: “עד-עולם [forever, until eternity] is here to be taken in a limited sense, as intimating only a long period, as the use of עד in the following verse shews [Until the spirit &c.].”

¶ Regarding עִפְלָה, or towers, Lowth suggests, “[Ophel] was part of Mount Zion, rising higher than the rest; at the eastern extremity, near to the temple, a little to the south of it; called by Micah 4:8 ‘Ophel of the daughter of Zion.’ It was naturally strong by its situation, and had a wall of its own, by which it was separated from the rest of Zion.” All of these structures, including the temple, would be left desolate and only a fit abode for wild birds and beasts. McFadyen (also see Thompson) says: “The reference to the palace, and the hill (Hebrew Ophel, the southeastern spur of mount Zion on which palace and temple stood) shows that the women are aristocrats. Those palatial quarters were doomed to be everlasting desolation, over which the wild ass would roam.”

15 Until the spirit be poured upon us from on high, and the wilderness be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be counted for a forest.

The Targum (ⲧ) has, “All these things shall come upon us until refreshing shall come to us from the face of Him, whose Shekinah is in the highest heavens. The wilderness shall become a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be inhabited by many cities.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Till a spirit come on you from on high. Then will a desert become a Charmel (Χερμελ, i.e., Carmel, ‘fruitful field’) and Charmel will be accounted a forest.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, for the second half, “And the desert shall be as a charmel, and charmel shall be counted for a forest.” ¶ Wildberger says: “The spirit is naturally the spirit of Yahweh, as is shown by the following word מְמָרוֹם (from on high), רוּחַ מְמָרוֹם (spirit from on high) seems to be a paraphrase of רוּחַ יְהוָה (spirit of Yahweh)” Young, alluding to ISAIAH 29:10, says: “Just as God had poured a spirit of deep sleep ‘upon you’ so now He pours out His Spirit ‘upon us,’ and we therefore receive the blessings that He brings.” Regarding the desolation described in the earlier verses, Abarbanel (in R. Rosenberg) suggests that “this desolation will persist until it is time to bring the Messiah.” Keith says: “This final outpouring of the Spirit, of which foretastes and first-fruits have been experienced from time to time in the Church of Christ on earth, the most marked of these being that on the day of Pentecost, is often predicted in connexion with the reign of Christ on mount Zion, and the conversion of all men to his service. Thus, in Ezekiel 39:29, in connexion with the last judgments that are to come upon the earth, and the conversion of Israel, it is written, ‘Neither will I hide my face any more from them, for I have poured out my Spirit upon the house of Israel.’ In Joel 2:28, this promise occurs in the same connexion, ‘I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh,—and I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth;—in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance.’ In Zechariah 12:9, it is written to the same effect, ‘I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem. And I will pour upon the house of David and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem the spirit of grace and of supplication, and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced.’ The pouring out of the Spirit upon the nation is of course synonymous with their conversion to God, and that will be marked by the return of prosperity to the land, so that the wilderness shall become a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall become, in richness and increase, as a forest. This renewed fertility of the land is often connected with the conversion of the people. In the day when Jerusalem shall be holy, ‘the mountains shall drop down new wine, and the hills shall flow down with milk,’ Joel 3:18.” Horsley says: “I have not seen this mashal [מָשָׁל, i.e., proverb] any where so well explained as in the marginal || notes in Queen Elizabeth’s Bible:¹⁹ ‘The field which is now fruitful shall be but as a barren forest in comparison of that it shall be then as in (ISAIAH 29:17) which shall be fulfilled in Christ’s time. For then, they that were before as the barren wilderness, being regenerate, shall be fruitful; and they that had some beginning of godliness shall bring forth fruits in such abundance, that their former life shall seem but as a wilderness where no fruits were.’” Nägelsbach suggests that this expression “which has a proverbial sound, must certainly be taken in another sense than that of ISAIAH 29:17.” Henderson suggests of this verse: “... a remarkable outpouring of the Holy Spirit yet future, when the great body of the Jewish nation (το πλῆρωμα αὐτῶν,²⁰ Romans 11:12) shall, in consequence, be converted to God.”

¶ Wildberger says: “ISAIAH 51:3 goes so far as to announce that the desert will become an עֵדֶן (an Eden), the very garden of Yahweh.” In the Articles of Faith we read “that the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisiacal glory” (Articles of Faith 1:10) during the Millennium. Elder Orson Pratt applied these scriptures to this pre-millennial time: “What are we to understand by the prediction that the wilderness shall be a fruitful field when the Spirit is poured out from on high? We are to understand the same as is recorded in the thirty-fifth chapter of this prophecy, a small portion of which I will read. Speaking of the gathering of the Israelites in the latter times, he says—‘The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon; they shall see the glory of the Lord and the excellency of our God.’”²¹

16 Then judgment shall dwell in the wilderness, and righteousness remain in the fruitful field.

The Targum (T) has, “Then they that do justice shall dwell in the wilderness, and those that do righteousness shall inhabit the fruitful field.” The LXX (L) reads, ¹⁹ Normally called the Bishops’ Bible (1568). This quote also appears in the Geneva Bible (1587) notes, with some minor variations.

²⁰ That is, their fulness, or the restoration of the Jewish nation.

²¹ Pratt, Elder Orson. “Fulfillment of Prophecy,” 30 August 1875. (JD 18:144, OP), p. 145. See also Elder Pratt’s comments about Isaiah 35:6b, which he associates closely with ISAIAH 32.

“And judgment will make a lasting abode in the desert, and righteousness will dwell in Charmel.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, for the second clause, “And justice shall sit in charmel.” Henderson has: “This and the following verse describe the spiritual and happy results of the remarkable effusion of the Holy Spirit.”

17 And the work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance for ever.

The Targum (T) has, “And they that do righteousness shall be at peace, and those that adorn righteousness shall be in quietness, and they shall be in safety for ever.” The LXX (L) reads, “And the works of righteousness shall be peace; and righteousness shall enjoy rest. As for them who have kept up their confidence till that age.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has justice for each instance of righteousness. Speaking of ISAIAH 32:17–18, Birks²² brilliantly says, “The same words, used before to describe the false ease of the careless women, are here applied to the true security of the faithful.”²³ Two examples I found include: ye careless daughters / ye careless women / ye careless ones {ISAIAH 32:9, 10, 11 בְּטָחוֹת} vs. and assurance forever / in sure dwellings {ISAIAH 32:17 נְבִטָּה – ISAIAH 32:18 מְבִטָּחִים}; ye women that are at ease {ISAIAH 32:9 שְׁאֲנִנֹת} vs. and in quiet resting places {ISAIAH 32:18 שְׁאֲנִנֹת}. Whitehouse notes: Compare the same use in Amos 6:1, where we have also the identical parallelism in the original Hebrew (‘at ease’ [הַשְׁאֲנִנִּים] ... ‘secure’ [וְהַבְטָחִים]).” Birks explains: “The promise had partial fulfillments upon the fall of the Assyrian, and after the return from Babylon. But its full emphasis seems reserved for the last days of the Church of Christ, and the times ... when the fall of the mystical Babylon prepares the way for the grafting of Israel into their own olive-tree.” ¶ President Monson taught: “We must be vigilant in a world which has moved so far from that which is spiritual. It is essential that we reject anything that does not conform to our standards, refusing in the process to surrender that which we desire most: eternal life in the kingdom of God. The storms will still beat at our doors from time to time, for they are an inescapable part of our existence in mortality.

²² Kay makes a similar comment 15 years later, and adds ISAIAH 33:20, quiet, שָׁקֵט.

²³ This is also illustrative of the unity of Isaiah as it models the way Isaiah contrasted, in the second half of his writings, what he had said in the first—but with a message of comfort. See Margalioth thesis and antithesis (e.g., ISAIAH 1:4; 3:24 and others).

We, however, will be far better equipped to deal with them, to learn from them, and to overcome them if we have the gospel at our core and the love of the Savior in our hearts. The prophet Isaiah declared, ‘The work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance for ever.’”²⁴ True peace can only come, as we see here and in ISAIAH 27, when we turn to the Lord: “Or let him take hold of my strength, that he may make peace with me; and he shall make peace with me” (ISAIAH 27:5).

18 And my people shall dwell in a peaceable habitation, and in sure dwellings, and in quiet resting places;

The Targum (T) has, “And my people shall dwell in their habitations in peace, and in their land in safety, and in their cities at ease.” The LXX (G) reads, “His people shall then inhabit a city of peace and dwell secure, and they shall enjoy rest with riches.” Instead of quiet the Peshitta (S) has hope. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And my people shall sit in the beauty of peace, and in the tabernacles of confidence, and in wealthy rest.” Once again we come to the expression עַמִּי, my people. Ibn Ezra explains that Judah is meant by עַמִּי. And certainly that will be one of the meanings of this wonderful prophecy.²⁵ Another is spoken of by Elder Orson Pratt who taught: “But Isaiah, are we to understand that the people are to be gathered together in that desert, and that the gathered people are to be instrumental in the hands of God, in redeeming that desert? Yes, Isaiah has told us all this. We will go back to what we read in his thirty-second chapter—‘Until the spirit be poured out upon us from on high, and the wilderness be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be counted for a forest. Then judgment shall dwell in the wilderness and righteousness remain in the fruitful field.’ What fruitful field? Why, the wilderness that will be converted into a fruitful field. ‘The work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness, and assurance forever; and my people shall dwell in peaceable habitations, and in sure dwellings and in quiet resting places.’ Was that the way we dwelt in Missouri or Illinois? Did we live in quietness and with assurance continually in those States? Oh, no, we were tossed about; as Isaiah says—‘tossed to and fro and not comforted.’ [ISAIAH 54:11]”²⁶

²⁴ Monson, President Thomas S. Stand in Holy Places, October 2011, General Conference, Sunday morning session.

²⁵ The Lord has not forgotten—and never will forget—His people Israel (including Judah).

²⁶ Pratt, Elder Orson. “Fulfillment of Prophecy,” 30 August 1875. (JD 18:144, OP), pp. 148–149.

19 When it shall hail, coming down on the forest; and the city shall be low in a low place.✓

✓ or, utterly abased

The Targum (T) has, “And hail shall descend and shall slay the armies of the nations, and their encampments shall be laid desolate, and come to an end.” The LXX (G) reads, “Though the hail descend, it shall not reach you: and they who dwell in the forest shall be secure as they in the plain.” Instead of a low place the Peshitta (S) has plain (Lamsa) / crushed as a valley (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “But hail shall be in the descent of the forest, and the city shall be made very low.”

¶ Many of the gentile exegetes attempt to give the words hail and forest a negative turn although it makes no sense here. Skinner well has: “Hail is a familiar Isaianic symbol of divine judgment (ISAIAH 28:2, 17; 30:30); but it seems out of place here.” Some believe—following the margin ¶—that before the good things predicted in this chapter can come to pass, the city of Jerusalem must be abased. Nägelsbach asks: “Why thus suddenly a new judgment in the mist of the blessed, spirit-effected condition of peace?” Although Wade provides a completely context than we do, I like his comment that “a renewed prediction of disaster is inappropriate in the midst of a description of its felicity.” Of a similar opinion are some of the Jewish writers such as Ibn Ezra, Kimhi, and Metsudath David. As summarized by Slotki/Rosenberg they explain: “Even when it hails, it will not hail on plants that can be destroyed, but in the forest.” Ibn Ezra writes, “When the hailstones will come down, they will come down on the forest, not on the fields.” ¶ Elder Pratt also said the hail would not come down on the city (which is in a low place in comparison to the forest), but on the forest. Elder Orson Pratt powerfully taught: “Will they have any capital city when they get up into the mountain desert? O, yes. Isaiah says here—‘When it shall hail, coming down on the forest, the city shall be low in a low place.’ How often have I thought of this since we laid out this great city, twenty-eight years ago! How often have this people reflected in their meditations upon the fulfillment of this prophecy! They have seen, on this eastern range of mountains and on the range of mountains to the west of this valley, snow and storms pelting down with great fury, as though winter in all its rigor and ferocity had overtaken the mountain territory, and at the same time, here, ‘low in a low place,’ was a city, organized at the very base of these mountains, enjoying all the blessings of a spring temperature, the blessings of a temperature not sufficient to cut off our vegetation. What a contrast! ‘When it shall hail, coming down on the forest, the city shall be low in a low place.’

That could not be Jerusalem, no such contrast in the land of Palestine round about Jerusalem! It had reference to the latter-day Zion, the Zion of the mountains.”²⁷ ¶ Cheyne writes: “Agricultural prosperity is one of the most constant and prominent features in Messianic descriptions.” Just as rain is representative of blessings, Calvin shows how hail is representative of difficulties: “The meaning is, ‘The Lord will remove from his people distresses and annoyances, and will make them fall on others;’ because here we are liable to various storms and tempests, and must endure rain, hail, showers, winds, and tempests. He says that God, by his wonderful providence, will prevent all distresses from doing any injury to believers, because he will drive their violence in another direction.” Yet we are not free from all adversity. God places these upon us for our own good, that we may learn to be humble and obedient, and filled with compassion for others.

20 Blessed [are] ye that sow beside all waters, that send forth [thither] the feet of the ox and the ass.

The Targum (T) has, “Blessed are ye, O just, ye work out for yourselves good works: because ye are like those, who sow by watered places, sending the oxen to tread out the corn, and asses to gather it in.” The LXX (G) reads, “Happy they who sow on every water where the ox and the ass treadeth! The BPE (S) has, “Happy are you who sow by the waters who are tread by the feet of oxen and asses.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has upon rather than beside. ¶ Wordsworth says: “The Prophet takes up the word ‘feet’ (in a later prophecy): ‘How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that publisheth peace’ (ISAIAH 52:7). By such catchwords as these the prophecies of Isaiah are riveted together; one explains another, and all form one harmonious whole.”

So here they are represented by the רֶגֶל-הַשֹּׁר foot of the ox or the bull, (and compare to the רֶגֶל we shall see in ISAIAH 52:7). Elder Orson Pratt concludes: “We will now return to our text, the 32nd of Isaiah—‘Blessed are ye that sow by the side of all waters, and send forth thither the feet of the ox and the ass.’ Why did Isaiah say that a blessing should be given to a certain people that should happen to sow by the side of streams of water? Why did he not bless the others who lived on the hills and mountains, as they do all over our States and many other countries of the globe? Because he saw, in looking at this people, that they, in their location, were to go into a desert, and the redeemed of the Lord would be under the necessity of getting along the sides of streams; they could not go out several miles from a stream or spring and trust to the rains of heaven; no, the rains do not come here, or did not when we first located, so as to bless those who would naturally desire to reside far from a stream of water, but we were all under the necessity of getting down close to the side of some stream of water. What for? That it would be handy to build little canals to get water out to throw over the land. ‘Blessed are they who sow by the side of all waters and send forth thither the feet of the ox and the ass.’”²⁸ ¶ Moving to the missionary nature of this verse, Henderson suggests: “The figure [ISAIAH 32:20], is taken from the nomadic life; and beautifully exhibits the free and unrestrained exertions of the apostles and other missionaries, in sowing the seed of the kingdom in every part of the world... [or in other words] the happiness of those who should be engaged in propagating the gospel throughout the world.” Cowles opines: “... the prophet declares the blessedness of those who, however disturbed society may be, or however much the nation may rock under hail-storms and bewail its fallen cities, yet press on with unwearied assiduity, doing what good they can, sowing seed unto salvation beside all waters and pushing every fit agency wisely and without faltering. The spirit of the verse suggests these words of the Psalmist: ‘He that goeth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him’ (Psalm 126:6).—In Christ’s gospel kingdom there will be such faithful workers. The words that affirm their blessedness of course assume their existence and their faithful work.” This last comment fits in well with what we said earlier when we quoted the D&C: “...that we should waste and wear out our lives in bringing to light” (D&C 123:13b). Keith observes: “The fertility of the land and the security of the people are represented in the last verse: where before drought and barrenness prevailed, there will be sowing beside all waters, and the beasts of burden will supplant the beasts of prey ... The chief idea... in the passage, is the contrast between the universal fertility and security of the land in the days of righteousness, and what it has been while judgment-stricken.” Barnes suggests: “The sense of this verse is, that while the enemies of the Jews would be overthrown, they themselves would be permitted to cultivate their lands in security. Instead of predicting this directly, the prophet implies that this would occur, by declaring that those who were permitted to do this were happy.”

24 October 2011

²⁷ Pratt, Elder Orson. “Fulfillment of Prophecy,” 30 August 1875. (JD 18:144, OP), p. 149.

²⁸ Pratt, Elder Orson. “Fulfillment of Prophecy,” 30 August 1875. (JD 18:144, OP), p. 153.

Isaiah 33

Wordsworth suggests: “The discomfiture of Sennacherib is here again enlarged upon by the prophet, as a type and specimen of the future overthrow of all the adversaries of God and His Church; and the deliverance of Hezekiah and Jerusalem is a figure of the Universal Redemption to be wrought by CHRIST.” In the last days, then, the Antichrist and Gog will come against Jerusalem but the exalted Lord will rise to defend His people. The ravages of the enemies of God will be such that the highways will lie waste and the earth will mourn. In the midst of the horror, the Lord’s arm will be made manifest. The nations who fight against God will be burnt in the Second Coming but those who love the Lord and have lived in righteousness will abide the day of His coming (Malachi 3:2). The whole earth shall be filled with the Glory of God. The Lord will protect Zion. The Millennial reign will be established with Christ as King.

vv. 1–12. In these verses the concept of the Lord being lifted up, rising or being exalted is repeated (ISAIAH 33:3, 5 & 10). There seems to be a bit of a chiasmus in which the Lord is praised, there is mention of despair (ISAIAH 33:7–9) and then back to praising the Lord (ISAIAH 33:10). Likewise, the idea of salvation is repeated in ISAIAH 33:2, 6, and 22. The enemy seems to be the αντιχριστος Antichrist and גוג Gog. About Gog—the King of Magog—and surrounding the Second Advent, we read: “[Gog] King of Magog, whose invasion of Israel was prophesied by Ezekiel (Ezekiel 38–39). The prophecy points to a time when the gentile nations of the north would set themselves against the people of God ...” (Gog, LDS Bible Dictionary). This is to be differentiated from the great battle of Gog and Magog at the end of the Millennium—which is not related to ISAIAH 33.

1 ¶ WOE to thee that spoilest, and thou [wast] not spoiled; and dealest treacherously, and they dealt not treacherously with thee! when thou shalt cease to spoil, thou shalt be spoiled; [and] when thou shalt make an end to deal treacherously, they shall deal treacherously with thee.

WOE to thee that spoilest, and thou [wast] not spoiled; and dealest treacherously, and they dealt not treacherously with thee! The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Woe to him who is coming to spoil thee, and shall they not spoil thee? And woe to him that is coming to plunder, and shall they not plunder thee?” The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “Woe to them who miserably afflict you; but none can make you miserable. Even the deceiver doth not deceive you.” The Peshitta (ܣ) here suggests that those who have plundered will not continue to do so and that if any seek to plunder they will, in turn, be plundered. The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “Woe to thee that spoilest, shalt not thou thyself also be spoiled? and thou that despisest, shalt not thyself also be despised?” Most all exegetes apply these words fully or in part to King Sennacherib of Asshur (a few prefer to direct them toward Babylon). However well they fit these circumstances, this chapter of Isaiah seems eschatological in nature and thus the spoiler must refer to the αντιχριστος and to Gog, גוג.

Regarding the Antichrist, in the LDS Bible Dictionary we read: “A word used by John to describe one who would assume the guise of Christ but in reality would be opposed to Christ (1 John. 2:18–22; 4:3–6; 2 John 1:7). In a broader sense it is anyone or anything that counterfeits the true gospel or plan of salvation and that openly or secretly is set up in opposition to Christ. The great antichrist is Lucifer, but he has many assistants both as spirit beings and as mortals. See 2 Thessalonians 2:1–12; Revelation 13:17; Jacob 7:1–23; Alma 1:2–16; 30:6–60.” ¶ When thou shalt cease to spoil, thou shalt be spoiled; [and] when thou shalt make an end to deal treacherously, they shall deal treacherously with thee. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “When thou shalt come to spoil, they shall spoil thee, and when thou shalt be weary of plundering, they shall plunder thee.” The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “The deceivers shall be taken and delivered up and like a moth on a garment they shall be crushed.” The Peshitta (ܣ) explains that those who seek to deal treacherously (Lamsa) / lie (BPE) will receive the same treatment from others. The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, for the second clause, “When being wearied thou shalt cease to despise, thou shalt be despised.” Both the Targum (ⲧ) and the Vulgate (ⲫ) render this passage a question regarding the consequences of wrongdoing. This verse speaks of the law of consequences so that all who love wrong: “are in a state contrary to the nature of happiness” (Alma 41:11). It is a similar idea that we find in Revelation: “He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity: he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword” (Revelation 13:10a). In Matthew 26:52b, we likewise hear what the Savior taught to His disciples:

“Put up again thy sword into his place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword.” Ironside writes: “In all God’s ways with men the principle abides true that whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. This applies to nations as well as individuals. The powers that have wreaked their vengeance upon Israel unprovoked must in turn be visited with judgment after God has used them for the chastening of His people ... Those who in future days will rise up to oppress the covenant people will be permitted to go only as far as God in His infinite wisdom and justice deems well, then they in turn will be destroyed and Israel delivered.”

2 O LORD, be gracious unto us; we have waited for thee: be thou their arm every morning, ~~our~~ their salvation also in the time of trouble.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “O Lord, be merciful unto us; we hoped for Thy Word: be thou our strength every day, our salvation also in the time of distress.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Lord, have mercy upon us! for in thee we have placed our trust. The seed of the rebellious were for destruction: but thou wast our safety in the time of trouble.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) reads something like, “Have mercy upon us, O Lord, for we have trusted in thee. Be thou our helper in the morning (BPE) / every morning (Lamsa) and our savior (BPE) / our salvation (Lamsa) in our moments of affliction.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “O Lord, have mercy on us: for we have waited for thee: be thou our arm in the morning, and our salvation in the time of trouble.” In the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲙ) we have and be thou, יהיה, while the Masoretic text (ⲙ) has thou, יהיה. This is the same familiar form for it came to pass or and it shall come to pass (יהיה). ¶ O LORD, be gracious unto us; we have waited for thee. Gesenius explains that when the concept of wait קוה is associated with that of the Lord, יהוה then it means to “to fix one’s hope on Jehovah.” (See notes on ISAIAH 40:31, especially the comments by Elder Robert D. Hales.) We certainly see in יהוה קִיְנוּ לָךְ קִיְנוּ (LORD, be gracious unto us; we have waited for thee) the same pattern. ¶ Be thou their arm every morning, their salvation also in the time of trouble. This reminds us of the Savior’s intercessory prayer on our behalf, including: “I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil” (John 17:15). The Prophet here seems to be overcome by the Spirit of intercession as he prays for us that we might withstand the evil hour (Hymn 239, Choose the Right), or the time of trouble. Barnes explains: “The Vulgate and the Chaldee read it in this manner [i.e., have changed the text from their arm to our arm], but there is no authority from manuscripts for a change in the text [but rather, Isaiah is ‘impelled by prophetic inspiration,’].” ¶ Be thou their arm

יהיה זרעם, is a request for the Lord to be a strength unto the faithful. It is the Lord’s arm, then, that protects us if we stand in holy places. ¶ The idea of לְכָרִים Every morning, means continually as Alma has: “Teach them an everlasting hatred against sin and iniquity. Preach unto them repentance, and faith on the Lord Jesus Christ; teach them to humble themselves and to be meek and lowly in heart; teach them to withstand every temptation of the devil, with their faith on the Lord Jesus Christ. Teach them to never be weary of good works, but to be meek and lowly in heart; for such shall find rest to their souls. O, remember, my son, and learn wisdom in thy youth; yea, learn in thy youth to keep the commandments of God. Yea, and cry unto God for all thy support; yea, let all thy doings be unto the Lord, and whithersoever thou goest let it be in the Lord; yea, let all thy thoughts be directed unto the Lord; yea, let the affections of thy heart be placed upon the Lord forever. Counsel with the Lord in all thy doings, and he will direct thee for good; yea, when thou liest down at night lie down unto the Lord, that he may watch over you in your sleep; and when thou risest in the morning let thy heart be full of thanks unto God; and if ye do these things, ye shall be lifted up at the last day” (Alma 37:32b–37). Wesley suggests: “[That every morning means] comprehensively, the morning being put for the whole day. The sense is, help us speedily and continually.” So, who is doing the praying here? It is all the holy prophets and the Lord’s disciples since the world began, but above all it is the Lord Himself.

3 At the noise of the tumult the people fled; at the lifting up of thyself the nations were scattered.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “At the voice of a tumultuous noise the people are afraid (Chaldee, ‘broken’), on account of the multitude of mighty actions kingdoms are scattered.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “At the terror of thy voice peoples were confounded; for fear of thee the nations were dispersed.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the first clause, “At the voice of the angel the people fled.” ¶ Delitzsch explains: “The noise comes from Jehovah, who is raising Himself judicially.” But when is He rising? There have been—and yet will be—many times when this scripture is fulfilled. It was fulfilled at the time of the Assyrian attack on Jerusalem, it was fulfilled multiple times when the mobs attacked the Saints in early Church history. But it seems to me that this will be especially so when the nations of the earth have come against Jerusalem in the last days, and the Lord comes to intercede for His people: “And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem. And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplications: and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn” (Zechariah 12:9–10). And in modern times we have: “Then shall the arm of the Lord fall upon the nations. And then shall the Lord set his foot upon this mount, and it shall cleave in twain, and the earth shall tremble, and reel to and fro, and the heavens also shall shake. And the Lord shall utter his voice, and all the ends of the earth shall hear it; and the nations of the earth shall mourn, and they that have laughed shall see their folly. And calamity shall cover the mocker, and the scorner shall be consumed; and they that have watched for iniquity shall be hewn down and cast into the fire. And then shall the Jews look upon me and say: What are these wounds in thine hands and in thy feet? Then shall they know that I am the Lord; for I will say unto them: These wounds are the wounds with which I was wounded in the house of my friends. I am he who was lifted up. I am Jesus that was crucified. I am the Son of God” (D&C 45:47–52). ¶ At the noise of the tumult (הַמִּוֶּהָל). I believe this clause is parallel to what follows, “at the lifting up of thyself.” Both refer to an action taken by the Lord on behalf of His people. Barnes explains: “Yahweh is often represented as speaking to people in a voice suited to produce consternation and alarm. Thus it is said of the vision which Daniel saw of a man by the side of the river Hiddekel, ‘his words’ were ‘like the voice of a multitude’ (הַמִּוֶּהָל), Daniel 10:6... And thus, in Revelation 1:10, the voice of Christ is said to have been ‘like the voice of a trumpet.’” ¶ At the lifting up of thyself. The Lord is always aware of us, and waits for the precise and perfect moment to intervene—no sooner or later than is expedient. This expression, gives the figure of the Lord standing to act. So it is that we see “The LORD standeth up to plead, and standeth to judge the people” (ISAIAH 3:13). This is an expression similar to that of the Lord lifting us His hand (see notes on ISAIAH 26:11). In both this verse and in ISAIAH 26:11, the elliptical expression—of why the Lord is getting on His feet or lifting up His hand—is missing. Nägelsbach well says: “The LORD arises ... to smite the enemy.”

¶ The nations were scattered נִפְצְוּ גוֹיִם here means, not the Jews, but rather אֶת-כָּל-הַבָּאִים עַל-יְרוּשָׁלַם “all the nations that come against Jerusalem” (Zechariah 12:9b). They would flee in fear.

4 And your spoil shall be gathered [like] the gathering of the caterpillar: as the running to and fro of locusts shall he run upon them.

And your spoil shall be gathered [like] the gathering of the caterpillar: The Targum (ܬ) has, “And the house of Israel shall gather the treasures of the people, their enemies, as they gather the locusts.” The LXX (Θ) reads, “Now your spoils are to be gathered; the spoils both of small and great.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And your spoils shall be gathered together as the locusts are gathered.” Keith explains, “The devastation wrought by the Jews on their enemies is expressed by a figure drawn from the habits of the caterpillar and locust, very significant in a country where the ravages of these creatures are as familiar as they are terrible. The one allusion may denote the completeness of the spoiling, the other its rapidity.” Faussett explains that “‘the wingless locust’; as it gathers; the Hebrew word for ‘gathers’ [אָסַף] is properly used of the gathering of the fruits of harvest (ISAIAH 32:10). Wesley has: “As caterpillars gather and devour the fruits of the earth.” Rawlinson explains: “The ‘caterpillar’ (הַחֲסִיל) is probably the grub out of which the locust develops a very destructive insect.” Gill writes: “That [Israel’s] enemies should flee, be scattered, and perish, and that [Israel] should be victorious, and enjoy the spoils of them; which they should gather as easily as the caterpillar or locust, as some render it, gathers and consumes herbs, and every green thing; or as easily as they are gathered, and laid on heaps, being weak and unable to defend themselves.” ¶ As the running to and fro of locusts shall he run upon them. The Targum (ܬ) has, “They shall be armed with the instruments of warfare (Chaldee, ‘arms’), as they are armed with a sling. The LXX (Θ) reads, “As if one were gathering: locusts, so will they insult you.” The Peshitta (ܣ) has something like, “As locusts in a swarm that are gathered together (Lamsa) / bunched up (BPE).” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “As when the ditches are full of them.” See Joel 2:9, “They shall run to and fro in the city; they shall run upon the wall, they shall climb up upon the houses; they shall enter in at the windows like a thief.” Delitzsch explains: “The inhabitants of Jerusalem swarm in the enemy’s camp like beetles; they are all in motion, and carry off what they can.”

5 The LORD is exalted; for he dwelleth on high: he hath filled Zion with judgment and righteousness.

The Targum (ⓧ) has, “Mighty is the Lord who maketh His Shekinah to dwell in the highest heavens, who hath promised to fill Zion with them that do true justice and righteousness.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “Holy is the God who dwelleth on high, Was Sion filled with judgment and justice?” The Prophet Joseph Smith said that Zion, as a word and concepts, represents “a place of righteousness” (TPJS, p. 80). Now that the Lord has triumphed over Israel’s enemies, praises erupt towards God.

6 And wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times, [and] strength of salvation: √ the fear of the LORD [is] his treasure.

√ salvations

And wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times. The Targum (ⓧ) has, “And it shall come to pass, whatever good Thou hast promised to them that fear Thee, Thou wilt bring and establish it in its time.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “By law they were to be delivered up; in treasures is our safety.” Instead of wisdom and knowledge, the Lamsa Peshitta (Ⓢ) has faith. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓣ) has, “And there shall be faith in thy times: riches of salvation, wisdom and knowledge.”, that is, And it shall come to pass [יְהִי] that wisdom &c. Wisdom and knowledge truly refer to the same thing, as people, when they come to a true understanding of God will fully realize: “For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea” (Habakkuk 2:14). This is a true fear of the Lord (יְהוָה) not the false one mentioned in ISAIAH 29:13b, “and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men.” This will take place during the Millennium or times of the Messiah. ¶ [And] strength of salvation: the fear of the LORD [is] his treasure. The Targum (ⓧ) has, “Strength and salvation, wisdom and knowledge. For them that fear the Lord, the treasure of His goodness is prepared.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “Let there be there wisdom and knowledge and piety towards the Lord, (These are the treasures of righteousness).” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⓢ) has, “And your salvation in a place of refuge; wisdom and knowledge and the reverence of the LORD is his treasure.” The DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⓢ) has strength and salvations, חֲסֶן וְיִשׁוּעוֹת, while the Masoretic text (Ⓜ) has strength [of] salvations, חֲסֶן יְשׁוּעוֹת. Regarding this strength of salvations, יְשׁוּעָה. The singular is יְשׁוּעָה, or Yeshua, we note. Jesus, Ἰησοῦς, is the Greek version of Yeshua, יְהוֹשֻׁעַ. Now, here is an interesting thing, indeed. Elder Parley P. Pratt taught that there are several types of salvation, but that eternal salvation, the greatest of all, is only available to those who die before the age of accountability as well as those who embrace the Gospel and endure “till the end of this life of probation.”¹ Elder Dallin H. Oaks, likewise, taught this principle.² It becomes clear that some are saved into a Testial Glory, others into a Terrestrial Glory, and yet others into a Celestial Glory. When our Christian friends ask us if we have been saved, or “born again,” Elder Oaks explained that “our answer must be ‘yes.’” In the scriptures, however, we are commanded to “work out your own salvation with fear and trembling” (Philippians 2:12b). None of this denies the grace we must receive of the Savior to accomplish this. Latter-day Saints (as well as some other fellow-Christians), however, do not believe in “cheap grace,” or “grace without discipleship.”³ Indeed, as LDS we read: “For we labor diligently to write, to persuade our children, and also our brethren, to believe in Christ, and to be reconciled to God; for we know that it is by grace that we are saved, after all we can do” (2 Nephi 25:23). Brother Brad Wilcox explains that grace is what helps us to change and improve in this life, if we will accept the Lord’s help. He tells us that when his evangelical friends ask if he has been saved by grace, he responds affirmatively. But then Brother Wilcox asks if they have been transformed by grace.⁴ In other words, we still have to use our agency to permit the Redeemer’s grace to work in our lives, and give us the strength, desire and courage to repent. No doubt the more traditional way we think of grace will also play a role when we come before the Father and our Redeemer intercedes for us. An interesting question may be profitably asked. Does our repentance lead to grace, or does grace lead to our repentance? Or, are both of these true? Elder Jeffrey R. Holland speaks about grace in the most comforting manner. Elder Holland talks about the importance of persevering in our efforts to be disciples of Christ and the need for being less critical and more forgiving of others. About grace he said: “Our only hope for true perfection is receiving it as a gift from Heaven. We

¹ Pratt, Parley P. The Latter-Day Saints Millennial Star, Volume II. No. 2. June 1841.

² Oaks, Elder Dallin H. Have you been saved? April 1998 General Conference.

³ Bonhoeffer, Dietrich, The Cost of Discipleship, Chr. Kaiser Verlag München, 1937; and Nibley, Hugh W. The Atonement of Jesus Christ, Part 3, Ensign, September 1990.

⁴ Brother Brad Wilcox was a mission president in Chile and has given numerous talks and written articles on the theme of grace, including several entitled His Grace is Sufficient. The truth of the matter is that I never quite understood his message until he contrasted how LDS understand grace in comparison to our evangelical friends. I have struggled to comprehend grace for decades and feel I am, little by little, beginning to better understand. An important “aha moment” came when Brad Wilcox was interviewed in a podcast by Nick Galieti on 28 September 2016.

won't earn it. Thus the grace of Christ offers us salvation ... By His grace you may be perfect in Christ ... If we persevere then somewhere in eternity our refinement will be finished and complete, which is the New Testament meaning of perfection.”⁵ ¶ I wish to testify with all the power of my soul that I have indeed desired that grace and felt of that “divine means of help or strength, given through the bounteous mercy and love of Jesus Christ ... [and that] this grace is an enabling power that allows men and women to lay hold on eternal life and exaltation after they have expended their own best effort” (Grace, LDS Bible Dictionary). Elder Oaks, regarding the ultimate meaning of salvation, explains that for LDS, most often “the words saved and salvation are also used to denote exaltation or eternal life ... [and that regarding this meaning of the word] it is premature for any of us to say that we have been ‘saved’ in mortality. That glorious status can only follow the final judgment of Him who is the Great Judge of the living and the dead.”⁶ ¶ The fear of the LORD [is] his treasure. The fear of the Lord, יְרֵאָה יְהוָה, as we have said before, is nothing more than a deep abiding love for the Lord. It is being filled with a testimony that God’s plan will triumph and that man is nothing in comparison.

7 Behold, their valiant ones[✓] shall cry without: the ambassadors of peace shall weep bitterly.

✓ or, messengers

Wildberger here suggests that the use of the word יָבִיחַ, behold, marks the beginning of a new section and explains that יָבִיחַ “is the same as the more common הִנֵּה.” After the thrill of contemplating Millennial day, looking forward to that time when “Christ will reign personally upon the earth; and, that the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisiacal glory” (Articles of Faith 10b) we are thrust back to what will be one of the darkest moments in the earth’s history. These scriptures, especially in the Targum (ܬ) and Peshitta (ܫ), remind us of Zechariah 12:10b, “And they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn.” The Targum (ܬ) has, “When Thou shalt reveal Thyself to them, the messengers of the nations shall cry bitterly in the street; those who had gone forth to proclaim peace, shall return to weep in the bitterness of soul.” For the first clause, the Lamsa Peshitta (ܫ) has, “If he should be seen by them they shall howl violently,” and BPE has, “If he were to manifest himself to them they would shout loudly.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “Then behold with the dread of you they shall be terrified — they, of whom you have been afraid, will for fear of you raise a grievous cry. Messengers will be sent weeping bitterly, suing for peace.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϲ) has, “Behold they that see shall cry without, the angels of peace shall weep bitterly.” The Hebrew הַצָּדִיק (from חָיִי), means outside, or in the street (Gesenius, BDB, HAL). Several translations render it in the street or a like expression (CEV, ESV, GW, HCSB, ISV, NASB). It is possible that these verses allude to Zechariah 12:10, but the context of the Masoretic text (מ) seems to point to the time when the powers of the ἀντιχριστός or the Antichrist and adversary are strong and the two witnesses, or prophets, will lie in the streets of Jerusalem. “Thy sons have fainted, they lie at the head of all the streets, as a wild bull in a net: they are full of the fury of the LORD, the rebuke of thy God” (ISAIAH 51:20). In the Book of Mormon we have: “And none to guide her among all the sons she hath brought forth; neither that taketh her by the hand, of all the sons she hath brought up. These two sons are come unto thee, who shall be sorry for thee—thy desolation and destruction, and the famine and the sword—and by whom shall I comfort thee? Thy sons have fainted, save these two; they lie at the head of all the streets; as a wild bull in a net, they are full of the fury of the Lord, the rebuke of thy God” (2 Nephi 8:18–20). John gives us: “and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months. And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth. These are the two olive trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth. And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed. These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will. And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them. And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified. And they of the people and kindreds and tongues and nations shall see their dead bodies three days and an half, and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves. And they that dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth. And after three days and an half the spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them which saw them” (Revelation 11:2b–11). So also Gill, who writes: “... ‘their valiant ones,’ such who have been valiant for the truth on earth... the two witnesses that prophesy in sackcloth openly and publicly, and who will be slain, and their bodies lie unburied in the street of the great city (Revelation 11:3). In D&C we read: “Q. What is to be understood by the two witnesses, in the eleventh chapter of Revelation? A. They are two prophets that are to be raised up to the Jewish nation in the last days, at the time of the restoration, and to prophesy to the Jews after they are gathered and have built the city of Jerusalem in the land of their fathers” (D&C 77:15).⁷ ¶ Who, then, are the ambassadors of peace who will weep so bitterly? It seems to me they will be the remaining Brethren of the First Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve who hold the Holy Apostleship and are most definitely אַרְאֵלִים, and all of the faithful disciples of Jesus Christ. ¶ Regarding the Hebrew אַרְאֵלִים [valiant ones, messengers],

⁵ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland spoke today 30 September 2017, in the Saturday morning session of General Conference.

⁶ Oaks, Elder Dallin H. Have you been saved? April 1998 General Conference.

Lowth has: “Three MSS. read אַרְאֵלִים, that is, lions of God, or strong lions. So they called valiant men heroes.” Delitzsch also has: “אַרְאֵלִים is probably chosen with some allusion to ‘Ariel ... [ISAIAH 29]; but it has a totally different meaning. We have rendered it ‘heroes,’ because אַרְאֵלִים is here synonymous with אַרְאֵל in the Nibelung-like piece contained in 2 Samuel 23:20 and 1 Chronicles 11:22. This אַרְאֵל, which is here contracted into אַרְאֵל (compare the biblical name ‘Ar’ēlī and the post-biblical name of the angels, ‘Er’ellīm), is compounded of ‘arī (a lion) and ‘El (God), and therefore signifies ‘the lion of God.’”

8 The highways lie waste, the wayfaring man ceaseth: he hath broken the covenant, he hath despised the cities, he regardeth no man.

The highways lie waste, the wayfaring man ceaseth: The LXX (6) reads, “For their highways shall be deserted.” The Douay-Rheims (1) has, “The ways are made desolate, no one passeth by the road.” Rather than a street (חַוִּיץ), we now have a מַסְלָה (plural for מַסְלָה) also a path or a road, sometimes lined up with stones (HAL). Bishops’ Bible translates it as “Their streetes are waste,” while Geneva renders it: “The pathes are waste.” This first part of the verse seems to be a continuation of the last verse. Because of fear, the people have abandoned the streets. No one dares remove the bodies of the dead prophets from the streets and so they “And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city” (Revelation 11:8a). ¶ He hath broken the covenant, he hath despised the cities, he regardeth no man. The Targum (7) has, “Because they have forgotten the covenant: they shall be removed far from their cities; they have not considered the sons of men, evil shall come upon them. The LXX (6) reads, “The dread of the nations is at an end and the treaty with them broken. And you will account them common men.” The Peshitta (5), for the first clause, has the covenant is broken (Lamsa) / the covenant was esteemed as naught (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (1) has, “The covenant is made void, he hath rejected the cities, he hath not regarded the men.” In this clause the prophet seems to speak of Satan, who is the master of covenant breaking—and he regards no city and no man and is the enemy of God and of man. Satan’s greatest joy is when he seduces men into breaking their covenants. We read these reassuring words: “Protection against the influence of the devil is found by obedience to the commandments and laws of the gospel of Jesus Christ.”⁸

⁷ Elder Bruce R. McConkie wrote regarding these two witnesses in The Millennial Messiah: The Second Coming of the Son of Man, p. 390.

9 The earth mourneth [and] languisheth: Lebanon is ashamed [and] hewn down: Sharon is like a wilderness; and Bashan and Carmel shake off [their fruits].

✓ or, withered

The earth mourneth [and] languisheth: Lebanon is ashamed [and] hewn down: The Targum (7) has, “The land mourneth, it is laid desolate; Lebanon is withered, it shakes off its leaves.” The LXX (6) reads, “The land mourned; Lebanon was ashamed.” Instead of hewn down, the Peshitta (5) has confounded (Lamsa) / confused (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (1) has, for the second clause, “Libanus is confounded and become foul.” This is not the only time we hear in Isaiah of the earth convulsing for the evil that she has seen (see ISAIAH 24:4–5). ¶ Sharon is like a wilderness; and Bashan and Carmel shake off [their fruits]. The Targum (7) has, “Sharon has become like a desert; Bashan is laid desolate, and Carmel.” The LXX (6) reads, “Saron was become fens (Brenton, ‘marshes’); Galilee and Charmel were bare.” Instead of shake off [their fruits], the Peshitta (S) has are desolate. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And Saron is become as a desert: and Basan and Carmel are shaken.” The YLT renders it: “Withered hath been Sharon as a wilderness, And shaking are Bashan and Carmel.” The Hebrew has as the Arabah (desert) כַּעֲרָבָה. So also the RV, NASB, ESV, Darby, CEV, ASV, AMP as well as most Spanish versions). The BBE uses the Hebrew word, “Sharon is like the Arabah.” Barnes explains, “Lebanon was distinguished for its ornaments of beautiful cedars. Here iris represented as being stripped of these ornaments, and as covered with shame on that account ... Sharon was the name of a district south of mount Carmel along the coast of the Mediterranean, extending to Cesarea and Joppa. The name was almost proverbial to express any place of extraordinary beauty and fertility (see 1 Chronicles 5:16; 27:29; Song of Solomon 2:1; ISAIAH 35:2; 65:10). There was also another Sharon on the east side of the Jordan, and in the vicinity of Bashan, which was also a fertile region (1 Chronicles 5:16). To this, it is more probable that the prophet here refers, though it is not certain. The object seems to be to mention the most fertile places in the land as being now desolate.”

⁸ Satan, LDS Bible Dictionary.

10 Now will I rise, saith the LORD; now will I be exalted; now will I lift up myself.

The Targum (T) has, “Now I will reveal myself, saith the Lord; now will I lift myself up on high; now will I be exalted.” The LXX (G) reads, “Now will I arise, saith the Lord, now shall I be glorified; now shall I be exalted; now you shall see: now you shall feel.” In ISAIAH 33:10, we have the force of a three-fold repetition: now rise, עֲתָה אֲקוּם ~ now exalted, עֲתָה אֲנִישָׂא ~ now lift up, עֲתָה אֲרִמָּם (also see ISAIAH 33:3, 5). We note, in this verse, the Lord alluding to His upcoming triumphs. When the two witnesses are raised up, this will be a manifest show of His glory: “And after three days and an half the spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them which saw them. And they heard a great voice from heaven saying unto them, Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud; and their enemies beheld them” (Revelation 11:11–12).

11 Ye shall conceive chaff, ye shall bring forth stubble: your breath, [as] fire, shall devour you.

Ye shall conceive chaff, ye shall bring forth stubble: The Targum (T) has, “Ye, O people! have purposed for yourselves purposes of iniquity; ye have worked for yourselves evil works, because your works are evil.” The LXX (G) reads, “The strength of your spirit shall be vain.” Instead of chaff, the Peshitta (S) has thorns. The Douay-Rheims (V) has heat instead of chaff. The words conceive (תִּלְדֶּה) and bring forth (תִּלְדֶּה) or give birth, from יָלַד are a direct allusion to giving birth. Elsewhere we see similar wording, such as give birth to wind (ISAIAH 26:18). Not only would the enemy conceive useless chaff and stubble (both of these representing the wheat or other cereal plants whose fruit has been removed) but these would only serve to be burnt (next clause) by the Lord (see D&C 64:24b, I will burn them up). This verse seems to refer to Satan and the ἀντιχριστος Antichrist as well as those people (verse 12) who follow them. ¶ Your breath, [as] fire, shall devour you. The Targum (T) has, “My Word shall consume you, as a whirlwind consumes chaff.” The LXX (G) reads, “A fire shall utterly devour you.” It appears as if the very breath of the enemy of God’s people will kindle the chaff and stubble that was ready to be burnt. Alternatively, the Targum (T) has my Word (מִימְרֵי, from מִימָר, i.e., the word of the Lord) consuming the chaff and several modern translators likewise suggest it is the breath of the Lord who will start the fire: “You have conceived chaff, you will give birth to stubble; My breath will consume you like a fire” (NASB).

12 And the people shall be [as] the burnings of lime: [as] thorns cut up shall they be burned in the fire.

Rather, as Kay mentions, peoples עַמִּים, or nations. It is correctly rendered by the ASV (and several others), “And the peoples shall be as the burnings of lime, as thorns cut down, that are burned in the fire.” Govett writes: “At this very height of his enemy’s power, shall Christ come, and with ‘flaming fire’ take vengeance on him and his host: ‘And the nations shall be burned as lime; as thorns in a field, cut up and burned.’ To which last time the reference of the parable of ‘the tares bound in bundles to burn them,’ is not improbably intended by our Lord. So the destruction of Christ’s enemies in the fire of Tophet is alluded in those terrible words of warning.” The Targum (T) has, “And the people shall be as the burning of fire, as thorns are cut up and burnt in the fire.” The LXX (G) reads, “And nations shall be burned up, as thorns in a field are rejected and burned.” Instead of cut up, the Peshitta (S) has gathered together (Lamsa) / piled up (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (V) has,

“And the people shall be as ashes after a fire, as a bundle of thorns they shall be burnt with fire.” Dry thorns (ISAIAH 9:18; 27:4), as well as chaff and stubble, are ideal for starting a fire. So also Redak [in Rosenberg], “The simile is to severed thorns rather than to growing ones, since the latter are moist and do not burn as quickly as dry, severed thorns.” Young says: “Thorns that are cut up are dry and flammable.” Regarding lime, Redak [in Rosenberg] thinks the people will be burnt as “as stones burned to lime.” Luther and Skinner have, “As if burned to lime” (see also Kaiser, Thompson). Skinner adds, “An image probably suggested by Amos 2:1⁹.” Wordsworth says, “In Palestine, the low matted thorns are cut up with mattocks and hooks to be burnt in the lime-kilns near the spot where they grow (Dr. Thompson, ‘The Land and the book,’ p. 59).” Barnes has: “As if placed in a burning lime-kiln, where they must certainly be destroyed (see ISAIAH 30:33).” Likewise, Faussett writes: “Perhaps alluding to their being about to be burnt on the funeral pyre (ISAIAH 30:33).” Rawlinson has: “As the burnings of lime; as thorns. Things that fire consumes utterly and quickly.”

vv. 13–24. In the last days, the wicked will be burnt while the righteous will be able to endure the devouring fire. Christ, the King, will dwell with the people and only a faint memory of suffering will remain in the days of Millennial bliss.

13 ¶ Hear, ye [that are] far off, what I have done; and, ye [that are] near, acknowledge my might.

The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “Hear ye, O righteous, that keep the law from of old, what I have done; and know ye, ye sinners (the Royal Polyglot reads תְּבָרִיִם, ‘good men’) that have returned to my law, that my strength is nigh.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “The far distant nations shall hear what I have done, they who are near shall know my power.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has know rather than acknowledge. In this verse we are called upon to confess our faith in the Lord and to praise His strength. Rawlinson has: “Jehovah speaks by the mouth of his prophet, and calls on the nations of the earth, far and near, to consider and acknowledge his might ... (compare Exodus 15:14–16). Gill explains that this is “the ruin of antichrist, the beast, and false prophet, and the burning of the city and whore ... for, whoever will be the instruments, the work is the Lord’s, and therefore it will be done: ‘she shall be utterly burnt with fire, for strong is the Lord who judgeth her’ (Revelation 18:8), and this shall be heard of far and near, who shall applaud the mighty work, and give God the glory of it (Revelation 19:1) ... [so that] even his omnipotence, which will be seen, observed, and owned by multitudes, who will say, ‘Allelujah, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth’ (Revelation 19:6).” Nägelsbach says, “According to ISAIAH 33:10 [also 3], Jehovah was about to arise and come to the rescue. He has done so. The rescue is accomplished in an astounding fashion. The present passage belongs to a time after the rescue. It presupposes it. For it contains glances into the future, that rest upon that deed as their foundation.”

14 The sinners in Zion are afraid; fearfulness hath surprised the hypocrites. Who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings?

The sinners in Zion are afraid; fearfulness hath surprised the hypocrites. The Targum (Ⓢ) has in the second clause, “Terror hath seized the wicked.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “The transgressors in Sion are fled; terror will seize the ungodly.” Instead of fearfulness hath surprised the hypocrites, the Peshitta (Ⓟ) has the idea that shuddering has fallen upon the heathen. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, for the second clause, “Trembling hath seized upon the hypocrites.” The effect of the everlasting burnings (below) will be different to those who have rejected the Word in contrast to those who have fully embraced Him. Barnes writes: “The sentiment here is, that those who professedly are the friends of God, but who are secretly and really his enemies, are often alarmed at his judgments... That the punishment of hypocrites in the church will be dreadful and terrific. This seems to have been the conviction here. They saw that if such judgments came upon those who had no knowledge of the true God, it must be infinitely more terrible on those who had been trained amidst the institutions of religion, and who had professed attachment to Yahweh. And so it will be in a preeminent degree among those who have been trained in the Christian church, and who have been the professed but insincere followers of the Lord Jesus Christ.” Gill, in the same vein, has: “... formal professors, and hypocritical persons, in the reformed churches, or Protestants¹⁰ having only a form of godliness, without the power of it, are meant; who, observing God’s judgments upon antichrist, shall be seized with a panic, lest the like should come down upon them for their hypocrisy and deceit; unless it should be rather thought that antichrist, and his followers themselves, are designed, who himself is said to sit in the temple of God, and who claim to themselves the name of the church of God, and pretend to be Christians, though they are not” (emphasis added). Horsley says, about the sinners in Zion, that they are the “wicked, false professors” of religion. ¶ President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “Some shall rise to the everlasting burning of God; for God dwells in everlasting burnings; and some shall rise to the damnation of their own filthiness, which is as exquisite a torment as the lake of fire and brimstone (D.H.C., Vol. 6, p. 317).”¹¹ Throughout the scriptures we so read, such as: “For behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall burn as stubble; for they that come shall burn them, saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch” (JS-H 1:37, compare to Malachi 4:1); “Behold, they shall be as stubble; the fire shall burn them; they shall not deliver themselves from the power of the flame” (ISAIAH 47:14a); and “For after today cometh the burning—this is speaking after the manner of the Lord—for verily I say, tomorrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, for I am the Lord of Hosts; and I will not spare any that remain in Babylon” (D&C 64:24). After the Martyrdom of the Prophet Joseph Smith, Elder John Taylor wrote: “And that if the fire can scathe a green tree for the glory of God, how easy it will burn up the dry trees to purify the vineyard of corruption” (D&C 135:6b, compare to Luke 23:31, where the Savior applied this expression to Himself). ¶ Who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings? The Targum (ܬ) clearly follows a corrupted and uninspired exegesis¹², “Who, when they were committing theft said: Who of us shall dwell in Zion, in which the brightness of His Shekinah is like devouring fire? Who of us shall sojourn in Jerusalem, where the wicked shall be judged, to be delivered into hell, into everlasting burning?” The LXX (Ϯ) reads, “Who will tell you that a fire is kindled? who will proclaim to you the place which is everlasting?” The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has, “Which of you can dwell with devouring fire? which of you shall dwell with everlasting burnings?” ¶ I love this and many other scriptures with a who נִי question (Psalm 15:1–5; 24:3–5; Malachi 15:1). ¶ Skinner says, “The word ‘dwell’ [יָשַׁב] means strictly ‘sojourn as a protected guest,’ and is the same as that used in Psalm 15:1 [who shall dwell, נִי-יָשַׁב].” Cheyne writes: “‘Perpetual burnings,’ not with reference to the eternity of the punishment ... but because the fire of Jehovah’s self-manifesting love and wrath is, like himself, eternal.”¹³ Rawlinson explains: “The man who alone can dwell in the ‘devouring fire’ is the good man. He that is able to abide ‘the everlasting burnings’ is ‘the man that walketh righteously and speaketh uprightly.’” So also Meyer, who beautifully says: “The devouring fire and everlasting burnings of ISAIAH 33:14 are clearly the emblems of the divine presence. The righteous dwell in God as the bush which was baptized in the Shekinah-glory and was not consumed. The fire of His holy presence makes them holy ...” Skinner says that it is “the righteous who dwell securely with the consuming fire of divine holiness.” Ironside writes: “The verses that follow give the answer to the passage. ‘Our God is a consuming fire’ (Hebrews 12:29). They only can abide before Him who ... are seeking now to walk before Him in truth and uprightness.” Nägelsbach says, “This fire is harmless for the pious, the lovers of truth, the righteous.” ¶ President John Taylor, who also quoted some of these same verses (plus also Psalm 89:4), explained that “There is an inexorable law of God that requires from His professed followers the principles of virtue, honor, truth, integrity, righteousness, justice, judgment and mercy.”¹⁴ Our beloved Prophet Joseph Smith explained the right context for מוֹקְדֵי עוֹלָם, everlasting burnings: “What is it [to rise again to dwell in everlasting burnings in immortal glory, not to sorrow, suffer, or die anymore; but be heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ]? To inherit the same power, the same glory and the same exaltation, until you arrive at the station of a God, and ascend the throne of eternal power, the same as those who have gone before. What did Jesus do? Why; I do the things I saw my Father do when worlds came rolling into existence. My Father worked out his kingdom with fear and trembling, and I must do the same; and when I get my kingdom, I shall present it to my Father, so that he may obtain kingdom upon kingdom, and it will exalt him in glory. He will then take a higher exaltation, and I will take his place, and thereby become exalted myself. So that Jesus treads in the tracks of his Father, and inherits what God did before; and God is thus glorified and exalted in the salvation and exaltation of all his children. It is plain beyond disputation, and you thus learn some of the first principles of the Gospel, about which so much hath

⁹ “Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Moab, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because he burned the bones of the king of Edom into lime” (Amos 2:1).

¹⁰ John Gill (1697–1771) speaks of his own churches, being that he is a protestant.

¹¹ Joseph Fielding Smith, Answers to Gospel Questions, 1:40.

¹² As in the previous verse, the ‘good’ טָבִיא was turned into ‘evil.’

¹³ Cheyne’s comments can well be compared to D&C 19:10–12.

¹⁴ Taylor, John. Mediation and Atonement: An Examination into and an Elucidation of the Great Principle of the Mediation and Atonement of Our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Chapter 23. Salt Lake City: Deseret News, 1882.

been said. When you climb up a ladder, you must begin at the bottom, and ascend step by step, until you arrive at the top; and so it is with the principles of the Gospel—you must begin with the first, and go on until you learn all the principles of exaltation. But it will be a great while after you have passed through the veil before you will have learned them. It is not all to be comprehended in this world; it will be a great work to learn our salvation and exaltation even beyond the grave.”¹⁵

15 He that walketh righteously, ✓ and speaketh uprightly; ✓ he that despiseth the gain of oppressions, ✓ that shaketh his hands from holding of bribes, that stoppeth his ears from hearing of blood, ✓ ✓ and shutteth his eyes from seeing evil;

- ✓ in righteousness
- ✓ ✓ uprightnesses
- ✓ ✓ ✓ or, deceits
- ✓ ✓ ✓ ✓ or, bloods

Edward J. Young says, “The righteous one will not look at evil with delight, nor will he desire to become a participator in evil deeds. His organs of receptivity, the eyes, the ears, the hands, are not at the service of evil; and his organs of activity, the tongue and feet, likewise will have not part therein. The man who is to inhabit high places wishes that none of his members be yielded as instruments of unrighteousness.” Elder Boyd K. Packer taught: “The ordinances of washing and anointing are referred to often in the temple as initiatory ordinances. It will be sufficient for our purposes to say only the following: Associated with the endowment are washings and anointings—mostly symbolic in nature, but promising definite, immediate blessings as well as future blessings.”¹⁶ ¶ He that walketh righteously, and speaketh uprightly; he that despiseth the gain of oppressions, that shaketh his hands from holding of bribes, that stoppeth his ears from hearing of blood. The Targum (ⓧ) has, “The prophet said, The just shall live in it, every one who walketh in righteousness, and speaketh honest things; removing himself to a distance from the mammon of iniquity (literally, ‘which deceives’); removing himself from oppressions, that restraineth his hands from holding a bribe, that stoppeth his ears from hearing of the shedding of innocent blood.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “He who is walking in righteousness, speaking of a straight way; who hateth iniquity and injustice; who shaketh his hands from bribes; who stoppeth his ears that he may not hear a bloody sentence.” Instead of the gain of oppressions, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has deceit and oppression. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓜ) has, “He that walketh in justices, and speaketh truth, that casteth away avarice by oppression, and shaketh his hands from all bribes, that stoppeth his ears lest he hear blood.” Young well says: “When others press into his hands the gain acquired from oppression he shakes his hands so that the gain falls to the ground. His action represents an indignant refusal of all such gain and money ... The righteous man not merely speaks against evil, but refuses to take part in it.” ¶ He that walketh righteously, and speaketh uprightly. Regarding this clause, Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught: “We must speak the truth and work the works of righteousness. We shall be judged by our thoughts, our words and our deeds.”¹⁷ See also ISAIAH 58:13a. Speaking uprightly also includes returning a soft answer.¹⁸ ¶ He that despiseth the gain of oppressions, that shaketh his hands from holding of bribes. Then Elder Spencer W. Kimball taught: “I began to think of many of our people whose minds are upon their wealth; who are increased with goods; who though clothed elegantly are naked and not in white raiment; who with eyes wide open see not; who are ‘greedy for filthy lucre.’ Now, all money is not lucre—all money is not filthy.”¹⁹ Elder Dallin H. Oaks has written about the dangers of materialism: “Those who set their hearts upon the things of the world usually focus on some combination of that worldly quartet of property, pride, prominence, and power. When attitudes or priorities are fixed on the acquisition, use, or possession of property, we call that condition materialism... Whatever its degree, an interest becomes materialism when it is intense enough to override priorities that should be paramount ... Some have charged that modern Latter-day Saints are peculiarly susceptible to the gospel of success and the theology of prosperity. According to this gospel, success in this world—particularly entrepreneurial success—is an essential ingredient of progress toward the celestial kingdom. According to this theology, success and prosperity are rewards for keeping the commandments, and a large home and an expensive car are marks of heavenly favor... Objective observers differ on whether

¹⁷ Elder Bruce R. McConkie, “Think on These Things,” Ensign (CR), January 1974, p.45.

¹⁸ For more on this subject, see my book, Party-Directed Mediation, especially Chapters 4 & 2. The book is a free PDF download on the Web from the University of California. URL: <http://nature.berkeley.edu/ucce50/ag-labor/7conflict/>

¹⁹ Elder Spencer W. Kimball, General Conference, 1 October 1953, pp. 51–53.

¹⁵ Joseph Smith, Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, selected and arranged by Joseph Fielding Smith, p.347–348 (also see TPJS 361, 367).

¹⁶ Packer, Elder Boyd K. “Come to the Temple,” 2007 Ensign.

Latter-day Saints are more susceptible to get-rich-quick proposals than other citizens. However that may be, it is disturbing that there is no clear evidence that Latter-day Saints are less susceptible... We must ... be so indifferent to material or earthly things that we are willing to give up cheerfully whatever is necessary to become 'equal' in those things (D&C 70:14; 78:5–6)... If Latter-day Saints are especially susceptible to materialism, this may be because materialism is a corruption of a virtue in which Latter-day Saints take special pride. Materialism is a seductive distortion of self-reliance."²⁰ ¶ That stoppeth his ears from hearing of blood. We will not rejoice in the shedding of blood or in war. Why is it, I ask myself, that people so easily rejoice in the beginning of war? People seem to be filled with euphoria. ¶ And shutteth his eyes from seeing evil. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "And shutteth his eyes from looking at the workers of iniquity." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "Who shutteth his eyes against the appearance of injustice." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, "And shutteth his eyes that he may see no evil." To some degree, this is a command not to be judgmental. Not to see the worse in a situation. Just as important; an injunction against lustful thoughts. The Talmud tradition (Seder Nezikin, Baba Bathra 57b, also see Makkoth 24a) has a beautiful and poetic injunction against looking at women to lust after them, and instead, to look away and avoid those paths altogether: "Rabbi Johanan said in the name of Rabbi Bana'ah: Joint owners of a courtyard can stop one another from using the courtyard for any purpose save that of washing [clothes], since it is not fitting that the daughters of Israel should expose themselves to the public gaze while washing [clothes]. It is written: [The righteous one is] he that shutteth his eyes from looking upon evil, and [commenting on this] Rabbi Hiyya ben Abba said: This refers to a man who does not look at the women when they are washing [clothes]. How are we to understand this? If there is another road, then if [he does not take it] he is wicked. If there is no other road, then how can he help himself?—We suppose that there is no other road, and even so it is incumbent on him to hide his eyes from them" (Talmud, Soncino). Wildberger suggests that the expression מִן־רְאוֹת "does not simply mean to 'see something' but has the sense: 'his desire is to feast his eyes on something.'" I love the words of the Prophet Joseph Smith: "Let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God; and the doctrine of the priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dews from heaven. The Holy Ghost shall be thy constant companion, and thy scepter an unchanging scepter of righteousness and truth; and thy dominion shall be an everlasting dominion, and without compulsory means it shall flow unto thee forever and ever" (D&C 121:45b–46). With the Psalmist I pray: "Create in me a clean heart, O God" (Psalm 51:10a) that I might "[lose] every desire for sin (History of the Church 2:8)."²¹

16 He shall dwell on high: ᵐ his place of defence [shall be] the munitions of rocks: bread shall be given him; his waters [shall be] sure.

✓ heights, or, high places

He shall dwell on high: his place of defence [shall be] the munitions of rocks: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "The house of his inhabitation shall be in a high and exalted place; in the house of the sanctuary shall his soul be satisfied." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "He shall dwell in a lofty cavern of a strong rock." Instead of munitions, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has precipice (Lamsa) / shear or cliff (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, "He shall dwell on high, the fortifications of rocks shall be his highness." Cheyne says, regarding ISAIAH 33:16–17, "We are already in the atmosphere of the Messianic age." Barnes suggests: "The literal translation of this place would be, 'The strongholds of the rocks shall be his lofty fortress.'" Christ is our Rock. Such a disciple of the Lord as we have been discussing in these verses shall dwell on high or be exalted in the Celestial Kingdom of our Lord. But even in this earth such a person will be protected (contrast this with ISAIAH 2:21). This is not to say that challenges will not have to be endured in mortality, for that would defeat one of the very purposes of this probationary state. Someday—after we have passed the veil—we will see with more clarity how the Lord has protected us from harm. ¶ Bread shall be given him; his waters [shall be] sure. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “His food shall be sufficient; his waters shall continue; like a fountain of water, whose waters fail not.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Bread shall be given him and his water shall not fail.” These are the very blessings pronounced in Rain in Due Season to all those who come unto Christ: both bread (food) and water (in the form of rain and blessings), such as Leviticus 26:4 and others in those chapters. Bread and water are also representative of spiritual gifts, not just temporal (see ISAIAH 3:1, the stay and the staff, the whole stay of bread, and the whole staff of water). Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught: “Those who do come to quench their thirst, and who are true and faithful, shall drink forever from the pure fountain. As Isaiah expressed it, their ‘waters shall be sure’ (ISAIAH 33:16), meaning they shall be as their Lord, enjoying and possessing the same eternal life which he lives. As he said in our day: ‘Unto him that keepeth my commandments I will give the mysteries of my kingdom, and the same shall be in him a well of living water, springing up unto everlasting life’ (D&C 63:23).”²² The Savior said: “But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life” (John 4:14).

²¹ The Prophet Joseph Smith taught "That the nearer man approaches perfection, the clearer are his views, and the greater his enjoyments, till he has overcome the evils of his life and lost every desire for sin; and like the ancients, arrives at that point of faith where he is wrapped in the power and glory of his Maker, and is caught up to dwell with Him" (History of the Church 2:8). Elder Neal A. Maxwell explained: "When people are described as 'having lost their desire for sin,' it is they, and they only, who deliberately decided to lose those wrong desires by being willing to 'give away all [their] sins' in order to know God (Alma 22:18)" (According to the Desire of [Our] Hearts, October 1996 General Conference). In addition, these verses from the Prophet Moroni are instructive: "And awake, and arise from the dust [away from our spiritual bondage], O Jerusalem; yea, and put on thy beautiful garments, O daughter of Zion; and strengthen thy stakes and enlarge thy borders forever, that thou mayest no more be confounded, that the covenants of the Eternal Father which he hath made unto thee, O house of Israel, may be fulfilled. Yea, come unto Christ, and be perfected in him, and deny yourselves of all ungodliness; and if ye shall deny yourselves of all ungodliness, and love God with all your might, mind and strength, then is his grace sufficient for you, that by his grace ye may be perfect in Christ; and if by the grace of God ye are perfect in Christ, ye can in nowise deny the power of God. And again, if ye by the grace of God are perfect in Christ, and deny not his power, then are ye sanctified in Christ by the grace of God, through the shedding of the blood of Christ, which is in the covenant of the Father unto the remission of your sins, that ye become holy, without spot" (Moroni 10:31–33).

²⁰ Oaks, Dallin H. Pure in Heart. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1988, pp. 73, 76, 81, 83–85.

17 Thine eyes shall see the king in his beauty: they shall behold the land that is very far off.[✓]

✓ of far distances

Of the promises made to a righteous Israel, none is greater than, “And I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people” (Leviticus 26:12, Rain in Due Season). This is, in fact, what is alluded to here, in that the people shall see the king in his beauty מֶלֶךְ בְּיָפִי. A few versions prefer to translate the king in his glory (Bishops, Geneva, CEV, BBE). The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “Thine eyes shall see the Shekinah of the king of the worlds in his beauty (or, ‘praise’); thou shalt behold and see those that descend down to hell.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “You shall see a king with glory; your eyes shall see a far distant land.” Who is the King but Christ, the Holy Messiah! Skinner says, “The reluctance of many expositors to interpret this phrase of the Messiah is incomprehensible.” Rawlinson has,

“When Christ appeared on earth at his first coming, he ‘had no beauty that men should desire him’ (ISAIAH 53:2). Roughly clad and toil-worn, whatever the heavenly expression of his countenance, he did not strike men as beautiful, majestic, or even as ‘comely’ (ISAIAH 53:2). But at his second coming it will be different ... / a far stretching land] (literally ‘a land of distance’), the spacious and ever-extending dominions of the Messiah (cf. Micah 5:4; Zechariah 9:10; Psalm 72:8).” ¶ The land that is very far off, אֶרֶץ מֵרָחֵק. Or, “Thine eyes shall see the king in his beauty: they shall behold a land that reacheth afar” (ASV). AMP has “a land of wide distances that stretches afar”; ESV and ISV, “a land that stretches afar / far”; HCSB, “a vast land.” Ironside likewise has, “These shall behold the King in all His beauty and glory when He returns to fulfill prophetic scripture. They shall behold the land, that is, the land promised by God to Abraham’s seed, far extended, rather than ‘far off,’ as our Authorized Version reads.” So we have: “And he shall stand and feed in the strength of the LORD, in the majesty of the name of the LORD his God; and they shall abide: for now shall he be great unto the ends of the earth” (Micah 5:4); “And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem, and the battle bow shall be cut off: and he shall speak peace unto the heathen: and his dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth” (Zechariah 9:10); and “He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth” (Psalm 72:8). Wesley has, “Christ, triumphing over all enemies, and ruling his own people with righteousness. Very far – Thou shalt not be shut up in Jerusalem, but shalt have free liberty to go abroad with honour and safety.” Jennings also has: “For this last line does not mean, as our Authorized Version intimates, that the land is far away; but when in it, the boundaries shall not be contracted, but as far as their eye can see or foot can carry, shall be theirs: as it was said to their father Abraham, ‘Lift up now thine eyes, for all the land that thou seest, to thee I will give it’ (Genesis 15:14, 15).” Govett writes: “Then follows the blessedness of the ransomed, even as the Saviour, in his interpretation of the parable of the tares, adds, ‘Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father.’ So Isaiah,—‘Their eyes shall behold the King in his beauty.’” Wildberger says: “It is noteworthy that, for Israel’s faith, parallel to beholding God, a land is mentioned—a broad land. To be sure, אֶרֶץ מֵרָחֵק (a broad land) needs comment. In other passages, אֶרֶץ מֵרָחֵק means ‘land far away’ (see Jeremiah 4:16; 8:19) ... One is forced, as well, to stay with the common translation, but one still ought to be aware of the fact that ‘wide’ is meant in the sense of ‘far away, reaching far into the distance.’ In the time of salvation the narrow borders of the land of Israel will fall away.” When speaking of a faraway land, we must especially think of Zion in America. ¶ President Brigham Young said some things that directly bear on these verses of Isaiah (especially note the beholding of our Savior, the gathering of Israel, the requirements to dwell in righteousness, and the extent of Zion): “When will Zion be redeemed? When will the Saviour make his appearance in the midst of his people? When will the vail be taken away, that we may behold the glory of God? ... We must be pure to be prepared to build up Zion ... We are gathering a few that will be faithful in the midst of this people, and prepare themselves to be crowned kings and priests unto God ... When Joseph first revealed the land where the Saints should gather, a woman in Canada asked if we thought that Jackson County would be large enough to gather all the people that would want to go to Zion. I will answer the question really as it is. Zion will extend, eventually, all over this earth. There will be no nook or corner upon the earth but what will be in Zion. It will all be Zion ... We are going to gather as many as we can, bless them, give them their endowments, etc., preach to them the truth, lay the principles of eternal life before them, inform their minds all we have power to do, and lead them into the path of truth and righteousness; and those who will not abide the truth will apostatize. A few will remain, and a good share of them will cleave to the promises of the Lord, will be true in every respect, and will be accounted worthy to enter in at the strait gate.”²³

²² Bruce R. McConkie, The Promised Messiah: The First Coming of Christ, p.207.

18 Thine heart shall meditate in terror. Where [is] the scribe? where [is] the receiver? where [is] he that counted the towers?

✓ weigher?

The Targum (ܬ) has, “Thy heart shall meditate great things: where are the scribes? where are the rulers? where are the mathematicians? Let them come, if they are able to count the number of the slain of the chief of the camp of the mighty.” The LXX (Ϝ) reads, “Your soul will meditate on terror. Where are the scribes? Where the counsellors? Where is he who numbereth them who are fed—the people small and great?” The Lamsa Peshitta (ܣ) has, “Your heart shall learn reverence. Where is the scribe? Where is the weigher? Where is he who counted towers for a mighty people?” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Thy heart shall meditate fear: where is the learned? where is he that pondereth the words of the law? where is the teacher of little ones?” Regarding the counting of towers, we see: “According to thy name, O God, so is thy praise unto the ends of the earth: thy right hand is full of righteousness. Let mount Zion rejoice, let the daughters of Judah be glad, because of thy judgments. Walk about Zion, and go round about her: tell the towers thereof. Mark ye well her bulwarks, consider her palaces; that ye may tell it to the generation following. For this God is our God for ever and ever: he will be our guide even unto death” (Psalm 48:10–14). Gill writes: “The apostle [Paul] cites these words, or at least alludes to them, 1 Corinthians 1:20, when he says, ‘where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world?’ triumphing over the wise doctors of the Jews, and the philosophers of the Gentiles, as not being able to face and withstand the power and wisdom of the Gospel. So here, when the people of God will be recovered from their fright, and be brought out of their low estate, and will have ascended into heaven, or be come into a glorious church state, they will then triumph over their enemies, who will be no more.” Govett likewise has: “Then shall the wisdom and might of the world be scattered, according to the passage of Paul—words, which agree exceedingly well with the scope of this passage: for in that day will it be seen that no counsel can prosper, no wisdom avail, against the design of Jehovah.” The Vulgate, in this case, is most closely associated with Paul. The whole idea here is that none of these things that one might have meditated in error exist anymore—not physical, not intellectual. Barnes wrote: “Where is the scribe? – How soon, how suddenly has he vanished! The word scribe here (ספּר) evidently refers to some prominent class of officers in the Assyrian army. It is from ספּר, to count, to number, to write; and probably refers to a secretary, perhaps a secretary of state or of war, or an inspector-general, who had the charge of reviewing an army 2 Kings 25:19; Jeremiah 37:15; 52:25. Where is the receiver? – Margin ||, as in Hebrew, ‘Weigher.’ ... Probably the word refers to him who weighed the tribute, or the pay of the Soldiers; and means, doubtless, some officer in the army of the [enemy]; probably one whose office it was to have charge of the military chest, and to pay the army. Where is he that counted the towers? – That is, who made an estimate of the strength of Jerusalem ... someone appointed by him to reconnoiter and report on the means which the city had of defense (compare ISAIAH 36:4).” Cheyne wrote, “Made a recognizance of the city to be besieged.” McFadyen, likewise explains that the towers were counted “with a view to attack.” To summarize, Jennings suggests: “The terror is gone forever, and is now but such a matter of memory as gives sweetness to the present peace. Those happy dwellers in that future Jerusalem muse on the time when they were trembling with fear, and ask, ‘What has become of the man who took stock of our goods? Where is he who followed him in taking those goods in the way of taxes? And as to the enemy who rode around our city counting its defensive towers before the attack—where has he gone? All have departed never to return.” Nor would those who taught false doctrines be found—regarding spiritual warfare.

²³ Young, President Brigham. Gathering Of the Saints. Remarks made in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, July 28, 1861. Journal of Discourses 9:137–138.

19 Thou shalt not see a fierce people, a people of a deeper speech than thou canst perceive; of a stammering[✓] tongue, [that thou canst] not understand.

✓ or, ridiculous

The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Thou shalt not be able to see the government of a mighty people, whose language is so unintelligible (Chaldee, ‘deep,’ in the idea of searching after) that thou canst not understand it, whose tongue stammereth, because there is no understanding in them.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Alas! they gave no counsel; nor did they understand him whose voice was so low that a despised people could not hear, and he who heareth hath not knowledge.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “The shameless people thou shalt not see, the people of profound speech: so that thou canst not understand the eloquence of his tongue, in whom there is no wisdom.” In Rain in Due Season: “The LORD shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand” (Deuteronomy 48:49). Now, instead, there would be peace.

20 Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle [that] shall not be taken down; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken.

Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle [that] shall not be taken down. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “O Zion, thou shalt see their fall; O city of our festivals, thine eyes shall see the consolation of Jerusalem in her prosperity and security, like a tabernacle that is not taken (Chaldee, ‘broken’) down.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Behold the city Sion is our salvation. Thine eyes will look upon Jerusalem. It is a rich city composed of tents which should not be shaken.” Instead of quiet habitation, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has rich habitation; instead of be taken down, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has shaken to and fro (Lamsa) / shaken (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, for the second half, “A rich habitation, a tabernacle that cannot be removed.” ¶ Wordsworth explains: “The Church of God is compared to a Tent, extended and fastened by cords, attached to stakes (pegs, or pins of wood), driven into the ground.” Skinner says, “a tent that shall not be removed] i.e. her people shall no more go into exile.”²⁴ Young says, “Travellers in the desert are compelled each morning to pull up their stakes and move their tent. A tent that does not have to be moved is permanent.” Ironside says, “Glorious is the prospect here presented. Jerusalem, so long a city of strife and warfare, will become a peaceful habitation, for the Prince of Peace will dwell there and His law go forth to all the world.” Jerusalem will indeed be one of the two world capitals, with Zion the other. The narrative on the peaceful condition continues where the Saints can look and enjoy the view of Zion, its tabernacles and temples, the places where her solemn assemblies take place, all in peace and quietness—and not in danger of being conquered. This is certainly during the millennium, as no such descriptors will properly fit for long periods of time before then. Horsley says, “Could Jerusalem in the time of Hezekiah be called ‘the quiet habitation, the tabernacle not to be shaken, whose stakes should not be removed for ever, of whose cords not any should be broken,’ when it was destroyed first by the Babylonians, and a second time by the Romans? To suppose that these promises had their accomplishment in the deliverance of the city from Sennacherib, and the prosperity of the remainder of Hezekiah’s reign ... [is to misunderstand the language of prophecy].” ¶ Not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And whose pegs are not drawn out for ever, and whose cords shall not be broken.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Nor should the pins of her tabernacle ever be moved, nor its cords broken.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, for the first clause, “Neither shall the nails thereof be taken away for ever.” Barnes describes it: “The ‘stakes’ here refer to the poles or fixtures which were driven into the ground in order to fasten the tent, to enable them to spread it, or to the small stakes or pins that were driven in the ground in order to secure the cords by which the tent was extended.” Gill says that this verse: “allud[es] to tents and tabernacles made of curtains, fastened by cords to stakes, by which they are supported.” Rawlinson has: “By ‘the stakes’ are meant ‘the tent-pegs,’ to which the ropes are fastened which keep the tent firm.” Kay says, “There shall be no need to move the tent about in search of fresh pasturage, for the site of the New Zion shall be like that of Paradise [with broad rivers and streams].” That the stakes would not ever be removed means that the Church would be safe and established in a sure way. Likewise, the expression neither shall any cords thereof be broken, means that the establishment of Zion would be made sure. We might also say, that these stakes shall never be moved because they also are as ‘a nail in a sure place’ (ISAIAH 22:23b), because they are strengthened by the triumph of the Lord Jesus Christ over sin and death.

²⁴ Skinner points us to an example of the very opposite: “My tabernacle is spoiled, and all my cords are broken: my children are gone forth of me, and they are not: there is none to stretch forth my tent any more, and to set up my curtains” (Jeremiah 10:20).

21 But there the glorious LORD [will be] unto us a place of broad rivers[✓] [and] streams; wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ship pass thereby.

✓ broad of spaces, or, hands

But there the glorious LORD [will be] unto us a place of broad rivers [and] streams. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Yea, surely from thence the power of the Lord shall be revealed, to do good unto us from the place whence overflowing rivers of broad span shall flow (Chaldee, ‘broad of hands,’ or ‘space’).” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Because the name of the Lord is great to you, it shall be to you a place of streams and canals broad and spacious.” The BPE (Ⲯ) has, “Because Yahweh is a glorious name for us; for us He shall be an illuminated place, splendidous and wide.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Because only there our Lord is magnificent: a place of rivers, very broad and spacious streams.” Broad rivers are those who have existed for a long time and generally wind their way with waters that flow slower and quietly, and are great for irrigation of the land. ¶ Simeon writes: “Jerusalem was despised as having no river to protect it ... but God promises that ‘he himself will be to it as a broad and rapid river.’ But it may be said that if, in one view, a river defends a city, in another view it affords means of attacking it to advantage. But God fully obviates this by saying, that he will be such a river as shall not be navigated by vessels, either great or small: yea, that in protecting his Church, he will shew himself to be ‘the glorious,’ the irresistible ‘Jehovah.’” Rawlinson explains that a place of broad rivers may mean: “Of refreshment and spiritual blessing.” Note that broad rivers would not be established, but rather, the Lord would be in place of broad rivers, and would provide the blessings directly. This is also the sense Skinner finds in this verse: “The key to the right understanding of the verse is the rendering instead of (see margin ||²⁵ and cf. Hosea 1:10) for a place of in R.V.” ¶ Wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ship pass thereby.

²⁵ Margin || or RV reads, OR, in the place of broad rivers.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Through which shall not pass the fishermen’s boat, nor the large pinnace²⁶ go through it.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Thou shalt not pass this way; nor shall a galley with oars cross. For my God is great and will not pass me by.” The BPE (Ⲯ) has, “Thus the authority of a prince shall not govern, nor the powerful that may be found shall not transgress upon him.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “No ship with oars shall pass by it, neither shall the great galley pass through it.” Keith says, “A river—even more a broad river—still more a place of broad rivers—is a familiar symbol of beauty and fertility: and a river without the gallant ship, or ship of war, is a symbol of peace: and what these are to a country, Christ will be to Judah during the reign of righteousness on earth.”

22 For the LORD [is] our judge, the LORD [is] our lawgiver,[✓] the LORD [is] our king; he will save us.

✓ statute-maker

The DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲯ) introduces three ands that are not present in the Masoretic text (Ⲯ), וְיְהוָה / וְיְהוָה / וְיְהוָה. That is, “And [the] LORD [is] our lawgiver, and [the] LORD [is] our king; and he will save us.” ¶ For the LORD [is] our judge. The Targum (Ⲯ) adds, “Who by His power brought us out of Egypt.” What great comfort this scripture brings us, to know that it will be Christ who will be our Judge: “O then, my beloved brethren, come unto the Lord, the Holy One. Remember that his paths are righteous. Behold, the way for man is narrow, but it lieth in a straight course before him, and the keeper of the gate is the Holy One of Israel; and he employeth no servant there; and there is none other way save it be by the gate; for he cannot be deceived, for the Lord God is his name” (2 Nephi 9:41). No one but Christ Jesus could balance judgment and mercy. Thus we read: “Seven times a day do I praise thee because of thy righteous judgments” (Psalm 119:164). ¶ The LORD [is] our lawgiver. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The Lord, who is our teacher, who gave us the doctrine of the law from Sinai.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “The Lord our chief.” Not only are the Lord’s judgments perfect, but so are the laws He has given us to guide us back to the Father: “Great peace have they which love thy law: and nothing shall offend them” (Psalm 119:165). The Lord will once again be Israel’s Judge and King.²⁷ ¶ The LORD [is] our king,

²⁶ Stenning’s Ⲯ τρᾶνσλατιον uses “great galley”

²⁷ Andrew F. Ehat noted: “Joseph Smith called ISAIAH 33:22 the political motto of ancient Israel.” Ehat, Andrew F. “It Seems Like Heaven Began on Earth: Joseph Smith and the Constitution of the יְהוָה מֶלֶכְנוּ. When Israel wanted Samuel to anoint a king like all the other nations, she was rejecting the Lord as her King (1 Samuel 8:7; 1 Samuel 10:19a; 1 Samuel 12:17b). Gladly, this would change. See Rain in Due Season introduction as well as notes under ISAIAH 26:4. ¶ He will save us (also see ISAIAH 25:9). The Targum (ⲧ) has, “He will redeem us, and execute for us vengeance of judgment on the host of Gog.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “The Lord will himself save us.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has he is our Savior. Kay writes, “HE—the King—will save us. Cp. Hosea 13:10; Exodus 15:2.” Jesus, ἰησοῦς or יֵשׁוּעָה, is our Savior and Christ, indeed, He will save us, הוּא יִשְׁעֵנוּ.

23 Thy tacklings are loosed; they could not well strengthen their mast, they could not spread the sail: then is the prey of a great spoil divided; the lame take the prey.

✓ or, They have forsaken thy tacklings

Thy tacklings are loosed; they could not well strengthen their mast, they could not spread the sail: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “At that time the people shall be bereft of their strength, and shall be like a ship, whose ropes are broken; neither shall there be strength in their mast, which is cut down, so that it is not possible to spread a sail upon it.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Thy tackling broke, for they had no strength, thy mast gave way. It will not support the sails.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “Thy tacklings are loosed, and they shall be of no strength: thy mast shall be in such condition, that thou shalt not be able to spread the flag.” This verse is a continuation of ISAIAH 33:19 and 33:21, where the impotence of Israel’s enemies is made plain. ¶ Gill explains: “This is spoken to and of the enemies of the church [so that the enemy is] compared to a ship in great distress at sea, when its tacklings are shattered, the mast is split, and the sails cannot be spread. The metaphor is taken and carried on from ISAIAH 33:21, where mention is made of a galley with oars, and a gallant ship.” ¶ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland, in one of my all-time favorite talks, taught: “Parents simply cannot flirt with skepticism or cynicism, then be surprised when their children expand that flirtation into full-blown romance. If in matters of faith and belief children are at risk of being swept downstream by this intellectual current or that cultural rapid, we as their parents must be more certain than ever to hold to anchored, unmistakable moorings clearly recognizable to those of our own household. It won’t help anyone if we go over the edge with them, explaining through the roar of the falls all the way down that we really did know the Church was true and that the keys of the priesthood really were lodged there but we just didn’t want to stifle anyone’s freedom to think otherwise. No, we can hardly expect the children to get to shore safely if the parents don’t seem to know where to anchor their own boat. ISAIAH once used a variation on such imagery when he said of unbelievers, “[Their] tacklings are loosed; they could not ... strengthen their mast, they could not spread the sail.”²⁸ ¶ Then is the prey of a great spoil divided; the lame take the prey. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Then shall the house of Israel divide the treasures of the people, the abundance of spoil and prey; and although the blind and the lame are left among them, they also shall divide the abundance of spoil and prey.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Nor rear a standard until it be delivered up for a spoil; therefore many who are lame will seize the prey.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has a multitude of lame (Lamsa) / many lame (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “Then shall the spoils of much prey be divided: the lame shall take the spoil.” Barnes explains: “The word ‘divided’ here means shall be distributed or apportioned, as plunder was usually among victors. The sense is, that much booty would be taken from the army of the [enemy]. Regarding the last clause, Rawlinson explains that “Even the lame shall have their portion.” It is an expression that the very weakest will be strengthened in the day of the Lord.

24 And the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick: the people that dwell therein [shall be] forgiven [their] iniquity.

The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Henceforth they shall not say to the people which dwell round about them, I shall return to the Shekinah (i.e., ‘I shall not depart henceforward from the Shekinah, hence I shall not say that I shall return to it.’). (From you is come upon us the evil plague.) The people, the house of Israel, shall be gathered together, and they shall return to their land, their sins being forgiven.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “But let not the people who dwell among these say, ‘I am wearied out’ for their sin is forgiven them.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “Neither shall he that is near, say: I am feeble. The people that dwell therein, shall have their iniquity taken away from them.” These words are spoken of regarding the resurrection of the just, when sickness and infirmities, including spiritual ones, will be done away. This is opposite to what we read earlier: “From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, Kingdom of God,” BYU Studies, vol. 20 (1979–1980), Number 3 – Spring 1980, p. 254.

²⁸ Holland, Elder Jeffrey R. “A Prayer for the Children,” General Conference, April 2003.

neither mollified with ointment” (ISAIAH 1:6). Those so blessed as to come forth in the morning of the first resurrection will have had their sins purged. We read: “Bless the LORD, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the LORD, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits: Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; Who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies” (Psalm 103:1–4). Young says, “[Forgiveness of sins] is the heart of the whole matter; the ground for the peace, security, and blessedness that will come upon God’s people.” Keith quotes Jeremiah 50:20, “In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found: for I will pardon them whom I reserve.” Whitehouse says, “A final touch in the picture of the Messianic age. No illness befalls the inhabitant.” The Lord, in his earthly sojourn, cured individuals both of their physical and spiritual ailments.

FIRST POSTED: 25 October 2011

Isaiah 34

The best exegetical aid to ISAIAH 34 and 35 is given in D&C 133. Ibn Ezra explains that this prophecy revolves around the Messianic period, or in other words, it is eschatological. Cheyne suggests that the subject of this chapter “is the Divine judgment upon the world.” Division into kingdoms of glory will be a vital part of that judgment. Govett says: “The opening verses of [ISAIAH 34] are an appeal to ‘ALL NATIONS’ to listen. It is, therefore, some prophecy that concerns the whole world. Therefore it is yet future, since nothing has occurred that at all comes up to the descriptions of the text.” From the Sperry Symposium we read: “The Lord revealed to Isaiah that as the Millennium begins dramatic physical changes will occur on the earth and in the heavens ... It may be that the changes on the earth, of which Isaiah spoke, will cause the heavens to appear to move above the inhabitants of the earth as if the stars in the heavens are actually falling” (The Sperry Symposium Voices of Old Testament Prophets: The 26th Annual Sidney B. Sperry Symposium, p.71). When the earth is moved back into the presence of God, as we discussed in ISAIAH 24:20, these phenomena would be seen under that light (see Brigham Young, JD, 17:143). Principles of Eternal Marriage are laid out. About ISAIAH 34 & 35 Bishop Lowth says: “These two chapters make one distinct prophecy; an entire, regular, and beautiful poem, consisting of two parts: the first containing a denunciation of Divine vengeance against the enemies of the people or church of God; the second describing the flourishing state of the church of God...” Nägelsbach suggests that some of the same sublime language that we find in the second half of Isaiah can be found in these chapters. Nyman suggests that the last two verses of ISAIAH 34 better belong with ISAIAH 35. Perhaps more than the last two, as we shall see, seem to point to the glorious promises to those who abide the highest law, even that of Celestial glory.

vv. 1–8. Our beloved Prophet Joseph Smith encouraged us thus: “When I contemplate the rapidity with which the great and glorious day of the coming of the Son of Man advances, when He shall come to receive His Saints unto Himself, where they shall dwell in His presence, and be crowned with glory and immortality: when I consider that soon the heavens are to be shaken, and the earth tremble and reel to and fro; and that the heavens are to be unfolded as a scroll when it is rolled up; and that every mountain and island are to flee away, I cry out in my heart, What manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness!” (TPJS 29). Elder Wilford Woodruff taught: “Let the Saints read the revelations of God, and they will see that there are important events at our doors. Let us hearken and wake up, and be doing the things required of us. Let the missionaries first get their lamps trimmed and burning, and then go among the people, and go with the Spirit of God and the salvation of the Gospel of Jesus Christ” (JD 4:149a).

1 ¶ COME near, ye nations, to hear; and hearken, ye people: let the earth hear, and all that is therein; [✓] the world, and all things that come forth of it.

✓ the fulness thereof

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “and all that dwell in her” for the last clause. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Attend nations, and hearken ye chiefs. Let the earth hear and the inhabitants thereof—The world and the people who are therein.” Instead of come forth of it, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has dwell in it (Lamsa) / inhabitants (BPE). This reminds us of “Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth: for the LORD hath spoken” (ISAIAH 1:2a). The whole earth or nations (Idumea) and peoples [ⓁⓂⓂ], are invited to hear and heed and turn to God. NASB has, “Draw near, O nations, to hear; and listen, O peoples! Let the earth and all it contains hear, and the world and all that springs from it.” It is as if the Lord is giving us one last chance to become a disciple of Christ, while it is still possible. We are in this earth to find out what it is that we truly love (Alma 41). ¶ President Brigham Young taught: “Men should act upon the principle of righteousness, because it is right, and is a principle which they love to cherish and see practiced by all men. They should love mercy, because of its benevolence, charity, love, clemency, and of all of its lovely attributes, and be inspired thereby to deal justly, fairly, honorably ...”¹ That is, indeed, what repentance is all about. Realizing that wickedness never was happiness (Alma 41:10b). I hear the invitation of a loving Father. It solicitously summons us to partake of the good fruit of the tree of life and lay hold of the plan of happiness. Do you feel the pain of our Father who is pleading with us?

¶ Alexander explains that nations (ⓁⓂⓂ)² and peoples (ⓁⓂⓂ) are “poetical equivalents.” ¶ And fullness,

¹ JD, Vol.1, p.119, Brigham Young, February 27, 1853.

² ⓁⓂⓂ is also translated as gentiles at times.

וּמְלֵאָהּ. Young writes: “Employing language reminiscent of the twenty-fourth Psalm, Isaiah speaks of the earth and ‘its fullness, the world and its issue.’”

¶ And all things that come forth of it, וְכָל-צִמְצָאֵיהָ.

Of this, Henderson writes: “Though צִמְצָאֵים is used in several instances metaphorically of children ... yet is seems here to be employed literally to denote the various productions which spring out of the earth. Whatever exists on the face of the globe is summoned to witness the execution of the Divine wrath.”

Wildberger has: “Mother earth causes young green plants to sprout (וּצְיָא, Genesis 1:12), and the plants that sprout forth from it are thus called the צִמְצָאֵים ([everything] that sprouts).” Gill has, “Which may either be understood of those that dwell in it, as the Targum interprets it; of the people that are in it, as the Septuagint and the Oriental versions; and so the phrase may denote the original of them, being of the earth, earthly, and to which they must return again; and may be designed to humble men, and hide pride from them; or else the fruits of the earth, trees, and everything that spring out of it, which are called upon to hear the voice of the Lord, when men would not; and so is designed to rebuke the stupidity and sluggishness of men to hearken to what is said to them, even from the Lord, when upon the brink of destruction.” ¶ FROM D&C 133:

“HEARKEN, O ye people of my church, saith the Lord your God, and hear the word of the Lord concerning you—The Lord who shall suddenly come to his temple; the Lord who shall come down upon the world with a curse to judgment; yea, upon all the nations that forget God, and upon all the ungodly among you” (D&C 133:1–2)

2 For the indignation of the LORD [is] upon all nations, and [his] fury upon all their armies: he hath utterly destroyed them, he hath delivered them to the slaughter.

The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “For the wrath from before the presence of the Lord is upon all the nations, and the slaughter upon all their hosts: He hath condemned them and delivered them over to the slaughter.” The LXX (Ⓢ) reads, “Because the wrath of the Lord is against all the nations, and his anger against this number of them to destroy them and deliver them up to slaughter.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓢ) has, for the last half, “He hath killed them, and delivered them to slaughter.” ¶ Upon all nations וְכָל-הַגּוֹיִם. Or rather, upon all the nations.

The expression is translated against / upon / with / on all the nations by many including the ABP {LXX (Ⓢ)}, ASV, BBE, Darby, ERV, ESV, GNB, GW, HCSB, ISV, JPS, LITV, NASB, RV, and YLT. Alexander says that כָּל-הַגּוֹיִם “is the strongest expression possible in Hebrew for all nations.” ¶ Destroyed them. The expression הַחֲרִימָם (from the root חָרַם) is quite an interesting one. It is often used in the scriptures of something that is banned or dedicated to the Lord and cannot be redeemed but must be sacrificed or totally destroyed or annihilated. Birks says that this is a curse and the literal rendering of the verse is: “he hath devoted them to a cherem חָרַם,’ or curse of utter destruction.” Several exegetes have pointed out the certainty of its accomplishment rendering it in the prophetic past tense: “he hath utterly destroyed them &c.” The vision is spoken of as if it was already accomplished, for all things are present to the Lord, both future and past and present, in one eternal round. I was asked that if God knew the future, did that not mean that He controlled it and thus we did not have true moral agency. In helping this individual understand, I asked, “Would you say that God controlled your past because He knows your past?” “No, of course not,” came the response. I explicated that God can see the future with the same ease that He can see the past as all things are present unto Him. In latter-day Scripture we read: “The same which knoweth all things, for all things are present before mine eyes” (D&C 38:2); “...where all things for their glory are manifest, past, present, and future, and are continually before the Lord” (D&C 130:7); and “all things are present with me, for I know them all” (Moses 1:6). ¶ FROM D&C 133: “Go ye out from Babylon. Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord. Call your solemn assemblies, and speak often one to another. And let every man call upon the name of the Lord. Yea, verily I say unto you again, the time has come when the voice of the Lord is unto you: Go ye out of Babylon; gather ye out from among the nations, from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other” (D&C 133:5–7).

3 Their slain also shall be cast out, and their stink shall come up out of their carcasses, and the mountains shall be melted with their blood.

The LXX (Ⓢ) reads, “Therefore their wounded and dead shall be cast out, and the stench of them shall ascend; and the mountains shall be drenched with their blood.” Instead of melted, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has drenched (Lamsa) / contaminated (BPE). I cannot help but think that this verse makes allusions to being cast out of the presence of God—so that those who do wickedly will not behold the face of the Lord. Gill notes, “... the great number of the slain upon the mountains, and the great quantity of blood shed there; which should run down in large streams, and carry part of them along with it, as large and hasty showers of rain wash away the earth, and carry it along with them.” Alexander explains: “And their slain shall be cast out. The Hebrew word strictly means their wounded, and is so translated in the Septuagint and some other versions. But usage gives it the specific sense of wounded mortally, and for the most part in battle. Cast out, i.e. unburied. This suggests the several ideas of contemptuous neglect, of a multitude too vast to be interred, and perhaps of survivors too few to perform the duty (compare ISAIAH 14:18–20). They shall not lie unburied merely for a time, but until they rot upon the ground... And their corpses ... their stench shall go up ... With reference to the same revolting circumstance, Lucan calls a battle-field olentes agros (compare Amos 4:10, Joel 2:20).” Delitzsch points us to Ezekiel and the times of Gog and Magog related to the Second Coming: “And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will give unto Gog a place there of graves in Israel, the valley of the passengers on the east of the sea: and it shall stop the noses of the passengers: and there shall they bury Gog and all his multitude: and they shall call it The valley of Hamongog” (Ezekiel 39:11). FROM D&C 133: “Calling upon the name of the Lord day and night, saying: O that thou wouldst rend the heavens, that thou wouldst come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence. And it shall be answered upon their heads; for the presence of the Lord shall be as the melting fire that burneth, and as the fire which causeth the waters to boil. O Lord, thou shalt come down to make thy name known to thine adversaries, and all nations shall tremble at thy presence—When thou doest terrible things, things they look not for; Yea, when thou comest down, and the mountains flow down at thy presence, thou shalt meet him who rejoiceth and worketh righteousness, who remembereth thee in thy ways” (D&C 133:40–44).

4 And all the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll: and all their host shall fall down, as the leaf falleth off from the vine, and as a falling [fig] from the fig tree.

And all the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll: The Targum (ܬ) has, “All the pleasant (or, ‘beloved’) host of heaven shall be dissolved, and they shall be blotted out from beneath the heavens, as it is said concerning them in this book.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “And all the powers of the heavens shall waste away; and the heaven shall be rolled up like a scroll.” The Douay-Rheims (ϣ) has, “And all the host of the heavens shall pine away, and the heavens shall be folded together as a book.” Here is an example where the DSS 1QIsa^a (ϙ) is quite different than the Masoretic text (מ). The latter (מ) reads: “And all [the] host [of] the heavens shall be dissolved,” וְנִמְקוּ כָּל-צְבָא הַשָּׁמַיִם, while the DSS (ϙ) has: “And the valleys shall split and all [the] host [of] the heavens shall fade away,” וְהַעֲמֻקִּים יִתְבַּקְעוּ וְכֹל צְבָא הַשָּׁמַיִם יִבֹּלוּ. The Accordance DSSB–C has fall away (יפול) rather than fade away (Logos). ¶ And all the host of heaven. Victor Ludlow says, “The ‘host of heaven’ could refer either to heavenly bodies (sun, moon, stars, etc.) or to celestial beings (spirits, angels, etc.) in God’s presence... [and relating to the latter] or there will be fewer beings in the Lord’s presence (since his spirit children come to earth to acquire mortal bodies and some do not return to him).” Ludlow is speaking in a permanent returning, for we know that all return at least once to the Father: “Now, concerning the state of the soul between death and the resurrection—Behold, it has been made known unto me by an angel, that the spirits of all men, as soon as they are departed from this mortal body, yea, the spirits of all men, whether they be good or evil, are taken home to that God who gave them life” (Alma 40:11). Yet another possible meaning is that before the final judgment the spirit world will be made empty and dissolved. ¶ And the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll. The Book of Revelation contains these words: “And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled [spoken of the righteous martyrs of the faith]. And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and, lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood; And the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind. And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places” (Revelation 6:11–14). ¶ Scrolling together or scrolling apart? There seems to be two ways of looking at the topic of the scrolls being rolled together as either being scrolled or spread out from the scrolled position: (I.) Alexander says: “The best explanation seems, however, to be that proposed by Pfeiffer in his Dubia Vexata, to wit, that as God is elsewhere described as having stretched out the heavens like a curtain, their destruction or any total change in their appearance would be naturally represented as a rolling up of the expanse.” Cowles likewise explains: “The rolling together of the heavens as a scroll, parchment, or map, is rolled up, is the natural counterpart of the figure which appears both in Psalm 104:2, and in ISAIAH 40:22: ‘That stretcheth out the heavens like a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in.’ Reversing the process to indicate a general dissolution of the frame-work of nature ...”So also Jenour, who writes: “The books of the ancients were written upon dyed skins, or parchment, and when not in use were rolled round a roller, something like large maps in modern times... Of the force of this image, the manner in which maps mounted upon a spring roller are made to coil themselves up, may serve to give us some idea.” Next we see the scroll being extended rather than gathered: (II.) Elder Orson Pratt taught: “The curtain of heaven will be unfolded as a scroll that is rolled up. You know how our great maps are rolled out to expose their contents to the people; and the Lord has said the heavens shall be unfolded as a scroll that is rolled up in unfolded. What will be seen when this takes place? Our Saviour, our Redeemer, will unveil his face. That Being who was born in Bethlehem—that being who has saved the world by offering his own life, how will he appear? Will he come as a common man? or how will he make his appearance? He will appear as a being whose splendour and glory will cause the sun to hide his face with shame.”³ Hoyt W. Brewster suggested: “Following an outpouring of tumultuous events preceding the Second Coming, a period of silence—described as half an hour in length—will occur in heaven ‘and immediately after shall the curtain of heaven be unfolded, as a scroll is unfolded after it is rolled up, and the face of the Lord shall be unveiled’ (D&C 88:95; see also JST, Revelation 6:14; Isa. 34:4). The curtain of heaven is symbolic of the barrier which separates the earth and her inhabitants from the presence of God. Commenting on ISAIAH 34:4, Elder Orson Pratt said: ‘... School children, who are in the habit of seeing maps hung up on the wall, know that they have rollers upon which they are rolled up, and that to expose the face of the maps they are let down. So will the curtain of heaven be unrolled so that the people may gaze upon those celestial beings who will make their appearance in the clouds’ (JD 16:328).”⁴ ¶ Elder Moses Thatcher taught: “When the universe shall roll up like a scroll, the earth melt with fervent heat, and mountains run down like wax, unregenerate man, full of pride, will learn what God hath in reserve for those who hate Him and despise His works. As this earth was cleansed by a literal baptism of water, so will it be purified by a literal baptism of fire, and all the proud and those who love iniquity, will be burned up, even as stubble is consumed by fire. Happy then will ye be if you have been tried as gold in the furnace seven times heated. Better welcome a few trials now, that tend to increase your love of God and of your fellow man, than to go heedlessly like the dumb brute, to the sacrifice. Let us pray only for deliverance from such trials as harden the heart and wither the soul, but not from such as, bearing patiently, testify of integrity. What matters trials, persecutions, scorns, scoffs and contempt so long as we remain true to God, and the covenants we have made with Him and each other? So long as we violate neither these nor our consciences, which should be void of offense, we are safe” (JD 26:211–212). President Brigham Young puts the time of these events at the end of the Millennium: “... for when the Lord Jesus Christ shall be revealed, after the termination of the thousand years’ rest, he will summon the armies of heaven for the conflict, he will come forth in flaming fire, he will descend to execute the mandates of an incensed God, and, amid the thunderings of the wrath of Omnipotence, roll up the heavens as a scroll, and destroy death, and him that has the power of it.”⁵ This dissolving heat seems to take place both at the very end of the Millennium as well as before its commencement. Revelation 16:9 is one example of the dissolving heat associated with the Second Coming; Revelation 20:14 is an example for the final fire as the earth is transformed into its Celestial glory. ¶ The face of the Lord shall be seen by the righteous. We read in the chapter summary for D&C 88:62–73, Draw near unto the Lord, and ye shall see his face.” And in D&C 88:68, “Therefore, sanctify yourselves that your minds become single to God, and the days will come that you shall see him; for he will unveil his face unto you, and it shall be in his own time, and in his own way, and according to his own will.” This seems to be an allusion to both those who have their calling and election made sure⁶ in this life, as well as all of the righteous who will see the Lord in His coming. We also read: “And angels shall fly through the midst of heaven, crying with a loud voice, sounding the trump of God, saying: Prepare ye, prepare ye, O inhabitants of the earth; for the judgment of our God is come. Behold, and lo, the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him. And immediately there shall appear a great sign in heaven, and all people shall see it together. And another angel shall sound his trump, saying: That great church, the mother of abominations, that made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, that persecuteth the saints of God, that shed their blood—she who sitteth upon many waters, and upon the islands of the sea—behold, she is the tares of the earth; she is bound in bundles; her bands are made strong, no man can loose them; therefore, she is ready to be burned. And he shall sound his trump both long and

³ JD, Vol.8, p.51, Orson Pratt, April 8, 1860.

⁴ Hoyt W. Brewster, Jr., Doctrine and Covenants Encyclopedia, p.117.

⁵ JD, Vol.1, p.118, Brigham Young, February 27, 1853 (emphasis added).

⁶ See Elder Marion G. Romney, “Making Our Calling and Election Sure,” October 1965 General Conference.

loud, and all nations shall hear it. And there shall be silence in heaven for the space of half an hour; and immediately after shall the curtain of heaven be unfolded, as a scroll is unfolded after it is rolled up, and the face of the Lord shall be unveiled” (D&C 88:92–95). ¶ And all their host shall fall down, as the leaf falleth off from the vine, and as a falling [fig] from the fig tree. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And all their armies shall come to an end, as the fading leaf from the vine, and as the withering fig from the fig-tree.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And all the stars shall fall like leaves from a vine and as leaves fall from a fig tree.” Instead of falling [fig], the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has premature (Lamsa) / green (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “And from the fig tree,” but not, as a falling [fig]. In D&C the Lord warns us: “Abide ye in the liberty wherewith ye are made free; entangle not yourselves in sin, but let your hands be clean, until the Lord comes. For not many days hence and the earth shall tremble and reel and to fro as a drunken man; and the sun shall hide his face, and shall refuse to give light; and the moon shall be bathed in blood; and the stars shall become exceedingly angry, and shall cast themselves down as a fig that falleth from off a fig-tree” (D&C 88:86–87). FROM D&C 133: “And so great shall be the glory of his presence that the sun shall hide his face in shame, and the moon shall withhold its light, and the stars shall be hurled from their places” (D&C 133:49).

5 For my sword shall be bathed in heaven: behold, it shall come down upon Idumea, and upon the people of my curse, to judgment.

The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Because my sword is revealed in heaven; behold, it shall be uncovered upon Edom, and upon the people which I have condemned to judgment.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “My sword hath drunk deep in the heaven; behold it shall come down on Idumea and on the people justly doomed to destruction.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “For my sword shall be sharpened in heaven; behold, it shall come down upon the Edomites and upon a people that is condemned in judgment.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “For my sword is inebriated in heaven: behold it shall come down upon Idumea, and upon the people of my slaughter unto judgment.” In the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲙ) we have shall be seen, תראה, while the Masoretic text (ⲙ) has shall be bathed, רִיָּתָהּ. Jennings says: “... we shall see another single symbolic representative of all those nations in Edom, which, by its close relation to ‘Adam,’⁷ fits perfectly as a symbolic name for all the nations. It is a fearful picture of bodies unburied, scattered in such numbers that the air is rendered fetid with the stench; and the very mountains are melted by the blood. It is evidently intended to impress the mind with the awful ‘severity of God,’ when He thus arises to judge the earth.” ¶ Gill, speaking about the sword, says: “That is, the sword of the Lord, as it is called in the next verse (ISAIAH 34:6), and it is he that is speaking; it designs the vengeance of the Lord, the punishment he will inflict on the wicked, said to be ‘bathed in heaven,’ because determined and prepared there.” Calvin suggests: “But why does he say that it is in heaven? ... Here the Prophet looks at the ... decree of God, by which he appoints and determines everything before it is executed ...” Similar to things created spiritually before they are created physically. That is, the thought that precedes the action.⁸ ¶ FROM D&C 133: “For he shall make bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations, and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of their God. Wherefore, prepare ye, prepare ye, O my people; sanctify yourselves; gather ye together, O ye people of my church, upon the land of Zion, all you that have not been commanded to tarry [i.e., leave Babylon and go to Zion]” (D&C 133:3–4). Also see D&C 135:45–48; 133:50–51). ¶ Monte S. Nyman points out: “The Lord ... used the language of ISAIAH 34:5 in the preface to the Doctrine and Covenants in referring to the day of his coming (see D&C 1:12–14).”

6 The sword of the LORD is filled with blood, it is made fat with fatness, [and] with the blood of lambs and goats, with the fat of the kidneys of rams: for the LORD hath a sacrifice in Bozrah, and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea.

The sword of the LORD is filled with blood, it is made fat with fatness, [and] with the blood of lambs and goats, with the fat of the kidneys of rams: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “The sword before the presence of the Lord is filled with blood, it is fattened, it is fattened with the blood of kings and rulers, it is fattened with the kidneys of princes.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “The sword of the Lord hath been glutted with blood; it is pampered with suet (Brenton and NETS, ‘fat’)—with the blood of he-goats and lambs, and with the suet (Brenton and NETS, ‘fat’) of goats and rams.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, beginning with the second clause, “It is made thick with the blood of lambs and buck goats, with the blood of rams full of marrow.” Lowth well points us to Ezekiel 39:16–17; and Revelation 19:17–18 (see JST 18a), the great supper of the Lamb, with figures that are very similar. Barnes explains: “With the blood of lambs and goats — These were the animals which were usually offered in sacrifice to God among the Jews. And to speak of a sacrifice was the same as to speak of the offering of rams, lambs, bullocks, etc. Yet it is evident that they denote here the people of Idumea, and that these terms are used to keep up the image of a sacrifice. The idea of sacrifice was always connected with that of slaughter, as the animals were slaughtered before they were offered. So here, the idea is, that there would be a great slaughter in Idumea; that it would be so far of the nature of a sacrifice that they would be devoted to God and to his cause. It is not probable that any particular classes of people are denoted by the different animals mentioned here, as the animals here mentioned include all, or nearly all those usually offered in sacrifice, the expressions denote simply that all classes of people in Idumea would be devoted to the slaughter.” Henderson says: “The idea introduced in the preceding verse is illustrated in this by language borrowed from the slaughter of sacrificial victims—a figure which the prophets frequently employ when setting forth the destruction of a people by war.” Alexander suggests: “The allusion is not to the fatty part of the blood or to the fat combined with it (Gesenius), but to fat and blood as the animal substances offered in sacrifice.” Whitehouse says: “The fat of the kidneys of rams reminds us of Leviticus 3:4, 10, 15.” ¶ For the LORD hath a sacrifice in Bozrah, and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Because there is a slaughter before the Lord in Bozrah, and a great sacrifice in the land of Edom.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Because there is a sacrifice for the Lord in Bosor, and a great slaughter in Idumea.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, instead of sacrifice, victim (victim, Vulgate Ⲳ). Regarding in Bozrah בִּזְרָה, ISBE has: “בִּזְרָה ‘sheepfold.’ The capital of Edom, a city of great antiquity (Genesis 36:33; 1Chronicles 1:44; ISAIAH 34:6; 63:1; Jeremiah 49:13; Amos 1:12). It may be identical with Buseirah, which lies about 7 miles Southwest of Tufleleh, on the main road to Petra.” So, while the Isaiah, as inspired by the Lord, uses an actual place in Edom, the whole world or Idumea is meant—much the same way as when the word is applied to mystic Babylon. Elder McConkie wrote: “In two graphic passages outlining the destructions incident to the Second Coming, Isaiah speaks of the sword of judgment falling upon Idumea or Edom, and in one of them he specifies that the Lord’s garments shall be red as he comes from Bozrah (ISAIAH 34; 63), all of which destructions are confirmed by latter-day revelation (D&C 133), as also is the fact that Idumea is the world.

⁷ That is, אָדָם vs. אֱדוֹם.

⁸ In the case of men, this is why in the Book of Mormon we read about the importance of controlling our thoughts, not just our words and our actions.

(D&C 1:36).”⁹ Some have suggested that those who are not righteous will have to pay for their own sins—and be sacrificed in Bozrah, so to speak. Even after the utmost farthing or sore sufferings have been paid, I cannot imagine that we would be any less dependent on the Savior’s atoning sacrifice if we are to inherit even the least degree of glory in the mansions of our God. At the end, we are fully dependent on the Savior. ¶ FROM D&C 133: “And his voice shall be heard: I have trodden the wine-press alone, and have brought judgment upon all people; and none were with me; And I have trampled them in my fury, and I did tread upon them in mine anger, and their blood have I sprinkled upon my garments, and stained all my raiment; for this was the day of vengeance which was in my heart” (D&C 133:50–51, and again see, D&C 133:3–4).

7 And the unicorns reem [רָאֵם] shall come down with them, and the bullocks with the bulls; and their land shall be soaked with blood, and their dust made fat with fatness.

And the reem shall come down with them, and the bullocks with the bulls. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And the mighty men shall be slain with them, and the rules, and the princes.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Therefore the fatlings shall fall with them, namely the rams and the bulls.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “And unicorns / buffalo (BPE) shall fall with them, and bullocks with the bulls.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “And the unicorns shall go down with them, and the bulls with the mighty.” Rather than the KJV unicorns, the JST has reem, which appears to be a transliteration of the Hebrew רָאֵם, meaning, wild bull. So also YLT, “And come down have reems with them, And bullocks with bulls, And soaked hath been their land from blood, And their dust from fatness is made fat.” Except, just as deer can be singular or plural, so reem in English can stand for the plural or the singular. The Masoretic text (ⲙ) has the plural, רָאֵמִים. Gesenius describes it as: “a wild animal, fierce and untamed, resembling an ox, as a wild ass resembles an ass... possessed of horns, with which it prostrates everything (Deuteronomy), and injures men (Psalm 22:22).” ¶ Calvin says, “I have preferred to follow those who explain it to mean bulls, which it means also in Psalm 50:13, though in this passage the Prophet employs the word bulls to denote metaphorically those who are very strong and powerful.” Whitehouse leads us to an interesting book by Delitzsch, “We know now,” says Delitzsch, “by the cuneiform inscriptions and the pictorial representations on the Assyrian sculptures, that the רָאִים is the Assyrian rimu, that strong-horned, fierce-looking wild bull, skilled in climbing the mountains, whose colossal and formidable likeness was placed by the Assyrian kings before the entrance of their palaces to ward off and terrify the approaching enemy.”¹⁰ ¶ The fact that the Prophet Joseph Smith transliterated the word from the Hebrew (rather than provide a translation) may well mean that this animal, like some mentioned in the Book of Mormon, are no longer known and are extinct. For instance, Cheyne, leaning on a Mr. Houghton and on Delitzsch suggests the reem is an “auroch¹¹ or wild bull [which] is now extinct.” Else, it could be that the animal, such as the Rimu, was not well known. ¶ We have seen elsewhere in Isaiah that sometimes figures are given for different classes of people. Gill writes: “With the lambs, goats, and rams; that is, either the rhinoceros, as some, there being no such creature as the unicorn; or the buffaloes, as others; these ‘shall fall,’ as the Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic versions render it, they shall be slain, as well as the rest; meaning, that along with the common soldiers, and inferior officers, the general officers should fall; and so the Targum, ‘and the mighty shall be slain with them.’” The Geneva Bible Translation Notes likewise suggest: “The mighty and rich will be as well destroyed as the inferiors.” Barnes adds: “Here it represents that portion of the people which was strong, warlike, and hitherto unvanquished, and who regarded themselves as invincible.” Henderson supposes: “According to the Scripture representations, the רָאִים were strong and fierce, and were therefore appropriately used in a figurative sense to denote powerful and formidable enemies, especially those of elevated rank, such as princes or rulers.” No doubt, whatever the precise meaning in terms of animals, those various classes of people who have fought against the Lord and Zion are meant. ¶ And shall come down, יִרְדּוּ. Gill explains it as “Shall be subdued, humbled, destroyed.” Keith writes: “‘Shall come down’ is, ‘shall fall, shall perish.’” HALOT describes יִרְדּוּ as something which flows or runs down a hill or mountain, such as water. Here, it is blood that comes down. So much blood as to melt the mountains [see ISAIAH 34:3, 5]. Alexander has, “To come down in the first clause is by some explained as meaning to come down to the slaughter (Jeremiah 50:27, 51:40); by others to fall or sink under the fatal stroke (Zechariah 11:2).” ¶ And their land shall be soaked with blood, and their dust made fat with fatness. The Targum (ܬ) has, “And their land shall be drunken with their own blood; and their dust made fat with their own fat.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “And the land shall be drenched with blood, and glutted with their suet (Brenton and NETS, ‘fat’).” The Lamsa Peshitta (ܣ) has, “And the land shall be soaked / drunk (BPE) with their blood, and the soil enriched with their fatness.” The Douay-Rheims (ϣ) has ground instead of dust. In other words, the soil would be filled with blood, which was considered ‘fatness’ in relationship to sacrifices. Wildberger explains: “עָפָר does not mean ‘dust’ here, as it normally does elsewhere; the word refers to the fine, loose soil into which moisture could soak quite easily ...”

⁹ Bruce R. McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, 2d ed., p.374.

8 For [it is] the day of the LORD’s vengeance, [and] the year of recompences for the controversy of Zion.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “For it is the day of vengeance before the presence of the Lord; the year of recompense, to take vengeance of judgment on account of the ignominy of Zion.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “For it is the day of the Lord’s vengeance, and the year for a judicial retribution to Sion.” Instead of controversy, the Peshitta (ܣ) has cause. The Douay-Rheims (ϣ) has judgment instead of controversy. Ibn Ezra explains: “This verse shows that the prophecy refers to the Messianic period [although] some believe that it was fulfilled already in the time of Nebuchadnezzar, after the conquest of Zion.” Calvin well says: “What was formerly said about the Edomites must undoubtedly be extended to the enemies of the Church.” ¶ Day of the LORD’s vengeance. Wildberger says: “...the יְהוָה (ל) יוֹם has its roots in the thought world connected with holy war [and ...] a יּוֹם נִקְמָה (day of vengeance)...does not simply suggest that an emotional desire to take vengeance has been quieted but that a balance has been achieved once again, which alone can guarantee that all will be well... Such an explanation is supported by the parallel term שְׁלוּמִים (retribution) ...[punishment] is not an end in itself, but rather the means toward a goal...” ¶ President Brigham Young taught: “Our Heavenly Father does not always reveal to his children the secret workings of his providences, nor does he show them the end from the beginning; for they have to learn to trust in him who has promised to fight our battles, and crown us with victory, if we are faithful as was faithful Abraham. The contest which we have now on hand is chiefly against sin in ourselves ... Then let us fight on, ‘For it is the day of the Lord’s vengeance, and the year of recompences for the controversy of Zion.’ He has commenced it with this, our once happy nation, and he will continue until Jesus shall rule and reign triumphantly in the midst of his Saints, over sin, death, and hell. The Lord is gracious and is waiting for us to purify ourselves, and thus be better prepared to receive the providences of God when he arises to shake terribly the earth, and bring to pass the perfect deliverance of his people. ‘For the Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished.’”¹² Edward Young well says, regarding vengeance נָקָם: “It is not mingled with malice and evil as is the case with human vengeance. It is a quality that in God is divine and praiseworthy and in the execution of which God is honored and glorified.” In the Book of Mormon we read: “For it shall come to pass, saith the Father, that at that day whosoever will not repent and come unto my Beloved Son, them will I cut off from among my people, O house of Israel; And I will execute vengeance and fury upon them, even as upon the heathen, such as they have not heard” (3 Nephi 21:20–21). Rawlinson says: “(compare with ISAIAH 61:2; 63:4) In all three places the ‘day’ of God’s vengeance is contrasted with the ‘year’ of his recompense, to show how infinite is his mercy, how short-lived, comparatively speaking, his anger. Mr. Cheyne well compares the concluding clauses of the second commandment, where ‘retribution is declared to descend to the third and fourth generation, but mercy to the thousandth.’” ¶ Controversy of Zion, לָרִיב צִיּוֹן. Cowles explains: “The original word [controversy, רִיב] is often used for a case litigated in court. So here, the Lord comes down to sit on his throne of judgment and adjudicate the case between his people and their foes.” ¶ FROM D&C 133: “And now the year of my redeemed is come; and they shall mention the loving kindness of their Lord, and all that he has bestowed upon them according to his goodness, and according to his loving kindness, forever and ever” (D&C 133:52).

¹⁰ Delitzsch, Friedrich (1883). The Hebrew language viewed in the light of Assyrian research. Williams and Norgate: London, pp. 6–7.

¹¹ Aurochs: “A species of ox, whose bones are found in gravel and alluvial soil” (Webster’s 1828 dictionary).

vv. 9–17. Destruction of Idumea would be like that of Sodom and Gomorrah and left in total desolation. Wild animals would possess the land. Because we know that the earth will be converted into its paradisiacal glory at the time of the Lord’s Second Coming, instead of wild animals, this may be an allusion to the state of those humans in the spirit world who do not come forth in the first resurrection. There would be a precise line of separation between those who inherit kingdoms of glory, as if separated by a line and plummet. Those who ruled this earth with unrighteousness will no longer have any rule. ISAIAH 34:14–17 seem to follow the same vein, but well may be symbolic of the blessings awaiting those spirits who were disciples of the Lord Jesus Christ and who are to be exalted—who now would have peace, the joy of eternal marriage and whose names would be written in the book of life. Indeed, as HALOT mentions, “the meaning of צִיּוֹן is uncertain” and can even mean inhabitant or dweller and even a ship or vessel! (HAL, Gesenius). Much of translation is based on context, and Isaiah may well have hidden the context from those unholy hands on the Bible.¹³ שָׁעִיר can be associated with rain and fertility (HAL). Likewise, קָרָא usually means call but can also mean cry. In D&C the word cry is used in the Lord’s commandment that we invite others unto Christ. Perhaps, some of the other expressions have been corrupted in the original and certainly my theory cannot be proven. The Lord has commanded the gathering of His disciples and it has been done through the Holy Ghost.

9 ¶ And the streams thereof shall be turned into pitch, and the dust thereof into brimstone, and the land thereof shall become burning pitch.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “And the rivers of Samaria (the Royal Polyglot has כְּחִלְתָּא דְּרוֹמִי, ‘the rivers of Rome’) shall be turned into pitch, and her dust into brimstone, and the land shall become burning pitch.” The LXX (Ϯ) reads, “And its torrents shall be turned into pitch, and its land into sulphur.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has ground instead of dust. Barnes paints a vivid mental picture: “The idea here is, that there would be as great and awful a destruction as if the streams everywhere should become pitch or resin, which would be set on fire, and which would fill the land with flame. This image is very striking, as we may see by supposing the rivers and streams in any land to flow not with water, but with heated pitch, turpentine, or tar, and that this was all suddenly kindled into a flame... The image is evidently taken from the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah (Genesis 19:25–28), an image which is more fully used in reference to the same subject in Jeremiah 49:17–18: ‘And Edom shall be a desolation; ... as in the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the neighbor cities thereof, saith the Lord, no man shall abide there, neither shall a son of man dwell in it.’ The ruin shall be as entire as if all the soil were turned into brimstone, which should be ignited and left burning.” ¶ Cowles

¹³ I have a two-volume book entitled Unholy Hands on the Bible: An Introduction to Textual Criticism. It is clear that such unholy hands began their work centuries before our present Bible was constituted as such, and the corruption does not just come from modern critics.

¹² JD, Vol.11, p.13 – p.14, Brigham Young, 11 December 1864.

suggests: “By a new figure the prophet sets before us Idumea burning after the manner of ancient Sodom, its rivers covered to pitch and its dust to brimstone, and one all-imbosoming¹⁴ conflagration covering the whole land and utterly refusing to be extinguished.” Wade likewise has: “The description that follows (suggestive of a conflagration caused by the ignition of bitumen) was perhaps inspired by the proximity of Edom to the site of Sodom and Gomorrah (see Genesis 19:24): cf 13:19; Jeremiah 49:18.” Faussett points us to a scripture in Rain in Due Season: “And that the whole land thereof is brimstone, and salt, and burning, that it is not sown, nor beareth, nor any grass groweth therein, like the overthrow of Sodom, and Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, which the LORD overthrew in his anger, and in his wrath” (Deuteronomy 29:23).

10 It shall not be quenched night nor day; the smoke thereof shall go up for ever: from generation to generation it shall lie waste; none shall pass through it for ever and ever.

The LXX (6) reads, “And its land shall be like pitch burning day and night, and which shall not be extinguished: for a long time the smoke of it shall ascend. During its generation it shall be desolate.” Alexander writes, “These sublime and fearful images are copied in the book of Revelation (14:10–11), but it does not follow that the copy, though inspired and prophetic, was intended to determine the sense of the original.” Delitzsch has: “The unquenchable fire (for which compare ISAIAH 66:24), and the eternally ascending smoke (cf., Revelation 19:3), prove that the end of all things is referred to. The prophet meant primarily, no doubt, that the punishment announced would fall upon the land of Edom, and within its geographical boundaries; but this particular punishment represented the punishment of all nations, and all men who were Edomitish in their feelings and conduct towards the congregation of Jehovah.” Gill makes allusions to Babylon, “The land shall be no more manured¹⁵ and cultivated, nor the city rebuilt; when Babylon is once fallen, it shall never be raised up again, but always remain desolate (Revelation 18:2).” ¶ Parry, Parry and Peterson well say: “When Christ comes to destroy the world (Edom) at his second coming, the effects of this destruction will last ‘for ever and ever,’ for the world will be renewed and become a paradisiacal sphere during the Millennium. ‘None shall pass through it for ever and ever’ for the same reason—that state of the earth will no longer exist.” In D&C we read: “For, behold, the mystery of godliness, how great is it! For, behold, I am endless, and the punishment which is given from my hand is endless punishment, for Endless is my name. Wherefore—Eternal punishment is God’s punishment. Endless punishment is God’s punishment” (D&C 19:10–12).

¹⁴ Something that is covered. See last acceptance in 1828 Webster.

¹⁵ That is, fertilized.

11 But the cormorant[✓] and the bittern shall possess it; the owl also and the raven shall dwell in it: and he shall stretch out upon it the line of confusion, and the stones of emptiness.

✓ or, pelican

But the cormorant and the bittern shall possess it; the owl also and the raven shall dwell in it: The LXX (6) reads, “And for a long period fowls and porcupines, ibises and crows shall dwell therein.” Regarding the cormorant or עֵרָב, it is translated as raven in Genesis 8:7; Leviticus 11:15; Deuteronomy 14:14; Psalm 147:9; Job 38:41). Oreb עֵרָב is also the name given to one of the princes of the Midianites (see Judges 7:25; 8:3; Psalm 83:11). It is not untypical for Isaiah to give us a figure of wild animals being the only ones left to inhabit what previously was the abode of the prideful in Babylon or Idumea. ¶ As Linda & I visited Jerash, one of the torn down ruins in our 2012 trip to Israel and Jordan, I did see one such example. What had been in its heyday a magnificent Greco-Roman city was now destroyed. A shepherd came through with his goats and these ate grass among the ruins for just a few minutes and then they all moved on. It reminded me of Isaiah’s prophecies. ¶ Yet, this mention of wild animals may well represent those spirits who are not worthy to come forth in the first resurrection but must remain until the resurrection of the unjust. As the wild animals inhabited destroyed Babylon, so now the disobedient continue to inhabit spirit prison until the end of the millennial day. ¶ And he shall stretch out upon it the line of confusion, and the stones of emptiness. The Targum (7) has, “And the line of devastation shall be extended over her, and the plummet of desolation.” The LXX (6) reads, “And over it shall be stretched a line of devastation; and in it the onocentaurs (NETS, ‘donkey-centarus,’ Brenton, ‘satyrs’) shall dwell.” The Peshitta (8) has for the second half, “Line of the sword, and there shall be no rejoicing in it.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “And a line shall be stretched out upon it, to bring it to nothing, and a plummet, unto desolation.” ¶ Confusion ... emptiness קוֹ-תֵהוּ וְאַבְנֵי-בִהוּ. A definite play on words on תֵהוּ וְבִהוּ, “without form, and void” as found in Genesis 1:2. The GNB paraphrase has: “The LORD will make it a barren waste again, as it was before the creation.” HCSB renders it: “The LORD will stretch out a measuring line and a plumb line over her for her destruction and chaos.” The JPS: “He shall stretch over it the line of confusion, and the plummet of emptiness.” Redak and Ibn Ezra (in Rosenberg) believe that while the line and plummet are often used to build, that in this instance they will be used to destroy. So also Gill, “‘He,’ that is, God, as Kimhi interprets it; the allusion is to builders, that make use of the line and plummet, as to build, so to pull down, that they may know what is to be pulled down, and how far they are to go; see 2 Kings 21:13 and hereby it is signified, that as the destruction should be entire, nothing should be left but confusion and emptiness; and all should become ‘tohu’ and ‘bohu,’ [תהו ובהו] ... so likewise that it should be by line and level, by rule and measure; or according to the rules of justice and equity.” Calvin says, “And to make it more clear that this is Isaiah’s natural meaning, we read the same word in the Prophet Malachi, who lived a long time afterwards. That passage may be regarded as an approbation of this prophecy. ‘If Edom shall say, We have been diminished, we shall therefore return and rebuild the desolate places; thus saith the Lord of Hosts, They shall indeed build, but I shall pull down, and they shall call them the borders of wickedness, and the people against whom the Lord is angry for ever. And your eyes shall see, and ye shall say, Let the Lord be magnified on the borders of Israel’ (Malachi 1:4–5). What Isaiah had foretold more obscurely, Malachi explains with greater clearness. The latter declares that ‘the Edomires shall build in vain,’ and the former that ‘they shall stretch an empty cord.’ As if he had said, ‘In vain shall the masterbuilders bestow their exertions on rebuilding the cities;’ for builders make use of cords and plummets in all their measurements. He therefore shews that the efforts of those who shall intend to restore the land of Edom will be fruitless; for his meaning is, that they shall be destroyed in such a manner that they cannot at all recover from that destruction ...” ¶ One gets the impression that once the weight is attached to the line, and the line is dropped, everything is moved or destroyed to make room for the unimpeded passage of the weight upon the line. But beyond that, more than a line that destroys buildings that have to come down, I sense a virtual fence through which there is no passage. Something like the void or gap between the kingdoms of glory. Elder Melvin J. Ballard taught: “The question is often asked, ‘Is it possible for one who attains Telestial Glory in time in the eternal world to live so well that he may graduate from the Telestial and pass into the Terrestrial, and then after a season that he may progress from that and be ultimately worthy of the Celestial Glory?’ That is the query that has been asked, I have just read the answer, so far as the Telestial group is concerned. ‘Where God and Christ dwell they cannot come, worlds without end.’¹⁶ I take it upon the same basis, the same argument likewise applies to the Terrestrial World. Those whose lives have entitled them to Terrestrial Glory can never gain Celestial Glory. One who gains possession of the lowest degree of the Telestial Glory may ultimately arise to the highest degree of that glory, but no provision has been made for promotion from one glory to another.”¹⁷ Elder Orson Pratt taught, “But how about these terrestrial, can they come up into the celestial? No, their intelligence and knowledge have not prepared and adapted them to dwell with those who reign in celestial glory...”¹⁸ Finally, in terms of this line and plummet one also has the sense of exactness and precision within which judgment will take place.

12 They shall call the nobles thereof to the kingdom, but none [shall be] there, and all her princes shall be nothing.

The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “They said, we are the sons of free men, and they were not willing to accept over them a kingly government; and all her princes shall come to nothing.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “The chiefs of it shall be no more; for its kings and its nobles shall be for destruction.” The BPE (Ⓟ) has, “There, they shall not proclaim any kingdom at all, for all their princes shall be for devastation.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “The nobles thereof shall not be there: they shall call rather upon the king, and all the princes thereof shall be nothing.” NASB has: “Its nobles—there is no one there Whom they may proclaim king—And all its princes will be nothing.” JPS offers: “As for her nobles, none shall be there to be called to the kingdom; and all her princes shall be nothing.” Barnes offers a couple of suggestions: “A more correct rendering of this would be, ‘As to the nobles, they shall call them, but there shall be there no kingdom.’ The idea is, that the kingdom would be desolate; there would be no people to rule. Or, there will be no nobles there who shall survive the destruction, and who can undertake the government of the state.” Cowles prefers the AV rendition and explains: “In harmony with the context which represents the land as utterly void of men and peopled only with such animals as dwell in the most dismal solitudes, this verse must be taken as a way of saying, not that there was an actual call from the people to their princes to assume the reins of government, but that there was neither government, princes, nor people to call them.” Calvin states: “To those stately nobles who vaunted themselves so much, he says in mockery, that they shall be princes without subjects.” All this probably means that those who have ruled through abuse of power will have no one to rule in the eternities.

¹⁶ “And they shall be servants of the Most High; but where God and Christ dwell they cannot come, worlds without end” (D&C 76:112).

¹⁷ Ballard, Melvin J. “Three Degrees of Glory,” Discourse pronounced at the Ogden Tabernacle, 22 September 1922, p. 37.

¹⁸ JD, Vol.15, p.323, Orson Pratt, January 19, 1873.

13 And thorns shall come up in her palaces, nettles and brambles in the fortresses thereof: and it shall be an habitation of dragons, [and] a court for owls. ✓

✓ or, ostriches, HEB. daughters of the owl

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And in her palaces shall spring up thorns, and the nettles, and the brambles in their fortified city: and she shall become a habitation for dragons, a place for the daughter of the ostrich.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And in their cities shall spring up brakes; and brambles shall be its fortresses: and they shall be cots for Sirens (NETS, ‘habitation of sirens’), and for the ostrich’s court.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “And thorns and nettles shall grow up in its houses, and the thistle in the fortresses thereof: and it shall be the habitation of dragons, and the pasture of ostriches.” Following the same ideas as ISAIAH 34:11a, only wild beasts shall inhabit what used to be the courts of the mighty and great and spacious buildings of those who mockingly pointed their fingers towards the Lord’s servants (1 Nephi 8:33). After sharing my experience about Jerash, Jordan, above, I read this quote in Barnes about Petra, Jordan, which we also visited: “‘I would,’ says Stephens, when standing amidst the ruins of Petra, the capital of Idumea, and with this passage of Isaiah in his eye, ‘I would that the skeptic could stand as I did, among the ruins of this city among the rocks, and there open the sacred book, and read the words of the inspired penman, written when this desolate place was one of the greatest cities in the world. I see the scoff arrested, his cheek pale, his lip quivering, and his heart quaking with fear, as the ancient city cries out to him in a voice loud and powerful as one risen from the dead; though he would not believe Moses and the prophets, he believes the hand-writing of God himself, in the desolation and eternal ruin around him.’ (Incidents of Travel in Egypt, etc., vol. ii. p. 76.)” Once again, this all seems an allegory for the desolation of the spirit prison.

14 The wild beasts ✓ of the desert shall also meet with the wild beasts of the island, ✓ ✓ and the satyr shall cry to his fellow; the screech owl ✓ ✓ also shall rest there, and find for herself a place of rest.

- ✓ Ziim
- ✓ ✓ Ijim
- ✓ ✓ ✓ or, night monster

FROM D&C 133: [Gospel taken to all the world and from the desert of Utah to the islands of the sea] “Send forth the elders of my church unto the nations which are afar off; unto the islands of the sea; send forth unto foreign lands; call upon all nations, first upon the Gentiles, and then upon the Jews. And behold, and lo, this shall be their cry, and the voice of the Lord unto all people: Go ye forth unto the land of Zion, that the borders of my people may be enlarged, and that her stakes may be strengthened, and that Zion may go forth unto the regions round about. Yea, let the cry go forth among all people: Awake and arise and go forth to meet the Bridegroom; behold and lo, the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him. Prepare yourselves for the great day of the Lord. Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour. Let them, therefore, who are among the Gentiles flee unto Zion. And let them who be of Judah flee unto Jerusalem, unto the mountains of the Lord’s house. Go ye out from among the nations, even from Babylon, from the midst of wickedness, which is spiritual Babylon. But verily, thus saith the Lord, let not your flight be in haste, but let all things be prepared before you; and he that goeth, let him not look back lest sudden destruction shall come upon him. Harken and hear, O ye inhabitants of the earth. Listen, ye elders of my church together, and hear the voice of the Lord; for he calleth upon all men, and he commandeth all men everywhere to repent” (D&C 133:8–16); “And this gospel shall be preached unto every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people. And the servants of God shall go forth, saying with a loud voice: Fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come” (D&C 133:8–16). ¶ Calvin says: “These animals ... it is not fully agreed what is the exact meaning of the Hebrew words; but it would serve no good purpose to give ourselves much uneasiness about them, for it is quite enough if we understand the meaning and design of the Prophet.” The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And there shall meet one another, martens and wild cats, and demons, each shall report with its companion: verily dryads (לילי, ‘night birds’) shall dwell there, and they shall find rest for themselves.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And demons shall meet onocentaurs; and bellow one to the other. Onocentaurs shall there enjoy repose having found for themselves a place of rest.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⓛ) has, “And insane men shall meet in it (BPE, the spirits shall attack each other), and demoniacs (BPE, the evil spirit) shall cry out one to another.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “And demons and monsters shall meet, and the hairy ones shall cry out one to another, there hath the lamia lain down, and found rest for herself.” Ibn Ezra writes: “לילית The screech owl. A bird that flies abroad by night.” Alexander contradicts the view that these animals are related to bad spirits: “Ghosts as well as demons would be wholly out of place in a list of wild and solitary animals.” ¶ A careful reading of verses 14–17 makes it clear that those spoken of here are greatly blessed of the Lord. Verse 13, then, completes the description of what would happen to all the places of habitation representing man’s pride. In ISAIAH 34:14, we have a vital transition—but still using some of the same animal elements—in which the great blessings and felicity that await the righteous are described: mainly peace and eternal marriage. Why would the Prophet do that? The answer is quite simple: he had to hide many precious truths from those who would corrupt the Scriptures. ¶ It seems that the inhabitants of the desert may well represent the Saints who first settled in the desert of Deseret or Utah while those of the islands may represent those growing converts in the islands of the sea and other parts of the world. Did not the pioneers find a place of rest in the desert of Utah? Did not many of the descendants of Lehi find a place of rest in the islands of the sea and in the American continent?

15 There shall the great owl make her nest, and lay, and hatch, and gather under her shadow: there shall the vultures also be gathered, every one with her mate.

The view of the Gentile authors is well summarized by Rawlinson who says: “God, who allots to all the nations of the earth their several countries, has now allotted Idumea to the unclean beasts and birds and reptiles which have been mentioned; henceforth it is formally assigned to them as their habitation. It is throughout to be understood that Idumea stands for the world power, which resists God and will be finally abased and put to shame.” Isaiah often changes topics quickly, however. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And the hedgehog shall make its nest there, and shall breed there; partridges shall chirp in the shady boughs: surely, the vultures shall be gathered thither, every one with her mate.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “There the porcupine hath made its nest; and the land hath safely kept its young. There the deer have assembled and seen each other’s face.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “There hath the ericius had its hole, and brought up its young ones, and hath dug round about, and cherished them in the shadow thereof: thither are the kites gathered together one to another.” ¶ Jennings recognizes that these words speak about marriage but he misses the point completely misquotes the scripture that in the resurrection they “neither marry, nor are given in marriage” (Mark 12:25; Luke 20:35).

¶ Elder Orson Hyde, speaking of these verses quoted by Jennings about marriage suggests that the parties in question were not righteous enough to be sealed.¹⁹ Elder Orson Pratt was of the same opinion and also explained that there are “Those who never received the everlasting covenant of marriage for eternity; those who have not continued in nor received that law with all their hearts, or who, perhaps have fought against it. They become angels. They have no power to increase and extend forth to kingdoms. They have no wives, no husbands, and they are servants to those that sit upon thrones and rule over kingdoms, and are counted worthy of a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. These, no doubt, were the kind of angels Jesus had reference to when speaking to [the Sadducees and Pharisees].”²⁰ Finally, Elder Orson Pratt explained the most important point of all: “In that state they do not marry nor give in marriage. Why? Because marriage is an ordinance that has to be attended to here, and unless it is secured in this life for eternity it cannot be secured in the resurrection, for they neither marry nor are given in marriage there. They do not baptize after the resurrection, they do not confirm and administer the ordinances pertaining to this life after the resurrection. All these things have to be attended to here, then we have a claim to the blessings here and hereafter.”²¹ ¶ Barnes has: “They shall make their nests there; that is, this shall be their secure, undisturbed retreat.” Which of course is true, those who are so greatly blessed in the highest degree of the Celestial Kingdom will be undisturbed. Rawlinson also explains: “Gather under her shadow] i.e. ‘gather her young ones under her.’” Once again, a statement of felicity and peace and non-disturbance. In terms of the animals depicted, there is much disagreement. Her shadow is an emblem of protection.

16 Seek ye out of the book of the LORD, and read the names written therein; no one of these shall fail; none shall want her mate; for my mouth it hath commanded, and his my Spirit it hath gathered them.

Seek ye out of the book of the LORD, and read the names written therein. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “Search ye out the book of the Lord, and seek.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I counted them and there is not one of them lost.” The BPE (Ⓢ) has, “Ponder the book of Yahweh and read.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “Search ye diligently in the book of the Lord, and read.” ¶ Some have focused on the book of the LORD (סֵפֶר יְהוָה) as Scripture. For instance, Faussett explains: “the volume in which the various prophecies and other parts of Scripture began henceforward to be collected together (ISAIAH 30:8; Daniel 9:2).” So also Elder L. Tom Perry taught: “All the standard works of the Church instruct us to read and ponder their sayings. From the Old Testament we read, ‘Seek ye out of the book of the Lord, and read’ (ISAIAH 34:16). From the New Testament, ‘Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me’ (John 5:39). Nephi, in the Book of Mormon, observes, ‘My soul delighteth in the scriptures, and my heart pondereth them, and writeth them for the learning and ... profit of my children’ (2 Nephi 4:15). Counsel from the Pearl of Great Price promises, ‘And whoso treasureth up my word, shall not be deceived’ (JS—M 1:37). And finally, in the Doctrine and Covenants we read: ‘First seek to obtain my word ... Study my word which hath gone forth among the children of men’ (D&C 11:21–22). The scriptures are one of our greatest treasures. They contain God’s instructions to His people from the beginning of time. In a world so full of the doctrines of men, how grateful we are to have a sure anchor on which to build our faith!”²² ¶ Many exegetes have been thrown off by the expression סֵפֶר יְהוָה, book of Jehovah. Such an idea has given commentators much trouble. Whitehouse, leaning on Duhm, says: “Duhm ... declares it to be ‘one of the strangest sentences in all the prophetic writings.’ What is the ‘book’ here meant!” Nägelsbach similarly asks some pointed questions: “But then why does he think this only of this prophecy? Even though elsewhere there is mention of recording single prophecies for the purpose of appealing to them afterwards (ISAIAH 8:1; 30:8), still there is nowhere, beside the present, any mention of an entire book that deserved to be called ‘the book of the LORD.’” Finally, Whitehouse, in 1905, himself comes so very close to the prophetic view found in the JST regarding το βιβλίον της ζωης (the book of life) “... the phrase should be combined with Psalm 139:16. The expression is a bold poetic appeal to search God’s book of fate ...” (emphasis added). The alluded verse in the Psalms reads: “Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being unperfect; and in thy book all my members were written, which in continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them.” Regarding book, TSK for Psalm 139:6 leads us to Revelations 20:12 that makes mention of the book of life as does our own LDS footnotes (these point to Revelation 17:8, also making mention of the book of life). Lange mentions the book of life (even though his translator greatly objects). ¶ The JST gives us the necessary guidance, as it becomes clear that yet another meaning is the book of life. The LDS Bible Dictionary reads in part: “In one sense the book of life is the sum total of one’s thoughts and actions—the record of his life. However, the scriptures indicate that a heavenly record is kept of the faithful, whose names are recorded, as well as an account of their righteous deeds.” In the book of Revelation we read: “He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels” (Revelation 3:5). Alma writes: “And now I say unto you, all you that are desirous to follow the voice of the good shepherd, come ye out from the wicked, and be ye separate, and touch not their unclean things; and behold, their names shall be blotted out, that the names of the wicked shall not be numbered among the names of the righteous, that the word of God may be fulfilled, which saith: The names of the wicked shall not be mingled with the names of my people; For the names of the righteous shall be written in the book of life, and unto them will I grant an inheritance at my right hand” (Alma 5:57–58a). In D&C 128 we have: “And further, I want you to remember that John the Revelator was contemplating this very subject in relation to the dead, when he declared, as you will find recorded in Revelation 20:12—And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. You will discover in this quotation that the books were opened; and another book was opened, which was the book of life; but the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works; consequently, the books spoken of must be the books which contained the record of their works, and refer to the records which are kept on the earth. And the book which was the book of life is the record which is kept in heaven (D&C 128:6–7a). ¶ No one of these shall fail; none shall want their mate. The LDS Old Testament Student Manual has, “Of those whose names are recorded in the heavenly book, ‘no one of these shall fail’ (ISAIAH 34:16). The promise that ‘none shall want [lack] their mate’ (JST, ISAIAH 34:16) is particularly interesting to Latter-day Saints since we know that only through the ordinance of celestial marriage can we have our mate eternally.”²³ The Targum (ܬ) has, “No one of them shall fail, none shall tarry for her mate.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “They have not had occasion to seek each other.” The Lamsa Peshitta (ܣ) has, “No one of these shall fail, none sought for her mate.” The S, as well as the other ancient texts, are closer to the JST than the Masoretic text (מ). The מ has her and the Prophet has corrected this to be their meaning that both men and women who are worthy would not be lacking a mate. Wade (also see Whitehouse) also comes very close to the JST: “The Hebrew is defective and ... should be rendered as there, none shall want her mate.” Calvin says, “Not one of those; that is, of the animals; for the Hebrew writers employ these terms, אִשׁ (ish) and אִשָּׁה, (ishshah,) not only for men and women, but for males and females of any species.” But indeed these very well may have been given to represent precisely husband and wife (אִשׁ וְאִשָּׁה). Regarding the Book of Life the Prophet Joseph Smith taught: “Until we have perfect love we are liable to fall and when we have a testimony that our names are sealed in the Lamb’s book of life we have perfect love and then it is impossible for false Christs to deceive us” (TPJS). ¶ For my mouth it hath commanded, and my Spirit it hath gathered them. For my mouth (פִּי) is the mouth of the Lord, for whom Isaiah speaks through Divine Investiture; and my spirit (רוּחִי) (מ and his spirit רוּחוֹ) is the Spirit of the Holy Ghost. ¶ The Targum (ܬ) has, “For by His Word they shall be gathered together, and by His pleasure they shall be brought together.” The LXX (Θ) reads, “For the Lord hath issued orders to them; and his spirit hath brought them together.” The Lamsa Peshitta (ܣ) has, “But he with his own mouth has commanded, and his spirit it has gathered them.” The BPE (ܣ) has, “But commanded with his mouth, and his Spirit gathered them.” The Douay-Rheims (ܕ) has, “Not one of them was wanting, one hath not sought for the other: for that which proceedeth out of my mouth, he hath commanded, and his spirit it hath gathered them.” Ibn Ezra says: “my mouth: the decrees that come from the mouth of the Lord.” Slotki/Rosenberg make Ibn Ezra’s comment clearer: “The prophet is speaking in the name of God.” Horsley well explains: “For the mouth of Jehovah itself hath commanded, and his Spirit itself hath gathered them.” Henderson also believes it to speak of Jehovah: “הוא [he] is the pronoun used emphatically for הוא, and may therefore admit of פִּי [mouth] in the construct state.” Skinner says, “The change of person is harsh.” It is clear indeed that it is Jehovah who is spoken of here. ¶ Gladly, we have the JST who has it in first person. Isaiah is speaking for Jehovah through Divine Investiture. It is the Spirit of the Lord who invites each person to come unto Christ and to gather with His Church. ¶ FROM D&C 133: “And the graves of the saints shall be opened; and they shall come forth and stand on the right hand of the Lamb, when he shall stand upon Mount Zion, and upon the holy city, the New Jerusalem; and they shall sing the song of the Lamb, day and night forever and ever. And for this cause, that men might be made partakers of the glories which were to be revealed, the Lord sent forth the fulness of his gospel, his everlasting covenant, reasoning in plainness and simplicity—To prepare the weak for those things which are coming on the earth, and for the Lord’s errand in the day when the weak shall confound the wise, and the little one become a strong nation, and two shall put their tens of thousands to flight. And by the weak things of the earth the Lord shall thrash the nations by the power of his Spirit. And for this cause these commandments were given; they were commanded to be kept from the world in the day that they were given, but now are to go forth unto all flesh—And this according to the mind and will of the Lord, who ruleth over all flesh. And unto him that repenteth and sanctifieth himself before the Lord shall be given eternal life” (D&C 133:56–62). Also see again, D&C 133:5–7.

¹⁹ JD, Vol.2, pp.85–86, Orson Hyde, October 6, 1854.

²⁰ JD, Vol.13, p.187, Orson Pratt, October 7, 1869.

²¹ JD, Vol.14, p.243 – p.244, Orson Pratt, August 20, 1871.

²² Perry, Elder L. Tom. Back to Gospel Basics. General Conference, April 1993.

²³ Prophecies of the Dispensation of the fullness of Times, Old Testament Student Manual Kings–Malachi, (1982), 161–69.

17 And he hath I have cast the lot for them, and his hand hath I have divided it unto them by line; they shall possess it for ever; from generation to generation shall they shall dwell therein.

And I have cast the lot for them, and I have divided it unto them by line. The Targum (ܬ) has, “And He by his Word hath cast the lot for them; and by His will He hath divided it unto them by line.” The LXX (Θ) reads, “And he will himself cast the lots for them, his hand hath meted the place for them to feed.” Alexander comments: “An evident allusion to the division of the land of Canaan, both by lot and measuring-line (see Numbers 26:55–56; Joshua 18:4–6.) As Canaan was allotted to Israel, so Edom is allotted to these doleful creatures.” Young says: “... it is His own hand that divides for them by the line. The division will be exact and precise, as it should be, for it has been measured by the measuring line. Inasmuch as God Himself has made the allotment, it cannot be changed by man at will. It is a permanent arrangement which will endure for ever.” Indeed, the JST makes it clear that it is the Lord who is speaking in this verse through Isaiah, once again, through the principle of Divine Investiture. The division of the kingdoms of glory once again seems to be the subject. There will be no mistake made. ¶ They shall possess it for ever; from generation to generation they shall dwell therein. The LXX (Θ) reads, “For a long time you shall inherit it. For generations of generations let them rest therein.” Calvin says: “[for these animals] there hath been granted a secure and permanent habitation, from which they cannot be easily banished or driven out; because God hath allotted it to them as their portion by inheritance ... If he shall be pleased to give us a peaceable habitation for a long time in one place, it will only be by his special favor that we shall dwell there ... Besides, if we acknowledge that a residence in this or that country has been appointed to us by God, we may dwell in it with safety and composure; for if he keeps wild beasts in possession of the place which he has allotted to them, how much more will he preserve men, for whose sake he created heaven, earth, the seas, and all that they contain?" Precisely, if this be an allegory of animals and no humans intended, how much more to humans who have been faithful will the Lord provide an eternal habitation with their beloved spouses and children. Furthermore, the habitations in each of the kingdoms of glory will be forever.

26 October 2011

Isaiah 35

Our 10th Article of Faith teaches: “We believe in the literal gathering of Israel and in the restoration of the Ten Tribes; that Zion (the New Jerusalem) will be built upon the American continent; that Christ will reign personally upon the earth; and, that the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisiacal glory.” A substantial portion of this Article of Faith is covered in ISAIAH 35—and even more so when we consider ISAIAH 35’s parallel text, D&C 133. This glorious chapter of ISAIAH gives the blossoming of the Utah desert as a rose—along with other attendant blessings—as a type of the earth being converted into its paradisiacal glory in the millennium. From Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith: “The land of America is a promised land unto [the descendants of Joseph], and unto it all the tribes of Israel will come, with as many of the Gentiles as shall comply with the requisitions of the new covenant. But the tribe of Judah will return to old Jerusalem. The city of Zion spoken of by David, in the one hundred and second Psalm, will be built upon the land of America, ‘And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads.’ (ISAIAH 35:10); and then they will be delivered from the overflowing scourge that shall pass through the land. But Judah shall obtain deliverance at Jerusalem. See Joel 2:32; ISAIAH 26:20 and 21; Jeremiah 31:12; Psalm 1:5; 10. The testimonies that the Good Shepherd will put forth His own sheep, and lead them out from all nations where they have been scattered in a cloudy and dark day, to Zion, and to Jerusalem; besides many more testimonies which might be brought.” Elder Orson Pratt taught: “I say those who will travel through this Territory [Utah] may see some of the effects of the gathering out of the Saints who have made a covenant with the Lord by sacrifice. If we had gathered together into a country that was well timbered, where we could go out and get a load of fence poles or firewood before breakfast; if we had settled in a country that was not, comparatively a desert, and that was blessed with the rains of heaven, we could no doubt have accomplished far more than we now see. But the Lord purposely led us into this desert to fulfil prophecy.” (Pratt, Elder Orson, JD 15:57–58). Horsley says that this chapter relates to the “final triumph of the Church over the apostate factions.”

vv. 1–4. Simeon writes: “The believer, blessed in himself, make the very place of his residence a blessing; according to that description given of him by the Prophet Ezekiel; ‘I will make them, and the places round about my hill, a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his season¹; there shall be showers of blessings.’² Thus by the power of his Gospel ‘the Lord comforts Zion; he comforts all her waste places; he makes her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the Lord: joy and gladness are found therein, thanksgiving and the voice of melody.’³”

1 ¶ THE wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They that dwell in the wilderness, in a thirsty land, shall rejoice; and those that inhabit the desert shall rejoice, and shall shine as the lilies.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Rejoice, O desert; shout for joy, O thirsty desert and blossom like a lily.” Instead of rose, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has crocus (Lamsa) / azafrán

¹ Rain in Due Season, Leviticus 26:4.

² Ezekiel 34:26.

³ ISAIAH 51:3.

(BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “The land that was desolate and impassable shall be glad, and the wilderness shall rejoice, and shall flourish like the lily.”

Alexander says of the rose, רֹז, “[It is best to retain] the English word rose, as more familiar and a conveying a more striking image of beauty. The poetry, if not the botany, of this translation is superior ...”

¶ The wilderness or desert, in Hebrew, עֲרָבָה Arabah.

Gill observes: “... the church, in the wilderness, being obliged to fly there from the persecution of antichrist.” If we take antichrist as also a type for all who persecute the Saints, this statement is certainly correct about the Latter-day Saint pioneers who suffered horrible persecutions as they were driven to into the wilderness.

¶ Glad for them, יִשְׂשׁוּם. Probably those who were driven to the desert. The desert is glad for those who have driven to the עֲרָבָה. Of this verse, Rawlinson says: “The highest resources of the poetic art are called in to give some idea of the glory and happiness of the final Church of the redeemed.” ¶ In D&C we read that the blossoming is both related to the land as well as to the Lamanites uniting themselves with the Church—and that all of this would happen before the Second Coming: “Wherefore, be not deceived, but continue in steadfastness, looking forth for the heavens to be shaken, and the earth to tremble and to reel to and fro as a drunken man, and for the valleys to be exalted, and for the mountains to be made low, and for the rough places to become smooth—and all this when the angel shall sound his trumpet. But before the great day of the Lord shall come, Jacob shall flourish in the wilderness, and the Lamanites shall blossom as the rose. Zion shall flourish upon the hills and rejoice upon the mountains, and shall be assembled together unto the place which I have appointed” (D&C 49:23–25). Joseph Smith the Prophet said: “One of most important points in the faith of the Church of the Latter Day Saints, through the fullness of the everlasting Gospel, is the gathering of Israel (of whom the Lamanites constitute a part)—that happy time when Jacob shall go up to the house of the Lord, to worship Him in spirit and in truth, to live in holiness; when the Lord will restore his judges as at the first, and His counselors as at the beginning; when every man may sit under his own vine and fig tree, and there will be none to molest or make afraid; when He will turn to them a pure language, and the earth will be filled with sacred knowledge, as the waters cover the great deep; when it shall no longer be said, the Lord lives that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt, but the Lord lives that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither He has driven them.”⁴ Elder J. Thomas Fyans spoke about prophecies about the Lamanites flourishing as a rose and quoted several LDS prophets, including President Kimball, whose love for the descendants of the Lamanites was unsurpassed: “Now may we consider the book of revelations of today as shared with us by the present prophet, President Spencer W. Kimball: ‘The Lamanites must rise in majesty and power’ (Conference Reports, Oct. 1947, p. 22). This prophetic statement was made on October 3, 1947, when in Central America we had fewer than 100 members and in that great land of Mexico fewer than 5,000, half of whom were in the Mormon colonies. ‘The Lamanites must rise in majesty,’ I repeat. The fewer than 100 in Central America when these prophetic words were uttered has blossomed into more than 40,000 as of today. From the fewer than 5,000 in Mexico at that time, a rich harvest of over 150,000 stand tall in the field white already to harvest; the total membership of 1947 but represents harvest of a pair of months today. To continue the statement of President Kimball, ‘We must look forward to the day . . . when they shall have economic security, culture, refinement, and education; when they shall be operating farms and businesses and industries and shall be occupied in the professions and in teaching’ (Ibid). When these words reached our ears in 1947 it wouldn’t have required the fingers of one hand to number the professional people in the Church in Mexico and Central America—or the number of cars owned or the number of homes with modern conveniences.”⁵ Much the same could be said of Chile, when at the time of my conversion we mostly met in homes and there were few members or chapels. Elder LeGrand Richards said about this verse, “[Isaiah, regarding Utah] saw our irrigation system. He saw our people come and sing in the heights of Zion. He saw the reservoirs in the mountains that would cause the waters to be impounded and flow down and make these valleys blossom as the rose.”⁶ In 1944 Elder Samuel O. Bennion spoke of his ancestors who came to Utah moved by their unmovable faith and testimony in Christ and were greeted with desolate and arid desert conditions: “The same soil that is here now was here then, but it was barren. But the Lord had said through His prophet, Isaiah, centuries before: ‘The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: . . . they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God’ (ISAIAH 35:1–2) . . . The Lord put those words into his mouth, and he delivered that scripture, and this has become now one of the greatest gardens of the earth.”⁷ ¶ President Ezra Taft Benson loved ISAIAH 35:1 and also applied it to Israel herself: “The greatest advancements of all were being made in agriculture. The deserts and hills were blossoming, becoming green and productive again. Hills on either side of Galilee, for generations denuded and eroded, were being covered with forest trees and citrus and olive groves.”⁸ ¶ Millennial fulfillment. Beside the fulfillment of these prophecies regarding the deserts of Utah, as well as those of Israel, the day will come when the whole earth shall be filled with its paradisiacal glory. Interestingly, our tour guide in Jordan (Edom in ancient times) told Linda & me, “This is good soil we have in Jordan, the only thing we need for it to be fertile is water.”

2 It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon, they shall see the glory of the LORD, [and] the excellency of our God.

⁵ Fyans, Elder J. Thomas. “The Lamanites Must Rise in Majesty and Power,” April 1976 General Conference.

⁶ Elder LeGrand Richards, 1960. Brigham Young University Speeches of the Year. Provo, Utah: Brigham Young University Press.

⁷ Elder Samuel O. Bennion, General Conference, October 1944, pp. 65–66.

⁸ Benson, Ezra Taft. The Teachings of Ezra Taft Benson. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1988.

⁴ History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 2:357.

It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They shall greatly rejoice and be glad, yea, with joy and gladness.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Let the deserts of Jordan also bloom and rejoice.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) has, “It shall rejoice like a mountain goat.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “It shall jump for joy like a mountain goat.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “It shall bud forth and blossom, and shall rejoice with joy and praise.” In ISAIAH 55:12 we likewise read: “For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands.” Rawlinson explains: “It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing; rather, with dancing and singing. Dancing and singing were the ordinary manifestations of religions joy.” ¶ The glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The glory of Lebanon shall be given unto them; the splendour of Carmel and Sharon.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “To it hath been given the glory of Lebanon and the honour of Charnel.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “The glory of Libanus is given to it: the beauty of Carmel, and Saron.” Birks has, “In ISAIAH 33:9, the Assyrian ravages are described by the wasting of Lebanon, Sharon, Bashan, and Cannel. Here the picture is reversed. Lebanon, Carmel, Sharon, resume their excellency and glory; and it will be shared by the wilderness, the desert, and the solitary place.” Jennings says: “... now the very desert ‘laughs with abundance,’ for fertility and beauty of the earth are poetically its laughter of joy; and the greater its fertility the greater the joy of which it speaks. Every word that can express delight is called on for its contribution; and when these may be exhausted, Lebanon must add its majestic glory, Carmel its beauty, and the flowery plain of Sharon its loveliness. But these are but attendants on Jehovah, whose glory and beauty outshine all.” Ironside well says: “Every fruitful field or orchard, every lovely garden, presents a foretaste of what in Messiah’s day will be everywhere prevalent, when the parched deserts will give place to verdant meadows, and the thorns and thistles brought in by the curse will vanish, and trees and shrubs bearing fruits to appeal to the appetite and flowers to the eye, will spring up instead.” Some have wished to assign allegorical symbols to these beautiful places. Alexander says: “The figures here employed are so familiar, and in their obvious meanings so expressive, that we only weaken their effect by treating them as symbols or an allegory.” Gill says: “A redundancy of words, to express the very flourishing estate of the church, and the great joy there shall be on that occasion, as well as because of the destruction of their enemies, and deliverance from them.” ¶ They shall see the glory of the LORD, [and] the excellency of our God. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The house of Israel to whom these things are promised, they, they shall see the glory of the Lord, the beauty (or, ‘praise’) of our God.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And my people shall see the glory of the Lord, and the majesty of our God.” The Peshitta (Ⲥ) adds a clause to the end, after the excellency of our God, something like, “There shall be admonition and comfort for the weak, for a Saviour shall come to save them.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “They shall see the glory of the Lord, and the beauty of our God.” The Targum (Ⲯ) puts a special emphasis on the house of Israel and the modern Church is certainly of Israel, beginning with Ephraim, whose job it will be to search out the rest of the tribes. The various Jewish encyclopedias have some interesting comments on the subject. For instance, The Jewish Encyclopedia has: “As a large number of prophecies relate to the return of ‘Israel’ to the Holy Land, believers in the literal inspiration of the Scriptures have always labored under a difficulty in regard to the continued existence of the tribes of Israel, with the exception of those of Judah and Levi (or Benjamin), which returned with Ezra and Nehemiah. If the Ten Tribes have ... not disappeared, obviously they must exist under a different name. The numerous attempts at identification that have been made constitute some of the most remarkable curiosities of literature ... In the Apocrypha it is presumed that the Ten Tribes still exist as tribes. Thus Tobit is stated to be of the tribe of Naphtali, and the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs assume their continuous existence. In the Fourth Book of Ezra (13:39–45) it is declared that the Ten Tribes were carried by Hosea, king in the time of Shalmaneser, to the Euphrates, at the narrow passages of the river, whence they went on for a journey of a year and a half to a place called Arzareth.”⁹ Israel, indeed, shall see the glory of the Lord in the latter-days, as was manifested in the Kirtland Temple and has and will be manifested in the Lord’s temples around the world and even outside of them. About this verse Victor Ludlow wrote: “Note how Isaiah transferred the glory and excellency of these areas [Lebanon, Carmel, Sharon] over to the Lord in the second half of the verse.” So also Wildberger who writes: “In the final analysis, the main point is not that the desert will be clothed in majesty, but that Yahweh’s, our God’s, כבוד (majesty) and הדר (splendor) will be seen.”

3 Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has the prophet saying these things. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Be strong ye hands which are feeble, and ye knees which are without strength.”

⁹ The Jewish Encyclopedia 12:249.

Instead of confirm, the Peshitta (ܣ) has make firm (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (V) has feeble instead of its synonym, weak. According to Rashi (in Rosenberg): “All the prophets who brought tidings of salvation consoled Israel and strengthened their weak hands. The word is in the intensive conjugation, and its meaning is the causative, i.e., strengthen others.” This reminds us of the injunction: “when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren” (Luke 22:32b). According to Ibn Ezra, most of the Jewish exegetes believe this to be of the Messianic period. Throughout this chapter, Alexander well recommends that we avoid exclusive meanings. For instance, these words, says Alexander, can equally profit us as applied to self-strengthening as to strengthening others. Alexander suggests that the Targum (ܬ) addresses “spiritual weakness or inability to do God’s will.” None of my Targum or Chaldee translations offers such a translation.¹⁰ Delitzsch says: “Those who have become weak in faith, hopeless and despairing.” Elder Marvin J. Ashton taught: “Early on, I assumed ‘feeble knees’ meant weak or exhausted. However, the context of its use in Isaiah (see ISAIAH 35:3–4) suggests that it may have a somewhat richer meaning, something more like fearful. I actually favor this latter interpretation. Today we often hear such expressions as ‘weak in the knees’ or ‘knocking knees’ to denote fear. In D&C 81:5, the verse might be interpreted as the Lord’s urging Frederick G. Williams to provide strength to the weak (‘succor the weak’), to provide encouragement to those who are exhausted or discouraged (‘lift up the hands which hang down’), and to give courage and strength to those with feeble knees and fearful hearts. Today, almost 160 years later, there is no doubt in my mind that the admonition to strengthen feeble knees is more apropos than ever. Who among us has not experienced feeble knees or fear and uncertainty¹¹ over the responsibilities we encounter in this mortal existence? ... It would seem that no one escapes some uncertainty, insecurity, doubt, and even fear. This mortal existence is invariably challenging and unpredictable. Life is never easy, and we cannot escape our own case of feeble knees from time to time. It is thus essential that we love and support one another.”¹² Likewise, Elder Franklin D. Richards explained that this is a call to trust God and “[Speak] comforting words to the Saints saying: ‘Dear brother, thy God reigneth, trust in him.’ Notwithstanding all that we see on the right hand and on the left, and all that we hear, the Lord God has not forgotten His people...”¹³ Elder Penrose also taught: “... every man called to hold this priesthood should be a minister of salvation in the midst of the earth. If he is not called to minister abroad in the world, he can be a minister of peace and righteousness at home; he can strengthen the weak hands and confirm the feeble knees, and drive away doubt from the skeptical mind; bear testimony to the truth which he has received and understands, and wherever he goes he can carry the Spirit and blessing of God that will build the people together, and thus help to build up the kingdom of God. And he will not spread contention or encourage any spirit which would prompt men to speak evil of each other; he will not encourage anything that savors of contention and strife and disunion, but, on the contrary, will encourage all that tends to unite the people together. And any man holding the priesthood has power to do that much in the sphere which he is called to occupy. And also of speaking a word in due season, and of standing in his calling and of being a representative of the Most High God.”¹⁴ President Gordon B. Hinckley tenderly taught: “Be strong, my brethren, in the quality of mercy. It is easy to be a bully in one’s home, in one’s business, in one’s speech and acts. This sick world so cries out for kindness and love and mercy. These virtues become an expression of strength rather than weakness on the part of any holder of the priesthood of God. Be strong with that strength of which Isaiah speaks when he said, ‘Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompence; he will come and save you.’”¹⁵ President Joseph F. Smith taught: “Leaders of the Church, then, should be men not easily discouraged, not without hope, and not given to forebodings of all sorts of evils to come. Above all things the leaders of the people should never disseminate a spirit of gloom in the hearts of the people ... It is a matter of the greatest importance that the people be educated to appreciate and cultivate the bright side of life rather than to permit its darkness and shadows to hover over them. In order to successfully overcome anxieties in reference to questions that require time for their solution, an absolute faith and confidence in God and in the triumph of his work are

¹⁰ Pauli’s (ܬ) translation has: “The prophet said: Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm ye the feeble knees.”

אָמַר נְבִיא תְּקִיפוּ יָדַי וְרַכְּבוּן דְּרַעְלָן חֲסִינִי

¹¹ Before my son David Marsing Billikopf died, I asked of him a son’s blessing. Even though he used different words this was basically the injunction with which the Lord blessed me, through my son’s mouth, in regards to my comforting the rest of the family after his departure.

¹² Ashton, Elder Marvin, J. “Strengthen the Feeble Knees” General Conference, October 1991.

¹³ JD, Vol.26, p.100, Franklin D. Richards, January 18th, 1885.

¹⁴ JD, Vol.21, p.49 – p.50, Charles W. Penrose, November 29th, 1879.

¹⁵ President Gordon B. Hinckley, Building Your Tabernacle, Ensign (CR), November 1992, p.50. Similarly, see President Gordon B. Hinckley, Let Love Be the Lodestar of Your Life, Ensign (CR), May 1989, p.65.

essential ... Clouds, threatening storms, frequently rise in the horizon of life and pass by as speedily as they came, so the problems and difficulties and dangers that beset us are not always met and solved, nor overcome by our individual effort nor by our efforts collectively ... In leaders undue impatience and a gloomy mind are almost unpardonable, and it sometimes takes almost as much courage to wait as to act. It is to be hoped, then, that the leaders of God's people, and the people themselves, will not feel that they must have at once a solution of every question that arises to disturb the even tenor of their way."¹⁶

4 Say to them [that are] of a fearful[✓] heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come [with] vengeance, [even] God [with] a recompence; he will come and save you.

✓ hasty

Say to them [that are] of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Say ye to the fearful of heart that they may keep the law." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "Take comfort ye who are faint hearted; take courage, be not terrified." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, "Say to the fainthearted: Take courage, and fear not." As mentioned by Nägelsbach, "The words 'be strong, fear not' are evidently borrowed from Deuteronomy 31:6." There we have חֲזָקוּ אֶל-תִּירָאוֹ. Here we similarly have: "חֲזָקוּ אֶל-תִּירָאוֹ". The reference to Deuteronomy is one of my favorite scriptures: "Be strong and of a good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them: for the LORD thy God, he it is that doth go with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee" (Deuteronomy 31:6). Also see Deuteronomy 31:8, "And the LORD, he it is that doth go before thee; he will be with thee, he will not fail thee, neither forsake thee: fear not [לֹא תִירָא], neither be dismayed." Whitehouse suggests: "For fearful heart a stronger rendering, 'panic-stricken (or agonized) in mind,' should be substituted." Indeed, for לִנְמִתְרִי-לֵב one could say someone of hurried heart or whose heart beats quickly. Gill says: "Or, 'hasty of heart'; are at once for flying from the enemy; 'hasty' in drawing black conclusions upon themselves and their state; 'inconsiderate' of the promises made unto them." Barnes says: "Of a timid, pusillanimous¹⁷ heart; those who tremble before their enemies." Wade says "the despondent and anxious." Likewise, Alexander, leaning on Clericus, prefers to focus on hasty and thus "impatient of delay in the execution of God's promises." Birks says, "Fear and precipitance are near allied. True Christian courage arises from calm reflection on the promises of God, while a weak faith is soon discouraged by seasons of delay."¹⁸ ¶ Behold, your God will come [with] vengeance, [even] God [with] a recompence; he will come and save you. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Be ye strong, and fear ye not: behold, your God shall be revealed to take vengeance of judgment: the Lord of retributions, the Lord shall be revealed, and He shall save you." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "Behold our God retributeth judgment; he will indeed make retribution—he himself will come and save us." The Peshitta (Ⲫ) renders it something like, "Your God the avenger is coming, even God the Saviour will come and save you." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, "Behold your God will bring the revenge of recompense: God himself will come and will save you." ¶ Elder Orson Pratt taught: "But the people who are to be gathered together, and for whom the desert is to rejoice, are called upon not to fear—'Don't be faint-hearted, don't be discouraged.' Says the Prophet, 'Be strong, fear not, for behold your God will come with vengeance; he will come with a recompence and he will save you,' that is, you who are in the desert. Then there will be splendid miracles wrought again, as in ancient days. Then the eyes of the blind are to be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped; then 'shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing, for in the wilderness shall waters break out and streams in the desert.'"¹⁹ Also, Elder Orson Pratt, after quoting ISAIAH 35:3–4, said: "That has never been fulfilled; but preparatory to the time when God will come with vengeance to sweep away wickedness from the face of the earth, the house of Israel will be gathered back to their own lands, and the people of God will be permitted to dwell in the wilderness, and that wilderness will become a fruitful field. It is even said that the desert should rejoice because of those who are gathered, and should blossom as the rose."²⁰ ¶ Regarding vengeance, Barnes says: "God would take vengeance on all their enemies, and would bring them complete and final deliverance." ¶ Behold your God (וְיִשַׁעְכֶּם) ... and save you (וְיִשַׁעְכֶּם). Alexander suggests that this expression may well be an exclamation and then goes on to say, "Calovius alleges that the name of Jesus is expressly mentioned, being included in the verb יִשַׁע."²¹ The words are really a

¹⁶ Juvenile Instructor, Vol. 38, p. 339, 1903, in Joseph F. Smith, Gospel Doctrine: Selections from the Sermons and Writings of Joseph F. Smith, compiled by John A. Widtsoe, p.155–156.

¹⁷ Webster: "Lacking courage and resolution."

¹⁸ See 1Samuel 13:8 ff.

¹⁹ JD, Vol.15, p.58, Orson Pratt, December 18, 1870.

²⁰ JD, Vol.18, p.142, Orson Pratt, August 30, 1875.

²¹ יִשַׁעְכֶּם

promise of deliverance of God's people, and include, as the most important part of their contents, the unspeakable gift of Christ and his salvation."

¶ Recompense. Gill says, "... both to the wicked a just recompence of reward or punishment for their sins, it being just with him to recompense tribulation to them that trouble his people; and to the saints, the time of his spiritual reign being the time, as to destroy them that destroy the earth, so to give a reward to his servants the prophets, and to the saints, and to them that fear his name, Revelation 11:18."

vv. 5–10. Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught: "Messianic prophecies foretold that Jesus would work mighty miracles, heal the sick, raise the dead, cause the lame to walk, 'the blind to receive their sight,' and the deaf to hear, and that he would cure all manner of diseases (Mosiah 3:5). Isaiah, speaking more particularly of the great millennial coming, but also in part of our Lord's first advent, said: 'Your God will come ... Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing' (ISAIAH 35:4–6.)."²² In John 14:12a we read: "Verily, verily, I say unto you," the Savior taught. "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do." Ironside wrote: "To some extent these [healing] signs followed the preaching of His apostles who could say with authority to the lame and helpless, 'In the name of Jesus Christ rise up and walk,' and whose shadow at times had healing power. All of these wonders were but foretastes of what shall be everywhere prevalent in millennial days."

¶ President Kimball, after reading Mark 16:15–18, testified: "The Lord was promulgating an eternal principle that where his priesthood was and where faith was found, there would be the signs of power, not for show but for a blessing to the people. This eternal principle was understood by the disciples of the Lord in early days. James said: 'Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up ... The effectual prayer of a righteous man availeth much' (James 5:14–16). When John the Baptist, languishing in prison, sent messengers to the Lord to inquire, 'Art thou he that should come or do we look for another?' (Matthew 11:3), the Lord's answer relayed back was, 'Go and shew John again those things which ye do hear and see; The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them' (Matthew 11:4–5) ... Let not the skeptic disturb your faith in these miraculous healings. They are numerous. They are sacred. Many volumes would not hold them. They are simple and complex. They are gradual, and they are instantaneous. They are a reality."²³ ¶ FROM D&C 133: "Wherefore, prepare ye, prepare ye, O my people; sanctify yourselves; gather ye together, O ye people of my church, upon the land of Zion, all you that have not been commanded to tarry" (D&C 133:4). Also see again, D&C 133:23–27, 29–32.

5 ¶ Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped.

The Targum (Ⲛ) has, "Then the eyes of Israel shall be opened, which were blind to the law, and their ears, which were as of the deaf, shall hear and receive the words of the prophets." The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "Then shall be opened the eyes of the blind; and the ears of the deaf will hear." Beside the physical manifestations among the infirm, there is a vital spiritual side, too. In ISAIAH 32:3 we read: "And the eyes of them that see shall not be dim, and the ears of them that hear shall hearken." Through the study of the Scriptures, including the Book of Mormon and the Bible would can have our own spiritual eyes and ears opened.

6 Then shall the lame [man] leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert.

Then shall the lame [man] leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: The Targum (Ⲛ) has, "Then when they shall see the captives of Israel gathered to go up to their own land as the swift harts, and not tarry, they shall sing with their tongue which has been tied." The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "Then will the lame bound like a hart; and the stammering tongue will speak plain." Instead of sing, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has be loosed (Lamsa) / talk (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, for the second half, "And the tongue of the dumb shall be free."

Regarding hart (ⲙⲁⲣⲓ), Barnes says: "The word used here denotes the stag, or male deer. In Arabic it denotes the wild, or mountain-goat. The word sometimes refers to any species of deer or antelope, and this is referred to here from its quick and sprightly nature." Regarding lame ⲙⲁⲣⲓⲙⲁⲣⲓ, Kay, in his usual brilliance, notes: "the lame]"—who had gone 'limping on two opinions'

²² Bruce R. McConkie, Doctrinal New Testament Commentary, 1:319.

²³ Kimball, President Spencer W. President Kimball Speaks Out on Administration to the Sick. New Era, 1981.

([פְּסָחִים עַל־שָׂתִי הַסְעָפִים] 1 Kings 18:21). He should now have his ‘way perfect,’ his ‘feet like hinds’ feet’ (Psalm 18:32–33).” ¶ Elder Jedediah M. Grant powerfully testified: “I want to bear my testimony, that mine eyes have seen the sick healed in the way the Gospel recommends; I have seen the ears of the deaf opened, and they have heard; I have seen the lame man walk, and leap like a hart; and I have seen others rise up suddenly from their sick bed, healed of a consuming fever. In Montrose, near Nauvoo, hundreds of families were sick nigh unto death, and some were given up to die. The Prophet Joseph Smith took some of the Elders with him, and went over there, and said to the sick, ‘I command you, in the name of the Lord God, to rise up and walk.’ And he went from house to house, and made every man, woman, and child to walk, and they followed him to the next sick family, and they are witnesses here to testify to it ...”²⁴ President Brigham Young also testified of many of these same things, and said: “I am here to testify in the name of the God of Israel that for many years past there have been men travelling through the length and breadth of the earth who possess the same power and authority as that with which Jesus endowed his Apostles when he told them to go into all the world and ‘preach the Gospel to every creature, and he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned, and these signs shall follow them that believe. In my name they shall cast out devils, heal the sick, speak with new tongues,’ &c. ... The eyes of the blind have been opened and the ears of the deaf unstopped; the lame have been made to leap, and foul spirits have been cast out. Has this been the case in every instance? Not by any means, neither was it in the days of the Savior. They who have faith receive these blessings if they live according to the spirit of the holy Gospel.”²⁵ I add my solemn witness that these things are true, for I have been a partaker thereof and know these blessings are just as much manifested among the Saints today, as they were when the Messiah walked upon the earth. Right before leaving for Uganda, my anxiety level was high and I had severe muscle spasms in my back (I injured it originally while I was working on a horse farm in Napa, California, and from time to time I have back problems). Through the power of the Melchizedek priesthood and in the name of Christ I was blessed. I got up to thank the priesthood holder and only a few minutes later did I realize that the healing had been instant—the possibility of which had never crossed my mind.²⁶ ¶ For in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Because then the waters shall gush forth in the wilderness, and rivers in the plain.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Because water is burst forth in the desert, and torrents in a thirsty land.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲛ) has, “For waters are broken out in the desert, and streams in the wilderness.” Ibn Ezra suggests that this water plenty is in contrast to Lamentations 4:4, where “The tongue of the sucking child cleaveth to the roof of his mouth for thirst.” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt explained: “But with regard to the wilderness that is here spoken of—‘Water shall break forth in the desert, springs of living water, streams also in the desert, and the parched ground shall become a pool and the thirsty land springs of water’—have you seen anything of the nature of this prediction fulfilled? Latter-day Saints, how was it with this wilderness twenty-eight years ago this summer when the pioneers entered this land, and when several thousands followed them in the autumn of that same year? What did you, who were appointed to explore the country, find? Many places parched up, looking as though there had been no water or rain from heaven for many years. You began to form your settlements on the streams that ran down from the melting snows in the mountains; and in a very short period of time you began to send forth your settlements, north and south and west. Occasionally you would find a little spring that would break out from under the threshold of the mountain, sufficient to water perhaps an acre of ground, and only one family could go there and settle. What do you find now? The same streams that would only water one acre of ground then—you know I am speaking to people who know for themselves, for they have seen it—the water in those very localities is now sufficient to water from one hundred to five hundred acres. What do you think of that? Have you realized that the hand of the Lord is with you?—that he has indeed fulfilled that which he spoke by the mouth of his ancient Prophet, when he said—‘For in the wilderness waters shall break forth and streams in the desert, etc.’?” He meant just blessings. When a person requested a priesthood blessing, Brigham Young would ask, ‘Have you used any remedies?’ To those who said no because ‘we wish the Elders to lay hands upon us, and we have faith that we shall be healed,’ President Young replied: ‘That is very inconsistent according to my faith. If we are sick, and ask the Lord to heal us, and to do all for us that is necessary to be done, according to my understanding of the Gospel of salvation, I might as well ask the Lord to cause my wheat and corn to grow, without my plowing the ground and casting in the seed. It appears consistent to me to apply every remedy that comes within the range of my knowledge, and [then] to ask my Father in Heaven ... to sanctify that application to the healing of my body.’ Of course we don’t wait until all other methods are exhausted before we pray in faith or give priesthood blessings for healing. In emergencies, prayers and blessings come first. Most often we pursue all efforts simultaneously. This follows the scriptural teachings that we should ‘pray always’ (D&C 90:24) and that all things should be done in wisdom and order.” (Oaks, Elder Dallin H. Healing the Sick, General Conference, April 2010).

²⁴ JD, Vol.2, p.232–233, Jedediah M. Grant, December 17, 1854.

²⁵ JD, Vol.14, p.131–132, Brigham Young, May 21, 1871.

²⁶ Elder Dallin H. Oaks taught, “The use of medical science is not at odds with our prayers of faith and our reliance on priesthood what he said, and you have come hither and proved his words to be true.”²⁷ At that time Bishop LeGrand Richards spoke in conference regarding the gathering of Israel, “Now, I want to bear my testimony to you that I know God has set his hand to gather scattered Israel, just as Moroni told the Prophet Joseph, as part of this work, before there was any organization of the Church, before there was any priesthood or power to officiate in the name of the Lord. The Angel Moroni told the Prophet Joseph that, quoting the words of Isaiah, the Lord should gather scattered Israel and bring in the dispersed of Judah and set up an ensign for the nations. Well, hasn’t he done it? Let us consider what has happened here in these valleys of the mountains as a part of the fulfillment of the promises the Lord has made through his prophets of old: how he should cause the waters to flow down from the high places where it has been reservoirized in these mountains, how the rivers should flow in the deserts (and if you go up through Idaho and see those great canals out of that Snake River, you will see that those canals are larger than the average rivers you see in the world), and how the waters should spring up in the dry places. When I was in Arizona recently, I saw pipes at least twenty inches in diameter running day and night, all the time, full of water, and as I saw them, I said to myself, this is what the prophets saw when the Lord declared through their mouths that he would turn the wilderness and make it to blossom as the rose. And we are living here in that day.”²⁸ Parley P. Pratt, speaking of the restoration of the earth to its primitive state had this to say: “Here, then, we have the curse taken off from the deserts, and they become a fruitful and well-watered country.”²⁹ Regarding the eventual paradisiacal glory of the earth. Govett says: “The blessings of the earth, renovated as the garden of Eden, are described in the fifth and sixth verses.” ¶ Barnes says: “Nothing will more strongly express the blessings of the gospel than the idea of cool, refreshing, abundant fountains and streams bursting forth in such pathless wastes.”

7 And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water:

²⁷ Pratt, Elder Orson. “Fulfillment of Prophecy,” 30 August 1875. (JD 18:144, OP), p. 146–7. Also see JD, 15:58–59; and JD 17:318–319.

²⁸ General Conference Reports 1880, 1897–1996. LDS Church News, Deseret News. Excerpts 1970–1996. Salt Lake City: Deseret News. April 1951, p. 41.

²⁹ Pratt, Parley P. A Voice of Warning and Instruction to All People Or, an Introduction to the Faith and Doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Elder Parley P. Pratt. New Edition. Salt Lake City: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1957. Included is the preface to the First American Edition (1837) and the Second European Edition (December 4, 1846), pp. 119. Also see ISAIAH 13.

in the habitation of dragons, where each lay, [shall be] grass with reeds[✓] and rushes.

✓ or, a court for reeds, &c

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Then the mirage shall become pools of water, and the thirsty place springs of water, in the place where the dragons dwell, reeds and rushes shall come up.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Therefore the glowing sand shall become pools, and for the thirsty soil there will be fountains of water. The reedy beds and the pools there will be the joy of birds.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “And that which was dry land, shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water. In the dens where dragons dwell before, shall rise up the verdure of the reed and the bulrush.” Birks says, “The word sharib [שָׂרִיב], ‘parched ground,’ A.V., more exactly ‘looming sand-waste,’ refers to the mirage, of which it is the Arabic name. The vain shadows of the world, which deceive and never satisfy, are to be replaced by the enduring joys of the kingdom of God.” Wordsworth has: “The mirage, Heb. sharab [שָׂרִיב], is the ‘fata morgana’ (called in Sanscrit ‘the antelope’s thirst’), a phenomenon known to travellers in the sandy deserts of the East, in which the horizon sometimes assumes the appearance of a waving and tremulous expanse of water, where mountains are mirrored, and which mocks their hopes of water by an illusory vision of it.” Henderson, of the שָׂרִיב says, “... the French have given the name of mirage, consisting in the presentation to the view of a lake or sea in the midst of a plain, where none in reality exists. It is produced by the refraction of the rays of light, during the exhalation of vapours, by the excessive heat of the sun; and frequently exhibits, along with the undulating appearance of water, the shadows of objects within or around the plain, both in a natural and inverted position. The deception is most complete; and to the weary traveller, who is attracted by it, in the highest degree mortifying; since, instead of reaching refreshing water, he finds himself in the midst of nothing but glowing sand. It is often used proverbially, or for the sake of comparison, by the Arabs, as in the Koran, Sur. 24:39: ‘But as for those who believe not, their works are like the Serab of the plain: the thirsty imagines it is water, but when he reaches it, he finds it is nothing.’³⁰ ... The meaning of Isaiah is, that the expectations of the Jews should not be disappointed.”³¹ ¶ Habitation of dragons. The idea about the dragons seems to be, according to most exegetes, that there were only creatures of the desert who dwelt there, there would now be abundant water and flora related to it, such as grass with reeds that grow where there is plenty of water. Yet here, the reference seems to be to those who are clean and shall have an eternal increase, as we saw in ISAIAH 34:14 ff.

³⁰ Wordsworth wonders if Mohammad was inspired by Isaiah’s writings here.

³¹ JD, Vol.15, p.58 – p.59, Orson Pratt, December 18, 1870.

8 And an highway shall be there, and for a way shall be cast up, and it shall be called the way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over upon it; but it [shall be] cast up for those who are clean, and the wayfaring men, though they are accounted fools, shall not err [therein].

✓ or, for he shall be with them³²

And an highway shall be there, for a way shall be cast up, and it shall be called the way of holiness. The Targum (T) has, “And a trodden way shall be there, and a straight one; and it shall be called the way of holiness.” The LXX (G) reads, “There will be there a pure highway, which shall be called The Holy way.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “And a path and a way shall be there, and it shall be called the holy way.” The word highway is rendered as מַסְלֵל in Hebrew. Barnes explains: “... refers more particularly to a raised way (from סָלַל, to cast up).” So also Faussett (and others): “such a causeway (raised way, from a Hebrew root, ‘to cast up’).” The JST is shown to be correct by most exegetes. Wildberger has: “The Holy Highway: The transformation of the natural world supplies part of the description of what is said to be coming in the time of salvation, but it simply provides the backdrop for the real theme here, which is the deliverance of Israel.” ¶ Cheyne says, “Most think it is for the returning exiles. Rather it is a road for pilgrims to the house of Jehovah.” So also Kay, who says, that it might be “the way of the sanctuary,” as does Kaiser, “This highway will be called Holy Way, and will therefore lead to the sanctuary. But at first he does not mention where it leads, in order to prepare gradually the idea of the pilgrims returning home along this highway and travelling towards Zion.” ¶ Elder John Taylor taught: “Because [Moses] held the keys of the gathering dispensation: And he conferred upon Joseph Smith the power to gather Israel from the four quarters of the earth, and also the ten tribes.³³ But the latter have not come yet; but people are hunting them up, and they will be found by and by; when the time comes, and the mountains will flow down at their presence, and a highway will be cast up, and they will come to knowledge of the people. But they could not come without the restoration of the keys I have referred to.”³⁴ Elder Woodruff spoke of the railroad as being one of the highways to be cast up: “The Lord requires much at our hands—more than he has ever required of any generation that has preceded us; for no generation that has ever lived on the earth was called upon to establish the kingdom of God on the earth, knowing that it should be thrown down no more for ever. (Daniel 2:44) Daniel saw this; the Prophet Isaiah had spoken of it; in fact three-fourths of all his predictions relate to the establishment of the kingdom of God in the latter days; to our persecutions, to our travels to these valleys of the mountains, to the lifting up of the standard to the people on the mountains of Israel; to the casting up of the great highway—this national railroad, which the ransomed of the Lord should walk over, and on which the Gentiles should come to the light of Zion, and kings to the brightness of her rising.”³⁵ A few years later, Elder Woodruff testified: “The principle of gathering has been preached for the past thirty-seven years. Before this principle was preached by the Elders, a great many of the people had received the spirit of it; and the consequence was, that no sooner had it been taught by the Presidency of the Church, than the people everywhere were ready to receive it. It had been revealed to them by the Holy Ghost, whose office it is to reveal that which is past, present, and that which is to come, and no surer, stronger testimony can be given to any one than it affords. We have gathered here for the express purpose of establishing Zion, which, according to the Scriptures, must be before the Gospel can be sent to the Jews. Passage after passage might be found in the Bible, referring to our coming here; the casting up of the highway on which the ransomed of the Lord might travel; the building of our city in a low place, which was to be Sought out, a city not forsaken; and how the Lord would cause springs of water to spring up, and the desert to blossom like the rose, etc., all of which have had their fulfillment.”³⁶ Jenour says: “What can exceed the beauty of the imagery employed? The high way is that system of religion taught by Christ; those doctrines, precepts, and promises which the gospel contains.”

³² Calvin translates following the margin ¶: “And he shall be to them one that walketh in the way.” Calvin goes on to explain: “But the demonstrative pronoun הָיָא, he, is more correctly, in my opinion, viewed as referring to God; as if he had said, that God will go before them to lead and direct the way.” So it is indeed, no man can walk in the Holy Way (and way of the holiness הַדֶּרֶךְ הַקֹּדֶשׁ) if not lead by the Lord.

³³ Elder McConkie taught: “The return of the Ten Tribes is, of course, a Millennial event.” A New Witness for the Articles of Faith, p.521.

³⁴ JD, Vol.21, p.253, John Taylor, March 21st, 1880.on

³⁵ JD, Vol.14, p.5 – p.6, Wilford Woodruff, January 1, 1871.

³⁶ JD, Vol.18, p.221, Wilford Woodruff, August 13, 1876.

¶ The unclean shall not pass over upon it; but it [shall be] cast up for those who are clean. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “The unclean shall not pass over it.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And the unclean shall not come there; nor shall there be there an unclean way.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⓢ) has, “The unclean shall not pass over it; and there shall be no road beside it.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “The unclean shall not pass over it, and this shall be unto you a straight way.” ¶ Keith says: “Instead of being a sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil-doers,³⁷ ‘the people shall be all righteous.’³⁸” Orelli has: “The holy way, i.e. the way belonging to God, which, as is presently explained, the impure may not tread, but which is destined for them alone, i.e. for the members of God’s sanctified Church, marching homeward to the temple by this road.” The unclean are all those who the Savior will be “ashamed to own to own before the Father” (D&C 29:27b). ¶ And the wayfaring men, though they are accounted fools, shall not err [therein]. Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And the wayfaring men shall not cease; the ignorant (literally, ‘they that are not taught’) shall not err. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “But as for the dispersed, they shall travel it, and shall not be led astray.” The BPE (Ⓢ) has, “Not even the fool can get lost therein.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “So that fools shall not err therein.” ¶ I love what Luther says here about the fools (and this makes all the sense in the world with the JST correction, accounted fools rather than fools): “They who are regarded as simpletons and fools in the eyes of the world are properly called fools, just as the Word, too, is a word of foolishness. Therefore he says that those who are fools before the world but wise in faith walk on the way.” So also Wordsworth who says: “... although he be a fool in the opinion of the world, which fondly deems itself wise.” ¶ Contrast this with Romans 1:22, where the foolish consider themselves wise: “For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God. For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent. Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world? For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe” (1 Corinthians 1:18–21). And furthermore: “Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men. For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called: But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty” (1 Corinthians 1:25–27). Furthermore, “But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned” (1 Corinthians 2:14, also see 1 Corinthians 3:18–19; 4:10). ¶ This expression—though they are accounted fools—has been used multiple times by the Brethren to express the simplicity of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The Prophet Joseph Smith taught: “Hence the doctrine of a plurality of Gods is as prominent in the Bible as any other doctrine. It is all over the face of the Bible. It stands beyond the power of controversy. A wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein.”³⁹ Elder John Taylor explained: “There were certain principles laid down by Jesus and his disciples, and also by Moses, and by Nephi, Alma and others on this continent, in a very plain, clear and pointed manner, in fact, although a mystery to men of the world, to believers they are as the Scriptures say—so plain that a wayfaring man though a fool need not err therein; and they are strictly logical, and philosophical and easy of comprehension.”⁴⁰ Elder Joseph F. Smith taught: “How then can we know ‘the only true and living God, and Jesus Christ whom he has sent?’ for to obtain this knowledge would be to obtain the secret or key to eternal life. It must be through the Holy Ghost, whose office is to reveal the things of the Father to man, and to bear witness in our hearts of Christ ... Thus the Spirit and power of God—the Comforter, may be in us as a well of water springing up unto everlasting life. He will bear record of the Father, testify of Jesus, and ‘take of the things of the Father and reveal them unto us,’ confirming our faith, establishing us in the truth, that we shall be no longer tossed to and fro by every wind of doctrine; but shall ‘know of the doctrine’ whether it be of God or of man. This is the course—it is simple, reasonable, and consistent. Who is there with common abilities that can fail to see, or comprehend it? Indeed, in the language of the Scriptures, it is so plain, that ‘the wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein.’ ... We should never cease to serve Him, nor thwart his mercy and goodness towards us; but ever live so that the Holy Spirit may be within us as a living spring, calculated to lead us to perfection in righteousness, virtue, and integrity before God, until we accomplish our earthly mission, performing every duty that may be required at our hands.”⁴¹ Elder George Albert Smith testified and

³⁷ ISAIAH 1:4a.

³⁸ ISAIAH 60:21a.

³⁹ TPJS, p. 370.

⁴⁰ Taylor, Elder John. The Knowledge of God and Mode of Worshipping Him. Discourse delivered in the New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday Afternoon, 7 September 1873.

⁴¹ Smith, Elder Joseph F. Belief and Knowledge. Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, at St. George, Sunday, April 2, 1877. p. 22.

warned: “This is the Church of Jesus Christ, our Lord. He has given rules to govern it and made them so plain that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err in following His teachings; yet there have been those in the Church who have failed, who have fallen by the wayside, who have come under the power of the adversary and, surrendered to, evil.”⁴²

9 No lion shall be there, nor [any] ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk [there]:

No lion shall be there, nor [any] ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “There shall not be there a king doing evil, and an oppressive governor shall not pass over it, yea, they shall not be found there.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “No lion shall be there; nor shall any ravenous beast come up thither, nor ever be found there.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “No lion shall be there, nor shall any mischievous beast go up by it, nor be found there.” ¶ Barnes has: “Lions abounded in all the countries adjacent to Palestine. They are, therefore, often referred to by the sacred writers, as objects of dread and alarm.” Jennings says: “Nor can any beast of prey invade it and terrify its travelers; absolute security characterizes it. Why is that? Because those passengers Zionward have all been bought at a great price, and are well-guarded by Him who has thus purchased them.” Wildberger says: “When God wanted to punish his people, he sent wild animals into the country (Leviticus 26:22 Rain in Due Season; Deuteronomy 32:24; Ezekiel 5:17; 14:15).” This was also true in Book of Mormon times (e.g., Alma 2:37). Jenour says: “The persons who walk this road shall be safe from their enemies, and especially from the attacks of him [i.e., Satan]⁴³ who goeth about like a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour (1 Peter 5:8). ¶ But the redeemed shall walk [there]. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “But in it the redeemed will walk.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “But they shall walk there that shall be delivered.” Wade says regarding נְאֻלִים, “the redeemed, i.e. the Jews who shall be restored from exile (the term being the same as that used in ISAIAH 51:10; 62:12). And the ransomed . . . return. This clause [from the next verse] belongs [here] being parallel to the redeemed shall walk there.” But not just those of the tribe of Judah, and not of the Babylonian exile and captivity, but rather eschatological, with the whole of the house of Israel brought back, redeemed and ransomed from the four quarters of the earth. Regarding the words redeemed and ransomed as used in this and the next verse, Kay says that they are also found in Hosea 13:4, “Of God’s final liberation of His people from Death and Hades.”

10 And the ransomed of the LORD shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And the redeemed of the Lord shall return, because they shall be gathered from the midst of their captivity; and they shall come to Zion with a song, and they shall have everlasting joy, which shall not cease, and a cloud of glory shall overshadow their heads: joy and gladness shall be found, and sorrow and sighing shall cease from them, namely, from the house of Israel.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And they who have been collected for the Lord. They indeed shall return and come to Sion with joy, and everlasting joy shall crown their head: for on their heads will be praise and rapture; and gladness shall have full possession of them. Pain and sorrow and sighing are fled.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And the redeemed of the Lord shall return, and shall come into Sion with praise, and everlasting joy shall be upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and mourning shall flee away.” Once again we come across שׁוּב, here as שׁוּבִי, meaning to return, but also to turn unto Christ as we have repeatedly pointed out. Keith says: “And those who are now scattered among all nations, a shame and a reproach,⁴⁴ shall come to Zion, and obtain joy and gladness . . . This, with the preceding clause, (marginal || reading,) is rendered by Lowth, ‘He himself shall be with them walking in the way.’ The reference, according to this translation, is to the Messiah, who ‘will come to Zion, and turn away ungodliness from Jacob.’” ¶ Regarding sorrow and sighing, Elder Neal A. Maxwell, then a member of the Seventy, taught: “As we build a holier Zion, with ‘the voice of melody’ we will sing those lyrics—‘All is well, all is well’ (‘Come, Come, Ye Saints,’ Hymns, no. 13)—but sometimes as a reassuring sob as well as a song, awaiting the promised day when ‘sorrow and sighing shall flee away.’ With Paul, we can say, ‘We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed' (2 Corinthians 4:8–9)—perhaps adding, 'We are confronted, but not surprised; we are falsely accused, but pray for our accusers; we are reviled, but respond with Christian service.' Brothers and sisters, we can be walking witnesses and standing sermons to which objective onlookers can say a quiet amen."⁴⁵ ¶ The Talmud tradition (Seder Mo'ed, Shabbath 88a) implies that when the children of Israel say "'we will do' over 'we will hearken,'" these great blessings will come to pass (Talmud, Soncino). This goes along with the spiritual progression the Brethren speak about, from knowing, to doing, to becoming. ¶ Upon their heads. In ISAIAH 28 we read of a contrast between "The crown of pride [of] the drunkards of Ephraim" (ISAIAH 28:3a) and "In that day shall the LORD of hosts be for a crown of glory, and for a diadem of beauty, unto the residue of his people" (ISAIAH 28:5). Christ will always be our Crown of Glory. In addition we read from our beloved Prophet Joseph Smith: "But from the few items previously quoted we can draw the conclusion that there is to be a day when all will be judged of their works, and rewarded according to the same; that those who have kept the faith will be crowned with a crown of righteousness; be clothed in white raiment; be admitted to the marriage feast; be free from every affliction, and reign with Christ on the earth, where, according to the ancient promise, they will partake of the fruit of the vine new in the glorious kingdom with Him."⁴⁶ Of the potential of man we read in Psalm 8:5: "For thou hast made him but little lower than God, And crownest him with glory and honor" (ASV); and "For you have made him only a little lower than the gods, crowning him with glory and honour" (BBE, also see ERV). Barnes says:

⁴² Smith, Elder George Albert (1942). Upholding the Hands of Our Leaders. Conference Report, pp. 13–17.

⁴³ “Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour” (1 Peter 5:8).

⁴⁴ The scattering is a reflection of sin against the Lord as seen in Rain in Due Season, and thus a shame and a reproach.

"The language here is all derived from the deliverance from Babylon, and the images employed by the prophet relate to that event. Still, there can be no doubt that he meant to describe the deliverance under the Messiah." ¶ They shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away. "There is no joy when one is in the thralldom of sin," says Young. No one makes that point better than Alma: "Do not suppose, because it has been spoken concerning restoration, that ye shall be restored from sin to happiness. Behold, I say unto you, wickedness never was happiness" (Alma 41:10). Barnes says: "This is a most beautiful close of the series or succession of prophecies which we have been thus far contemplating. The result of all is, that the redeemed of the Lord shall have joy and rejoicing; that all their enemies shall be subdued, and that they shall be rescued from all their foes. In the analysis of the prophecy contained in the thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth chapters, it was stated that this prophecy seemed to be a summary of all that Isaiah had before uttered, and was designed to show that all the enemies of the people of God would be destroyed, and that they would be triumphantly delivered and saved. All these minor deliverances were preparatory to and emblematic of the greater deliverance under the Messiah."

26 November 2011

⁴⁵ Maxwell, Elder Neal A. The Net Gathers of Every Kind. Ensign, November 1980.

⁴⁶ Smith, Joseph. History of the Church. 1834.

ISAIAH 36–39 correspond also to 2 Kings 18 ff. (here represented by green) and 2 Chronicles 29 ff. (here represented by dark yellow). There are vast and very interesting details to be found on these historical chapters, but my object, for the present, is to present a very brief summary of only the most vital points.

Isaiah 36

After King Sennacherib conquered many of the cities of Israel, his forces came up against Jerusalem. Sennacherib sent an embassy to give a message to King Hezekiah. The message of these ambassadors included an offensive and blasphemous diatribe against the Lord. Also, a well-deserved ridicule of the Egyptian forces upon whom Judah liked to lean upon from time to time. Although, as we shall see in ISAIAH 38, Sennacherib was greatly defeated, it did not keep him back from his braggadocio against Judah.

Note: It is not as critical for us to make a careful comparison of where Kings and Chronicles coincide, instead, only where they may add something to our understanding of Isaiah. Therefore, we will note contributions by the one or by the other. Furthermore, I have generally passed over verses in both Kings and Chronicles where the text makes little difference to that which we find in Isaiah. For instance, in ISAIAH 36:3b we find “...Hilkiah’s son, which was over the house, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah, Asaph’s son, the recorder.” The narrative in 2 Kings 18:18 changes the word order, yet says essentially the same: “...the son of Hilkiah, which [was] over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder.” On the other hand, if a change of word may be instructive, even if the word has an identical meaning in both texts, this may be indicated. The green we will use for Kings is not to be confused by the changes agreed upon by both the Book of Mormon and the JST, made in teal. The Book of Mormon does not include any portions of these four chapters. Where there are JST corrections (ISAIAH 36:5; 37:17, 26, 32, 36; 38:14–17; 39:2), we will focus on the clarifications made by the JST. Furthermore, I see little value in making detailed comparisons between the Biblia Hebraica and the other ancient texts as we have done in the rest of the book. There may be occasional exceptions.

Historical background (based on 2 Kings 18 and 2 Chronicles 29–31): Hezekiah is the son of Ahaz (king of Judah) and of Abijah (or Abi). Hezekiah began to reign during the third year of the reign of Hoshea, son of Elah, king of Israel (Northern Kingdom). The Israelite civil war after the death of King Solomon led to the division of Holy Land into the northern ten tribes and the southern two tribes. Hezekiah was 25 years old.

It was said of Hezekiah that he trusted in the Lord, cleaved unto him, and kept the commandments. He was counted as being righteous in the sight of the Lord. Hezekiah cut down the groves and removed the altars from the high places and had them thrown into Brook Kidron, and even broke the brazen serpent that Moses had made, for the people had begun to worship it. In the very first month of his reign, Hezekiah began a thorough cleansing and repair of the House of the Lord for it had been neglected and defiled. He charged the Levites and Priests with the job of sanctifying themselves to serve in the sacred edifice. Hezekiah reminded the priesthood how much Judah had suffered and been punished as a consequence of her disobedience and admonished the people to re-establish their covenant with the Lord. When the Temple was cleansed and purified, all manner of offerings were prepared, including burnt offerings, sin offerings, thanks offerings, peace offerings, even singing and the playing of instruments. Full of thanksgiving many worshipped the Lord. When preparations were finished, letters were sent over all of Judah and Ephraim. These letters were an invitation to all to participate in a Passover, as had not been prepared and celebrated since the time of King David. It was a call for people to return to the true God of the fathers. When the people of Ephraim heard the invitation they laughed to scorn. The people of Judah were moved to humility. Hezekiah did seek the Lord with all his heart, and prospered. He was successful in restoring the borders, fought against the Philistines, and rebelled against the king of Assyria. Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, besieged Samaria and after three years, took it. Ephraim was taken captive and carried away at that time.

vv. 1–10. Sennacherib sends an embassy to Hezekiah, the purpose of which was to intimidate the Judean King into submission. They came to the same conduit by the upper pool we were made familiar with when Isaiah met King Ahaz (ISAIAH 7:3). First, the embassy rightfully mocks Judah's sometime dependence on Egypt. They then go on to offend the Living God. This is not unlike Satan's darts, where he inserts some truths among falsehoods. The embassy falls into priestcraft when they dare speak in the name of the Lord without the authority to do so.

1 ¶ NOW it came to pass in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah, [that] Sennacherib king of Assyria came up against all the defenced* cities of Judah, and took them.

* 2 Kings 18:13, Fenced.

 2 Chronicles 32:1, Sennacherib king of Assyria came, and entered into Judah, and encamped against the fenced cities, and thought to win them for himself.

NOW it came to pass in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah. There is some debate about the year involved. I like what Delitzsch says: "But the task of pronouncing an infallible sentence upon them all we shall leave to those who know everything . . . advice which is good not only about dates but about what species of animals are meant in many instances."

¶ [That] Sennacherib king of Assyria came up against all the defenced cities of Judah, and took them.

Sennacherib was the son of King Shalmaneser of Assyria (Barnes, Gill). The defenced cities of Judah were those that were fortified. King Sennacherib seems to have been successful in conquering many of these fortified cities, except for Jerusalem. See notes on ISAIAH 8:8, "And he shall pass through Judah; he shall overflow and go over, he shall reach even to the neck; and the stretching out of his wings shall fill the breadth of thy land, O Immanuel." Compare also, with 2 Chronicles 32:1.

2 Kings 18:14–16

14 And Hezekiah king of Judah sent to the king of Assyria to Lachish, saying, I have offended; return from me: that which thou puttest on me will I bear. And the king of Assyria appointed unto Hezekiah king of Judah three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold.

15 And Hezekiah gave [him] all the silver that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house.

16 At that time did Hezekiah cut off [the gold from] the doors of the temple of the LORD, and [from] the pillars which Hezekiah king of Judah had overlaid, and gave it to the king of Assyria.

We know from ISAIAH 36:2 (below), that Sennacherib, king of Assyria, was in Lachish. It is clear from portions of the 2 Kings and 2 Chronicles narratives, that while the king of Assyria laid siege in Lachish, he sent messengers to Jerusalem to demand that Hezekiah give in. In the verses, above, in 2 Kings 18:14–16, it seems that Hezekiah sent tribute (which tribute came from raiding the temple of the Lord) to Sennacherib and asked the Assyrian king for forgiveness for having rebelled against him. The expression, "return from me," or שׁוּב מֵעָלַי, literally means turn away from me. That is, do not attack but go away from me, I will comply with those things you expect of me. We may safely suppose that these things happened before King Hezekiah made his full conversion to the Lord. "Poor Hezekiah! How weak was he to give up his Lord's honor in the vain hope of peace!" says Jennings and then adds: "But how easy it is for us all to discern others' weakness!" When King Hezekiah heard that Sennacherib was coming against Jerusalem—and was not turning away—despite the tribute he had sent, he did not waste any time to prepare, as seen in 2 Chronicles 32:2–8.

2 Chronicles 32:2–8

2 And when Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was come, and that he was purposed to fight against Jerusalem,
3 He took counsel with his princes and his mighty men to stop the waters of the fountains which [were] without the city: and they did help him.

4 So there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains, and the brook that ran through the midst of the land, saying, Why should the kings of Assyria come, and find much water?
5 Also he strengthened himself, and built up all the wall that was broken, and raised [it] up to the towers, and another wall without, and repaired Millo [in] the city of David, and made darts and shields in abundance.

6 And he set captains of war over the people, and gathered them together to him in the street of the gate of the city, and spake comfortably to them, saying,
7 Be strong and courageous, be not afraid nor dismayed for the king of Assyria, nor for all the multitude that [is] with him: for [there be] more with us than with him:
8 With him [is] an arm of flesh; but with us [is] the LORD our God to help us, and to fight our battles. And the people rested¹ themselves upon the words of Hezekiah king of Judah.

This waterway (2 Chronicles 32:3), also known as Hezekiah's tunnel, was used to protect the water supply. See notes under ISAIAH 22:9. I was not able to find the certain meaning for zedah [זֶדָה]² although the word echo has been suggested,³ as well as overlap and fissure.⁴

2 And the king of Assyria* sent Rabshakeh from Lachish to Jerusalem unto king Hezekiah with a great army. And he stood by the conduit of the upper pool in the highway of the fuller's field.

* 2 Chronicles 32:9, Sennacherib king of Assyria.

 2 Chronicles 32:9 [Speaking of Sennacherib], (but he [himself laid siege] against Lachish, and all his power with him,). 2 Kings 18:17, [The king of Assyria] sent Tartan and Rabсарis and Rabshakeh from Lachish.

 2 Kings 18:17, great host.

* 2 Kings 18:17, And they went up and came to Jerusalem. And when they were come up, they came and stood.

And the king of Assyria sent Rabshakeh from Lachish to Jerusalem unto king Hezekiah with a great army. Some have suggested that אֶת־רַב־שָׁקָה Rabshakeh is a title, rather than the name of an individual. Faussett has: “Rab is a title of authority, ‘chief-cup-bearer.’”

¹ Took comfort in.

² See the inscription in Hebrew in The Jewish Encyclopedia 1901–1906, 11:340.

³ Haupt, Paul. The American Journal of Semitic Languages and Literatures, 32:144. October 1915 – July 1916.

⁴ See W. F. Albright, “The Siloam Inscription,” in James B. Pritchard (editor), Ancient Near Eastern Texts Relating to the Old Testament (Princeton, 1950), p. 321; and King, Philip J. and Lawrence E. Stager (2001), Life in Biblical Israel, p. 220.

¶ And he stood by the conduit of the upper pool in the highway of the fuller's field (see also ISAIAH 7:3, where Isaiah met Ahaz). Gill, leaning on Ben Melech has “The pool is a ditch, built with stone and lime, where rainwater was collected, or where they drew water from the fountain, and the waters were gathered into this pool; and there was in this pool a hole, which they stopped, until the time they pleased to fetch water, out of the pool: and the conduit was a ditch near to the pool, and they brought water out of the pool into the conduit, when they chose to drink, or wash garments: the highway was a way paved with stones, so that they could walk upon it in rainy days; and here they stood and washed their garments in the waters of the conduit, and in the field they spread them to the sun. This pool lay outside the city, yet just by the walls of it, which showed the daring insolence of Rabshakeh to come so very nigh, for he was in the hearing of the men upon the walls.” Delitzsch explains: “The fuller's field (שֵׂדֶה כֹּבֵס) was situated, as we may assume with Robinson, Schultz, and Thenius, against Williams, Krafft, etc., on the western side of the city, where there is still an ‘upper pool’ of great antiquity (2 Chronicles 32:30). Near to this pool the fullers, i.e., the cleaners and thickeners of woollen fabrics, carried on their occupation (כֹּבֵס, from Câbas, related to Câbash, subigere, which bears the same relation to râchatz as πλύνειν to λούειν). Robinson and his companions saw some people washing clothes at the upper pool when they were there; and, for a considerable distance round, the surface of this favourite washing and bleaching place was covered with things spread out to bleach or dry. The road (מַסְלָה), which ran past this fuller's field, was the one which leads from the western gate to Joppa.” Faussett has, regarding the conduit: “An aqueduct from the pool or reservoir for the supply of the city. At the foot of Zion was Fount Siloah (ISAIAH 8:6; Nehemiah 3:15; John 9:7), called also Gihon, on the west of Jerusalem (2 Chronicles 32:30). Two pools were supplied from it, the Upper, or Old (ISAIAH 22:11), or King's (Nehemiah 2:14), and the Lower (ISAIAH 22:9), which received the superfluous waters of the upper. The upper pool is still to be seen, about seven hundred yards from the Jaffa gate. The highway leading to the fullers' field, which was in a position near water for the purposes of washing, previous to drying and bleaching, the cloth, was probably alongside the aqueduct.”

3 Then came forth unto him Eliakim,* Hilkiah's son, which was over the house, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah, Asaph's son, the recorder.

* 2 Kings 18:18, And when they had called to the king, there came out to them Eliakim.

✓ or, secretary

These three individuals came out, according to 2 Kings 18:18, because they were responding to Rabshakeh request to speak to King Hezekiah. There is some speculation as to whether Eliakim and Shebna are the same as mentioned in ISAIAH 22:15–25, although they have different job responsibilities here. The third man, Joah, seems to have been the historian or historiographer (Barnes, Gill).

4 And Rabshakeh said unto them, Say ye now to Hezekiah, Thus saith the great king, the king of Assyria, What confidence [is] this wherein thou trustest?*

* 2 Chronicles 32:10, Whereon do ye trust, that ye abide in the siege in Jerusalem?

Rabshakeh must have been the main spokesman for the King of Assyria. In ISAIAH 10:8 we introduced the idea of the Assyrian and Babylonian boastings. King Sennacherib, as well as many of the kings who attacked Israel in the olden days, only told the part of the story—the part they wanted to tell. They often bragged about their exploits. Below is a sample of this type of braggadocio. Even in modern times, nations that attack Israel claim they are doing marvelously even when they have sustained heavy casualties—and are indeed losing the war (see 1967, מלחמת ששת הימים (Six Day War) / The Setback, النكسة). Sennacherib (704–681 BC, pp. 199–201, in Pritchard)⁵ boasted of the siege that he brought to pass upon Jerusalem at the time of Hezekiah. The saying, “He who laughs last laughs best” fits in well into this historical even, as we shall see. “As to Hezekiah the Jew,” boasted Sennacherib, “he did not submit to my yoke, I laid siege to 46 of his strong cities, walled forts and to the countless small villages in their vicinity, and conquered (them) by means of well-stamped (earth-) ramps, and battering-rams brought (thus) near (to the walls) (combined with) the attack by foot soldiers, (using) mines, breeches as well as sapper work. I drove out (of them) 200,150 people, young and old, male and female, horses, mules, donkeys, camels, big and small cattle beyond counting, and considered (them) booty. Himself I made a prisoner in Jerusalem, his royal residence, like a bird in a cage. I surrounded him with earthwork in order to molest those who were leaving his city’s gate. His towns which I had plundered, I took away from his country and gave them (over) to Mitinti, king of Ashdod, Padi, king of Ekron, and Sillibel, king of Gaza. Thus I reduced his country, but I still increased the tribute and the katru—presents (due) to me (as his) overlord which I imposed (later) upon him beyond the former tribute, to be delivered annually. Hezekiah himself, whom the terror-inspiring splendor of my lordship had overwhelmed and whose irregular and elite troops which he had brought into Jerusalem, his royal residence, in order to strengthen (it), had deserted him, did send me, later, to Nineveh, my lordly city, together with 39 talents of gold, 800 talents of silver, precious stones, antimony [This refers probably to stibnite, which might have been used as an eye paint (beside the cheaper and efficient substitute, burnt shells of almonds and soot). Stibium is easily reduced and the metal is sporadically attested in Mesopotamia since the Neo-Sumerian period], large cuts of red stone, couches (inlaid) with ivory, nimedu – chairs (inlaid) with ivory, elephant-hides, ebony-wood, boxwood (and) all kinds of valuable treasures, his (own) daughters, concubines, male and female musicians. In order to deliver the tribute and to do obeisance as a slave he sent his (personal) messenger ... Sennacherib, king of the world, king of Assyria, sat upon a nimedu - throne and passed in review the booty (taken) from Lachish (La-ki-su).” Apparently King Hezekiah was not the only one to bring tribute: “[All the kings brought me] sumptuous gifts and ... kissed my feet ... [but] the king of Ashkelon, who did not bow to my yoke, I deported and sent to Assyria, his family-gods, himself, his wife, his children, his brothers, all the male descendants of his family ... [and the king of Ashkelon now] pulls the straps (of my yoke)!”

5 I say, [~~sayest thou~~], (~~but [they are but] vain words~~) ✓ thy words are but vain when thou sayest, [I have] counsel and strength for war. ✓ ✓ Now, on whom dost thou trust that thou rebellest against me?

✓ a word of lips

✓ ✓ or, but counsel and strength are for the war

I say, thy words are but vain when thou sayest, I have counsel and strength for war. These are the offensive words of Rabshakeh, or the chief cup-bearer speaking in vanity, but accusing King Hezekiah of acting in vanity. It is interesting that we often accuse others by attaching to them an extension of our own motives. Rabshakeh, then, is calling into question the possibility that Hezekiah could defend Jerusalem against the attacks of Assyria. ¶ Now, on whom dost thou trust that thou rebellest against me? This is a question of the most vital importance. Who do we trust? Rabshakeh begins to ask the question in the most mocking of tones, as we see in the next two verses. He insults Hezekiah for trusting on the arm of Egypt as well as for trusting God.

⁵ Pritchard, James B. (editor), The Ancient Near East, Volume 1: Anthology of Texts and Pictures. Princeton University Press, 6th Paperback printing, 1973, pp. 199–201.

6 Lo, thou trustest in the staff of this broken* reed, on Egypt; whereon if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so [is] Pharaoh king of Egypt to all that trust in him.

* 2 Kings 18:21, bruised.

Rabshakeh goes on to compare Egypt (or the flesh of man) to a broken reed. Anyone who leans on Egypt might as well lean on a broken reed so that it will go through the hand and pierce the flesh.

7 But if thou say to me, We trust in the LORD our God: [is it] not he, whose high places and whose altars Hezekiah hath taken away, and said to Judah and to Jerusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar?*

* 2 Kings 18:22, Ye shall worship before this altar in Jerusalem?

Here is where Rabshakeh crosses the line. He could have insulted the strength of man, but now he offends the Holy One of Israel and mocks Him. Gill well explains regarding the altars of the high places: “The high places and altars which Hezekiah took away were the high places and altars of Heathen gods, of false deities, and not of the true God of Israel ... but Rabshakeh would make a crime of it, and, ignorantly supposing that these were the altars and high places of the God of Israel, would insinuate that the taking of these away must be displeasing to him, and consequently Hezekiah and his people could not hope for any protection from him, whom he had so highly affronted; but all this talk was the fruit of ignorance, as well as of malice.” ¶ And said to Judah and to Jerusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar? With the passing of time, and especially after the construction of Solomon’s Temple in Jerusalem, the high places (בָּמֹת) seem to no longer have been sanctioned for worship. The ISBE article on High Place as well as the LDS Bible Dictionary on High Places are quite instructive. While there are a number of ways that these passages can be understood, it is clear that the term High Place (בָּמֹת) over time increasingly took on the meaning of a place of idolatrous worship. Such idolatrous shrines were constructed not only in the hills and mountains but also in the cities (2 Kings 17:9) and in the streets

(Ezekiel 16:24). Micah spoke of Jerusalem and by implication the temple there, as a High Place: “What is the transgression of Jacob? is it not Samaria? and what are the high places of Judah? are they not Jerusalem?” (Micah 1:5b). Even when the Temple in Jerusalem was still standing, the Savior chose to transform a mountain top (Mount of Transfiguration) into sacred ground: “And after six days Jesus taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain apart by themselves: and he was transfigured before them” (Mark 9:2). We also know that righteous Lehi offered sacrifices outside of the Jerusalem Temple when he traveled in the wilderness: “And it came to pass that when he had traveled three days in the wilderness, he pitched his tent in a valley by the side of a river of water. And it came to pass that he built an altar of stones, and made an offering unto the Lord, and gave thanks unto the Lord our God” (1 Nephi 2:6–7, emphasis added). And again we read: “And it came to pass that they did rejoice exceedingly, and did offer sacrifice and burnt offerings unto the Lord; and they gave thanks unto the God of Israel” (1 Nephi 5:9, also 1 Nephi 7:22; Mosiah 2:3). We do not have a clear enough understanding of what was or not sanctioned from our Bible as we have it today. It seems that what Rabshakeh meant, in his insolent taunt, was that King Hezekiah was only offering sacrifice before Jehovah, and not before any of the other idol gods. Therefore, Rabshakeh insinuated, King Hezekiah could never be successful.

8 Now therefore give pledges, ¶ I pray thee, to my master* the king of Assyria, and I will give thee two thousand horses, if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon them.

* 2 Kings 18:23, lord.

¶ or, hostages

Now therefore give pledges, I pray thee, to my master the king of Assyria. YLT translates הִתְעַרְב as negotiate: “And now, negotiate, I pray thee, with my lord the king of Asshur.” So also Alexander, NASB & GNB (bargain), HCSB (deal), ERV (make agreement), ABP {LXX (⚡)} (mix), and LITV (exchange pledges). ¶ And I will give thee two thousand horses, if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon them. The whole idea is a taunt, in which the Rabshakeh implies that Assyria could give Judah two thousand horses—but it would do Judah little good as they would not find enough horsemen who could ride them. Gill says: “Thus scoffing at him, as if he had not so many soldiers to bring out against him; or so many men in his kingdom as had skill enough to ride a horse; in his bravado he signifies, that if he would come out and fight him, he would lend him so many horses, if he could put men upon them, to assist him; this he said as boasting of his master's strength and power, and in scorn and derision at Hezekiah's weakness."

9 How then wilt thou turn away the face of one captain of the least of my master's servants, and put thy trust on Egypt for chariots and for horsemen?

How then wilt thou turn away the face of one captain of the least of my master's servants. According to Barnes, Rabshakeh seems to be saying something like: "The most unimportant captain in the army of Assyria commands more horsemen than this, and how can you expect to oppose even him, much more how can you be able to resist all the mighty army of the Assyrians?"

The word used for Captain פָּהָד, means governor

(HAL). Barnes explains that a פָּהָד: "denotes a prefect or governor of a province less than a satrap, an officer who was under the satrap, and subject to him." ¶ And put thy trust on Egypt for chariots and for horsemen? Once again, Hezekiah is being ridiculed for leaning on Egypt. Rawlinson explains: "Consciousness of the weakness, with which Rabshakeh had just reproached them, had led to their application to Egypt for a chariot and a cavalry force. Egypt was well able to furnish both, and had sent a large force of both to the help of Ekron a short time previously ('Eponym Canon,' p. 133, 11. 48–56). That force had, however, suffered defeat at the hands of Sennacherib."

10 And am I now come up without the LORD against this land* to destroy it? the LORD said unto me, Go up against this land, and destroy it.

* 2 Kings 18:25, place.

Rabshakeh once again crosses the line of a normal taunt by now claiming that he is coming against Jerusalem and against Hezekiah under command from the Lord. This is a form of priestcraft. Faussett has: "A boastful inference from the past successes of Assyria, designed to influence the Jews to surrender; their own principles bound them to yield to Jehovah's will. He may have heard from partisans in Judah what Isaiah had foretold (ISAIAH 10:5–6)."

vv. 11–22. Hezekiah's servants ask the servants of Sennacherib to be more discreet and speak in the Aramaic language rather than in Hebrew—so all the onlookers would not have to hear what was being said. The servants of Sennacherib use this occasion to further mock Hezekiah, instead, and try and scare the people. In fact, they encourage a rebellion against Hezekiah by making promises to the people. Assyria seems to be asking for submission both in terms of tribute money as well as personal humiliation. The great provocation against the Lord included comparing Him to the idols of the heathen nations. The servants of Hezekiah say nothing more and repeat all that has been said in the ears of King Hezekiah.

11 ¶ Then said Eliakim* and Shebna and Joah unto Rabshakeh, Speak, I pray thee, unto thy servants in the Syrian language; for we understand [it]: and speak not to us in the Jews' language, in the ears of the people that [are] on the wall.

* 2 Kings 18:26, Eliakim the son of Hilkiah.

Eliakim, Shebna and Joah, who seem to have been listening attentively now cut into Rabshakeh's diatribe to make a request that he stop speaking in the tongue of the Jews (יְהוּדִית), i.e., Yehudit, or Hebrew—a language that the men on the wall could fully understand—and instead would speak in Aramit, or Aramaic⁶ (אַרְמִיט). One gets the impression that especially the last comments made by the Rabshakeh were those that these leaders feared could negatively affect the men on the wall. Gill suggests, regarding who spoke to the Rabshakeh: "That is, one of them addressed him in the name of the rest; for the verb is singular; and what follows confirms it; perhaps Eliakim was the speaker." Gill suggests: "And as this speech of Eliakim's showed great submissiveness in praying and entreating Rabshakeh to speak to them in another language, and a mean⁷ abject spirit, in saying they were his servants, so a great degree of timorousness in them, and diffidence of the people, lest they should be terrified, and be for giving up the city at once into the hands of the enemy."

12 But Rabshakeh said, Hath my master sent me to thy master and to thee to speak these words? [hath he] not [sent me] to the men that sit upon the wall, that they may eat their own dung, and drink their own piss with you?

⁶ Aramaic was the common language spoken at the time of Christ.

⁷ I.e., lowly.

These words of the Rabshakeh, are once again, very aggressive and offensive, something to the effect of “What, and you thought I was speaking on behalf of the King of Asshur just for the benefit of King Hezekiah? No, I am here to warn the men on the wall as well. Because we will encompass this city in such a tight siege that they—along with you—will have nothing more to drink than their own urine and nothing more to eat than their own dung.” I had the opportunity to speak to a former member of the Chilean cavalry, who had been under such difficult circumstances around the 1930s where indeed the only liquid available was their own urine, which most of the soldiers drank in a futile attempt to quench their thirst. As we follow the history of other sieges we hear of people who have boiled and eaten their own children for hunger (see for instance, the fall of Jerusalem in 70 AD, as told by Josephus; as well as 2 Kings 6:28–29, all of which was predicted in Rain in Due Season—see Leviticus 26:29; Deuteronomy 28:56–57). In the Hebrew Scriptures in ISAIAH 36:12, a scribe tried to change the present words so they would not be so objectionable, such that instead of urine we have the water between their legs, מימי רגליהם. Barnes explains: “That the Masoretes in the Hebrew text have so pointed the words used, that in reading it the offensiveness would be considerably avoided. It is common in the Hebrew Scriptures, when a word is used in the text that is indelicate, to place another word in the margin||, and the vowel-points that belong to the word in the margin|| are applied to the word in the text, and the word in the margin|| is thus commonly read. In accordance with this custom among the Jews, it is evident that more delicacy might have been observed by our translators in this, and in some other places of the Scriptures.” A similar complaint is voiced by Gill, who explains that such a translation “would have been more decent.” Certainly, the horrors of war are felt upon reading these words. Rawlinson says, “But the pride and arrogance of the Assyrians rendered them as careless of diplomatic etiquette as, at a later date, were the Romans (see Polybius, 29:11, Liv., 45:12).

13 Then Rabshakeh stood, and cried with a loud voice in the Jews' language,* and said, Hear ye the words of the great king, the king of Assyria.

* 2 Chronicles 32:18, Then they cried with a loud voice in the Jews' speech unto the people of Jerusalem that [were] on the wall, to affright them, and to trouble them; that they might take the city.

Then Rabshakeh stood, and cried with a loud voice in the Jews' language. So instead, בְּקוֹל-גָּדוֹל, in a great voice, that is, loudly, Rabshakeh now speaks even louder to be heard by all, and in Hebrew. Gill has: “In which he spoke before; but now he raised up himself, and elevated his voice, and strained himself to the utmost, that all the people might hear, and that he might strike a terror into them, and stir them up to mutiny and rebellion, and oblige their governors to give up the city into the hands of the Assyrians; this use he made of the request of Hezekiah’s ministers, perceiving hereby their fears, and the disposition of the people.” Barnes says that in the word stood we have: “Indicating the posture of a man who intends to speak to them at a distance.” ¶ And said, Hear ye the words of the great king, the king of Assyria. Rabshakeh then goes on to give the message on behalf of King Sennacherib, King of Asshur, to Judah.

14 Thus saith the king, Let not Hezekiah deceive you: for he shall not be able to deliver you.*

* 2 Kings 18:29, deliver you out of his hand.

Rabshakeh attempts to instill fear in the hearts of Judah by assuring them that King Hezekiah could never stand up to Assyria and would never be able to defend the people.

15 Neither let Hezekiah make you trust in the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us: this* city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

* 2 Kings 18:30, and this.

* 2 Chronicles 32:11–15, Doth not Hezekiah persuade you to give over yourselves to die by famine and by thirst, saying, The LORD our God shall deliver us out of the hand of the king of Assyria? Hath not the same Hezekiah taken away his high places and his altars, and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, saying, Ye shall worship before one altar, and burn incense upon it? Know ye not what I and my fathers have done unto all the people of [other] lands? were the gods of the nations of those lands any ways able to deliver their lands out of mine hand? Who [was there] among all the gods of those nations that my fathers utterly destroyed, that could deliver his people out of mine hand, that your God should be able to deliver you out of mine hand? Now therefore let not Hezekiah deceive you, nor persuade you on this manner, neither yet believe him: for no god of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people out of mine hand, and out of the hand of my fathers: how much less shall your God deliver you out of mine hand?

Does not Satan, and his emissaries, also attempt to speak this way to us, telling us that the Lord God will not be able to deliver us? Not be able to save us? Does he not prey on our weakest points, our deepest fears in these matters? Satan not only knows us from our life history upon this earth, but also from the pre-existence. Let us bravely, valiantly trust in that God who gave us life. Nephi admonished us to hold on to the iron rod: “And I said unto them that it was the word of God; and whoso would hearken unto the word of God, and would hold fast unto it, they would never perish; neither could the temptations and the fiery darts of the adversary overpower them unto blindness, to lead them away to destruction. Wherefore, I, Nephi, did exhort them to give heed unto the word of the Lord; yea, I did exhort them with all the energies of my soul, and with all the faculty which I possessed, that they would give heed to the word of God and remember to keep his commandments always in all things” (1Nephi 15:24–25). ¶ One of Elder Gene R. Cook’s favorite scriptures on the power of prayer—which fits perfectly with our topic—is Alma 48:10–12: “Therefore we did pour out our souls in prayer to God, that he would strengthen us and deliver us out of the hands of our enemies, yea, and also give us strength that we might retain our cities, and our lands, and our possessions, for the support of our people. Yea, and it came to pass that the Lord our God did visit us with assurances that he would deliver us; yea, insomuch that he did speak peace to our souls, and did grant unto us great faith, and did cause us that we should hope for our deliverance in him. And we did take courage with our small force which we had received, and were fixed with a determination to conquer our enemies, and to maintain our lands, and our possessions, and our wives, and our children, and the cause of our liberty” (emphasis added). I see an admonition to prayer and scripture study mentioned often as a protection from personal apostasy. And other admonitions would include such things as following the Brethren, fighting pride, serving others, honoring our temple covenants, attending Church regularly and keeping the commandments, walking in all things as moved by the Spirit.

16 Harken not to Hezekiah: for thus saith the king of Assyria, Make [an agreement] with me [by] a present,[✓] and come out to me: and eat ye every one of his vine,* and every one of his fig tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his own cistern;

* 2 Kings 18:31, eat ye every man of his own vine.

✓ or, Seek my favour by a present

Harken not to Hezekiah: for thus saith the king of Assyria, Make [an agreement] with me [by] a present. The Targum (ܬܪܓܡ) renders it: “And hearken not unto Hezekiah; for thus saith the king of Assyria, Make peace (שלמא) with me, and come out to me”

(Stenning, so also Pauli and Chilton). Barnes suggests: “The Hebrew is literally, ‘Make with me a blessing’ (ברכה). The idea of its being done ‘by a present,’ is not in the Hebrew text. The word ‘blessing’ here probably means the same as peace. ‘Make peace with me,’ perhaps because peace was regarded as a blessing; and perhaps the word is used with a reference to one of the significations of: בִּרְךָ, which is to kneel down, and this word may refer to their kneeling down; that is, to their offering allegiance to the king of Assyria.” ¶ The word בִּרְכָה does appear as a gift or present in several scriptures, however, as pointed out by the third acceptance in Gesenius: “A gift, present, by which one signifies favour and good will, such as one offers with good wishes (Genesis 33:11; 1Samuel 25:27; 30:26; 2 Kings 5:15),” although Gesenius himself prefers to translate it as peace in ISAIAH 36:16. Barnes also suggests that בִּרְךָ kneeling, seems to be an invitation by King Sennacherib to have Judah come and kneel before him. Certainly it is in line with the other aggressive comments made by the Rabshakeh. If Rabshakeh meant peace, perhaps this was said in a sarcastic tone. ¶ And come out to me: and eat ye every one of his vine, and every one of his fig tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his own cistern. The expression, come out to me is one in which the Assyrian Rabshakeh is demanding the surrender of Jerusalem. Gill cleverly suggests the meaning of the Rabshakeh’s offer: “Forsake your king, throw off your allegiance to him, surrender yourselves and city to me.” Faussett explains: “Rab-shakeh tries to soften, in the eyes of the Jews, the well-known Assyrian policy of weakening the vanquished by deporting them to other lands (Genesis 47:21; 2 Kings 17:6).” ¶ The eating of the fruit and the drinking from their own cisterns represented the peace of being able to cultivate crops and partake of the same—as well as the absence of drought. It is put as a contraposition to “that they may eat their own dung, and drink their own piss” (ISAIAH 36:12b). Both the food and the plentiful water are in contrast to the abject desolation that would be brought about by a siege.

17 Until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards.*

* 2 Kings 18:32, and vineyards, a land of oil olive and of honey, that ye may live, and not die.

Until I come and take you away to a land like your own land. As has been mentioned, Assyria had a general policy of moving the people they conquered around. This was a measure they used to place people into submission. With the use of the words “until I come” there is an implication here that this deportation would not happen right away. In essence, this is what happened to the Ten Tribes of Israel; they were deported by Assyria and moved to other lands where, with time, most would find it difficult to retain a national identity. Rawlinson says: “It was so much the usual policy of Assyria to remove to a new locality a conquered people, which had given them trouble, that Rabshakeh felt safe in assuming that the fate in store for the Jews, if they submitted themselves, was a transplantation ... Rabshakeh tries to soften down the hardship of the lot before them by promises of a removal to a land equal in all respects to Palestine.” ¶ A land of corn⁸ and wine, a land of bread and vineyards. In Rain in Due Season, specific mention is made not only of vines, but also of oil: “Thou shalt have olive trees throughout all thy coasts, but thou shalt not anoint thyself with the oil; for thine olive shall cast his fruit” (Deuteronomy 28:40). Also, on the positive side, if Israel was obedient, the promise in Rain in Due Season was: “And your threshing shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time: and ye shall eat your bread to the full, and dwell in your land safely” (Leviticus 26:5).

18 [Beware] lest Hezekiah persuade you, saying, The LORD will deliver us. Hath any of the gods of the nations delivered his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

[Beware] lest Hezekiah persuade you, saying, The LORD will deliver us. Rabshakeh, like a high-pressure salesperson, tells them that they should not even think of the possibility that Hezekiah’s God, even the Lord Jehovah (יהוה) could deliver Judah out of this bind.

¶ Hath any of the gods of the nations delivered his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria? Rabshakeh gives as proof of Jehovah’s impotence, the fact that so far none of the nations’ idolatrous gods had been able to withstand the king of Assyria. Rabshakeh puts the Holy One of Israel at the same level as the worthless idols or לֹא אֱלֹהִים, no-gods of the nations.

19 Where [are] the gods of Hamath and Arphad? where [are] the gods of Sepharvaim?* and have they delivered Samaria out of my hand?

* 2 Kings 18:34, Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivah?

⁸ Not maize, but rather grains (see ISAIAH 17:5).

The לֹא אֱלֹהִים of Syria or Mesopotamia and their impotence are mentioned here, in an effort to impress on the Judeans the strength of the king of Assyria. Delitzsch says: “Rabshakeh’s words in ISAIAH 36:18–20 are the same as those in ISAIAH 10:8–11.”

20 Who [are they] among all the gods of these lands,* that have delivered their land* out of my hand, that the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of my hand?

* 2 Kings 18:35, countries / country.

If the לֹא אֱלֹהִים of these lands were impotent in stopping the king of Assyria, would not the God of Israel also be impotent to deliver Jerusalem—the thought is repeated for emphasis. Gill says: “Thus blasphemously setting the Lord God of Israel upon a level with the fictitious gods of the Gentiles; though these could not [deliver or save—GB], the Lord could, being the Lord God Almighty.”

21 But they* held their peace, and answered him not a word: for the king’s commandment was, saying, Answer him not.

* 2 Kings 18:36, the people.

It seems that these three Judean leaders had been instructed beforehand not to answer the emissaries of the king of Assyria, and they were obedient in this thing. The command was a wise one from Hezekiah, and his servants showed humility in obedience. Barnes says: “Hezekiah had commanded them not to answer. They were simply to hear what Rabshakeh had to propose, and to report to him, that he might decide on what course to pursue. It was a case also in which it was every way proper that they should be silent. There was so much insolence, self-confidence, blasphemy, the proposals were so degrading, and the claims were so arrogant, that it was not proper that they should enter into conference, or listen a moment to the terms proposed. Their minds also were so horror-stricken with the language of insolence and blasphemy, and their hearts so pained by the circumstances of the city, that they would not feel like replying to him. There are circumstances when it is proper to maintain a profound silence in the presence of revilers and blasphemers, and when we should withdraw from them, and go and spread the case before the Lord. This was done here ISAIAH 37:1, and the result showed that this was the course of wisdom” (emphasis added). This reminds me of General Conference in Salt Lake City. The Brethren have asked those who attend General Conference not to engage the hecklers who stand outside—and who either profane those things that are most sacred to us, or dress as return missionaries, or in otherwise try and offend.

22 Then came Eliakim, the son of Hilkiah, that [was] over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah, the son of Asaph, the recorder, to Hezekiah with [their] clothes rent, and told him the words of Rabshakeh.

After this disagreeable moment the three Jewish leaders return to King Hezekiah and rehearsed the blasphemous words they had heard from the Rabshakeh. They rent or tore their clothes in a sign of deep mourning and sadness. Barnes says: “The causes of their griefs were the insolence and arrogance of Rabshakeh; the proposal to surrender the city; the threatening of the siege on the one hand, and of the removal on the other, and the blasphemy of the name of their God, and the reproach of the king. All these things filled their hearts with grief, and they hastened to make report to Hezekiah.” Many mothers say, “If someone hurts me I will forgive it, but if they even as much as touch my children!” Tears run down my cheeks as I read these verses and write these thoughts. Insult the Lord, His Church, the Brethren, or desecrate those things which we hold most holy and I have feelings of great pain come over me.

9 September 2013

Isaiah 37

After receiving the report from his servants, Hezekiah dresses in sackcloth. He is reassured by Isaiah. Hezekiah receives a letter from King Sennacherib re-doubling the blasphemous offenses. The king of Judah spreads the letter before the Lord in the temple. Isaiah, speaking on behalf of the Lord, promises safety to Jerusalem and punishment to the insolent Sennacherib and the Assyrian forces.

vv. 1–7. When Hezekiah hears the report from his servants, he reacts by dressing in sackcloth and going to the temple. Hezekiah sends Eliakim and Shebna to give a report to Isaiah. They express their feelings of great concern over the precarious situation that Judah found itself in and express their hope that the Lord will protect His people. Isaiah reassures them on behalf of the Lord and explains that King Sennacherib will not go unpunished. Rather, that he will speedily return to his own nation where he would fall by the sword.

1 ¶ AND it came to pass, when king Hezekiah heard [it], that he rent his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the LORD.

As soon as King Hezekiah heard the contents of the distressing message recited by his representatives, the king tore his clothing in token of mourning and dressed himself in sackcloth. But that is not all. He right away turned to the Lord! He went into the House of the Lord—Holiness to the Lord—or the Holy Temple to pour out his heart unto God.

2 And he sent Eliakim, who [was] over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests covered with sackcloth, unto Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz.

And not only does King Hezekiah go to the Holy Temple, but he also sends his ministers to the Prophet Isaiah to have them share the recent events with him. Gill says: “And the elders of the priests” – as the chief of those that were concerned in civil affairs, so the chief of those that were employed in sacred things, were sent: this was a very honourable embassy; and it was showing great respect to the prophet, to send such personages to him: Covered with sackcloth] – as the king himself was, following his example; and this is to be understood not of the elders of the priests only, but of Eliakim and Shebna also. These, so clad, were sent by the king. Unto Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz] – to give him an account of the present situation of affairs, of the distress he was in, and to desire his prayers: a very proper person to apply to, a prophet, one highly dear to God, and honoured by him, had near access unto him, and knew much of his mind.” ¶ But how blessed we are today that we ought to bring our own matters before God—for our own lives—unless the Prophet has already instructed us on the matter as a Church. Our beloved Prophet Joseph Smith lovingly instructed: “It is a great thing to inquire at the hands of God, or to come into His presence; and we feel fearful to approach Him on subjects that are of little or no consequence, to satisfy the queries of individuals, especially about things the knowledge of which men ought to obtain in all sincerity, before God, for themselves, in humility by the prayer of faith; and more especially a Teacher or a High Priest in the Church.”¹

3 And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, This day [is] a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and of blasphemy: ~ for the children are come to the birth, and [there is] not strength to bring forth.

✓ or, provocation

These (ISAIAH 37:3–4) seem to be the words of King Hezekiah’s messengers that they shared with Isaiah. The utterance about no strength at the time of birth is a proverbial expression of impotence—in reaction to the provocation of King Sennacherib. Barnes explains: This is a day of rebuke] – This may refer either to the reproaches of Rabshakeh, or more probably to the fact that Hezekiah regarded the Lord as rebuking his people for their sins. The word which is used here (תוכחה), means more properly chastisement or punishment Psalm 149:7; Hosea 5:9. And of blasphemy] – Margin ||,

¹ Joseph Smith, History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1:338–339.

‘Provocation.’ The word used here (נִאֲצָה)², means properly reproach or contumely; and the sense is, that God and his cause had been vilified by Rabshakeh, and it was proper to appeal to him to vindicate the honor of his own name (ISAIAH 37:4).” Once again, no strength for the birth is an expression of impotence.

4 It may be the LORD thy God will hear the words of Rabshakeh, whom the king of Assyria his master hath sent to reproach the living God, and will reprove the words which the LORD thy God hath heard: wherefore lift up [thy] prayer for the remnant that is left. ✓

✓ found

It may be the LORD thy God will hear the words of Rabshakeh, whom the king of Assyria his master hath sent to reproach the living God. The expression “the LORD thy God” יהוה אלהיך, is a typical one of the times (in contrast to the יהוה אלהינו, Lord our God). In the story of the men who went to speak to Jeremiah about going into Egypt (Jeremiah 42, see discussion in notes on ISAIAH 30), we also saw the expression יהוה אלהיך used by the people talking to the Prophet Jeremiah (Jeremiah 42:3) as well as when the Prophet spoke back to the people (Jeremiah 42:4) אל-יהוה אלהיכם and יהוה אלהיך (Jeremiah 42:5). Only after each had politely attributed the Lord to each other, did the people switch to our (Jeremiah 42:6), יהוה אלהינו, “the LORD our God.”³ The hope of the messengers is that the Lord will deal with this provocation—knowing that the Lord does not always intercede in such cases. The Lord will only honor His own name if we have also honored it. Barnes says: “The reproach of the ‘living God’ consisted in comparing him to idols ... The phrase ‘the living God’ is often applied to Yahweh in contradistinction from idols, which were mere blocks of wood or stone.” ¶ And will reprove the words which the LORD thy God hath heard: wherefore lift up [thy] prayer for the remnant that is left. By the remnant that is left, in this context, meant the remaining tribes after Ephraim and her companions had been taken captive by Assyria. Hezekiah’s messengers ask Isaiah to intercede in prayer on behalf of Jerusalem. The messengers are aware that the Lord has already heard the blasphemous words, but ask the Prophet to pray on behalf of Jerusalem.

² Also, humiliation (HALOT).

³ These sort of subtle details are also seen in the conversation between King Ahab and King Ben-Hadad of Syria in 1Kings 20:31–33, see the use of “my brother,” (אחי) and “thy brother” (אחיך) in these verses. Likewise, in the Book of Mormon we read, “... and also my father began to murmur against the Lord his God” (emphasis added, 1 Nephi 16:20). This is an example of a Hebraisms preserved in the text of the Book of Mormon.

5 So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah.

The words in ISAIAH 37:3–4 seem to be those rehearsed to them by Hezekiah before leaving to see Isaiah.

6 And Isaiah said unto them, Thus shall ye say unto your master, Thus saith the LORD, Be not afraid of the words that thou hast heard, wherewith the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.

It is interesting that just like Hezekiah does not go in person to talk to Isaiah, the latter sends a message back, and does not go in person to speak with Hezekiah. The expression your master is literally, your lord or your adonai אדניכם. The translators probably used the word master not to confuse Hezekiah with Jehovah (for instance, although correct, the Bishops’ Bible is more confusing as it has: “Say thus vnto your lorde, Thus saith the Lord”; LBLA likewise has: “Así diréis a vuestro señor: ‘Así dice el SEÑOR’”; while RV1960 has: “Diréis así a vuestro señor: Así ha dicho Jehová”). The words of the LORD to Hezekiah, spoken through Isaiah, are of great comfort: אל-תִּירָא, “Be not afraid.” Ezekiel is likewise reassured thrice in one sentence, not to be afraid (אל-תִּירָא), “And thou, son of man, be not afraid of them, neither be afraid of their words, though briers and thorns be with thee, and thou dost dwell among scorpions: be not afraid of their words, nor be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house” (Ezekiel 2:6). When the Lord tells us not to be afraid, what comfort this brings to us. It is not merely comfort that He gives, however, but it is a commandment not to be unfaithful. This is such an important commandment—for us to learn to place our complete trust in God—that the Lord says: “Therefore, be not afraid of your enemies, for I have decreed in my heart, saith the Lord, that I will prove you in all things, whether you will abide in my covenant, even unto death, that you may be found worthy (D&C 98:14). Now the Prophet Isaiah goes on to make it clear that indeed He has heard the blasphemies of King Sennacherib’s servants, and by extension, of the king of Asshur. Numerous commentators speak of the disparaging connotation of the word נִעֲרִי (from the root נָעַר here translated as his servants when it would more correctly be translated as his lads. The ESV renders it: “Do not be afraid because of the words that you have heard, with which the young men of the king of Assyria have reviled me.” Leeser offers: “Be not afraid because of the words which thou hast heard, with which the boys of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.”

7 Behold, I will send a blast upon him, ✓ and he shall hear a rumour, and return to his own land; and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.

✓ or, put a spirit into him

Behold, I will send a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumour, and return to his own land. Rawlinson explains it: “I will put a spirit within him; i.e. I will take away from him the spirit of pride and arrogance by which he has been hitherto actuated, and I will infuse into his heart, instead, a spirit of hesitation and fear.” Barnes writes: “Margin ||, ‘Put a spirit into him.’ The word rendered ‘blast’ (רוּחַ) is commonly rendered ‘spirit.’ It may denote breath, air, soul, or spirit. There is no reason to think that the word is used here in the sense of blast of wind, as our translators seem to have supposed. The sense is probably, ‘I will infuse into him a spirit of fear, by which he shall be alarmed by the rumour which he shall hear, and return to his own land.’ The rumour or report here referred to, was doubtless that respecting Tirhakah king of Ethiopia (ISAIAH 37:9). It was this which would alarm him, and drive him in haste from the cities which he was now besieging, and be the means of expelling him from the land.” ¶ And I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land. See ISAIAH 37:38, wherein we learn that King Sennacherib was killed by the hand of his own sons.

vv. 8–20. Rabshakeh leaves Jerusalem. Sennacherib sends a written message to Hezekiah along the same blasphemous lines as what we saw in the address of his servants to the servants of Hezekiah in the previous chapter. Hezekiah, upon receiving the letter, spreads it before the Lord in the temple and offers a faith-filled prayer. In it, Hezekiah shares the anguish felt at the reproaching and threatening letter received from Sennacherib. The King of Judah admits that Assyria has been strong in the past, but that her attacks have been against nations who lean on idols. Hezekiah asks the Lord to “save us” (הוֹשִׁיעֵנוּ) so that He may be glorified.

8 ¶ So Rabshakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against Libnah: for he had heard that he was departed from Lachish.

So Rabshakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against Libnah: Alexander writes: “Both these towns were in the plain or lowlands of Judea, southwest of Jerusalem (Joshua 15:39, 42), originally seats of Canaanitish kings or chiefs, conquered by Joshua (Joshua 12:11, 15). Lachish was one of the fifteen places fortified by Rehoboam (2 Chronicles 11:9), and one of the last towns taken by Nebuchadnezzar (Jeremiah 34:7). It was still in existence after the exile. (Nehemiah 11:30). Libnah was a city of the Levites and of refuge (Joshua 21:13), and appears to have been nearer to Jerusalem.” ¶ For he had heard that he was departed from Lachish. AMP renders it: “So the Rabshakeh returned and found the king of Assyria fighting against Libnah [a fortified city of Judah]; for he had heard that the king had departed from Lachish.” Rawlinson says: “Sennacherib’s object in moving upon Libnah is doubtful; but it would seem, from his monuments, that he had captured Lachish (Layard, Nineveh and Babylon, pp. 149–152), and had gone on to Libnah, as the next stronghold on the way to Egypt.” Regarding נָסַע, departed, Alexander writes: “The last verb in this verse properly denotes the removal of a tent or an encampment, an idea happily expressed in Lowth’s translation by the military term decamped”⁴ (emphasis added). Indeed נָסַע, means “to pull out tent pegs > to break camp > to move off... to depart (an army)” (HALOT, see also Gesenius). I particularly like this as I am studying the word נָסַע in my Modern Hebrew tapes at this time (July 2013). A similar American pop-culture expression is “Let’s blow this popsicle stand” which has simply come to mean to leave quickly.

9 And he heard say concerning Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, He is come forth to make war with thee. And when he heard [it], he sent messengers to Hezekiah, saying,

It seems that Sennacherib, upon hearing that King Tirhakah (תִּרְחָקָה) of Ethiopia was sending troops to attack (probably the advancing Assyrian forces), had moved on to meet Tirhakah. But feeling that the Rabshakeh had left unfinished business in Jerusalem, Sennacherib sent a new set of messengers for Hezekiah, and a letter to boot (ISAIAH 37:14). Alexander explains: “Tirhakah was one of the most famous conquerors of ancient times ... He was at this time either in close alliance with [Egypt], or more probably in actual possession of Thebais or Upper Egypt. The fact that an Ethiopian dynasty did reign there is attested by the ancient writers, and confirmed by still existing monuments. The Greek forms of the name (Ταρράκος, Τάρκος, Τέρκων) vary but little from the Hebrew.” What follows is what the messengers said to Hezekiah.

⁴ Lowth has: “But Rabshakeh returned: and found the king of Assyria besieging Libnah; for he had heard, that he had decamped from Lachish.”

10 Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, Let not thy God, in whom thou trustest, deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be given* into the hand of the king of Assyria.

* 2 Kings 19:10, delivered.

These words, delivered by the Assyrian messengers, were full of blasphemy, implying that the God of Israel was not capable of delivering Jerusalem from the hand of the king of Asshur. Gill notices: “[Sennacherib] gives Hezekiah the title of king, and owns him to be king of Judah; which was more than Rabshakeh his servant would do ... [however] nothing could be more devilish and satanical, to represent the God of truth, that cannot lie, as a liar and deceiver: in this the king of Assyria outdid Rabshakeh himself; he had represented Hezekiah as an impostor and a deceiver of the people, and warns them against him as such; and here Sennacherib represents God himself as a deceiver, and cautions Hezekiah against trusting in him: nothing is more opposite to Satan and his instruments, than faith in God, and therefore they labour with all their might and main to weaken it..”

11 Behold, thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands by destroying them utterly; and shalt thou be delivered?

Alexander writes: “The interjection behold appeals to these events as something perfectly notorious; as if he had said, ‘See what has happened to others, and then judge whether thou art likely to escape’ ... This clause is, in most versions, rendered as an interrogation, but is properly on exclamation of contemptuous incredulity. All the lands may either be an elliptical expression for all the lands subdued by them, or, which is more in keeping with the character of the discourse, a hyperbolical expression of the speaker’s arrogance.”

12 Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed, [as] Gozan, and Haran, and Rezep, and the children of Eden which [were] in Telassar?*

* 2 Kings 19:11, or Thelasar.

Rawlinson writes: “My fathers” – The Assyrian monarchs call all those who have preceded them upon the throne their ‘fathers,’ without intending to claim any blood-relationship. Sargon, Sennacherib’s father, though a usurper and the first king of a new dynasty, frequently speaks of ‘the kings his fathers’ (Records of the Past, Ch. 7. pp. 39, 51, etc.). Gozan ... Haran ... Rezep ... Telassar] – ‘Gozan’ is, beyond all doubt, the region known to the Greeks as Gauzanitis, which was the eastern portion of Upper Mesopotamia, or the country about the sources of the Khabour river. The Assyrian conquest of this tract is indicated by the settlement of the Israelites in the region (2 Kings 17:6; 18:11; 1 Chronicles 5:26). ‘Harsh’ is the well-known ‘city of Nahor,’ (Genesis 24:10) called in Acts 7:2 ‘Charran,’ and by the Greeks and Romans, ‘Carrhae.’ It has now recovered its old designation, and is known as Hurrah. ‘Rezep’ was in the neighborhood of Haran, and is mentioned as belonging to Assyria as early as B.C. 775 (Eponym Canon, p. 82). It had probably revolted and been reduced at a later date. ‘Telassar,’ ‘the Hill of Asshur,’ is not mentioned in the Assyrian inscriptions, but was probably the Assyrian name of a town on or near the Euphrates, in the country of the Bent-Eden, which was not far from Carche-mish (see Records of the Past, Ch. 3. pp. 90–92). The children of Eden] The Assyrian inscriptions mention a ‘Bit-Adini’ (comp. Amos 1:5), and a chief who is called ‘the son of Adini;’ both belonging to the Middle Euphrates region. The ‘children of Eden’ (Beni-Eden) were probably the people of the tract about Bit-Adini.” The vital point here, for these messengers who did not know the Lord, is that all of these people had fallen before Asshur and how dare Jerusalem think that she could withstand?

13 Where [is] the king of Hamath, and the king of Arphad,* and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivah?

* 2 Kings 19:13, or Arpad.

Alexander has: “The question implies that they were nowhere, or had ceased to be. The first three names occur in the same order in Rabshakeh’s speech (ISAIAH.

36:19), and the remaining two also in the parallel passage (2 Kings 18:34).”

14 And Hezekiah received the letter* from the hand of the messengers, and read it: and Hezekiah went up unto the house of the LORD, and spread it before the LORD.

* 2 Chronicles 32:16–17. And his servants spake yet [more] against the LORD God, and against his servant Hezekiah. He wrote also letters to rail on the LORD God of Israel, and to speak against him, saying, As the gods of the nations of [other] lands have not delivered their people out of mine hand, so shall not the God of Hezekiah deliver his people out of mine hand.

Alexander has: “[The spreading of the letter before the Lord seems] to have been no studied, calculated movement, but a natural expression of anxiety and trust in God, as a protector and a confidential friend; a state of mind which to an infidel must needs appear ridiculous. As any man would carry an open letter, which troubled or perplexed him, to a friend for sympathy and counsel, so the pious king spreads this blasphemous epistle before God, as the occasion and subject of his prayers.”

15 And Hezekiah prayed* unto the LORD, saying,

* 2 Chronicles 32:20, And for this [cause] Hezekiah the king, and the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz, prayed and cried to heaven.

The book of Kings has both Hezekiah and Isaiah praying to the Lord while here we have Hezekiah praying. Most likely, both statements were true. Individual prayer never precludes a group prayer. At any case, there is much power in prayer. I know how lonely I was before I met the Lord through the reading of the Book of Mormon in December 1973 and my subsequent baptism and confirmation (9 March 1974) through which I have felt the constant companionship of the Holy Ghost. I have never felt alone or lonely since then. I love these words from Amulek: “Therefore may God grant unto you, my brethren, that ye may begin to exercise your faith unto repentance, that ye begin to call upon his holy name, that he would have mercy upon you; Yea, cry unto him for mercy; for he is mighty to save. Yea, humble yourselves, and continue in prayer unto him. Cry unto him when ye are in your fields, yea, over all your flocks. Cry unto him in your houses, yea, over all your household, both morning, mid-day, and evening. Yea, cry unto him against the power of your enemies. Yea, cry unto him against the devil, who is an enemy to all righteousness. Cry unto him over the crops of your fields, that ye may prosper in them. Cry over the flocks of your fields, that they may increase. But this is not all; ye must pour out your souls in your closets, and your secret places, and in your wilderness. Yea, and when you do not cry unto the Lord, let your hearts be full, drawn out in prayer unto him continually for your welfare, and also for the welfare of those who are around you” (Alma 34:17–27).

16 O LORD of hosts, God of Israel, that dwellest [between] the cherubims, thou [art] the God, [even] thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth: thou hast made heaven and earth.

Gill has: “O Lord of hosts, God of Israel, that dwellest between the cherubim” – Or, ‘the inhabitant of the cherubim’ which were over the mercy seat, the residence of the Shechinah, or Majesty of God, the symbol of the divine Presence in the holy of holies; a title which the God of Israel, the Lord of armies in heaven, and earth bears, and distinguishes him from all other gods, and which several titles carry in them arguments to strengthen faith in prayer; being ‘the Lord of hosts.’ He was able to do whatsoever was desired, and more abundantly; being ‘the God of Israel,’ their covenant God, it might be hoped and expected he would protect and defend them; and sitting ‘between the cherubim,’ on the mercy seat, great encouragement might be had that he would be gracious and merciful, and hear and help: Thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth] – this is opposed to the conceit of Sennacherib, that he was only the God of the Jews, and had no concern with other kingdoms and nations; whereas all belong to him, and him only; they are all under his jurisdiction and dominion, and at his will and control: Thou hast made heaven and earth] – and so has an indisputable right to the government of the whole world, and to the disposal of all things in it.”

17 Incline* thine ear, O LORD, and hear; open thine eyes, O LORD, and see: and hear all the words of Sennacherib, which hath sent to reproach the living God.

* 2 Kings 19:16, bow down.

Hezekiah continues with an immense amount of faith and love for God, and pleads with the Lord that He may pay special heed to his prayer and notice to all the words of Sennacherib, which he has sent to reproach the living God—not the gods of wood. Some reject the expression about the ear and eyes as anthropomorphism. Yet the Bible tells us that we are made after the image of God: “So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them” (Genesis 1:27).

18 Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Assyria have laid waste all the nations, ✓ and their countries,*

* 2 Kings 19:17, have destroyed the nations and their lands.

✓ lands

This, then, is the prayer which Hezekiah uttered to Jehovah. Hezekiah begins by pointing out Assyrian success against אֶת-כָּל-הָאֲרָצוֹת, all the land. Barnes has: “Of a truth] – It is as he has said, that all the nations had been subjected to the arms of the Assyrian. He now intends to add Jerusalem to the number of vanquished cities and kingdoms, and to boast; that he has subdued the nation under the protection of Yahweh, as he had done the nations under the protection of idol-gods. Have laid waste all, the nations] – Hebrew, as Margin||, ‘All the lands.’ But this is evidently an elliptical form of expression, meaning all the inhabitants or people of the lands.”

19 And have cast ✓ their gods into the fire: for they [were] no gods, but the work of men's hands, wood and stone: therefore they have destroyed them.

✓ given

Hezekiah admits that the Assyrian feat against other gods, however, is hardly of note as these are all no-gods (לֹא אֱלֹהִים), the work of men's hands, made out of wood and stone. Regarding their being cast into the fire, Barnes explains: “This appears to have been the usual policy of the Assyrians and Babylonians ... They began usually by removing the people themselves whom they had subdued, to another land. They thus intended to alienate their minds as much as possible from their own country. They laid everything waste by fire and sword, and thus destroyed their homes, and all the objects of their attachment. They destroyed their temples, their groves, and their household gods. They well knew that the civil policy of the nation was founded in religion, and that, to subdue them effectually, it was necessary to abolish their religion.”

20 Now therefore, O LORD our God,* save us from his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou [art] the LORD, [even] thou only.

* 2 Kings 19:19, our God, I beseech thee, save

Hezekiah requests that his prayer be honored so all the kingdoms of the earth (כָּל-מַמְלָכוֹת הָאָרֶץ) will magnify the Lord as the one and only God. I have likewise prayed, when my children were younger, that God would listen to their prayers not for my sake, but so that my children might learn to have faith in God, and know the power of prayer. One time at Pinecrest Lake my children had been trying to fish from a little rental boat and had not caught anything for a very long time. I suggested prayer. One of my children offered the prayer and asked for a huge catch (perhaps as many as 100 fish!). I suggested that the prayer be repeated and that only one fish be part of the request. Within a few minutes that fish was caught. We caught no other fish that day. Gill says: “By [the Lord] doing that which other gods could not do (they could not save the nations that worshipped them from the hand of the Assyrians); if therefore the God of Israel saved his people from them, this would be a proof to all the world that he is God and there is none besides him.”

vv. 21–38. Isaiah, speaking on behalf of the Lord, promises Judah protection. Sennacherib has mocked Jerusalem but Jerusalem shall have the last laugh. In reproaching Judah and Hezekiah, Sennacherib had also reproached the living God. Sennacherib's arrogance is going to be shamed as the Lord will show His power. The Lord knows all things, even the rage felt by King Sennacherib. The Lord would protect Jerusalem and also send Sennacherib packing. The Assyrians camped against Jerusalem would suffer death at the hand of the angel of the Lord. These things were fulfilled as the Assyrians were defeated and Sennacherib returned home only to find death waiting for him.

21 ¶ Then Isaiah the son of Amoz sent unto Hezekiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Whereas thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib king of Assyria:*

* 2 Kings 19:20, [That] which thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib king of Assyria I have heard.

This is a very interesting pattern we see here. Hezekiah prays to the Lord and receives an answer through the prophet Isaiah. We pray to God the Eternal Father in the name of Jesus Christ and receive an answer through the Holy Ghost; or through Christ through the instrumentality of the Spirit. Or we may receive an answer through our Prophet, Stake President, Bishop or Branch President, or an inspired friend or speaker. In 2 Kings the Lord, through Isaiah, makes it clear that He has heard Hezekiah's prayer. How often can we be instruments in the hands of God to help bring an answer to others' prayers? Gill says: "Isaiah, by a spirit of prophecy, was made acquainted by the Lord both with the prayer of Hezekiah, and the Lord's answer to it; and therefore immediately sent to the king, who was either at the temple praying, or was returned to the palace, to let him know, the mind of the Lord in this matter." Barnes has: "Whereas thou hast prayed" – Because thou hast come to me instead of relying on thy own resources and strength."

22 This [is] the word which the LORD hath spoken concerning him; The virgin, the daughter of Zion, hath despised thee, [and] laughed thee to scorn; the daughter of Jerusalem hath shaken her head at thee.

The Lord paints Jerusalem in a state of mocking Sennacherib, despising him, laughing at him and shaking her head at him. The virgin, the daughter of Zion is given as representing Jerusalem. Gill has, "The fort of Zion, [is] called a 'virgin,' because it had never been forced, or taken and to show that it was a vain thing in Sennacherib to attempt it, as well as it would have been an injurious one, could he have accomplished it; ... [for] he who was her husband to whom she was espoused as a chaste virgin, would defend and protect her [from such a rape]; and the whole is designed to show the impotent malice of the king of Assyria; otherwise, at the time when these words were spoken, the daughter of Zion was in a fearful and trembling condition, and not in a laughing frame; but this declares what she might do now, and would do hereafter, for anything that he could do against her."

23 Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed? and against whom hast thou exalted [thy] voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high? [even] against the Holy One of Israel.

Indeed, Sennacherib had directly, and through his servants, blasphemed the Holy One of Israel. Alexander writes: "To raise the voice may simply mean to speak, or more emphatically to speak boldly, perhaps with an allusion to the literal loudness of Rabshakeh's address to the people on the wall (ISAIAH 36:13)." Barnes has: "To lift up the eyes is an indication of haughtiness and pride. He had evinced arrogance in his manner, and he was yet to learn that it was against the living and true God."

24 By thy servants* hast thou reproached the Lord, and hast said, By the multitude of my chariots am I come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon; and I will cut down the tall cedars thereof, [and] the choice fir trees thereof:† † and I will enter into the height of his border, [and] the forest of his Carmel.† † †

* 2 Kings 19:23, messengers.

 2 Kings 19:23, lodgings.

 2 Kings 19:23, [and into].

✓ By the hand of thy servants

✓ ✓ the tallness of the cedars thereof, and the choice of the fir trees thereof

✓ ✓ ✓ or, the forest and his fruitful field

Henderson explains: "Here the insolent monarch is called to account for his blasphemous arrogance; and a specimen is given of the vaunting language which he had dared to employ. No obstacle had hitherto impeded him in his progress. The most inaccessible regions of Lebanon had been explored by his troops; and, in the wanton pride of his heart, he had made havoc of its most stately trees."

25 I have digged, and drunk water;* and with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of the besieged† places.

* 2 Kings 19:24, drunk strange waters.

✓ or, fenced and closed

I have digged, and drunk water. Gill explains: "In places where he came, and found no water for his army, he set his soldiers to work, to dig cisterns, as the Targum, or wells, so that they had water sufficient to drink; in 2 Kings 19:24, it is 'strange waters,' which were never known before." Probably strange was put for foreign. ¶ And with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of the besieged places. Gill explains: "Or, as the Targum, 'with the soles of the feet of the people that are with me'; the Syriac version, 'with the hoofs of my horses': with which he trampled down banks of rivers, and pools, and cisterns of water; signifying the vast numbers of his soldiers, who could drink up a river, or carry it away with them, or could turn the streams of rivers that ran by the sides, or round about, cities besieged, and so hindered the carrying on of a siege, and the taking of the place; but he had ways and means very easily to drain them, and ford them; or to cut off all communication of the water from the besieged. Some render it, 'I have dried up all the rivers of Egypt' (כל יאורי מצור, omnes rivos Aegypti, Vitringa), as Kimhi, on 2 Kings 19:24, observes, and to be understood hyperbolically; see ISAIAH 19:6, so Ben Melech observes." Henderson writes: "Nor had he experienced any want of water in the desert for the supply of his immense army; the mere introduction of which into Egypt would dry up the Nile, and all its branches! The language is mainly figurative; since the marching of troops over the ridges of Lebanon would have been as preposterous as the conveyance of chariots over those elevated, precipitous, and snow-clad regions impossible. As he had conquered every difficulty so now he would carry all before him." Barnes has: "The boast of drying up streams with the sole of the foot, is intended to convey the idea that he had not only supplied water for his own empire by digging wells, but that he had cut off the supplies of water from the others against whom he had made war. The idea perhaps is, that if such an army as his was, should pass through the streams of a country that they should invade, and should only take away the water that would adhere to the sole or the hollow of the foot on their march, it would dry up all the streams. It is strong hyperbolical language, and is designed to indicate the number of the forces which were under his command."

26 Hast thou not heard long ago, [how] I have done it; [and] of ancient times, that I have formed it? now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldest be to lay waste defenced* cities [into] ruinous heaps. ✓

* 2 Kings 19:25, Fenced.

✓ or, Hast thou not heard how I have made it long ago, and formed it of ancient times? should I now bring it to be laid waste, and defenced cities to be ruinous heaps?

The Lord stops quoting Sennacherib and now responds to the king's insolence. The expression "Hast thou not heard" הֲלֹא שָׁמַעְתָּ is also found in an extended form in ISAIAH 40:28, הֲלֹא יָדַעְתָּ אִם-לֹא שָׁמַעְתָּ, Hast thou not known, or hast thou not heard." Gill writes: "Hast thou not heard long ago?" – By report, by reading the history of ancient times, or by means of the prophets; these are the words of the Lord to Sennacherib. The Targum adds, 'what I did to Pharaoh king of Egypt.'" Barnes has: "Hast thou not heard" – This is evidently the language of God addressed to Sennacherib. It is designed to state to him that he was under his control; that this was the reason (ISAIAH 37:27) why the inhabitants of the nations had been unable to resist him; that he was entirely in his hands (ISAIAH 37:28); and that he would control him as he pleased (ISAIAH 37:29). Long ago how I have done it –

You boast that all this is by your own counsel and power. Yet I have done it; that is, I have purposed, planned, arranged it long ago. That thou shouldest be to lay waste – I have raised you up for this purpose, and you have been entirely under my control." In other words, the Lord made it possible or allowed the king of Asshur to conquer the nations and this is why Sennacherib had so much success, and no other reason.

27 Therefore their inhabitants [were] of small power, ✓ they were dismayed and confounded: they were [as] the grass of the field, and [as] the green herb, [as] the grass on the housetops, and [as corn] blasted before it be grown up.

✓ short of hand

Therefore their inhabitants [were] of small power, they were dismayed and confounded: It was not hard, explains the Lord, to conquer these nations. Sennacherib should not flatter himself of any great thing, as these nations were of little strength or power to withstand. It was their weakness, rather than Asshur's strength, that permitted Sennacherib's success. Man often makes comparisons to make himself look greater. ¶ They were [as] the grass of the field, and [as] the green herb. This theme is expanded upon in ISAIAH 40:6–8, wherein the frailty and transitory beauty of man is compared to the grass that withers. ¶ [As] the grass on the housetops, and [as corn⁵] blasted before it be grown up. Alexander explains: "In this last expression there is reference at once to the flat surface, the earthy material, and the various uses of the oriental house-top, in consequence of which seeds would frequently spring up there, but without depth of root, and therefore short-lived." Regarding the blasted corn, Delitzsch explains: "This idea is expressed still more strikingly in Kings, 'like corn blighted (שָׂדֶפֶה, compare שָׂדֶפֶן, corn-blight) before the shooting up of the stalk;' the Assyrian being regarded as a parching east wind, which destroys the seed before the stalk is formed." HALOT explains שָׂדֶפֶה as: "scorching, heat (grain dried up by an early east wind)."

28 But I know thy abode, ✓ and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage against me.

✓ or, sitting

⁵ Not maize, but rather grains (see ISAIAH 17:5).

The Hebrew word for abode שֶׁבַח also means sitting. Where one sits is one's abode, so to speak. The Lord here is saying that He knows everything about Sennacherib: where he dwells, his comings and goings, and the anger that the king felt toward Jehovah.

29 Because thy rage against me, and thy tumult, is come up into mine ears, therefore will I put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.

Because thy rage against me, and thy tumult, is come up into mine ears. Elsewhere we have said that God is not limited to a conversation with one person at a time, but rather, He able to simultaneously hear and respond to prayers from an unlimited number of persons. And not just prayers, but He is able to hear all of our thoughts and words—and in the case of King Sennacherib, his thoughts and words against the Holy One of Israel. Sennacherib might have thought he was speaking privately to someone or that his thoughts were private. In the New Covenant we read often how the Savior read the thoughts and intents of men: “And Jesus knowing their thoughts said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts?” (Matthew 9:4; also see Mark 2:7–8). ¶ Therefore will I put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest. As a result of this insolence on the part of Sennacherib, the Lord would guide him back home with the ease—and with a total lack of resistance—that an oxen or a horse is guided. Rings are put on bulls or cattle's noses in order to obtain their obedience; horses are guided through bridles. Faussett mentions that: “In a bas-relief of Khorsabad, captives are led before the king by a cord attached to a hook, or ring, passing through the under lip or the upper lip, and nose.”

30 And this [shall be] a sign unto thee, Ye shall eat [this] year such as groweth of itself;* and the second year that which springeth of the same: and in the third year sow ye, and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruit thereof.

* 2 Kings 19:11, such things as grow of themselves.

Rawlinson explains: “This shall be a sign unto thee”—rather, the sign.⁶ The prophet now turns to Hezekiah, and makes an address to him. ‘This,’ he says, ‘shall be the sign unto thee of Sennacherib’s being effectually ‘bridled,’ and the danger from Assyria over. In the third year from the present the land shall have returned to its normal condition, and you shall enjoy its fruits as formerly. Meanwhile you shall obtain sufficient nourishment from the grain which has sown itself.’ The ‘third year,’ according to Hebrew reckoning, might be little more than one year from the date of the delivery of the prophecy. The entire withdrawal of all the Assyrian garrisons from the country, which no doubt followed on Sennacherib’s retreat, might well have occupied the greater part of a year. Till they were withdrawn, the Jews could not venture to till their territory. Plant vineyards] – The Assyrians had, no doubt, cut down the vines (see Records of the Past, vol. 3. pp. 40, 62, 79; vol. 7. p. 43, etc.; Layard, ‘Monuments of Nineveh,’ second series, pl. 40).”

⁶ The sign, הַאֵימָה.

31 And the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah √ shall again take root downward, and bear fruit upward:

✓ the escaping of the house of Judah that remaineth

Faussett has: “Judah remained after the ten tribes were carried away; also those of Judah who should survive Sennacherib’s invasion are meant.” But also looking forward to the last days, the remnant that would return unto Christ from each of the tribes of Israel. Barnes explains: “Shall again take root downward] – Like a tree that had been prevented by any cause from growing or bearing fruit. A tree, to bear well, must be in a soil where it can strike its roots deep. The sense is, that all obstructions to their growth and prosperity would be removed.”

32 For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and they that escape √ out of mount Zion: the zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do this.

✓ the escaping

Out of those who would be preserved in Jerusalem and more particularly mount Zion, out of this remnant, there would be a buildup of population. Gill writes about the Zeal of the Lord: “[The Lord’s] concern for his own honour and glory, and his great love to his people, shall engage him to perform all that is here promised and foretold.” Also, the whole of the Lamanite nation are included here, as they left out of Jerusalem for the American continent.

33 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the king of Assyria, He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shields, nor cast a bank against it.

After comforting the Jerusalemites about the restoration of peace in the land, growth of food and of Judean population, the Lord further solaces the people with the most urgent matter at hand, Sennacherib. As Rawlinson explains, the typical Assyrian attacks are here summarized [but “God promises that Jerusalem shall experience none of these things at Sennacherib’s hands.”]: “The first assailants were the archers. They boldly approached in large bodies, and strove to clear the battlements of the defenders. Then shields were brought into play. Under their cover the archers drew nearer; the scaling parties brought up their ladders; the miners attacked the foundations of the walls; and the torch-bearers endeavoured to fire the gates. Finally, if these tactics did not avail, banks were raised against the walls, which were then assailed with battering-rams till they were breached and the assailants could enter.”

34 By the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city, saith the LORD.

Instead of an Assyrian attack led by Sennacherib, the king would return to his homeland the very way that he came. The elliptical comment is that in so doing, the king would be like a dog who after much barking and bravado is so scared that he runs away with his tail between the legs.

35 For I will defend this city to save it for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

The Lord will defend His own honor in this whole matter and will do it in part to fulfill promises made to King David (about preserving a remnant from David’s loins—who would be the Christ). See ISAIAH 37:29, where the Lord states that He shall lead a submissive Sennacherib back to his own place, like a bull pulled by his nose ring. This seems to have been the end of the revelation. We next hear of the Lord’s fighting on the side of Jerusalem.

36 Then the angel* of the LORD went forth, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians a hundred and fourscore and five thousand: and when they arose early in the morning, behold, they [were] all dead corpses.

* 2 Kings 19:35, And it came to pass that night, that the angel.

* 2 Chronicles 32:21a. And the LORD sent an angel, which cut off all the mighty men of valour, and the leaders and captains in the camp of the king of Assyria.

Or, as explained by the Amplified Version, “And the Angel of the Lord went forth, and slew 185,000 in the camp of the Assyrians; and when [the living] arose early in the morning, behold, all these were dead bodies. [II Kings 19:35.]” In other words, the armies that arrived to besiege and harm Jerusalem perished in the night by the hand of the angel of the Lord. Those who arose early in the morning were the Jerusalemites.

Regarding this angel (מַלְאָךְ), Barnes explains: “The word ‘angel’ (מַלְאָךְ) from מֵלֵאךְ to send) means properly one sent, a messenger, from a private person Job 1:14; from a king (1 Samuel 16:19; 19:11, 14, 20). Then it means a messenger of God, and is applied: (1) to an angel (Exodus 23:20; 2 Samuel 14:16; et al.); (2) to a prophet (Haggai 1:13; Malachi 3:1; (3) to a priest (Ecclesiastes 5:5; Malachi 2:7) ... The general sense of the word is that of ambassador, messenger, one sent to bear a message, to execute a commission, or to perform any work or service. It is known that the Jews were in the habit of tracing all events to the agency of invisible beings sent forth by God to accomplish his purposes in this world ... And there is no more improbability in the supposition that God employs invisible and heavenly messengers to accomplish his purposes, than there is that he employs man. Whatever, therefore, were the means used in the destruction of the Assyrian army, there is no improbability in the opinion that they were under the direction of a celestial agent sent forth to accomplish the purpose.” ¶ It is also possible that the מַלְאָךְ יְהוָה, angel of the LORD, is a representation of the Lord Himself in His pre-mortal state.

37 So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at Nineveh.

It is unclear how Sennacherib found out about the decimation of his troops, but it seems that this is what precipitated his retreat back home.

38 And it came to pass, as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons* smote him with the sword; and they escaped into the land of Armenia:~ and Esarhaddon his son reigned in his stead.

* 2 Chronicles 32:21b, So he returned with shame of face to his own land. And when he was come into the house of his god, they that came forth of his own bowels slew him there with the sword.

✓ Ararat

Barnes writes: “As he was worshipping] – Perhaps this time was selected because he might be then attended with fewer guards, or because they were able to surprise him without the possibility of his summoning his attendants to his rescue. In the house] – In the temple. Of Nisroch his god] – The god whom he particularly adored ... That Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons smote him with the sword] – ... These two sons subsequently became, in Armenia, the heads of two celebrated families there, the Arzerunii, and the Genunii (see Jos. Ant. x. 1, 5, note). And they escaped] – This would lead us to suppose that it was some private matter which led them to commit the parricide, and that they did not do it with the expectation of succeeding to the crown. Into the land of Armenia] – Hebrew, as Margin||, ‘Ararat.’ The Chaldee renders this, ‘The land of ܐܪܪܬ, that is, Kardi-anum, or, the mountains of the Kurds. The modern Kurdistan includes a considerable part of the ancient Assyria and Media, together with a large portion of Armenia. This expression is generally substituted for Ararat by the Syriac, Chaldee, and Arabic translators, when they do not retain the original word Ararat. It is a region among the mountains of Ararat or Armenia. The Syriac renders it in the same way – ‘Of Kurdoya’ (the Kurds) ... Ararat was a region or province in Armenia ... The name ‘Ararat’ belongs properly to the region or country, and not to any particular mountain.” Gill says: “And it came to pass, as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god] – Josephus says, in his temple, called Arasce; but Nisroch was the name of his deity he worshipped; though who he was is not certain. Jarchi says, in one of their expositions it is said to be ܢܨܪ, ‘neser,’ a plank of the ark of Noah; in Tobit 1:24 it is called his idol Dagon; according to Hillerus, the word signifies a prince; and with Vitringa, a king lifted up, or glorious, and whom he takes to be the Assyrian Belus, worshipped in the form and habit of Mars: That Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons smote him with the sword] – the former of these had his name from an idol so called, 2 Kings 17:31, which signifies a glorious king; and the other may signify a prince of treasure. Josephus says they were his eldest sons ... Jarchi says that he prayed to his god, and vowed, if he would deliver him, that he might not be slain, he would offer up his two sons to him, who standing by, and hearing him, therefore slew him; the reason given for it in the Apocrypha: ‘And here passed not five and fifty days, before two of his sons killed him, and they fled into the mountains of Ararath; and Sarchedonus his son reigned in his stead; who appointed over his father’s accounts, and over all his affairs, Achiacharus my brother Anael’s son.’ (Tobit 1:21). According to Munster’s edition, is, that Sennacherib asked his counsellors and senators why the holy blessed God was so zealous for Israel and Jerusalem, that an angel destroyed the host of Pharaoh, and all the firstborn of Egypt, but the young men the Lord gave them, salvation was continually by their hands; and his wise men and counsellors answered him, that Abraham the father of Israel led forth his son to slay him, that the Lord his God might be propitious to him, and hence it is he is so zealous for his children, and has executed vengeance on thy servants; then, said the king, I will slay my sons; by this means, perhaps, he may be propitious to me, and help me; which word, when it came to Adrammelech and Sharezer, they laid in wait for him, and killed him with the sword at the time he went to pray before Dagon his god: and they escaped into the land of Armenia]; or ‘Ararat;’ on the mountains of which the ark rested, Genesis 8:4. Both the Septuagint version and Josephus say it was Armenia into which he escaped; and Jerom observes, that Ararat is a champaign country in Armenia, through which the river Araxes flows, at the foot of Mount Taurus, whither it is extended. The Targum calls it the land of Kardu; and the Syriac version the land of the Keredians, which also belonged to Armenia; in these mountainous places they might think themselves most safe: and Esarhaddon his son reigned in his stead]; whom Josephus calls Assarachoddas; and in Ptolemy’s Caron he is named Assaradinus; the same, as some think, whom the Greeks call Sardanapalus; in the Apocrypha: ‘And Achiacharus intreating for me, I returned to Nineve. Now Achiacharus was cupbearer, and keeper of the signet, and steward, and overseer of the accounts: and Sarchedonus appointed him next unto him: and he was my brother’s son’ (Tobit 1:22).”

9 September 2013

Isaiah 38

When Hezekiah heard that he was sick unto death he turned unto the Lord in mighty prayer. His life was extended fifteen years. Isaiah instructs Hezekiah to apply a fig poultice. Hezekiah composes a hymn of praise and gratitude to the Lord.

vv. 1–8. Hezekiah was sick unto death and advised by the Lord through Isaiah to get his house in order. Hezekiah turns to God in might prayer. Isaiah tells Hezekiah that the Lord has heard his prayer and has extended his life and furthermore, that Jerusalem would be delivered from Assyria. Isaiah asks Hezekiah to choose from one of two possible signs that this would come to pass.

1 ¶ IN those days was Hezekiah sick unto death. And Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz came unto him, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Set thine house in order: [✓]for thou shalt die, and not live.

✓ Give charge concerning thy house

IN those days was Hezekiah sick unto death. Exegetes are not agreed as to whether these words of Isaiah were given before or after the Assyrian menace. In the Talmud tradition, Hezekiah, having foresight as to the wickedness of his progeny, preferred not to have children. Tradition has it that he asked the Prophet Isaiah for his daughter in marriage but that the latter told him it was too late to avert punishment (Seder Zeraï'm, Berachoth 10a). A footnote in Berachoth 10b suggests that eventually Isaiah conceded and out of this marriage wicked King Manasseh was born. If this were the case, and we follow Jewish tradition, then Isaiah was murdered by his own grandson. ¶ To us as LDS, this is a very interesting point: the idea of sickness unto death. It reminds us of someone appointed unto death (D&C 42:48, see also header to 2 Kings 20, in our LDS edition, about this very matter of King Hezekiah's appointment unto death). Elder Orson Pratt wrote: "When a man or a woman is appointed unto death you, nor I, nor Peter, nor James, nor Paul, nor John, nor any other man of God can heal them in the name of Jesus. Why? Because God has otherwise determined. But that did not do away the gift of healing in ancient times; that gift was abundantly made manifest, notwithstanding there were many who were sick who were not healed."¹ Elder George Q. Cannon wrote: "There is room for an increase of exertion and an exhibition of greater faith, as a people, than we have ever yet exhibited. The Lord is ready, according to our own testimonies, to pour out upon us every blessing that we need. Are we sick? Are any of our households sick? What is the privilege of the Latter-day Saints according to our doctrines, according to the teachings of these books (the Bible and the Book of Mormon), and according to our own belief? It is our privilege to exercise faith in the name of Jesus Christ, to have the sick, where not appointed unto death, restored to life. This is the privilege of the Latter-day Saints, the privilege of every faithful man and woman in the Church of Christ upon all the face of the earth."² Elder Franklin D. Richards taught: "We ought first to go to the Lord and exercise our faith as far as we can make use of it in that direction, and we will make fewer blunders than we do in placing implicit confidence in the medical and surgical professions. When we do this we are certainly sure of one thing—we secure the help of God and the help of angels; and if we are appointed unto death, we want to go. We ought to want to go. Our prayers and supplications should be always conditional—that is, if not appointed unto death that he or she should be raised up. And if the heavens want a man to labor there in any sphere, there is where he should be ... Now, when the Presidency want a man to go on a mission, he ought to go. It is best for that man that he should go. It is best for all concerned that he should go to the place he is sent and labor with all his heart. Just so with us. Here we are on a mission in the world. The matter of death is a very small matter. It is a matter of life or death to be sure; but if the Lord does not want us here, and we are taken away, His will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."³ ¶ As Priesthood holders we ought to always seek out the will of the Lord rather than our own will. I have assisted in the administration to the dying sick—when I was not voice—where the Spirit manifested to me that this individual was not going to live despite the words pronounced by the Priesthood holder. A few days later the man who was the recipient of the administration died. We ought to always prefer the blessing that the Lord wishes to pour upon our heads than the blessing of a man. Part of the challenge here, is that we can—and I know I also have—confuse an outpouring of the Spirit for a yes answer. Sometimes it means, “Do not fear, this matter is in My hands. I wish you to be comforted.” ¶ And Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz came unto him, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Set thine house in order: for thou shalt die, and not live. It is no small matter for a Prophet of God to receive revelation and be told that a person is appointed to death and go and tell an individual to put his house in order. I have long since learned, however, that when someone has been warned about an impending danger (in a prophetic dream or in some other way), that through prayer these things can be averted when it is the will of the Lord. In fact, this is why these things are often revealed ahead of time. ¶ Gill says: “And said unto him, thus saith the Lord, set thine house in order” – or, ‘give orders to thine house’: to the men of thine house, as the Targum; his domestics, his counsellors and courtiers, what they should do after his death; how his personal estate should be disposed of; how the throne should be filled up; who should succeed him, since he had no son: the family and secular affairs of men should be put in order, and direction given for the management of them, and their substance and estates should be disposed of by will before their death; and much more a concern should be shown for the setting in order their spiritual affairs, or that they may be habitually ready for death and eternity.”

¹ JD, Vol.18, p.143, Orson Pratt, August 30, 1875.

² JD, Vol.19, p.108 – p.109 – p.110, George Q. Cannon, September 23, 1877. Emphasis added.

³ JD, Vol.24, p.287 – p.288, Franklin D. Richards, October 6, 1883 and JD, Vol.24, p.340, Franklin D. Richards, October 6th, 1883. Emphasis added.

2 Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the wall, and prayed unto the LORD,

Hezekiah descended in full humility of faith and prayer unto the Lord. Gill continues: “Literally, either to the wall of his bedchamber where he lay sick, that his tears might not be seen, and his prayers interrupted, and that he might deliver them with more privacy, freedom, and fervency; or else to the wall of the temple, as the Targum, towards which good men used to look when they prayed, 1Kings 8:38, which was a type of Christ, to whom we should have respect in all our petitions, as being the only Mediator between God and man.”

3 And said, Remember now, O LORD, I beseech thee, how I have walked before thee in truth and with a perfect heart, and have done [that which is] good in thy sight. And Hezekiah wept sore. ✓

✓ with great weeping [i.e., And Hezekiah wept with great weeping]

And said, Remember now, O LORD, I beseech thee, how I have walked before thee in truth and with a perfect heart, and have done [that which is] good in thy sight. When I was Branch President of the Modesto 12th Spanish Branch, in California, one of our dear sisters had a prophetic dream that her family would get into a car accident on the way home from a Branch activity in the mountains. She did not mention this to me at the time and had the accident precisely in the spot she had seen in her dreams. When the Lord shows us through the Spirit—in any of the many possible manifestations—that something will go wrong, it is done for a purpose. All things being equal, it means, this thing will come to pass. But, if we pray to God and ask if it is possible for this bad thing we have been warned off, that it may not come to pass, and the Spirit reassures us that our prayer has been heard, it means this thing will not come to pass. This is my testimony which I have seen come true countless times. But the answer will not always be affirmative. At times we have to make different plans. For instance, one of the General Authorities had a bad feeling about his son going on a Church Boy Scout trip. At the end he was impressed by the Spirit—as was his son—that the trip ought to be avoided. This probably saved his life. Nevertheless, we have to ask. We have to pray. We have to inquire of God. This is what Hezekiah did, being filled with faith and hope. And that is not all, King Hezekiah was also filled with a confidence that he had walked uprightly before the Lord. This is why he reminds God that he had walked before God in truth and with a perfect heart (see ISAIAH 58:6–14). ¶ My daughter-in-law, Terry, once went into a temple recommend meeting with a counselor in her Stake Presidency. When asked the last question about whether she was worthy of that temple recommend, this counselor asked her not to answer that question for herself but to permit the Spirit to do so. Terry was filled with the Spirit, which testified to her that she was able to answer in the affirmative. This wise Church leader did much good as this knowledge served as a comfort at a turbulent time in her life. Indeed, she knew she had walked before God in truth and with a perfect heart. ¶ And Hezekiah wept sore. There are many types so weeping. One of them is because of sadness; another is because we are filled by the Spirit of God. In Hezekiah’s case, no doubt both of these sentiments were mixed and hard to separate. What is absolutely clear, is that he prayed with fervor and with faith and as moved by the Spirit, and as a result, the Lord God heard his prayer.

4 Then came the word* of the LORD to Isaiah, saying,

* 2 Kings 20:4, such things as grow of themselves.

The answer to King Hezekiah’s petition was received by Isaiah, as recorded in 2 Kings 20:4, “And it came to pass, afore Isaiah was gone out into the middle court, that the word of the LORD came to him, saying.” Upon hearing Hezekiah’s petition, then, the Lord speaks to the Prophet Isaiah who is to transmit his answer to Hezekiah. This was a common way in the past to receive answers to prayer, through a mediator. The prophet often acted as a mediator to deliver the prayer as well as to receive the answer. We often see this pattern in the D&C, where early Church members approached the Prophet Joseph Smith to inquire something of God. The answer from the Lord was delivered to the Prophet (see, for instance, D&C 12, 23, 51). Sometimes, when we attend a conference or other Church meeting or class, some of our questions may be answered by an inspired teacher or class participant. This happened to me numerous Sundays as a relatively new member of the Church, when I attended the Orinda Ward Gospel Doctrine class taught by a very inspired teacher. Answers can come through Patriarchal Blessings, other blessings, through the mouths of children, and multiple other ways. And of course, answers can come directly as a result of prayer, in the very act of praying. A final point here about prayer, it is not at all unusual for someone to pray to God and immediately have his or her prayers answered by a servant of the Lord who is sent there for that very purpose. The Prophet was there to help deliver an answer to a prayer he most probably did not even know was taking place. That, in itself, would probably help Hezekiah strengthen his testimony that his prayer was heard. ¶ We, too, can be the answer to the prayers and needs of others. One of my favorite stories from President Thomas S. Monson includes one such circumstance: “Late one afternoon I was swimming at the Deseret Gym, gazing at the ceiling while backstroking width after width,” President Monson shared. “Silently, but ever so clearly, there came to my mind the thought: ‘Here you swim almost effortlessly, while your friend Stan languishes in his hospital bed, unable to move.’ I felt the prompting: ‘Get to the hospital and give him a blessing.’ I ceased my swimming, dressed, and hurried to Stan’s room at the hospital. His bed was empty. A nurse said he was in his wheelchair at the swimming pool, preparing for therapy. I hurried to the area, and there was Stan, all alone, at the edge of the deeper portion of the pool. We greeted one another and returned to his room, where a priesthood blessing was provided. Slowly but surely, strength and movement returned to Stan’s legs. First he could stand on faltering feet. Then he learned once again to walk—step by step. Today one would not know that Stan had lain so close to death and with no hope of recovery. Frequently Stan speaks in Church meetings and tells of the goodness of the Lord to him. To some he reveals the dark thoughts of depression which engulfed him that afternoon as he sat in his wheelchair at the edge of the pool, sentenced, it seemed, to a life of despair. He tells how he pondered the alternative. It would be so easy to propel the hated wheelchair into the silent water of the deep pool. Life would then be over. But at that precise moment he saw me, his friend. That day Stan learned literally that we do not walk alone. I, too, learned a lesson that day: Never, never, never postpone following a prompting.” ¶ In my life Sergio R. Vargas Barria, President of the Puerto Montt Stake, has been such a voice of comfort from the Lord. These last couple of years have been challenging to Linda & me with the death—and all that lead to it—of our oldest son David. After each of the trying news along the way, Presidente Sergio Vargas inquired after us before he knew why he was calling. The Lord inspired him to do so. It was the Lord’s way of telling us—“You are not alone, I am with you!”⁴

5 Go, and say to Hezekiah,* Thus saith the LORD, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: behold, I will add unto thy days fifteen years.

* 2 Kings 20:5, Turn again, and tell Hezekiah the captain of my people.

 2 Kings 20:5, behold, I will heal thee: on the third day thou shalt go up unto the house of the LORD.

Go, and say to Hezekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: As the margin ¶ has, “turn again,” שׁוּב, or simply return. The prophet had left Hezekiah’s presence and was now told to return to him. The words the Prophet speaks are those of the Lord. The Lord, the God of David thy father אֱלֹהֵי דָוִד (also means ancestor). The message is that God has both heard Hezekiah’s prayer and seen the sincerity of the tears.

¶ David, דָּוִד. I cannot think about the righteous David as a youth and not be filled with the most immense pain. Beside David’s well-known transgression regarding Bathsheba and Uriah, the Holy Scriptures do not hide from us many of his other faults, including a self-centered, vengeful personality that he developed after his fall. As I dig deep into my soul I realize that it is precisely because I loved young David so much and because he was such a great example of righteous living and inspiration, that his fall seems so particularly excruciating. Because also, as the quote goes, I can say, “There but for the grace of God, go I.” We know that

⁴ This note was added 15 July 2017, as I was revising this manuscript before compiling it into a single volume—instead of the individual chapters which I began to post in 2000.

David “sought [forgiveness] carefully with tears” (Hebrews 12:17). We further read: “[David] hath fallen from his exaltation, and received his portion; and he shall not inherit them out of the world, for I gave them unto another, saith the Lord” (D&C 132:39, emphasis added). The Prophet Joseph Smith taught: “Even David must wait for those times of refreshing, before he can come forth and his sins be blotted out. For Peter, speaking of him says, ‘David hath not yet ascended into heaven, for his sepulchre is with us to this day.’ His remains were then in the tomb.”⁵ One of our Church manuals has: “Even though David forfeited his exaltation because he arranged the death of Uriah, we can learn from his repentant attitude as he sought forgiveness for the sin of adultery. His words in Psalm 51 teach many aspects of true repentance.”⁶ When I think about all of these things, I think of the scripture in the Book of Mormon: “Condemn me not because of mine imperfection, neither my father, because of his imperfection, neither them who have written before him; but rather give thanks unto God that he hath made manifest unto you our imperfections, that ye may learn to be more wise than we have been” (Mormon 9:31). Now, returning to David, he was not only a great king, but he was also a prophet—one to whom great things were entrusted to. It was through David that the Lord chose to give numerous Messianic prophecies of infinite worth. ¶ Behold, I will add unto thy days fifteen years. Rawlinson has: “This was doubling, or rather more than doubling, the length of Hezekiah’s reign, and allowing him a length of life exceeding that of the great majority of the kings of Judah, who seldom attained the age of fifty. Hezekiah lived to be fifty-four.”

6 And I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria: and I will defend this city.*

* 2 Kings 20:6, I will defend this city for mine own sake, and for my servant David’s sake.

NOTE: the narrative in Isaiah is in a different order than in 2 Kings. See ISAIAH 38:21–22, below, with the corresponding scriptures from 2 Kings, where it is a little easier to catch the chronology of the events. The exegetes suggest that this verse is either an assurance to Hezekiah that Assyria would not, in the future, capture Jerusalem, or that his sickness took place early enough where we had not yet seen the annihilation of the Assyrian army. ¶ And I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria: It is the Lord who can deliver us out of any predicament, and will prove us to see if we have put our trust in Him. ¶ Satan does not spend his time tempting us in areas that we are rock solid, but in those areas where we hesitate. For instance, if we have made the decision to go to Church every Sabbath day, and we have made that decision once and for all, we are less likely to be tempted in that area. When we have shown the Lord that we are committed to a principle, Satan soon tires of wasting his time on us in that area. We are, in the Lord’s side of the line. I know of families who have had trouble paying tithing. They keep hoping for a better day, for the sun to shine on them. And the promise of that day continues to shine, always in the distance, as when one travels toward a rainbow, or follows the moon in the night sky. Satan manages to cause havoc in their lives, wherein the money needs to be spent for this or that. When a person decides to pay tithing no matter what, once again, Satan generally loses interest in tempting that individual in this area. A person cannot get prideful, however, in the observance of any commandment, for Satan is not far. So it is with me, in the areas where I am weak, where I seem to make the decisions as I go; those are the areas where Satan often gets the best of me. President Kimball, when milking cows, came to the decision, “As I was out alone, milking the cows, or putting up the hay, I had time to think. I mulled it over in my mind and made this decision: ‘I, Spencer Kimball, will never touch tobacco. I will never drink coffee, nor will I ever touch tea—not because I can explain why I shouldn’t, except that the Lord said not to’” (Elder L. Tom Perry, Ensign, November 1979, p. 34.). No matter what, however, we need never lose faith in God’s ability to deliver us from the adversary. ¶ And I will defend this city. The Lord would hereby defend the city of Jerusalem. So it is that after we have been proved, then comes the blessing. The Lord is constantly telling us, “...prove me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it” (Malachi 3:10). This is a promise that goes not only for keeping the law of tithing, but for all things that the Lord commands.

7 And this [shall be] a sign unto thee from the LORD, that the LORD will do this thing that he hath spoken;

While it is clear that we ought not to ask for signs from the Lord, the Lord sometimes does give us signs (ISAIAH 7:14). And He sometimes expects us to put Him to the test as mentioned in Malachi 3:10 just quoted. Some exegetes suggest that Hezekiah had asked for this sign. But I believe this offering of a sign is a pattern in God’s revelations to man. The Lord reveals a truth and then, while we are meditating on that truth, adds another truth or an instruction that turns out to be a sign. These are free gifts from God. These are part of His tender mercies (Psalm 25:6; 1Nephi 1:20).

⁵ TPJS, p. 188.

⁶ LDS Old Testament Class Member Study Guide (“Create in Me a Clean Heart”).

8 Behold, I will bring again the shadow of the degrees, which is gone down in the sun dial^v of Ahaz, ten degrees backward. So the sun returned ten degrees, by which degrees it was gone down.*

✓ degrees by, or, with the sun

* 2 Kings 20:9–11: And Isaiah said, This sign shalt thou have of the LORD, that the LORD will do the thing that he hath spoken: shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go back ten degrees? 10 And Hezekiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees. Turn again, and tell Hezekiah the captain of my people. And Isaiah the prophet cried unto the LORD: and he brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the dial of Ahaz.

Behold, I will bring again the shadow of the degrees, which is gone down in the sun dial of Ahaz, ten degrees backward. Tanakh renders, “I am going to make the shadow on the steps, which has descended on the dial of Ahaz because of the sun, recede ten steps,” with a footnote by the word dial, indicating that “A model of a dial with steps has been discovered in Egypt.” It seems that Hezekiah was asked to choose, as we can see in 2 Kings, which direction the shadow should go, in the manifestation of this miracle. ¶ So the sun returned ten degrees, by which degrees it was gone down. In other words, the shade returned back ten steps. Barnes explains: “The shadow, or shade which is made by the interception of the rays of the sun by the gnomon on the dial. The phrase ‘bring again’ (Hebrew, בְּשִׁיב) means to cause to return (Hiphil, from שׁוּב, to return); that is, I will cause it retrograde, or bring back. Septuagint, Στρέψω – ‘I will turn back.’” Rawlinson has: “Sun-dials are of several kinds. The one here spoken of seems to have consisted of a set of steps, with a perpendicular gnomon or pole at the top, the shadow of which receded up the steps as the sun rose in the heavens, and descended down them as the sun declined.”

vv. 9–22. Hezekiah composes a heartfelt hymn of gratitude and praise unto the Lord. Isaiah instructed Hezekiah to put on a poultice made out of figs upon the boil, as part of the healing process.

9 ¶ The writing of Hezekiah king of Judah, when he had been sick, and was recovered of his sickness:

As we see from time to time in Holy Writ, such as in the Song of Moses and the Song of Miriam (Exodus 15), people who have been blessed by the Lord burst out in songs of gratitude. So it was now with Hezekiah. He was grateful because he had recovered from his sickness. It says this was written [כָּתוּב (Gesenius, HALOT)]. Delitzsch says: “The song which follows might be headed Mikhtam [from the Hebrew מִכְתָּם, meaning inscription (Gesenius, HALOT)], since it has the characteristics of this description of psalm (see at Psalm 16:1).” Cheyne calls it “a sweet and plaintive specimen of Hebrew psalmody.” One can sense the deep gratitude of Hezekiah.

10 I said in the cutting off of my days, I shall go to the gates of the grave: I am deprived of the residue of my years.

The cutting off of my days means the end of his days. The word cutting is often a reference of the cutting off of a woven article from a loom (see ISAIAH 38:12). Hezekiah was already resigned and felt he was at the very gates of death and the grave—and was sad that he had not lived a normal length of life before he would have to face death. That his days were going to be cut short. AMP renders it: “I said, In the noontide and tranquility of my days I must depart; I am to pass through the gates of Sheol (the place of the dead), deprived of the remainder of my years.”

11 I said, I shall not see the LORD, [even] the LORD, in the land of the living: I shall behold man no more with the inhabitants of the world.

Hezekiah says something so tender, which the English translation misses altogether, לֹא־אֶרְאֶה יְהוָה,” using the more tender abbreviated Tetragrammaton, Yah for Yahweh, and repeats it twice. I shall not see Yahyah. It makes me think of a tender papi, or dada. YLT renders it: “I said, I do not see Jah—Jah! In the land of the living.” Note that Hezekiah does not say he would not see the Lord anymore, but that he would not see Him in the land of the living. He had truly walked with the Lord in the land of the living, that is, in his lifetime. After expressing regret for not being able to see the Lord, he next expresses sadness for not being able to see his fellow mortals.

12 Mine age is departed, and is removed from me as a shepherd's tent: I have cut off like a weaver my life: he will cut me off with pining sickness: ✓ from day [even] to night wilt thou make an end of me.

✓ or, from the thrum⁷

Mine age is departed, and is removed from me as a shepherd's tent: Just like a shepherd's tent is quickly removed from the very temporary spot it holds, so did Hezekiah feel his life was being cut short. Barnes well says: "As suddenly as the tent of a shepherd is taken down, folded up, and transferred to another place. There is doubtless the idea here that he would continue to exist, but in another place, as the shepherd would pitch his tent or dwell in another place. He was to be cut off from the earth, but he expected to dwell among the dead. The whole passage conveys the idea that he expected to dwell in another state—as the shepherd dwells in another place when he strikes his tent, and it is removed." ¶ I have cut off like a weaver my life: he will cut me off with pining sickness: When a knit work is moved from a loom, it is cut. Barnes explains: "This is another image designed to express substantially the same idea. The sense is, as a weaver takes his web from the loom by cutting the warp, or the threads which bind it to the beam, and thus loosens it and takes it away, so his life was to be cut off." Rawlinson well says: "With pining sickness rather, as in the margin ||, from the thrum. The 'thrum' is the portion of the warp which adjoins the upper bar of the loom." In other words, removed quickly from the loom or from life. ASV renders this: "My dwelling is removed, and is carried away from me as a shepherd's tent: I have rolled up, like a weaver, my life; he will cut me off from the loom." ¶ From day [even] to night wilt thou make an end of me. This means all of a sudden, quickly. Several exegetes suggest that Hezekiah felt that his life would be taken within a single day. Night is symbolic for death and day for life. In the Book of Mormon we have: "And now, as I said unto you before, as ye have had so many witnesses, therefore, I beseech of you that ye do not procrastinate the day of your repentance until the end; for after this day of life, which is given us to prepare for eternity, behold, if we do not improve our time while in this life, then cometh the night of darkness wherein there can be no labor performed" (Alma 34:33).

13 I reckoned till morning, [that], as a lion, so will he break all my bones: from day [even] to night wilt thou make an end of me.

⁷ "And cut from the thrum" (Tanakh). A thrum, as explained by Merriam-Webster, is "a fringe of warp threads left on the loom after the cloth has been removed."

The idea is here repeated as to the quickness with which Hezekiah felt his life was departing, and this pulling off the loom in the previous verse seemed to have been thought of as a very quick violent movement. This same thought is repeated by the lion who break[s] all of my bones.

14 Like a crane [or] a swallow, so did I chatter: I did mourn as a dove: mine eyes fail [with looking] upward: O LORD, I am oppressed; undertake for me. ✓

✓ or, ease me

It seems that Hezekiah was delirious with a fever and looking up solicitously to God for mercy. ¶ O LORD, I am oppressed; undertake for me. Or as in the margin ||, bring relief to my suffering pain.

15 What shall I say? he hath both spoken unto me, and himself hath done [it]: I shall go softly all my years in the bitterness of my soul.

Barnes says, "What shall I say?" – This language seems to denote surprise and gratitude at unexpected deliverance. It is the language of a heart that is overflowing, and that wants words to express its deep emotions. In the previous verse he had described his pain, anguish, and despair. In this he records the sudden and surprising deliverance which God had granted; which was so great that no words could express his sense of it. Nothing could be more natural than this language; nothing would more appropriately express the feelings of a man who had been suddenly restored to health from dangerous sickness, and brought from the borders of the grave. He hath both spoken unto me – That is, he has promised. So the word is often used (Deuteronomy 26:17; Jeremiah 3:19). He had made the promise by the instrumentality of Isaiah (ISAIAH 38:5–6). The promise related to his recovery, to the length of his days, and to his entire deliverance from the hands of the Assyrians. And himself hath done it – He himself has restored me according to his promise, when no one else could have done it. I shall go softly – The word used here (אָדָּמָה)⁸ occurs in but one other place in the Bible (Psalm 42:4): 'I went with them to the house of God;' that is, I went with them in a sacred procession to the house of God; I went with a solemn, calm, slow pace. The idea here is, 'I will go humbly, submissively, all my life; I will walk in a serious manner, remembering that I am traveling to the grave; I will avoid pride, pomp, and display; I will suffer the remembrance of my sickness, and of God's mercy to produce a calm, serious, thoughtful demeanour all my life.' This is the proper effect of sickness on a pious mind, and it is its usual effect. And probably, one design of God was to keep Hezekiah from the ostentatious parade usually attendant on his lofty station; from being elated with his deliverance from the Assyrian; from improper celebrations of that deliverance by revelry and pomp; and to keep him in remembrance, that though he was a monarch, yet he was a mortal man, and that he held his life at the disposal of God. In the bitterness of my soul] – I will remember the deep distress, the bitter sorrows of my sickness, and my surprising recovery; and will allow the remembrance of that to diffuse seriousness and gratitude over all my life."

⁸ אָדָּמָה

16 O Lord, by these [things men] live, and in all these [things is] the life of my spirit: so wilt thou recover me, and make me to live.

Gill writes: "O Lord, by these things men live] – Not by bread only, but by the word of God: by the promise of God, and by his power performing it; and by his favour and goodness continually bestowed; it is in him, and by his power and providence, that they live and move, and have their being, and the continuance of it; and it is his lovingkindness manifested to them that makes them live comfortably and go on cheerfully: And in all these things is the life of my spirit] – what kept his soul in life were the same things, the promise, power, and providence of God; what revived his spirit, and made him comfortable and cheerful, was the wonderful love and great goodness of God unto him, in appearing to him, and for him, and delivering him out of his sore troubles ... The Targum interprets it of the resurrection of the dead, 'O Lord, concerning all the dead, thou hast said, that thou wilt quicken them; and before them all thou hast quickened my spirit: So wilt thou recover me, and make me to live] – or rather, 'and' or 'for thou hast recovered (so Gataker) me, and made me to live'; for the Lord had not only promised it, but he had done it, ISAIAH 38:15, and so the Targum, 'and hast quickened me, and sustained me.'"

17 Behold, for peace I had great bitterness: ✓ but thou hast in love to my soul [delivered it] from the pit ✓ of corruption: for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back.

✓ or, on my peace came great bitterness

✓ ✓ thou hast loved my soul from the pit

Elder Carlos E. Asay, using the How beautiful are the feet principle said: "Of those members and missionaries who act as agents of the Lord and assist others in escaping the pit, it will be said: 'He brought me up also out of an horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings' (Psalm 40:2). 'Thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption: for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back' (ISAIAH 38:17)."⁹ Rawlinson explains: "For thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back] Where they could be no more seen, and therefore would be no more remembered." It is in essence, the idea found in Doctrine and Covenants: "Behold, he who has repented of his sins, the same is forgiven, and I, the Lord, remember them no more" (D&C 58:42).

18 For the grave cannot praise thee, death can [not] celebrate thee: they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth.

President Joseph Fielding Smith defended the truth of the resurrection, after receiving the following question: "Critics of the resurrection and the existence of the spirit frequently quote from Ecclesiastes 9:4–10, particularly stressing verses 5 and 10—'For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten.' 'Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, no device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest.' And from ISAIAH 38:18: 'For the grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee: they that go down into the pit cannot hope for the truth.' Other references are quoted from Ezekiel 18:4 and 20: 'The soul that sinneth, it shall die.' What explanation can be offered for these verses?" In response, President Smith wrote: "The evidence of the resurrection is so abundant in the New Testament, that it is easy to meet the question so far as the resurrection is concerned. There are many promises in the Old Testament that there shall come a resurrection of the dead, and we are informed that at the resurrection of our Savior, the graves were opened and the dead came forth. There is no problem here. In relation to the thought that is given by some that there is no spirit in our bodies, and that when we die the body goes back to the dust there to remain forever, or perchance in the case of some, to receive a resurrection, there is ample biblical evidence that contradicts this thought. The writer of Ecclesiastes was speaking of this life only when he wrote these verses. The sixth verse of Ecclesiastes makes this clear: ‘Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished; neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun.’ The dead are soon forgotten. It is not long after a man is gone, no matter how renowned he may have been, he is forgotten; and things done ‘under the sun’ they who are dead are not any longer interested in, nor do they have any portion in them. A man cannot take with him any portion of this world’s goods, but as Job declared in substance: Naked came he into the world, and naked he goes out of it. This, however, does not prove, and evidently the writer in the Old Testament did not intend to prove, that there was no existence after death of the eternal spirit. The dead are forgotten by whom? By the living. In the consideration of this discourse by the Preacher, Solomon, it should be kept in mind that the entire discourse is in relation to vanity—the vanities of this life, and is not one considering the blessings and nature of eternity. He points out the blessings to be obtained by a righteous life, and the evils of a life of vanity. The thought behind his expression: ‘Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest,’ is an admonition to us all, to apply our time and our talents to doing good and to bringing to pass righteousness while we sojourn in this mortal life, for it will be impossible for us to mend our ways and seek to do the things that have been neglected, in the grave. The words of Solomon have by some been willfully or ignorantly distorted. The closing words of this discourse are: For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil. The words of Amulek to the Nephites are worthy of our consideration at this point: ‘For behold, this life is the time for men to prepare to meet God; yea, behold the day of this life is the day for men to perform their labors.’ [And also quotes Alma 34:33, which I quoted above.] When it is understood properly, this discourse by Solomon is wonderful, faith-promoting, and should be considered in its true light by all. Unfortunately Solomon himself failed to heed its instruction.”¹⁰ So also Alexander who says: “It does not follow from these words either that Hezekiah had no expectation of a future state, or that the soul remains unconscious till the resurrection.”

⁹ Asay, Carlos E. The Seven M's of Missionary Service. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1996, p. 96.

19 The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I [do] this day: the father to the children shall make known thy truth.

¹⁰ Smith, Joseph Fielding. Answers to Gospel Questions. vols. 1–4. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1957–1966. Vol. III, pp. 128–130.

Alexander says: “Only the living could praise God in that way to which the writer was accustomed, and on which his eye is here fixed, with special reference, no doubt, to the external service of the temple.” Gill says, “The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day] – Every one of the living, or such who are both corporeally and spiritually alive; and therefore the word is repeated; none but such who are alive in a corporeal sense can praise the Lord in this world.” Barnes explains: “The father to the children] – One generation of the living to another. The father shall have so deep a sense of the goodness of God that he shall desire to make it known to his children, and to perpetuate the memory of it in the earth.”

20 The LORD [was ready] to save me: therefore we will sing my songs to the stringed instruments all the days of our life in the house of the LORD.

Rawlinson has: “The Lord was ready to save me] – rather, came to my rescue; came and saved me. Therefore we will sing my songs to the stringed instruments] – rather, therefore will we play my stringed instruments. Hezekiah calls the stringed instruments his, because he had recalled their use, and re-established them as a part of the temple service after the suspension of that service by Ahaz (2 Chronicles 29:30). His intention now is to take continual part with the Levites in (the choral praises of God, which were a part of the daily worship of the temple. This is to him the natural mode of expressing his thankfulness to God for the mercy vouchsafed him.”

21 For Isaiah had said, Let them take a lump of figs, and lay [it] for a plaister upon the boil, and he shall recover.

* 2 Kings 20:7, And Isaiah said, Take a lump of figs. And they took and laid [it] on the boil, and he recovered.

The Prophet Isaiah had given instructions on what was to be done for Hezekiah to be cured. This is not uncommon. For instance, in relation to the Haun’s Mills Massacre, Amanda Smith was a witness to the most violent mob violence against the Saints. Her husband and one of her sons were killed. She tells us the story of how her son Alma was healed. We pick up in the middle of the narrative: “I seized my two little girls and I ran down the bank and crossed the mill pond on a plank ... Another sister fled with me. Yet though we were women, with tender children, in flight for our lives, the demons poured volley after volley to kill us. A number of bullets entered my clothes, but I was not wounded. The sister, however, who was with me, cried out that she was hit. We had just reached the trunk of a fallen tree, over which I urged her, bidding her to shelter there where the bullets could not reach her, while I continued my flight to some bottom land. When the firing had ceased I went back to the scene of the massacre, for there were my husband and three sons, of whose fate I as yet knew nothing ... Passing on I came to a scene more terrible still to the mother and wife. Emerging from the blacksmith shop was my eldest son, bearing on his shoulders his little brother Alma. 'Oh ! My Alma is dead!' I cried, in anguish. 'No, mother; I think Alma is not dead. But father and brother Sardius are killed!' ... But I could not weep then. The fountain of tears was dry; the heart overburdened with its calamity, and all the mother's sense absorbed in its anxiety for the precious boy which God alone could save by his miraculous aid. The entire hip joint of my wounded boy had been shot away. Flesh, hip bone, joint and all had been ploughed out from the muzzle of the gun which the ruffian placed to the child's hip through the logs of the shop and deliberately fired. We laid little Alma on a bed in our tent and I examined the wound. It was a ghastly sight. I knew not what to do. [She then speaks of the tremendous carnage that had taken place.] Yet was I there, all that long, dreadful night, with my dead and my wounded, and none but God as our physician and help. 'Oh my Heavenly Father,' I cried, 'what shall I do? Thou seest my poor wounded boy and knowest my inexperience. Oh Heavenly Father direct me what to do!' And then I was directed as by a voice speaking to me. The ashes of our fire was still smouldering. We had been burning the bark of the shag-bark hickory. I was directed to take those ashes and make a lye and put a cloth saturated with it right into the wound. It hurt, but little Alma was too near dead to heed it much. Again and again I saturated the cloth and put it into the hole from which the hip-joint had been ploughed, and each time mashed flesh and splinters of bone came away with the cloth; and the wound became as white as chicken's flesh. Having done as directed I again prayed to the Lord and was again instructed as distinctly as though a physician had been standing by speaking to me. Nearby was a slippery-elm tree. From this I was told to make a slippery-elm poultice and fill the wound with it. My eldest boy was sent to get the slippery-elm from the roots, the poultice was made, and the wound, which took fully a quarter of a yard of linen to cover, so large was it, was properly dressed. [Only after having performed these things did Amanda Smith permit herself to weep. When the morning came the living did what they could for the many wounded—to 'soothe the sufferers' wants.' They could not bury the dead because the mob was expected to reappear any time.] But to return to Alma, and how the Lord helped me to save his life. I removed the wounded boy to a house, some distance off, the next day, and dressed his hip; the Lord directing me as before. I was reminded that in my husband's trunk there was a bottle of balsam. This I poured into the wound, greatly soothing Alma's pain. 'Alma, my child,' I said, 'you believe that the Lord made your hip?' 'Yes, mother.' 'Well, the Lord can make something there in the place of your hip; don't you believe he can, Alma?' 'Do you think that the Lord can, mother?' inquired the child, in his simplicity. 'Yes, my son,' I replied, 'he has shown it all to me in a vision.' Then I laid him comfortably on his face, and said: 'Now you lay like that, and don't move, and the Lord will make you another hip.' So Alma laid on his face for five weeks, until he was entirely recovered—a flexible gristle having grown in place of the missing joint and socket, which remains to this day a marvel to physicians. On the day that he walked again I was out of the house fetching a bucket of water, when I heard screams from the children. Running back, in affright, I entered, and there was Alma on the floor, dancing around, and the children screaming in astonishment and joy. It is now nearly forty years ago, but Alma has never been the least crippled during his life, and he has traveled quite a long period of the time as a missionary of the gospel and a living miracle of the power of God. I cannot leave the tragic story without relating some incidents of those five weeks when I was a prisoner with my wounded boy in Missouri, near the scene of the massacre, unable to obey the order of extermination [That is, to leave Missouri]. All the Mormons in the neighborhood had fled out of the State, excepting a few families of the bereaved women and children who had gathered at the house of Brother David Evans, two miles from the scene of the massacre. To this house Alma had been carried after that fatal night. In our utter desolation, what could we women do but pray? Prayer was our only source of comfort; our Heavenly Father our only helper. None but he could save and deliver us. One day a mobber came from the mill with the captain's fiat: 'The captain says if you women don't stop your d—d praying he will send down a posse and kill every d—d one of you!' And he might as well have done it, as to stop us poor women praying in that hour of our great calamity. Our prayers were hushed in terror. We dared not let our voices be heard in the house in supplication. I could pray in my bed or in silence, but I could not live thus long. This godless silence was more intolerable than had been that night of the massacre. I could bear it no longer. I pined to hear once more my own voice in petition to my Heavenly Father. I stole down into a corn-field, and crawled into a stout of corn. It was as the temple of the Lord to me at that moment. I prayed aloud and most fervently. When I emerged from the corn a voice spoke to me. It was a voice as plain as I ever heard one. It was no silent, strong impression of the spirit, but a voice, repeating a verse of the saint's hymn: 'That soul who on Jesus hath leaned for repose, I cannot, I will not desert to its foes; That soul, though all hell should endeavor to shake, I'll never, no never, no never forsake!' From that moment I had no more fear."¹¹ ¹² ¶ In Chile compresses are sometimes made with eucalyptus. Here in Isaiah, with figs. Barnes says: "Let them take a lump of figs] – The word used here (רבלל) denotes 'a round cake' of dried figs pressed together in a mass 1Samuel 25:18. Figs were thus pressed together for preservation, and for convenience of conveyance. And lay it for a plaster] – The word used here (מרר) denotes properly to rub, bruise, crush by rubbing; then to rub, in, to anoint, to soften. Here it means they were to take dried figs and lay them softened on the ulcer. Upon the boil] – (משחי). This word means a burning sore or an inflamed ulcer (Exodus 9:9, 11; Leviticus 13:18–20). The verb in Arabic means to be hot, inflamed; to ulcerate ... Here it probably denotes a pestilential boil; an eruption, or inflamed ulceration produced by the plague, that threatened immediate death."

22 Hezekiah also had said, What [is] the sign that I shall go up to the house of the LORD?

* 2 Kings 20:8, And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, What [shall be] the sign that the LORD will heal me, and that I shall go up into the house of the LORD the third day?

As in the time of the Book of Mormon, with no word processors, it was difficult enough to engrave or write, that an afterthought that belonged earlier would simply have to stay as an afterthought. When written in Kings and Chronicles, they had the luxury of being able to go back and put it in the correct order. Rawlinson said: "Hezekiah also had said]; literally, and Hezekiah said. Our translators, both in this verse and at the commencement of ISAIAH 38:21 have endeavoured to conceal the awkwardness of the nexus, or rather want of nexus, with what precedes, by a modification of the rendering. The true sense is brought out by the proceeding, which is, however, a little arbitrary." Indeed, as noted by Rawlinson, we have a simple expression: וַיֹּאמֶר הֶזְקִיָּהוּ. The literal expression is and-'he'-said-Hizkiyahu, where the 'yod acts as a 'he'-marker alerts the reader to look for the name of a person to substitute for it, here Hezekiah.

9 September 2013

¹¹ Tullidge, Edward W. (1877) The Women of Mormondom, Chapter 15, New York. I urge the reading of the whole narrative.

¹² Baugh, Alexander. (2011). Made some slight corrections to the above narrative from Alexander Baugh's paper: Chapter Twenty-Six. "'I'll Never Forsake': Amanda Barnes Smith (1809–1886)," in Women of Faith in the Latter Days: Volume 1, 1775–1820, ed. Richard E. Turley Jr. and Brittany A. Chapman. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 2011, 327–42.

Isaiah 39

Ambassadors from Babylon are sent to visit King Hezekiah when they heard that he was sick unto death but recovered. Hezekiah is magnified in the sight of all the nations and gets carried away in showing the Babylonian visitors that which he ought not to have shown them. Now, Hezekiah's descendants would be carried away captive into Babylon. This would not happen right away, but at the time of Jehoiakim. (When the Lord blesses our lives, it is easy to forget the fountain of these blessings and forget to give all honor and glory to Him from whom these blessings flow.)

2 Chronicles 32

22 Thus the LORD saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Assyria, and from the hand of all [other], and guided them on every side.

23 And many brought gifts unto the LORD to Jerusalem, and presents to Hezekiah king of Judah: so that he was magnified in the sight of all nations from thenceforth.

vv. 1–4. Babylonian embassy visits Hezekiah after he recovers from his illness. Hezekiah shows them everything, holding nothing back.

1 ¶ AT that time Merodachbaladan, the son of Baladan, king of Babylon, sent letters and a present to Hezekiah: for he had heard that he* had been sick, and was recovered.

* 2 Kings 20:12, Hezekiah.

AT that time Merodachbaladan, the son of Baladan, king of Babylon. Faussett explains: “Merodach-baladan” – For a hundred fifty years before the overthrow of Nineveh by Cyaxares the Mede, a succession of rulers, mostly viceroys of Assyria, ruled Babylon, from the time of Nabonassar, 747 BC. That date is called ‘the Era of Nabonassar.’ Pul or Phallukha was then expelled, and a new dynasty set up at Nineveh, under Tiglath-pileser. Semiramis, Pul’s wife, then retired to Babylon, with Nabonassar, her son, whose advent to the throne of Babylon, after the overthrow of the old line at Nineveh, marked a new era. Sometimes the viceroys of Babylon made themselves, for a time, independent of Assyria; thus Merodach-baladan at this time did so, encouraged by the Assyrian disaster in the Jewish campaign. He had done so before, and was defeated in the first year of Sennacherib’s reign, as is recorded in cuneiform characters in that monarchs palace of Koyunjik. Nabopolassar was the first who established, permanently, his independence; his son, Nebuchadnezzar, raised Babylon to the position which Nineveh once occupied; but from the want of stone near the Lower Euphrates, the buildings of Babylon, formed of sun-dried brick, have not stood the wear of ages as Nineveh has.” Barnes tells us how Babylonian kings’ names often incorporated the name of one of their favorite idols: “Merodach was an idol of the Babylonians (Jeremiah 50:2): ‘Babylon is taken, Bel is confounded, Merodach is confounded.’ This idol, according to Gesenius, was probably the planet Mars, or Mars the god of war. To this god, as well as to Saturn, the ancient Semitic nations offered human sacrifices (see Gesenius’ Lexicon and Corem. in loc.) The word ‘Balddan’ is also a compound word, and means ‘Bel is his lord.’ The name of this idol, Merodach, was often incorporated into the proper names of kings, and of others. Thus we have the names Evil-Merodach, Messi-Mordachus, Sisimor-dachus, Mardocentes, etc.” Barnes also explains that Merodachbaladan was a usurper (see Barnes for the more complete narrative): “Thus we have it certainly explained how there was a king, or rather a usurper in Babylon at the time when it was really a provincial city of the Assyrian empire. Nothing was more probable than that Merodach-baladan, having seized the throne, should endeavor to unite himself in league and amity with the enemies of his master, against whom he had revolted. Hezekiah, who, no less than himself, had thrown off the Assyrian yoke, and was in powerful alliance with the king of Egypt, would be his first resource. No embassy, on the other hand, could be more welcome to the Jewish monarch who had the common enemy in his neighborhood, and who would be glad to see a division made in his favor by a rebellion in the very heart of that enemy’s kingdom. Hence arose that excessive attention which he paid to the envoys of the usurper, and which so offended Isaiah, or rather God, who, as a consequence, threatened the Babylonian captivity (see Dr. Wiseman’s Lectures on Science and Revealed Religion, pp. 369–371 Ed. And. 1837). ¶ Sent letters and a present to Hezekiah: for he had heard that he had been sick, and was recovered. Alexander suggests: “It is not improbable that Merodach Baladan was meditating a revolt, and sent this embassy to gain Hezekiah's co-operation. The congratulation on his recovery may have been a secondary object, or perhaps a mere pretext. In 2 Chronicles 32:31, a further design is mentioned, namely, to inquire of the wonder that was done in the land, whether this be understood to mean the destruction of Sennacherib's army, or the miraculous recession of the shadow. There is no incompatibility between these different designs."

2 And Hezekiah was glad of them, and shewed them the house of his precious things, [✓] the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his armour, [✓] [✓] and all that was found in his treasures: there was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah shewed them not.

✓ or, spicery

✓ ✓ or, jewels

* 2 Chronicles 32:25–31, But Hezekiah rendered not again according to the benefit [done] unto him; for his heart was lifted up: therefore there was wrath upon him, and upon Judah and Jerusalem. Notwithstanding Hezekiah humbled himself for the pride of his heart, [both] he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so that the wrath of the LORD came not upon them in the days of Hezekiah. And Hezekiah had exceeding much riches and honour: and he made himself treasuries for silver, and for gold, and for precious stones, and for spices, and for shields, and for all manner of pleasant jewels; Storehouses also for the increase of corn, and wine, and oil; and stalls for all manner of beasts, and cotes for flocks. Moreover he provided him cities, and possessions of flocks and herds in abundance: for God had given him substance very much. This same Hezekiah also stopped the upper watercourse of Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David. And Hezekiah prospered in all his works. Howbeit in [the business of] the ambassadors of the princes of Babylon, who sent unto him to enquire of the wonder that was [done] in the land, God left him, to try him, that he might know all [that was] in his heart.

And Hezekiah was glad of them, and shewed them the house of his precious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his armour, and all that was found in his treasures: The Talmud tradition (Seder Nezikin, Sanhedrin 104a) has this interesting exchange: "And Hezekiah was glad of them, and shewed them the house of his precious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment etc. Rab said: What is meant by 'the house of his precious things'? — His wife, who mixed the drinks for them. Samuel said: He shewed them his treasury. R. Johanan said: He shewed them weapons which could destroy other weapons" (Talmud, Soncino). This is a particularly sad story. As we wish to rejoice in the righteousness of Hezekiah, we find that he was lifted up in pride. But that ought to be a lesson for us. We ought not look but to God the Eternal Father and His son, Jesus Christ, for an example of true and enduring righteousness. We also ought to be ever vigilant of the sin of pride. Barnes says: "And Hezekiah was glad of them] — Possibly he regarded himself as flattered by an embassy from so great a distance, and so celebrated a place as Babylon. It is certain that he erred in some way in regard to the manner in which he received them, and especially in the ostentatious display which he made of his treasures. And showed them the house of his precious things] — The Septuagint renders this, Νεχωθα — 'The house of Nechotha,' retaining the Hebrew word. The Margin ||, 'Spicery.' The Hebrew word (נִכְתָּה) properly means, according to Gesenius, a contusion, a breaking to pieces; hence, aromatic powder, or spices reduced to powder, and then any kind of aromatics. Hence, the word here may mean 'the house of his spices,' as Aquila, Symmachus, and the Vulgate translate it; or 'a treasury,' 'a storehouse,' as the Chaldee and the Syriac here render it. It was undoubtedly a treasure or store house; but it may have taken its name from the fact, that it was mainly employed as a place in which to keep spices, unguents, and the various kinds of aromatics which were used either in public worship, or for the purposes of luxury. The silver and the gold] — Possibly Hezekiah may have obtained no small quantity of silver and gold from what was left in the camp of the Assyrians. It is certain that after he was delivered from danger he was signally prospered, and became one of the most wealthy and magnificent monarchs of the east; (2 Chronicles 32:27–28): 'And Hezekiah had exceeding much riches and honor; and he made himself treasuries for silver and for gold, and for precious stones, and for spices, and for shields, and for all manner of pleasant jewels; storehouses also for the increase of grain, and wine, and oil; and stalls for all manner of beasts, and cotes for flocks.' A considerable part of this wealth arose from presents which were made to him, and from gifts which were made for the service of the temple (2 Chronicles 32:23). And the precious ointment] — Used for anointing kings and priests. Or more probably the ointment here referred to was that which was in more common use, to anoint the body after bathing, or when they were to appear in public. And all the house of his armor] — Margin ||, 'Vessels,' or 'instruments,' or 'jewels.' The word כֵּל denotes any article of furniture, utensil, or vessel; any trapping, instrument, or tool; and any implement of war, weapon, or arms. Probably it here refers to the latter, and denotes shields, swords, spears, such as were used in war, and such as Hezekiah had prepared for defense. The phrase is equivalent to our word arsenal (compare 2 Chronicles 32:27). Solomon had an extensive arsenal of this description (1 Kings 10:16–17), and it is probable that these were regarded as a part of the necessary defense of the kingdom.”

¶ There was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah shewed them not. The Brethren have counseled us to hold our sacred experiences and not share them unless we have been moved by the Spirit to do so. We are to keep these things in our hearts as very sacred. To share that which we have not been permitted to share is to trample on these sacred things. It is also a prideful behavior. Likewise, it was with Hezekiah, the Lord had given him many wonderful things, many which he could share, but there were others that he ought not to have shared. These things were of a sacred nature. This sacredness has two parts. Do we hold sacred and heed and value the things of God that we have received? Do we only share them as moved by the Spirit, and then only for the glory of God?

3 Then came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, They are come from a far country unto me, [even] from Babylon.

Then came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? Isaiah reprimanded Hezekiah as moved by the Spirit of God. He begins with a question, trying to find out the intent of the visitors. It would not be surprising that the Spirit had already revealed to Isaiah the unrighteous acts of Hezekiah. Gill suggests: “Quickly after the ambassadors had been with the king, and he had shown them all his treasures; the prophet did not come of himself, but was sent by the Lord, though he was not sent for by the king; in the time of his distress and illness he could send for him, but now being well, and in prosperity, he forgot the prophet, to send for him, and have his advice, how he should behave towards these men, as not to offend the Lord.”

¶ And Hezekiah said, They are come from a far country unto me, [even] from Babylon. Gill well says: “And said unto him, what said these men?” – what was their errand to thee, and their business to thee? what did they communicate to thee, or request of thee? And from whence came they unto thee? – from what country? these questions the prophet put to the king, not as ignorant of the men, and their business, and country, but in order to have everything from the king himself, and to lead on to further conversation with him on these things: And Hezekiah said, they are come from a far country unto me, even from Babylon] – he makes no answer to the first question, but at once replies to the second, as being what his heart was lifted up with; that ambassadors should come to him from a very distant country, and from so famous and renowned a place as Babylon; which showed that his name was great in foreign parts, and was in high esteem in distant countries, and even so great a prince as the king of Babylon courted his friendship.”

4 Then said he, What have they seen in thine house? And Hezekiah answered, All that [is] in mine house have they seen: there is nothing among my treasures that I have not shewed them.

Hezekiah tells all when Isaiah asks this pointed question. Barnes says: “Here was the confessions of a frank, an honest, and a pious man. There was no concealment; no disguise. Hezekiah knew that he was dealing with a man of God—a man too to whom he had been under great obligations. He knew that Isaiah had come commissioned by God, and that it would be in vain to attempt to conceal anything. Nor does he seem to have wished to make any concealment. If he was conscious that what he had done had been improper, he was willing to confess it; and at any rate he was willing that the exact truth should be known. Had Hezekiah been like Ahaz, he might have spurned Isaiah from his presence as presenting improper inquiries. But Hezekiah was accustomed to regard with respect the messengers of God, and he was therefore willing to submit his whole conduct to the divine adjudication and reproof. Piety makes a man willing that all that he has done should be known. It saves him from double-dealing and subterfuges, and a disposition to make vain excuses; and it inclines him to fear God, to respect his ambassadors, and to listen to the voice of eternal truth.”

vv. 5–8. The Lord, through the Prophet Isaiah, lets Hezekiah know that his unwise actions—of showing the Babylonian embassy everything—would have a negative future consequence. Hezekiah calls this “good” as a well-deserved punishment.

5 ¶ Then said Isaiah to Hezekiah, Hear the word of the LORD of hosts:

Sometimes the prophets received their answers after a time, and sometimes in an instant as we have here. It is even possible, that these words were received by Isaiah before he came to speak to Hezekiah. Alexander says: “This form of expression gives to what follows the solemnity and authority of a divine decree. The parallel passage (2 Kings 20:16) omits צבאות,¹ which Vitringa regards as emphatic here, implying a signal exercise of divine providence and power.”

6 Behold, the days come, that all that [is] in thine house, and [that] which thy fathers have laid up in store until this day, shall be carried to Babylon: nothing shall be left, saith the LORD.

Just as Hezekiah had shared everything with Babylonians, the Prophet Isaiah explained, speaking for the Lord, that nothing would be left that would not be taken away by Babylon. Gill says: “Behold, the days come” – Or, ‘are coming’ and which quickly came; after a few reigns more, even in Jehoiakim’s time: That all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store until this day, shall be carried to Babylon” – as it was, when Jehoiakim king of Judah, his mother, servants, princes, and officers, were taken by the king of Babylon, and carried captive, and along with them the treasures of the king’s house, and also all the treasures of the house of the Lord, 2 Kings 24:12. Nothing shall be left, saith the Lord]; this was, as Jarchi says, measure for measure; as there was nothing that was not shown to the ambassadors, so nothing should be left untaken away by the Babylonians.” Gil has: “Behold, the days come” – The captivity of the Jews in Babylon commenced about one hundred and twenty years after this prediction (compare Jeremiah 20:5). That all that is in thine house” – That is, all the treasures that are in the treasure-house (ISAIAH 39:2). And that which thy fathers have laid up in store” – In 2 Kings 18:15–16, we are told that Hezekiah, in order to meet the demands of the king of Assyria, had cut off even the ornaments of the temple, and taken all the treasures which were in ‘the king’s house.’ . . . Nothing shall be left] – This was literally fulfilled (see 2 Chronicles 36:18). It is remarkable, says Vitringa, that this is the first intimation that the Jews would be carried to Babylon – the first designation of the place where they would be so long punished and oppressed. Micah (Micah 4:10), a contemporary of Isaiah, declares the same thing, but probably this was not before the declaration here made by Isaiah. Moses had declared repeatedly, that, if they were a rebellious people, they should be removed from their own to a foreign land [in Rain in Due Season—GB]; but he had not designated the country (Leviticus 26:33–34; Deuteronomy 28:64–67; 30:3). Ahijah, in the time of Jeroboam (1 Kings 14:15), had predicted that they should be carried

¹ Hosts. As in Lord of Sabaoth (D&C 87:7; 88:2). That is, Lord of Hosts.

‘beyond the river,’ that is, the Euphrates; and Amos (Amos 5:27) had said that God would carry them ‘into captivity beyond Damascus.’ But all these predictions were now concentrated on Babylon; and it was for the first time distinctly announced by Isaiah that that was to be the land where they were to suffer so long and so painful a captivity.”

7 And of thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away; and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.

Alexander says: “The fulfilment of this prophecy is recorded in 2 Kings 24:12–16 and Daniel 1:1–7.”

Alexander also explains: “סריסים is strictly understood by the Septuagint (σπάδοντες), and the Vulgate (eunuchi), but explained by the Targum to mean nobles . . . , i.e. courtiers or household-officers, an extension of the meaning which agrees well with the usages of oriental courts.” Barnes writes: “That shall issue from thee” – Of the royal family. The captivity at Babylon occurred more than a hundred years after this, and of course those who were carried there were somewhat remote descendants of Hezekiah. And they shall be eunuchs] – The word used here (סריסים) denotes properly and strictly eunuchs, or such persons as were accustomed to attend on the harems of Oriental monarchs (Esther 2:3, 14–15). These persons were also employed often in various offices of the court (Esther 1:10, 12, 15), and hence, the word often means a minister of court, a court-officer, though not literally an eunuch (Genesis 37:6; 39:1). It is not easy, however, to tell when the word is to be understood literally, and when not. The Targum understands it of those who should be nurtured, or become great in the kingdom of Babylon. That the Jews were advanced to some offices of trust and power in Babylon, is evident from the case of Daniel (Daniel 1:2–7). It is by no means improbable, also, that the king of Babylon would have a pride in having among the attendants at his court, or even over the harem, the descendants of the once magnificent monarchs of the Jews.” Rawlinson explains: “Hezekiah had at the time, probably, no son, since Manasseh, who succeeded him upon the throne, was not born till two years later. Besides Manasseh, he appears to have had a son, Amariah, who was an ancestor of the Prophet Zephaniah (Zephaniah 1:1). He may, of course, have also had others. His descendants, rather than his actual sons, seem to be here intended; and the fulfilment of the prophecy is to be found in Daniel 1:3, where certain ‘of the king’s seed’ are mentioned among the Israelites who served as eunuchs in the palace of Nebuchadnezzar.”

8 Then said Hezekiah to Isaiah, Good [is] the word of the LORD which thou hast spoken. He said moreover, For there shall be peace and truth in my days.*

* 2 Kings 20:18, And he said, [Is it] not [good], if peace and truth be in my days?

Alexander writes: “The word good [טוֹב] is here used, neither in the sense of gracious nor in that of just exclusively, but in that of right, as comprehending both. While the king acquiesces in the threatening prophecy as righteous and deserved, he gratefully acknowledges the mercy with which it is tempered. That he looked upon the woes denounced against his children as a personal misfortune of his own, is clear from his regarding the postponement of the execution as a mitigation of the sentence on himself. The expression of thankfulness at this exemption shews how true the narrative is to nature and experience. Umbreit has the good sense and feeling to describe it as a natural and child-like acknowledgment.” Gill likewise has: “Then said Hezekiah to Isaiah, good is the word of the Lord which thou hast spoken” – Hezekiah was at once convinced of his sin, acknowledged it and repented of it, and owned that the sentence pronounced was but just and right; and that there was a mixture of mercy and goodness in it, in that time was given, and it was not immediately executed. He said moreover, for there shall be peace and truth in my days] – or a confirmed peace, lasting prosperity ...” One final point worth making here is that Hezekiah could have wept before the Lord with the same passion as when his life was to be cut short, but did not. The Lord made it clear over and over that the Babylonian captivity was not predetermined, or some form of predestination. Instead, going back to Rain in Due Season, all blessings and all punishments were—like our Patriarchal blessings and other blessings obtained in the House of the Lord—dependent on our comportment.

2 Chronicles 32

32 Now the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and his goodness, behold, they [are] written in the vision of Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, [and] in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

33 And Hezekiah slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the chiefest of the sepulchres of the sons of David: and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem did him honour at his death. And Manasseh his son reigned in his stead.

9 September 2013

Isaiah 40

יִבֶּשׁ הָעֵצִיר נִבֵּל צִיץ וְדָבָר-אֱלֹהֵינוּ יָקוּם לְעוֹלָם

The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: but the Word of our God shall stand for ever.

This sublime prophecy deals most especially with the Second Coming of the Lord, a time that the Jews call the days of the Messiah, לִימֹת הַמָּשִׁיחַ (Kimhi, in Rosenberg, 2:313). A few inspired Gentile exegetes also see in ISAIAH 40 the Second Advent. Govett writes: “Whence we conclude that this chapter, as in many, indeed in most prophecies of the Saviour’s appearance, his first and second advents are closely bound up together. But the prediction here bears principal reference to the second ... For then Jerusalem shall be comforted, and her ‘humiliation pardoned,’ when she acknowledges Jesus of Nazareth as her Messiah ... as John the Baptist heralded the first coming of Christ ‘in the spirit and power of Elias,’ shall Elijah himself herald the second coming in conjunction with Enoch.” ¶ We say to Govett, and the world, that not only would John the Baptist herald the First Advent, but also the Second. Indeed, John the Baptist, Elijah, Raphael and many other messengers appeared to the Prophet Joseph Smith and ordained him, blessed him, gave him the proper authority and keys in preparation for this, the dispensation of the fullness of times, preparatory to the day when the King of kings and Lord of lords shall come in glory. ¶ Keith wrote: “If the subject-matter of John’s cry be attended to, it will be seen, that while he announced the first appearance of Christ on earth, he intimated also another; that while he was the voice that cried that Christ came to ascend the altar of justice, to become the sacrifice, he also cried that he would come again to sit on the throne of righteousness, the period to which the context in Isaiah limits the full application of the passage. The party from Jerusalem to whose inquiry, ‘Who art thou?’ John replied, ‘I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness,’ put another question, ‘Why baptizest thou then?’ to which he answered, ‘I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance; but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worth to bear; he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire. Whose fan is in his hand, and he shall thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but the chaff he will burn up with unquenchable fire’ (compare Matthew 3:3 and John 1:19–28). This second announcement did not apply to the appearance of Christ on earth then—it refers to his coming again to reign over a renewed world. The conclusion at least of the passage in Isaiah can be understood only of yet future times. In what sense was every valley exalted in the days of our Lord? The glory of the Lord is not yet revealed on Zion; all flesh have not yet seen it.” ¶ This Isaianic chapter also contains one of the most sublime verses of scripture: “The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: but the Word of our God shall stand for ever.” We will carefully examine the meaning of the verse, as well as those that build up to it, in the text of the commentary. In addition, this chapter contains one of the most tender expressions of the Lord’s love for His sheep (“He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry [them] in his bosom, [and] shall gently lead those that are with young”) as well as glorious promises to those who will abide in the covenant (“But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew [their] strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; [and] they shall walk, and not faint”). ¶ Above all, this chapter reveals the Son, Emmanuel, in majestic tones. Elder David B. Haight declared, “We testify to all the world, as did the Apostles of old, that this same Jesus taken up into heaven as men watched, will return—will return in power and great glory, attended by the hosts of heaven. At that day ‘the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together.’ But prior to that day, as foretold by the prophets, there must be a restoration of all things in the last days, the fulness of the gospel with all its saving powers to be returned to earth (see Acts 3:20–21). We proclaim with knowledge and power as witnesses of heavenly events that the final great restoration has taken place, that angelic ministers have been sent from heaven, that God’s voice has been heard declaring its truth, that the gift of the Holy Ghost and the priesthood powers with blessings and promises have again been given to man” (“He Is Not Here. He Is Risen,” Ensign (CR), May 1980, p.9). ¶ Wordsworth explains how ISAIAH 40 through 48 are tied together: “The addresses in this portion of Isaiah are connected by catchwords; that is to say, some leading word at the end of one address is taken up at the beginning of the following address, which is thus linked on to the foregoing one. This is the same principle of connexion as that which characterizes the Book of Psalms. It shows the accurate exactitude with which these prophecies are joined together. Thus, for example, in this portion of Isaiah: — (1) In ISAIAH 40:31 the phrase ‘renew their strength’ [נִתְּלִיפוּ כֹחַ] at the end of this first address is repeated at the beginning of the second address (ISAIAH 41:1); and thus these two addresses are riveted together. (2) Again, the word breath [רֵיחַ], at the end of the second address, is taken up and repeated at the beginning of the third address, and forms thereby a striking connexion and contrast (ISAIAH 42:1). (3) Again, the words, Israel and Jacob [or rather, Jacob and Israel יִשְׂרָאֵל וְיַעֲקֹב], ‘it set him on fire,' [וְהִלָּהֵטוּ] and 'it burned him,' [וְהִתְבַּעַר-בּוֹ] at the end of the third address (ISAIAH 42:25), are taken up and repeated at the beginning of the fourth address (ISAIAH 43:1–2): 'O Jacob ... Israel ... when thou walkest through the fire [בְּמוֹ-אֵשׁ], thou shalt not be burned [וְהִתְבַּעַר-בְּךָ].' (4) Again, the words at the end of the fourth address, 'I have given Jacob to the curse, and Israel to reproaches,' are followed by the Consolation, at the beginning of the fifth address: 'Yet now hear, O Jacob, My servant, and Israel, whom I have chosen.' (5) Again, the words at the end of the fifth address, 'That saith of Cyrus [Coresh, לְכוּרֶשׁ], He is my Shepherd,' are taken up at the beginning of the sixth address: 'Thus saith the Lord to His Anointed, to Cyrus [לְכוּרֶשׁ].' (6) Again, the divine declaration, 'I have sworn [נִשְׁבַּעְתִּי] by Myself, unto Me every knee shall bow [תִּכְרַע], every tongue shall swear [תִּשָּׁבַע],' at the close of the sixth address, is followed by the striking exemplification of its truth at the beginning of the seventh address: 'Bel boweth down [כָּרַע]. . . Nebo stoopeth [קָרַס]. They stoop, they bow down together.' (7) This divine declaration is further confirmed by the beginning of the eighth address: 'Come down [רִדִּי], and sit in the dust, O virgin daughter of Babylon [בְּבִלְיָ], sit on the ground.' (8) Also the words, 'Every tongue shall swear [כָּל-לִשׁוֹן תִּשָּׁבַע]. Surely, shall one say. In the Lord have I righteousness and strength,' which is the second clause of that divine declaration, 'I have sworn by Myself, the word is gone out of My mouth in righteousness [צִדְקָה],' are taken up at the beginning of the ninth address: 'Hear ye this, which swear by the Name of the Lord, but not in righteousness [בְּצִדְקָה].' Thus all these nine addresses are connected together."

vv. 1–2. The Lord speaks words of comfort to Israel and Judah. Elder Orson Pratt taught that these verses have mostly to do with the Second Coming and that the Lord has not forgotten His people Israel: "The Jews will then come in remembrance before the Lord. That is, the set time for their deliverance and restoration will have come, the period predicted by the mouth of the ancient prophet in which the Gospel shall be proclaimed to them."¹

1 ¶ COMFORT ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God.

2 Speak ye comfortably[✓] to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished,[✓] that her iniquity is pardoned: for she hath received of the LORD's hand double for all her sins.

✓ to the heart

✓ ✓ or, appointed time

נַחֲמוּ נַחֲמוּ עַמִּי יְאֹמַר אֱלֹהֵיכֶם:
דַּבְּרוּ עַל-לֵב יְרוּשָׁלַם

Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God.

Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished. These words fill me with inexpressible joy and divine comfort. Henderson says: "The repetition נַחֲמוּ נַחֲמוּ gives intensity to the address." In Isaiah 40:2, however, rather than comfortably, we tenderly have, to the heart, עַל-לֵב, as indicated by the margin || דַּבְּרוּ עַל-לֵב יְרוּשָׁלַם, speaking ye to the heart of Jerusalem. ¶ The Targum (Ⓢ) has, "O ye prophets, prophesy comforts to my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably (Chaldee, 'to the heart'), to Jerusalem, and prophesy concerning her."

The LXX (Ⓣ) reads, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith God: priests, speak to the understanding of Jerusalem; comfort her; for her humiliation is accomplished." Instead of her warfare is accomplished, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) sadly has that Jerusalem has filled herself with violence and delighted in sin. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, "Be comforted, be comforted, my people, saith your God. Speak ye to the heart of Jerusalem, and call to her: for her evil is come to an end." ¶ It is a wonderful thing when the Lord owns His people and says, "my people" עַמִּי, and furthermore calls Himself to them, "your God" אֱלֹהֵיכֶם. I never tire of the felicitous contrast between Israel's rejection and her acceptance—for I feel my heart intertwined with hers as one. In Hosea we have, "Therefore, behold, I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably unto her [וְדַבַּרְתִּי עַל-לִבָּהּ]"

{Hosea 2:14 in KJV, 2:16 in Masoretic Text (Ⓜ)}. The more correct translation is "Therefore, behold, I will lure her and bring her to the wilderness, and speak to her heart” (LITV, also see ABP {LXX (6)}, AMP, Darby, ISV, YLT and most Spanish editions, as well, hablaré a su corazón). It is clear that the Lord is speaking of Israel, who would one day be brought back into His fold after a long departure. The time will come when the people of Jerusalem—the Jewish people and the rest of the house of Israel—will be comforted. Ibn Ezra says: “The expression דַּבֵּר עַל-לֵב ‘speak to the heart’ means always ‘to speak kindly,’ so as to remove sorrow and regret for things which have already past.” ¶ Cheyne does well in reminding us of Rain in Due Season, regarding Israel, “that her guilt is paid off” (that her iniquity is pardoned—AV), by pointing us to Leviticus 26:41 ff.: “And that I also have walked contrary unto them, and have brought them into the land of their enemies; if then their uncircumcised hearts be humbled, and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity: Then will I remember my covenant with Jacob, and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember; and I will remember the land. The land also shall be left of them, and shall enjoy her sabbaths, while she lieth desolate without them: and they shall accept of the punishment of their iniquity: because, even because they despised my judgments, and because their soul abhorred my statutes” (Leviticus 26:41–43). Birks says: “The voice is addressed to the Prophet [and announces the] sure recovery [of the Jewish nation], after grievous sins and sore judgments, to the enjoyment of the lasting favor of the God of Israel.” ¶ Regarding these verses, President Wilford Woodruff taught: “The Gospel is now restored to us Gentiles, for we are all Gentiles in a national capacity,² and it will continue with us if we are faithful, until the law is bound, and the testimony sealed, and the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled, when it will again revert to the Jews, whom the Lord will have prepared to receive it.³ They will gather to their own land, taking with them their gold and silver, and will re-build their city and temple, according to the prediction of Moses and the Prophets. When this time arrives, which is nigh, even at our doors, let the Gentile nations who reject the Gospel which is now sent to them, prepare to meet the judgments of an offended God! For when their cup is full even to the brim, the Lord will then remember the chastisement of the Jews, his favored people, and at whose hands they will have received double for their iniquities. Offenses must come, said the Savior, but woe unto them by whom they come. Woe unto the Gentiles, who have administered afflictions to the Jews for these many years! Woe unto them if they now reject this only means of salvation, for the awful calamities spoken of in these books, the Bible and Book of Mormon, will certainly befall them.”⁴ ¶ That her iniquity is pardoned: The Targum (7) has, “That she shall be filled with the people of the captivity, because her sins are forgiven.” The LXX (6) reads, “Her iniquity is pardoned.” The Douay-Rheims (8) has, “Her iniquity is forgiven.” There is a sweetness in these words, that her iniquity is pardoned. Rashi, in Rosenberg, has, “has been appeased—Heb. נִרְצָה.” Rosenberg, quoting Rain in Due Season, explains: “I.e. her punishment has been completed. We find a similar expression in Leviticus 26:43: ‘Then the land shall appease its Sabbaths.’” This is an interesting word, נִרְצָה. HALOT defines its root רָצָה, as to expiate or atone. Let us also look at the broader context of this expiation from Leviticus: “If they shall confess their iniquity, and the iniquity of their fathers, with their trespass which they trespassed against me, and that also they have walked contrary unto me; And that I also have walked contrary unto them, and have brought them into the land of their enemies; if then their uncircumcised hearts be humbled, and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity: Then will I remember my covenant with Jacob, and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember; and I will remember the land. The land also shall be left of them, and shall enjoy her sabbaths, while she lieth desolate without them: and they shall accept of the punishment of their iniquity: because, even because they despised my judgments, and because their soul abhorred my statutes. And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, I will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them: for I am the LORD their God. But I will for their sakes remember the covenant of their ancestors, whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt in the sight of the heathen, that I might be their God: I am the LORD” (Leviticus 26:40–45; also see Deuteronomy 30:4–6). ¶ Elder Orson Pratt explained: “In consequence of the wickedness of that people [the inhabitants of Jerusalem], and the great transgressions that they committed in the sight of heaven in rejecting the Lord, their true Messiah, great and severe calamities and judgments came upon them, and have continued upon them and their posterity until this age of the world. In other words, all those curses which are pronounced in

¹ Orson Pratt, March 26, 1871. Journal of Discourses, 26 March 1871. The restoration of the Jews and the rebuilding of Jerusalem, see pp. 59–70.

² That is, found in the Gentile nations.

³ I cannot contain the tears of gratitude that I feel for these promises on behalf of the Jewish people and of Israel. I have traveled throughout the world and I have seen how the Lord has, since the words of President Wilford Woodruff, begun to gather Israel back. The Church today is not only found in the Gentile nations, but also among the nations of the Lamanites. As a convert, I am a partial fulfillment of many of these promises, being a descendant of both Ephraim (maternal side, including Lamanite blood) and Judah (paternal side).

⁴ Woodruff, Elder Wilford, Journal of Discourses 18:221.

the Book of Deuteronomy upon the head of Israel have literally been fulfilled during the past eighteen hundred years {see Rain in Due Season—GB}.”⁵ ¶ The Book of Mormon also summarizes some of this: “Wherefore, the Jews shall be scattered among all nations; yea, and also Babylon shall be destroyed; wherefore, the Jews shall be scattered by other nations. And after they have been scattered, and the Lord God hath scourged them by other nations for the space of many generations, yea, even down from generation to generation until they shall be persuaded to believe in Christ, the Son of God, and the atonement, which is infinite for all mankind—and when that day shall come that they shall believe in Christ, and worship the Father in his name, with pure hearts and clean hands, and look not forward any more for another Messiah, then, at that time, the day will come that it must needs be expedient that they should believe these things. And the Lord will set his hand again the second time to restore his people from their lost and fallen state. Wherefore, he will proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder among the children of men.” (2Nephi 25:15–17). The inhabitants of Jerusalem and the descendants of Israel—wherever they may be—then, will have once again turned their hearts towards their God and their Lord. ¶ For she hath received of the LORD'S hand double [כפלים] for all her sins. The Targum (ܬ) has, “For she hath received the cup of consolations from the Lord, as if she had been smitten twice for all her sins.” The LXX (Ϯ) reads, “For she hath received from the hand of the Lord [blessings] double to the punishment of her sins.” The Peshitta (ܥ) explains that Jerusalem has received a double punishment for her sins as a natural consequence for her love for iniquity. The Douay-Rheims (Ϸ) has, “She hath received of the hand of the Lord double for all her sins.” ¶ Henderson says: “The language is hyperbolic, and is designed to inspire the strongest consolation.” Kay explains: “Double for all her sins” – Compare Jeremiah 16:18; 17:18. It was the ordinary rule under the law that ‘for all manner of trespass’ a man condemned by the judges should ‘pay double,’ Exodus 22:9.” CBNNotes additionally give us “Put by figure of speech metonymy (of subject), for that which is complete, thorough, ample. See ISAIAH 61:7; Genesis 43:22; Job 11:6; 42:10; 41:13; and Zechariah 9:12).” Israel was warned in Rain in Due Season that she would be repeatedly punished if she did not repent. Also see in Isaiah (ISAIAH 5:25; 9:12, 17, 21; 10:4). Nyman has: “Judah was to be sent through the ‘furnace of affliction’ (see ISAIAH 48:10), so the message given here is to be fulfilled after she has been through that furnace. A look at history and at present-day circumstances shows her still to be going through that furnace.”

vv. 3–8. Elias prepares the way for the Lord’s coming. Great physical upheavals will take place before the Second Coming. When the glory of Christ is revealed at His coming, all people shall see it together. Mortal man is compared to grass and flowers, which wither easily. The Word of our God, in contrast, shall stand forever. ¶ After quoting the first five verses in ISAIAH 40, Elder Parley P. Pratt said: “From these verses we learn, first, that the voice of one shall be heard in the wilderness, to prepare the way of the Lord, just at the time when Jerusalem has been trodden down of the Gentiles long enough to have received, at the Lord’s hands, double for all her sins, yea, when the warfare of Jerusalem is accomplished, and her iniquities pardoned. Then shall this proclamation be made as it was before by John, yea a second proclamation, to prepare the way of the Lord, for his second coming; and about that time every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low, and the crooked shall be made straight, and rough places plain, and then the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.”⁶

3 ¶ The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the LORD, make straight in the desert a highway for our God.

Ibn Ezra says: “These words are addressed to all nations.” The voice that cries in the wilderness is also one that invites all to come unto Christ—“whether by mine own voice or by the voice of my servants, it is the same” (D&C 1:38) for “Behold, that which you hear is as the voice of one crying in the wilderness—in the wilderness, because you cannot see him—my voice, because my voice is Spirit; my Spirit is truth; truth abideth and hath no end; and if it be in you it shall abound” (D&C 88:66). These verses continue to clarify that if we are faithful, we shall see God: “And if your eye be single to my glory, your whole bodies shall be filled with light, and there shall be no darkness in you; and that body which is filled with light comprehendeth all things. Therefore, sanctify yourselves that your minds become single to God, and the days will come that you shall see him; for he will unveil his face unto

⁵ Orson Pratt, 26 March 1871. Journal of Discourses, pp. 59–70. “The restoration of the Jews and the rebuilding of Jerusalem.”

⁶ Pratt, Parley P. A Voice of Warning and Instruction to All People Or, an Introduction to the Faith and Doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. New Edition. Salt Lake City: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1957. Included is the preface to the First American Edition (1837) and the Second European Edition (December 4, 1846), pp. 118–119.

you, and it shall be in his own time, and in his own way, and according to his own will” (D&C 88:67–68). ¶ This verse lays out the first hint regarding the coming verses which all of Christendom loves but often does not understand, which culminates in verse eight. We hear a voice crying in the wilderness; it is the voice of John the Baptist. He was sent as an Elias to prepare the way of the Lord in the meridian of time. And then in the latter-day, through the restoration of the Priesthood, he helped lay out the way for the Second Coming. What is John the Baptist proclaiming? That the time has come! That the Savior is about to make His presence known! The light would shine in darkness yet the darkness would not comprehend it (John 1:5). In contrast, in the latter-day, the whole world would see the glory of the Lord and comprehend it together. ¶ The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “A voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way before the people of the Lord; cast ye up a highway in the plain before the congregation of our God.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, for the last clause, “Make straight the roads for our God.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “The voice of one crying in the desert: Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the wilderness the paths of our God.” ¶ This verse is frequently and correctly quoted as an allusion to the Lord’s first coming. In the meridian of time John the Baptist was asked: “Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself? He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias.” (John 1:22b–23). ¶ Keith explains that these verses have a strong application to the Second Advent: “While, therefore, the Baptist is to be regarded as the voice, what he did cry is not to be limited to the coming of Christ in his days.” On 15 May 1829, John the Baptist also played a vital role in the Restoration by conferring the Aaronic Priesthood upon the Prophet Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery.⁷ John the Baptist acted through the spirit of Elias,⁸ preparing the way for the conferring of the Melchizedek Priesthood and all things that had to be restored before the Second Coming. In Doctrine and Covenants we read: “HEARKEN, and lo, a voice as of one sent down from on high, who is mighty and powerful, whose going forth is unto the ends of the earth, yea, whose voice is unto men—Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. The keys of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth, and from thence shall the gospel roll forth unto the ends of the earth, as the stone which is cut out of the mountain without hands shall roll forth, until it has filled the whole earth. Yea, a voice crying—Prepare ye the way of the Lord, prepare ye the supper of the Lamb, make ready for the Bridegroom” (D&C 65:1–3).

4 Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain: ✓ ✓

✓ or, a straight place

✓ ✓ or, a plain place

Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Let every valley be filled up, and every mountain and hill be leveled.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) has “Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be made low.” In 3 Nephi 8 ff. we read of the great geological upheavals at the time of the death of our Saviour. At the time of the Second Coming, the scene will likewise be one of great cataclysms. Beside the physical changes, the low and humble followers of Christ shall be exalted while the prideful made low. ¶ And the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain: The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And let all the crooked be made a straight road, and the rough way, smooth plains.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) has, “And the steep place shall become straight, and the rough places smooth.” Henderson has: “That עֶקֶב is not to be taken in the acceptation of hill or acclivity, but in that of crooked, is evident, both from the primary meaning of מִישׁוֹר,⁹ its opposite.” Speaking of the Second Advent, President Joseph Fielding Smith felt that this scripture along with ISAIAH 54:10 and others support the fact that “The land of Zion and the land of Jerusalem shall be turned back into their own place and the sea be driven back to the north, and the earth be as it was before it was divided.”¹⁰

5 And the glory of the LORD shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see [it] together: for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken [it].

The hints about the meaning of ISAIAH 40:8 continue to mount. ¶ And the glory of the LORD shall be revealed. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And the glory of the Lord will appear.” The glory of the Lord will be revealed in many ways, including the restoration of His Church. When the Savior comes for the second time, in that day will His glory be made fully manifest. “They shall not hurt

⁷ JS—History 1:72.

⁸ TPJS, pp. 335–336.

⁹ Straight (KJV).

¹⁰ Smith, Joseph Fielding. Church History and Modern Revelation. Salt Lake City, Utah: The Council of The Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, 1946.

nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea” (cf. Habakkuk 2:14). Wade says that the Glory of the Lord is “the visible splendour that indicated the Divine Presence.” ¶ And all flesh shall see [it] together: for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken [it]. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And all the sons of flesh shall see together, that by the Word of the Lord it has been decreed thus.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And all flesh shall see the salvation of God. For the Lord hath spoken.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, for the second half, “That the mouth of the Lord hath spoken.”

¶ Henderson says regarding all the flesh: כָּל-בָּשָׂר, flesh, is used metonymically of all animated beings, but especially of man; hence כָּל-בָּשָׂר, or כָּל-בָּשָׂר, means all mankind.” As we turn to Luke 3, the JST has, “As it is written in the book of the prophet Esaias; and these are the words, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, and make his paths straight. For behold, and lo, he shall come, as it is written in the book of the prophets, to take away the sins of the world, and to bring salvation unto the heathen nations, to gather together those who are lost, who are of the sheepfold of Israel; Yea, even the dispersed and afflicted; and also to prepare the way, and make possible the preaching of the gospel unto the Gentiles; And to be a light unto all who sit in darkness, unto the uttermost parts of the earth; to bring to pass the resurrection from the dead, and to ascend up on high, to dwell on the right hand of the Father, Until the fulness of time, and the law and the testimony shall be sealed, and the keys of the kingdom shall be delivered up again unto the Father; To administer justice unto all; to come down in judgment upon all, and to convince all the ungodly of their ungodly deeds, which they have committed; and all this in the day that he shall come; For it is a day of power; yea, every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low; the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways made smooth; And all flesh shall see the salvation of God” (JST Luke 3:4–11). Elder McConkie¹¹ points us to: “For as the light of the morning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west, and covereth the whole earth, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be” (JS–Matthew 1:26).

6 The voice said, Cry. And he said, What shall I cry? All flesh [is] grass, and all the goodliness thereof [is] as the flower of the field:

Alexander writes: “That two distinct speakers are here introduced, seems to be granted by [almost] all interpreters . . . There is a pleasing mystery, as Hitzig well observes, in the dialogue of these anonymous voices, which is dispelled by undertaking to determine too precisely who the speakers are. All that the words necessarily convey is, that one voice speaks and another voice answers. Interpreters are universally agreed that the last clause contains the words which the second speaker is required to utter [i.e., proclaim].” ¶ A voice is heard, “Cry!” This is a command to speak out or proclaim a message that comes from God Himself. A second voice—received by a disciple of Christ—inquires, “What shall I cry?” While we are not sure which prophet is receiving this message—Isaiah or John the Baptist or Joseph Smith—at the end, the command has been delegated to each disciple of Christ to proclaim the divinity of our Savior and the restoration of His Church. We are to proclaim these truths fearlessly and humbly. ¶ The voice said, Cry. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The voice of one crying, Prophecy!” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “‘A voice of one saying, Proclaim.’” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “The voice of one, saying: Cry.” That is, to proclaim. ¶ And he said, What shall I cry? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “He answered and said, What shall I prophesy?” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Wherefore I said, What shall I proclaim?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “And I said: What shall I cry?” ¶ All flesh [is] grass, and all the goodliness thereof [is] as the flower of the field: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “All the wicked are as grass, and all their strength as chaff of the field.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “All flesh is grass; and all the glory of man as a flower of grass.” Instead of goodliness, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has beauty. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “All flesh is grass, and all the glory thereof as the flower of the field.” Cheyne, leaning on Weir, shows us a similar expression, found in ISAIAH 2:22b: “man, whose breath is in his nostrils.” Ibn Ezra quoted from Psalms: “As the flower of the field, ‘which flourisheth in the morning and groweth up, but is cut down and withereth in the evening’ (Psalm 90:6).” Rashi, in Rosenberg, has: “All those who are haughty—their greatness shall be turned over and become like grass.” Speaking of the haughtiness of some of the leaders of the United States at the time of Joseph Smith we have (D&C 124:3–10): “. . . for they are as grass, and all their glory as the flower thereof which soon falleth” (D&C 124:7b). ¶ Elder Neal A. Maxwell warns: “. . . we might myopically conclude that ‘all flesh is grass’ (ISAIAH 40:6) . . . Isaiah’s words, however, pertain not to man’s worthlessness but to the transitoriness of this second estate.”¹²

¹¹ McConkie, Bruce R. Bruce R. McConkie. The Millennial Messiah: The Second Coming of the Son of Man, pp. 418–419.

¹² Maxwell, Neal A. But for a Small Moment. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1986. p. 88.

7 The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: because the spirit of the LORD bloweth upon it: surely the people [is] grass.

Mankind is represented by a fading flower and withering grass. Mankind is upon the earth for an instant. The breath of the Lord—represented poetically as the dry, hot sirocco winds of the Middle East—is sufficient to cause these to wilt. The key to understanding ISAIAH 40:8 is to contrast it to ISAIAH 40:7. We must focus on the fact that flowers and grass represent man, who often in his pride thinks he has dominion of all things in heaven and upon the earth. Yet we read in Doctrine and Covenants: “As well might man stretch forth his puny arm to stop the Missouri river in its decreed course, or to turn it up stream, as to hinder the Almighty from pouring down knowledge from heaven upon the heads of the Latter-day Saints” (D&C 121:33b). ¶ The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: In the LXX (Ⲯ), ISAIAH 40:7 has fallen off and has been lost. Because the spirit of the LORD bloweth upon it: Instead of spirit, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has breath. This at once leads us to think of the hot, dry and devastating sirocco winds.¹³ That God has control of all of the elements is clear to me. In 1988, when Chile was experiencing a strong drought, I had prayed to the Father in the name of Christ for rain, only to be told not to pray for rain—but to know when to pray for rain—as this was the Lord’s doing. The grass and the flowers are left in wilted condition by the spirit of the Lord, or wind of the Lord, רִיחַ יְהוָה. ¶ Surely the people [is] grass. The Targum (ⲡ) has, “Surely the wicked among a people are considered like grass.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) also makes the comparison, “this people is like grass (Lamsa) / herb (BPE). The meaning of the text is that the people may be compared to grass.

8 The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: but the word of our God shall stand for ever.

For the longest time I loved this scripture without knowing why. I ask that you read and ponder it carefully before reading the comments below. The flower and the grass are chosen to represent a short lifespan, and represent the life of man. But the word of our God, וְדְבַר אֱלֹהֵינוּ, shall stand for ever. So what does the Word stand for? I believe this clause has at least two beautiful meanings: (1) what the Lord has spoken will come to pass, “my word shall not pass away, but shall all be fulfilled, whether by mine own voice or by the voice of my servants, it is the same” (D&C 1:38b). (2) Is not the expression word used in a special way in another scripture? “In the beginning was the Word (λογος), and the Word (λογος) was with God, and the Word (λογος) was God” (John 1:1). Who, then, is the Word of our God? The Word is the very Messiah, the Son of God the Eternal Father, even Christ Jesus who shall stand forever. I know this to be true with the deepest sentiment of my being. I bear the most solemn witness of this, that the Word represents Christ, the Holy One of Israel. This was revealed to me by the Holy Spirit years ago as I pondered over this scripture. It is through Messiah that we can obtain comfort (ISAIAH 40:1). In Spanish, the expression word is translated as verb, and Christ is called el Verbo Divino, or the Divine Verb. ¶ The Hebrew text (BHS) uses the expression “but-word-our Elohim,” וְדְבַר אֱלֹהֵינוּ in contrast to the word of the LORD דְּבַר יְהוָה “word-Yahweh” (e.g. Genesis 15:3; ISAIAH 1:10). 1 Peter 1:24–25 needs to be considered with this understanding and the following capitalization: “For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away: But the Word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this is the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you” (see also, AMP version in 1 Peter 1:25 and LITV in ISAIAH 40:8). ¶ Alexander suggests: “The quotation in Peter confirms the supposition, here suggested by the context, that the words have reference to the preaching of the gospel, or the introduction of the new dispensation.” No doubt Alexander is correct, but the greater meaning is the announcement of the Word Himself, it is He who would stand forever. Alexander continues: “[Peter] adds, and this is the word which is preached (εὐαγγελισθέν) unto you.” Once again, yes, but the more perfect Word is Christ Himself, “This is the Word which is preached unto you.” Gill well says, in referring us to Paul’s words and interpreting these to equate the Word with Christ: “and this is the word, which by the Gospel is preached unto you] – who seems to distinguish the word from the Gospel, by which it is preached, and to intend Christ the essential Word; who stands or abides for ever as a divine Person; in his office as Mediator, being Prophet, Priest, and King forever.” Rawlinson, in ISAIAH 40:6 well has: “The speakers ... contrast the perishable nature of man with the enduringness and unchangingness of God. The point of their discourse is that ‘the Word of the Lord endureth for ever,’ and therefore the preceding promises (ISAIAH 40:2, 5) are sure.” And then adds here in ISAIAH 40:8: “Amid all human frailty, shiftingness, changefulness, there is one thing that endures, and shall endure—God’s Word.” Luther, Calvin, Kay, Ironside and others also capitalize “The Word of our God,” but invariably mean the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Keith says, regarding these verses: “One voice should be represented as announcing the approach to earth of the King of righteousness.” Simeon says: “The ‘word of God’ here spoken of, may be understood as relating to Christ, who is often called by this name, and whose immutability is mentioned by the Psalmist in this very view (Psalm 102:11–12, 26–27). These verses provide additional proof: “My days are like a shadow that declineth; and I am withered like grass. But thou, O LORD, shall endure for ever; and thy remembrance unto all generations ... They shall perish, but thou shalt endure: yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed: But thou art the same, and thy years shall have no end.” Wordsworth, almost alone among the Gentile authors, boldly testifies: “... therefore the Word which ‘endureth for ever was made flesh’ (John 1:14) by the operation of the Spirit, and God was ‘manifested in the flesh.’ The Word, which is here contrasted with the Voice, is (in the highest sense) the Eternal Word, Who became Incarnate for us, and Whose Advent was heralded by ‘the Voice of one crying in the wilderness,’ and Who animates the written Word, and speaks in it.” ¶ The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The wicked dieth, and his thoughts perish; but the word¹⁴ of our God¹⁵ shall stand forever.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “The grass is withered and the flower fallen; but the word of our God will endure forever.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “The grass is withered, and the flower is fallen: but the word of our Lord endureth for ever.” One last thought, here. The expression “but-word-our Elohim,” וְכַלְהֵם אֱלֹהֵינוּ is a clear instance where God the Eternal Father is mentioned in relationship to His beloved Son. Word and Elohim are title-names. Isaiah knew that the Scriptures would be corrupted by the hands of men, and left, along with the other prophets of God, hidden testimonies in verses like this. Yes, indeed, the Son of our Heavenly Father will stand forever! Even Christ Jesus!¹⁶

¹³ I note that J. D. Michaelis (in Alexander) came to the same conclusion, calling it the “east wind.”

vv. 9–11. Zion can now proudly proclaim, “Behold your God!” as she boldly invites all to come unto Christ and into the Holy Temple. In the Second Coming the Lord God will come in strength and glory. And He shall tenderly care for his flock.

¹⁴ Here not Meimra, but fitnama, ‘word’ in Aramaic, וּפְתִימָא.

¹⁵ Elohim, or Elahana, אֱלֹהָנָא.

¹⁶ It was after I was so inspired to understand ISAIAH 40:8 that I looked at the footnotes of the LDS 1984 Holy Bible and found: “TG: Jesus Christ: Messenger of the Covenant.” It was probably Elder Bruce R. McConkie who put that note there. I was thrilled to have a second confirmation of the inspiration I had felt.

9 ¶ O Zion, that bringest good tidings, ✓ get thee up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, ✓ lift up thy voice with strength; lift [it] up, be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God!

✓ or, O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion

✓ ✓ or, O thou that tellest good tidings to Jerusalem

Many a person has missed that the Word is given as a synonym to Christ in ISAIAH 40:8. But note that ISAIAH 40:4–7 build to this glorious testimony, and note what Henderson has to say about ISAIAH 40:3 as well as ISAIAH 40:9: “The purport of the message is the appearance of God in the person of Messiah, which had been predicted ISAIAH 40:3, and is here repeated for the sake of amplification in the following verses. The prophet employs the Divine names יְהוָה, אֱלֹהֵינוּ, and אֱלֹהִים specifically with this reference.” That is, LORD, Lord, and God (ISAIAH 40:9–10). And of course, not just in ISAIAH 40:9–10, but also in ISAIAH 40:8 where Christ is revealed as the Word. Henderson continues: “These verses exhibit certain attributes of the character and work of Christ; such as power, tenderness, and love.” It was not only predicted in ISAIAH 40:3, but with a glorious crescendo amplified from the promise, to the allusion, to the exquisite conclusion: Behold your God! ¶ The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Upon a high mountain get up, ye prophets, that bring good tidings unto Zion; lift ye up your voice with strength that bring good tidings to Jerusalem; lift it up, be not afraid, say to the cities of the house of Judah, The kingdom of your God is revealed.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Ascend a lofty mountain, thou who proclaimest good news to Sion: exalt thy voice with strength, thou who bringest glad tidings to Jerusalem: raise it up; be not afraid; say to the cities of Juda, Behold, your God!” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “Get thee up upon a high mountain, thou that bringest good tidings to Sion: lift up thy voice with strength, thou that bringest good tidings to Jerusalem: lift it up, fear not. Say to the cities of Juda: Behold your God.”

¶ Alexander says: “This construction is further recommended by the beautiful personification which it introduces of the Holy City as the seat of the true religion and the centre of the church. The office here ascribed to it is the same that is recognised in ISAIAH 2:3: the law shall go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. Not only in the restoration from captivity, or in the personal advent of the Saviour, but in every instance of the Lord’s return to his forsaken people, it is the duty of the church to communicate as well as to receive the joyful tidings ... The exhortation, fear not, does not imply that there was danger in making the announcement, but that there might be doubt and hesitation as to its fulfilment.” ¶ President Lorenzo R. Snow explained, “The city of Zion will be built in Jackson County. The site for the city of Zion was pointed out by the Prophet Joseph Smith as Jackson County, Missouri, and there some of our people settled in 1831, but were subsequently driven from their homes. This event, while it delayed the building of the city, did not change the place of its location. The Latter-day Saints fully expect to return to Jackson County and ‘build up Zion.’ Their exodus to the Rocky Mountains and their sojourn in the stakes of Zion, as the places are called which they now inhabit, they regard as preparatory to that return, and as events that had to be in order to fulfill scripture, notably these words of Isaiah: ‘O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain’ [ISAIAH 40:9]. (2 January 1902, MS, 64:2.)”¹⁷ Elder Orson Pratt taught: “We find, in the 40th chapter of the prophecies of Isaiah, that the people of Zion are to be raised up preparatory to the second advent of the Son of God. Isaiah uses an exclamation something like this— ‘O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain.’ It seems by this, that the people called Zion, wherever they might be, were to be removed from the regions they originally inhabited, and were to be located in a high mountain, or in a very elevated region. If you wish to know the time which this prophetic exhortation to the people of Zion had reference to, read the whole of the 40th chapter of Isaiah, and you will find that, at that period, the glory of God is to be revealed and all flesh is to see it together, evidently referring to the great day when the Son of God shall come in his glory, when every eye shall see him, and they also who pierced him, and all people, nations and tongues under heaven, who are spared unto that day, shall behold him descend in power and majesty to this earth ... Prior to the death of the Prophet Joseph Smith, the Lord predicted through him that this people should be gathered out from all the nations under heaven, and should be established in the mountains, or elevated regions of this continent...”¹⁸ Finally, for a discussion of the expression your God, אֱלֹהֵיכֶם, see my notes under ISAIAH 37:4.

10 Behold, the Lord GOD will come with strong ✓ [hand], and his arm shall rule for him: behold, his reward [is] with him, and his work ✓ before him.

¹⁷ Lorenzo Snow. Edited by Clyde J. Williams. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1984.

¹⁸ Elder Orson Pratt, Journal of Discourses. “The rise of Zion in the last days,” 15 June 1873, pp. 79–80.

✓ or, against the strong

✓ ✓ or, recompence for his work

Behold, the Lord GOD will come with strong [hand], and his arm shall rule for him: The Targum (Ⲛ) has, “Behold, the Lord God shall be revealed, and the strength of the arm of His might shall rule before him.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Behold the Lord! The Lord is coming with majesty; and his arm with dominion.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has something like, “Behold, Yahweh God comes with might, and his arm with strength.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) renders it without the ellipsis, “Behold the Lord God shall come with strength, and his arm shall rule.” Note the exhortation of the double behold! (הִנֵּה, הִנֵּה). The word hand, as indicated by Ibn Ezra, is elliptical, and not included in the original: “ⲡ ‘hand’ is to be supplied.” Govett explains that while ISAIAH 40:11 may well have a focus on the meridian of times, that ISAIAH 40:10 is centered on the Second Coming: “Words which, as Eusebius perceived, must be spoken of his second appearing. Then shall also his gracious character of a shepherd be manifested in its full blessedness to his risen saints, and the inhabitants of the world living under his rule.” ¶ Behold, his reward [is] with him, and his work before him. The Targum (Ⲛ) has, “Behold, the reward of those who perform His word is with Him, because their works are manifest to Him.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Behold his reward is with him; and his work, before him.” A number of exegetes suggest that the reward spoken of here belongs to the Lord himself. Along with the Jewish Rabbis Ibn Ezra, Kimhi and Kara (see Slotki/Rosenberg) I believe the reward is intended for the righteous. The greatest reward is exaltation and eternal life such that God will walk among His people to be their God.

11 He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry [them] in his bosom, [and] shall gently lead those that are with young. ✓

✓ or, that give suck

The Targum (Ⲛ) has for the third clause, “He shall carry the tender ones in His bosom,” and also prefers the margin ||, “that give suck,” in the last clause. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Like a shepherd he will tend his flock; and with his arm he will gather the lambs, and comfort the ewes that are with young.” For the last clause, shall gently lead &c. the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has sustains the new borns (BPE) / shall feed again those who give suck (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather together the lambs with his arm, and shall take them up in his bosom, and he himself shall carry them that are with young.”

¶ Linda & I had the great blessing of seeing shepherds gently leading—rather than pushing from behind—their small flocks in Jordan in our 2012 Israel-Jordan trip. Lowth says: “A beautiful image, expressing, with the utmost propriety as well as elegance, the tender attention of the shepherd to his flock. That the greatest care in driving the cattle in regard to the dams and their young was necessary, appears clearly from Jacob’s apology to his brother Esau, ‘The flocks and the herds giving suck to their young are with me; and if they should be over-driven, all the flock will die’ (Genesis 33:13).” Henderson says: “The figures here borrowed from pastoral life are exquisitely beautiful; expressing, with the utmost elegance of language, the infinite care and tenderness of ‘the good Shepherd.’ He not only exercises a sovereign and uncontrollable power for the defence of his sheep (John 10:28), but attends to the weak and feeble, tenderly carries the young in his bosom, and gently guides such as give suck, that they may not be overdriven.” Alexander says: “The word correctly rendered feed denotes the whole care of a shepherd for his flock, and has therefore no exact equivalent in English.” A number of translators use the word tend: “He will tend his flock like a shepherd” (ESV, also see NASB, ABP {LXX (6)}) and in Spanish, apacentará (RV, LBLA, NBLH, RVG, SRV, SSE). מְרִעֵה means to shepherd, shelter, protect, guard, tend (HAL, Gesenius). ¶ Elder Delbert L. Stapley has: “The testimony that Jesus is the Good Shepherd was a figure of speech familiar to those accustomed to the pastoral conditions of Palestine. Jesus knew His hearers were acquainted with the prophecy that a shepherd had been promised the children of Israel. David, the shepherd boy who became king, wrote the beautiful Twenty-third Psalm that begins: ‘The Lord is my shepherd.’ ISAIAH prophesied that when God would come down, ‘He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm’ (ISAIAH 40:11). There was no mistaking what Jesus meant. He was their Lord—the promised Messiah!”¹⁹ Govett said of the Messiah’s first advent: “John the Baptist spoke of Christ in his first character of meekness as ‘the Lamb of God taking away the sin of the world,’ answering to the well known description of the Saviour given in the 11th verse, as ‘feeding his flock like a shepherd.’ This the Lord applied to himself in his beautiful parable of the shepherd and his flock.” ¶ Everyone who accepts the invitation to come unto Christ will feel of His love. Elder Groberg shared how he was feeling an overflow of the Spirit and so much joy until suddenly he was accosted by feelings of inadequacy and despair. After reading the words in 2 Nephi 4:17 something happened: “As I slowly read and pondered those verses the former feelings of warmth and love began to return. Finally, as light chases away darkness, these good feelings pushed the painful feelings out and I was once more filled with light and joy. What contrast! What gratitude! For a long time I basked in the warmth of eternal love and forgiveness and felt the approbation of a caring Savior. When we see more clearly everything He has done for us we will realize that what we feel and understand now is but the tiniest part of all He has actually done for us. Our whole desire will be to sing praises to His name forever. How good and forgiving and loving God is! The words of Isaiah sang in my heart: ‘He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young’ (ISAIAH 40:11). I could literally feel the Savior’s mercy cover my weaknesses in a blanket of forgiveness and love. I could do nothing but quietly weep and pray and express gratitude. I felt as though I was not in my body but somewhere else floating in a sea of ecstasy and peace and love, and moving through space and seeing and understanding things in a way I had not previously seen or understood them ... It came to me with brilliant clarity that I shouldn’t worry about the challenges ahead, for if we did our best, someday the Lord would see that things worked out.”²⁰

vv. 12–17. These verses seem to contrast God’s infinite understanding, knowledge and power with that of finite man. Three important who (מִי) questions are considered.

12 ¶ Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with the span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure,[✓] and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance?

✓ a tierce

The first question asked is who formed the earth. ¶ Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with the span. The Targum (ܬ) has, “He who hath promised these things, shall confirm them; He hath spoken it, and He will do it; He in whose sight all the waters of the world are accounted as a drop in the hollow of the hand, and the expansion of the heavens as if they had been prepared with the span (‘the little finger’).” The LXX (6) reads, “Who hath ¹⁹ Elder Delbert L. Stapley, Of the Council of the Twelve, What Constitutes the True Church, A:22, 1977.

²⁰ Groberg, John H. The Fire of Faith. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1996, pp. 303–304.

measured the water with his hand, and the heaven with a span and the whole earth with a hand breadth?” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and weighed the heavens with his palm?” Skinner (and many others) explains מִן, a measure, as in the margin ||, “‘a third part,’ a tierce ... a small measure, probably a third of an ephah.” Ibn Ezra has: “There are some that ask, How is it possible that such a thing shall happen? The answer is that the same Supreme Being will cause it to pass, who has created the whole universe, who knows the quantity of the water in the sea, as if He had measured it with His hand. בשעלו In the hollow of His hand, Comp. בשעלו ‘for handfuls’ (Ezekiel 13:19). And meted out heaven with the span. He knows the measure of heaven, which He has stretched out like a curtain; He has created it with His omnipotence, according to His wisdom, as if He had measured it with the span. The words of the text are an anthropomorphism.” This verse is a description of the role of Christ in the formation of this earth. Elder Heber C. Kimball explains that as he molds some clay—from materials that already existed—so likewise, our Savior, from materials that already existed, formed this earth.²¹ And we could add, worlds without number. Many of the Church leaders use the expression “in the hollow of His hand” as an expression of hope, that the Lord will safely preserve them. ¶ And comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance? The Targum (T) has, “And the dust of the earth as if in a measure, and the mountains as if weighed in scales, and the hills in a balance.” The LXX (G) reads, “Who hath weighed the mountains in scales and the dales with a balance?” Instead of comprehended, the Peshitta (S) has measured. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Who hath poised with three fingers the bulk of the earth, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance?” Skinner suggests: “scales and balance” – might be better transposed; the first word (פֶּלֶס) denotes the horizontal beam, the second (מִאֲזִינִים) the pair of scales.” ¶ President Brigham Young used some of the language in this verse to speak of the world’s reaction to the gospel truth: “[The world] will not be governed by the Spirit of God. We may correctly say that there is no difficulty in convincing people of the truth of the work in which we are engaged. We send our Elders into the world, in the midst of all the religion and philosophy of the day, and ‘Mormonism’ takes them up and weighs them ‘in the balances,’ as the Prophet says of the Lord’s measuring the seas in the hollow of his hand, and taking up the mountains as a very little thing. A person who understands the truth of the principles and doctrines we preach and believe in can handle the religions and philosophy of the day as a small matter; consequently, it is not difficult to convince the world. There is but very little difficulty in convincing every person who will hearken to reason. You can convince them; but what is the difficulty. . . [t]he majority of the human family do not love the truth, and many forsake it after they have embraced it.”

13 Who hath directed the Spirit of the LORD, or [being] his counsellor[✓] hath taught him?

✓ man of his counsel

The second question asks who could possibly be capable of instructing the Lord or giving Him advice.

¶ The Targum (T) has, “Who hath directed the Holy Spirit in the mouth of all the prophets? Is it not the Lord? He maketh known the words of His will to the righteous, the servants of His Word.” The LXX (G) reads, “Who hath known the mind of the Lord? and who hath been of his counsel to teach him?” For the last clause, the Peshitta (S) ask who has been His counselor. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Who hath forwarded the spirit of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor, and hath taught him?” In ISAIAH 55:8–9 the Lord makes it clear that His thinking is higher than man’s.

14 With whom took he counsel, and [who] instructed him,[✓] and taught him in the path of judgment, and taught him knowledge, and shewed to him the way of understanding?^{✓ ✓}

✓ made him understand

✓ ✓ understandings?

The third question, like the second, asks who is capable of counseling, instructing or imparting knowledge to the Lord. ¶ The Targum (T) has, “I will make known wisdom to them who pray for it from Him (according to the Royal Polyglot קִדְמִי, ‘from me’), and I will teach them the way of justice; yea, He will give the law to their sons, and He will make known to their sons’ sons the path of understanding.” The LXX (G) reads, “Or whom hath he consulted that he might instruct him? or who hath pointed out judgment him? or who hath shewn him the way of knowledge?” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “With whom hath he consulted, and who hath instructed him, and taught him the path of justice, and taught him knowledge, and shewed him the way of understanding?”

²¹ Heber C. Kimball, JD 2:161a.

15 Behold, the nations [are] as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance: behold, he taketh up the isles as a very little thing.

We now receive the answer to these questions: the nations are but a speck of dust in a balance in contrast to the Lord. ¶ Behold, the nations [are] as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance: The LXX (6) reads, “If all the nations are as a drop from a cask; and are accounted as the turning of a balance.” Instead of small dust, the Peshitta (5) has dipping (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Behold the Gentiles are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the smallest grain of a balance.” Ibn Ezra suggests: “כִּמְד מִדְּלִי As a drop of a bucket, as a drop that falls from the bucket.” Birks says: “There is a progress and climax in the figures. To Him who measures the ocean in the hollow of His hand, nations are less than a handful, even as a single drop spilt from a vessel.” ¶ Behold, he taketh up the isles as a very little thing. The Targum (7) has, “Behold, the isles are as fine dust that flieth away.” The LXX (6) reads, “May be reckoned as spittle.” The Peshitta (5) has the isles being cast away as fine dust. The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Behold the islands are as a little dust.” Birks says: “He who weighs the hills in a balance, counts the people as the small dust of the balance of which the weight is insensible, and cannot even turn the scale.”

16 And Lebanon [is] not sufficient to burn, nor the beasts thereof sufficient for a burnt offering.

All of Lebanon is too small and insufficient for a burnt offering to be offered to the Lord. ¶ The Targum (7) inserts the trees of Lebanon. The LXX (6) reads, “If Lebanon is not sufficient for a fire, nor all the beasts sufficient for an homage offering.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has not be enough instead of not sufficient. ¶ Ibn Ezra says: “God does not want burnt offerings; Lebanon would not suffice for fuel, if He wanted offerings. Lebanon is mentioned by the prophet simply as an example which his hearers can understand; in reality, however, he refers to all the woods of the earth. The same remark applies to the words ‘and the beasts thereof.’” Birks explains: “If Lebanon were the altar, its pine-forests and cedar-groves the pile, and its countless beasts the sacrifice, all would be far unworthy of His greatness . . . [and thus this message] prepares the way for [the] central truth [of these prophecies], the true Sacrifice and great Sin-offering of the Son of God (ISAIAH 53:5–11).”

17 All nations before him [are] as nothing; and they are counted to him less than nothing, and vanity.

Indeed, all the nations (כָּל-הַגּוֹיִם) are nothing, less than nothing, but rather, pure vanity, when compared to the Lord. ¶ The Targum (7) has for the second clause, “their works are accounted before Him as naught.” The LXX (6) reads, “And all the nations are as nothing and reckoned as nothing.” The last clause in the Peshitta (5) has “And they are counted to him for destruction and for the sword.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “All nations are before him as if they had no being at all, and are counted to him as nothing, and vanity.” The full expression is quite interesting, מְאֵפֶס וְתוֹהוּ, translated in the AV as less than nothing, and vanity, meaning in a more literal way, “less than nothing and emptiness” (ESV, YLT), “nothing and chaos” (ISV). The first of these expressions (אֵפֶס) means nothing and in Modern Hebrew it also used to express the number zero. The second expression (תוֹהוּ) we have seen in Genesis to describe the disorganized nature of the materials before the Lord began to form the earth as “And the earth was without form, and void” (Genesis 1:2a). Skinner says, “The Hebrew is תוֹהוּ, a word which means primarily ‘a waste,’ and is applied in Genesis 1:2 to the primeval chaos . . . Here and in many other cases it is a synonym for nonentity.”

vv. 18–26. God is incomparable, yet will man compare Him to idols? Or make Him equal to man? It is God who created the heavens and the earth and is incomparable. As Skinner says, “This is the first of several sarcastic passages in which the processes of an idol factory are minutely described.”

18 ¶ To whom then will ye liken God? or what likeness will ye compare unto him?

The Targum (7) has, “And whom do you think able to contend with God? and what is the likeness that ye can compare with Him?” The LXX (6) reads, “To whom have you likened the Lord? and to what likeness have you compared him?” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, for the second clause, “Or what image will you make for him?” In the DSS 1QIsa^a (9) we have “to whom will ye liken me, God,” תִּדְמִינִי, while the Masoretic text (22) has “to whom will ye liken God,” תִּדְמִינֵהוּ. Also, the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) has “will ye compare unto me,” תַּעֲרוֹכִי לוֹ, while the Masoretic text (M) has “will ye compare unto him,” תַּעֲרוֹכִי לוֹ.

19 The workman melteth a graven image, and the goldsmith spreadeth it over with gold, and casteth silver chains.

The workman melteth a graven image. The LXX (G) reads, “Hath a carpenter when he hath made an image.” The BPE (S) follows the Masoretic text (M) here while Lamsa makes this a question, “Is he an image which the carpenter has &c.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Hath the workman cast a graven statue?” The DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) adds and he maketh (וַיַּעֲשֶׂה) to the process of pouring out a graven image. Henderson says of this verse and the next: “If the entire creation is nothing in comparison of God, how absurd to invest a piece of metal, or a block of wood, with the attributes of divinity; or even merely to regard such as an image of him! In the former of these verses is described the costly idol of the rich; in the latter, that of the poor, צַרְיָה²² is repeated in order to add to the force of the irony; and רָקַע²³ is understood, only in the acceptance of beating, to express the making of chains. In many of the Egyptian idols holes are found, through which chains passed for the purpose of suspending them on the wall.”²⁴ ¶ And the goldsmith spreadeth it over with gold. The LXX (G) reads, “Or the goldsmith when he hath melted gold and gilded it.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Or hath the goldsmith formed it with gold.” ¶ And casteth silver chains. The Targum (T) has, “And with silver chains the silversmith fasteneth it.” The LXX (G) reads, “Prepared this as a likeness of him?” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Or the silversmith with plates of silver?”

20 He that [is] so impoverished[✓] that he hath no oblation chooseth a tree [that] will not rot; he seeketh unto him a cunning workman to prepare a graven image, [that] shall not be moved.

✓ is poor of oblation

He that [is] so impoverished that he hath no oblation chooseth a tree [that] will not rot. The Targum (T) has, “He cuts a wild ash (the Royal Polyglot reads ²² Goldsmith or silversmith.

²³ Strike or beat.

²⁴ And, shall we also add, as idolatrous pendants carried on the chest.

בְּרִאָעָא דְלֵא אָחָד, ‘wood on which rottenness will not lay hold on’) of the forest, which rottenness will seize.” The LXX (G) reads, “For the carpenter chuseth a sound piece of timber and will inquire wisely.” The Peshitta (S) also has fine good wood that is selected for the project. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “He hath chosen strong wood, and that will not rot.” ¶ Alexander, leaning on some comments by Gesenius, partly has: “To say that the poor man uses wood instead of gold and silver, is coherent and appropriate, but far less significant and striking than to say, that the man who has already reduced himself to want by lavish gifts to his idol, still continues his devotions, and as he no longer can afford an image of the precious metals is resolved at least to have a durable wooden one. Thus understood, the verse adds to the general description a particular trait highly expressive of the folly of idolaters.” The idolaters are careful to choose the very best wood that will not rot, but will endure (Rashi, in Rosenberg, and others as well). ¶ He seeketh unto him a cunning workman to prepare a graven image, [that] shall not be moved. The LXX (G) reads, “How he may place his image that it may not be moved.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “The skilful workman seeketh how he may set up an idol that may not be moved.” Regarding cunning חָכָם, Alexander has: “Wise is here used in what appears to be its primary meaning of artistically skilful.” Skinner prefers, for shall not be moved, “that will not totter”²⁵ (1 Samuel 5:3–4; cf. Wisdom of Solomon 13:15 f.)”

21 Have ye not known? have ye not heard? hath it not been told you from the beginning? have ye not understood from the foundations of the earth?

The Targum (T) has, beginning with the third clause, “Hath not the work in the creation been declared unto you in its order from the beginning? Have ye not understood that ye ought to fear Him, who hath created the foundations of the earth?” The LXX (G) reads, “Will you not know? will you not hear? hath it not been told you from the beginning? have you not known the foundations of the earth?” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Do you not know? hath it not been heard? hath it not been told you from the beginning? have you not understood the foundations of the earth?” ¶ Alexander, leaning on the LXX (G) suggests: “But the most satisfactory, because the safest and most regular construction, is the strict one given in the Septuagint (οὐ γνώσεσθε; οὐκ ἀκούσεσθε;), revived by Lowth (will you not know? will you not hear?), and approved by Ewald (o wollt ihr nicht erkennen? o wollt ihr nicht hören?). The clause is then not a mere expression of surprise at their not knowing, but of concern or indignation at their being unwilling to know.”

²⁵ See also HALOT for this word, מוֹרֵט with root מוֹרֵט, “2. to be made to totter” מוֹרֵט ISAIAS 40:20.”

Regarding from the beginning בְּרֵאשִׁית, Alexander suggests: “בְּרֵאשִׁית is not a mere indefinite expression meaning long ago, of old, or the like, but must refer to some specific terminus a quo . . . the reference of the words [is] to the beginning of the human race, or of the world itself, which is, moreover, favoured by the subsequent appeal to the creation.” These comments are an allusion to the בְּרֵאשִׁית in Genesis 1:1.

22 [It is] he that sitteth[✓] upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof [are] as grasshoppers; that stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in:

✓ or, Him that sitteth, &c.

[It is] he that sitteth upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof [are] as grasshoppers. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Who maketh the Shekinah of His glory to dwell in exalted strength, and all the inhabitants of the earth are in His estimation as locusts.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “He it is, who occupieth the circuit of the earth; and the inhabitants thereon are as grasshoppers.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “It is he that sitteth upon the globe of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are as locusts.” Regarding upon the circle of the earth

[עַל-חֲגִיב תִּפְּאֵץ], Ibn Ezra has: “Here it is stated that the earth is round and not square.” So also Gill, who comments: “Or, ‘the globe’ of it; for the earth is spherical or globular: not a flat plain, but round.” Redak [in Rosenberg] explains that “God is depicted anthropomorphically” as sitting in upon the center of the earth, and further adds: “He sees everything as one who sits on a high place sees everything that transpires on the lower places before him. For this reason, the prophet describes the inhabitants of the earth as grasshoppers, in keeping with the anthropomorphism of the person sitting on high and viewing all that is below him.” ¶ That stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “He that stretched out the heavens as a little thing, and spreadeth them out as the tent of the glory of the house of the Shekinah.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “He it is, who established the heaven as an arch, and spread it out as a tent to be dwelt in.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has as nothing instead of as a curtain.

23 That bringeth the princes to nothing; he maketh the judges of the earth as vanity.

The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Who gives princes over to weakness; the judges of the earth He bringeth to naught.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Who giveth chiefs as a nothingness to govern: and hath made the earth as a mere nothing.” Instead of as vanity, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has as if they were non-existent. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has searchers of secrets instead of princes. Here we return to what was said earlier by the Prophet Joseph Smith (see ISAIAH 40:6) about the haughtiness and pride of the judges or leaders of nations.

24 Yea, they shall not be planted; yea, they shall not be sown: yea, their stock shall not take root in the earth: and he shall also blow upon them, and they shall wither, and the whirlwind shall take them away as stubble.

Yea, they shall not be planted; yea, they shall not be sown: yea, their stock shall not take root in the earth: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Although they multiply, although they increase, although their children become great in the earth, yet, nevertheless, He will send his wrath among them, and they shall be confounded .” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For they could not plant nor could they sow, nor could their root strike into the ground.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “And surely their stock was neither planted, nor sown, nor rooted in the earth.” These comments speak about the impotence of mortal man, once again, following the earlier theme of the chapter of the withering plants and flowers. ¶ And he shall also blow upon them, and they shall wither, and the whirlwind shall take them away as stubble. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And His Word shall scatter them, as the whirlwind the chaff.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “He blew upon them and they withered, and a whirlwind will sweep them away like stubble.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “Suddenly he hath blown upon them, and they are withered, and a whirlwind shall take them away as stubble.” There seems to be a chiasmus, then, returning to many of the early expressions. Here, that of the power of even the breath of the Lord, “because the spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it.”

25 To whom then will ye liken me, or shall I be equal? saith the Holy One.

The LXX (6) reads, “Now therefore to whom have you likened me; that I may be exalted? Said the Holy One.” ¶ Alexander says: “The epithet Holy is in this connection well explained by J. D. Michaelis as including all that distinguishes between God and his creatures ...” Shall I be equal seems to have an allusion to the nations who considered Jehovah just one more god of many.

26 Lift up your eyes on high, and behold who hath created these [things], that bringeth out their host by number: he calleth them all by names by the greatness of his might, for that [he is] strong in power; not one faileth.

Lift up your eyes on high, and behold who hath created these [things], that bringeth out their host by number: The Targum (7) has, “Lift up your eyes on high, and behold, that ye may fear Him, who hath created these things, who bringeth forth the host of the heavens by number.” The LXX (6) reads, “Raise your eyes upwards and take a view: who hath displayed all those? He who bringeth out his host by number.” This is an invitation to consider the truth, and consider the great majesty and power of God. ¶ He calleth them all by names by the greatness of his might, for that [he is] strong in power; not one faileth. The Targum (7) has, “He calleth them all by their name: on account of the combination of forces and might of power, not one is hindered in its orb.” The LXX (6) reads, “Can call them all by name. On the account of abundant glory, by reason of the mightiness of his power he hath in no wise escaped thy notice.” In the Peshitta (S) the clause ends, “By the greatness of his glory and the strength of his power; none is missing.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And calleth them all by their names: by the greatness of his might, and strength, and power, not one of them was missing.” ¶ Elder Neal A. Maxwell said: “I testify to you that God has known you individually, brethren, for a long, long time (see D&C 93:23). He has loved you for a long, long time. He not only knows the names of all the stars (see Psalm 147:4; ISAIAH 40:26); He knows your names and all your heartaches and your joys!”²⁶

vv. 27–31. Indeed, God is almighty. All those who lean upon Him will be lifted up and their weaknesses shall be turned into strength.

²⁶ Maxwell, Neal A. Remember How Merciful the Lord Hath Been, Ensign (CR), May 2004, p. 44.

27 ¶ Why sayest thou, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel, My way is hid from the LORD, and my judgment is passed over from my God?

The Targum (7) has for the last clause, “And my cause is removed from my God?” The LXX (6) reads, “Wherefore, thou, Jacob, shouldst not say, yet what hast thou, Israel, spoken? ‘My way is hidden from God’ and, ‘My God hath put off my cause and is gone.’” For the second half, the BPE Peshitta (S) has “My ways are hidden from the Yahweh, and before God my cause passes unobserved.” This dialogue reminds us a little of the argument between the people and the Lord cited in Malachi (2:13 ff.; 3:7 ff.).

28 Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, [that] the everlasting God, the LORD, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? [there is] no searching of his understanding.

Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, [that] the everlasting God, the LORD, the Creator of the ends of the earth. The Targum (7) has for the last clause, “the Lord who hath created the foundations of the earth.” The LXX (6) reads, “Hast thou then not known? hast thou not heard? The everlasting God, the God who fitted up the ends of the earth.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Knowest thou not, or hast thou not heard? the Lord is the everlasting God, who hath created the ends of the earth.” Ibn Ezra and the Prophet Joseph Smith agree on the meaning of ברא, “בורא Creator. I have explained already (Genesis 1:1), that ברא literally means ‘to cut.’ [Translator’s note: Ibn Ezra repeatedly remarks, that ברא means (1) to shape, to produce a thing from a given substance (לחוציא יש מיש): (2) to decree, or to decide: both meanings he derives from ברא = נזר ‘to cut.’” ¶ Fainteth not, neither is weary? [There is] no searching of his understanding. The Targum (7) has, “Is not fatigued, neither is weary? (Chaldee, ‘in fatigue, neither in weariness’) there is no end to His wisdom.” The LXX (6) reads, “Cannot hunger, nor can he be weary; nor can his understanding be searched out.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “He shall not faint, nor labour, neither is there any searching out of his wisdom.”

29 He giveth power to the faint; and to [them that have] no might he increaseth strength.

All strength and power come from the Lord. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Who giveth wisdom to the righteous that long for the words of the law; and to those who have no strength, he multiplieth strength.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “He it is who giveth strength to the hungry and grief to them who have not had sorrow.” Instead of them that have no might, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has to them that are affected by sickness. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “It is he that giveth strength to the weary, and increaseth force and might to them that are not.”

30 Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall:

The Targum (Ⲯ) adds wicked and impious to modify youths and young men respectively. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For youths will hunger and young men be weary, and chosen warriors will become strengthless.” Instead of utterly fall, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has stumble. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Youths shall faint, and labour, and young men shall fall by infirmity.” In contrast to God [ISAIAH 40:28], the youth בְּחֹרִים —or as Alexander explains, “not only of men in general, but of the stoutest and most vigorous, aptly represented by the young men chosen for military service” —we again return to what we saw earlier in the chapter: that man is nothing, less than nothing. ¶ Shall utterly fall (כָּשׁוּל יִפְּשָׁל). The repetition of the word shows not only falling, but utterly falling.

31 But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew[✓] [their] strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; [and] they shall walk, and not faint.

✓ change

But they that wait upon the LORD. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But they who wait upon God.” The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “But they that hope for the salvation of the Lord (וְדֹסְבְּרוֹ לְפָרְקָא דִּי) shall be gathered together from the midst of their captivity.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “But they that hope in the Lord.” Several translations use the word trust, as does Bishops, “But vnto them that haue their trust in the Lorde, shall &c.”

AMP renders it “But those who wait for the Lord [who expect, look for, and hope in Him] shall &c.” The Spanish Reina Valera 1960 and LDS 2009 use the expression “pero los que esperan” the word esperar has various significations including to wait, but the first given by the iREA (the dictionary of the Real Academia) is “tener esperanza de conseguir lo que se desea,” i.e., hope). Only the third meaning is related to waiting. The Masoretic text (ⲙ) has, וְקִוִּי יְהוָה, where the lexicons include the word hope as one of the principal meanings of the word קוּה. For instance, Gesenius explains that when used in conjunction with the word YHWH, קִוִּי אֶת־יְהוָה, as is also used in this verse, that it means to “to fix one’s hope on Jehovah.” This verse, then, would be better translated as “But they that place their hope upon the LORD &c.” It is precisely this word; hope, that Elder Robert D. Hales explains is at the core of waiting upon the Lord (e.g., also see Psalm 37:9; 123:2; ISAIAH 8:17; ISAIAH 33:2 and Jeremiah 14:22). The psalmist says: “I wait for the LORD {קִוִּי יְהוָה קִוִּי}, my soul doth wait, and in his word do I hope. My soul waiteth for the Lord more than they that watch for the morning: I say, more than they that watch for the morning” (Psalm 130:5–6).

Alexander has “קִוִּי is to wait for or expect, implying faith and patience. This is also the old English meaning of the phrase to wait upon, as applied to servants who await their master’s orders; but in modern usage the idea of personal service or attendance has become predominant, so that the English phrase [they that wait upon the Lord] no longer represents the Hebrew one.”²⁷ ¶ Alexander himself prefers “those waiting for Jehovah.” ASV translates this verse as: “but they that wait for Jehovah shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; they shall walk, and not faint” (see also ESV, JPS, LITV, and NASB). There is nothing passive about this קִוִּי. As I was subsequently asked to prepare a Priesthood class based on Elder Hales’ talk, I realized that only five days earlier, I had been prompted to use very similar language in a Priesthood blessing given to someone suffering great anguish and affliction. Truly, the Lord is good: for his mercy endureth for ever. I only include a portion of his talk. “During the past few months,” explained Elder Hales. “I have had the opportunity to study and learn more about the Savior's atoning sacrifice and how He prepared Himself to make that eternal offering for each one of us ... I have often pondered, Why is it that the Son of God and His holy prophets and all the faithful Saints have trials and tribulations, even when they are trying to do Heavenly Father's will? ... Why such terrible tribulation? To what end? For what purpose? As we ask these questions, we realize that the purpose of our life on earth is to grow, develop, and be strengthened through our own experiences. How do we do this? The scriptures give us an answer in one simple phrase: we 'wait upon the Lord.' Tests and trials are given to all of us ... [But] What, then, does it mean to wait upon the Lord? In the scriptures, the word wait means to hope, to anticipate, and to trust. To hope and trust in the Lord requires faith, patience, humility, meekness, long-suffering, keeping the commandments, and enduring to the end. To wait upon the Lord means planting the seed of faith and nourishing it 'with great diligence, and . . . patience.'²⁸ ... Waiting upon the Lord means pondering in our hearts and 'receiv[ing] the Holy Ghost' so that we can know 'all things what [we] should do.' As we follow the promptings of the Spirit, we discover that 'tribulation worketh patience' and we learn to 'continue in patience until [we] are perfected.' Waiting upon the Lord means to 'stand fast' and 'press forward' in faith, 'having a perfect brightness of hope.' It means 'relying alone upon the merits of Christ' and 'with [His] grace assisting [us, saying]: Thy will be done, O Lord, and not ours.' As we wait upon the Lord, we are 'immovable in keeping the commandments,' knowing that we will 'one day rest from all [our] afflictions.' And we 'cast not away ... [our] confidence' that 'all things wherewith [we] have been afflicted shall work together for [our] good.' ... Even with the shining examples of Job, the prophets, and the Savior, we will still find it challenging to wait upon the Lord, especially when we cannot fully understand His plan and purposes for us. That understanding is most often given 'line upon line, [and] precept upon precept.' In my life I have learned that sometimes I do not receive an answer to a prayer because the Lord knows I am not ready. When He does answer, it is often 'here a little and there a little' because that is all that I can bear or all I am willing to do. Too often we pray to have patience, but we want it right now! ... We may not know when or how the Lord's answers will be given, but in His time and His way, I testify, His answers will come. For some answers we may have to wait until the hereafter. This may be true for some promises in our patriarchal blessings and for some blessings for family members. Let us not give up on the Lord. His blessings are eternal, not temporary. ... As we endure physical suffering, we are increasingly aware of how many wait upon each of us. To all the Marys and Marthas, to all of the good Samaritans who minister to the sick, succor the weak, and care for the mentally and physically infirm, I feel the gratitude of a loving Heavenly Father and His Beloved Son ... He knows your sacrifices and your sorrows. He hears your prayers. His peace and rest will be yours as you continue to wait upon Him in faith.

²⁷ I asked my friend Ryan Boothe for his interpretation of Alexander’s comments: “As I read it, Alexander appears to be saying that the word wait used to have a similar meaning as esperar. We wait upon the Lord by waiting for His command (as opposed to doing our own thing) and expecting that it will come. In Modern English, if I’m waiting on a customer that implies that I am going to write down what food and drink he wants and make sure that he is satisfied with his order. The meaning is similar but the first wait is not exactly the same as the second.”

Every one of us is more beloved to the Lord than we can possibly understand or imagine. Let us therefore be kinder to one another and kinder toward ourselves. Let us remember that as we wait upon the Lord, we are becoming 'saint[s] through [His] atonement . . . submissive, meek, humble, patient, full of love, willing to submit to all things which the Lord seeth fit to inflict upon [us], even as a child doth submit to his father.' Such was the submission of our Savior to His Father in the Garden of Gethsemane . . . [Where He] 'shrank not to drink the bitter cup.' He waited upon His Father, saying, 'Thy will be done,' and He humbly trod the winepress alone ... On this Sabbath morning, I express gratitude that 'in my Gethsemane' and yours, we are not alone. He that watches over us 'shall neither slumber nor sleep.' His angels here and beyond the veil are 'round about [us], to bear [us] up.' I bear my special witness that our Savior's promise is true, for He says, 'They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint.' May we wait upon Him by pressing forward in faith, that we may say in our prayers, 'Thy will be done,' and return to Him with honor. ...'²⁹ Elder Hales seems to be describing the process of sanctification wherein the Holy Spirit of Promise, after putting a stamp of approval or justifying individual acts, slowly begins to transform our lives into true disciples of Jesus Christ. ¶ Shall renew [their] strength. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "And shall increase their strength." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "Shall have new strength." Lowth writes: "It has been a common and popular opinion that the eagle lives and retains his vigor to a great age; and that, beyond the common lot of other birds, he moults in his old age, and renews his feathers, and with them his youth. 'Thou shalt renew thy youth like the eagle,' says the Psalmist (Psalm 103:5) ... Whether the notion of the eagle's renewing his youth is in any degree well founded or not, I need not inquire; it is enough for a poet, whether profane or sacred, to have the authority of popular opinion to support an image introduced for illustration or ornament." ¶ They shall mount up with wings as eagles. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "And their youths shall be renewed like the sprout that springeth up: they shall hasten upon the wings of eagles.” The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “They shall put forth fresh feathers like eagles.” Instead of eagle, the Peshitta (ܣ) has dove. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “They shall take wings as eagles.” ¶ Alexander explains that the beauty of this verse does not come from the idea of the eagle molting, but rather, from the very act of rising up the wings in majesty as the eagle takes off. ¶ They shall run, and not be weary; [and] they shall walk, and not faint. The Targum (Ⲛ) has, “And not be weary; they shall walk and not faint.” The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “They shall run and not be wearied; they shall march on and shall not faint.” We find a similar promise given to those who keep the Word of Wisdom: “And shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint” (D&C 89:20). Ludlow suggests “that those who wait and trust in the Lord will share in his powers and renew their strength (through the resurrection so that they will ‘run and not be weary,’ and ‘walk, and not faint.’” Alexander has: “In the last clause the verbs יָרַץ and יָחַץ are introduced together for the third time in a beautiful antithesis. In ISAIAH 40:28 they are applied to Jehovah, in ISAIAH 40:30 to the strongest and most vigorous of men, as they are in themselves, and here to the waiters for Jehovah, the believers in his promises, who glory in infirmity that his strength may be made perfect in their weakness (2Corinthians 12:9).”

²⁸ Regarding ISAIAH 40, Alexander says: "That the ultimate fulfillment of the promise was still distant is implied in the exhortation to faith and patience."

²⁹ Hales, Robert D. 2011 October General Conference, Sunday morning session.

13 January 2014

Isaiah 41

All are invited to pass judgment on the divinity of Christ—and to contrast His power to that of the idols. We have Jehovah, speaking by Divine Investiture from the Father, announcing the coming of the Son, even Jesus Christ. There are transitional frames in a movie where one sees both the old and new scenes at one time. What we see in ISAIAH 41 is a somewhat faded frame of Abraham being supplanted by a more clear and glorious frame of Christ. Powerful scriptures are given about missionary work being carried out by the weak and the simple in gathering Israel in the last days, even by thou worm Jacob. Idols, or rather those who lean upon them, are invited into a contest with the Lord, who is able to clearly show His superiority. These are given at the beginning and end of the chapter as a chiasmus. All of these things are given as signs and tokens to scattered Israel to trust in Jehovah and come unto Christ in the last days. Tender and beautiful reassurances are given to those who would walk with Christ.

vv. 1–9. These verses are quite similar to the contest with the false prophets of Baal in 1 Kings 18. Here, with worthless idols. The Man from the east is spoken off.

1 ¶ KEEP silence before me, O islands; and let the people renew [their] strength: let them come near; then let them speak: let us come near together to judgment.

The Lord invites all the people, including those from the islands, to the judgment bar. ¶ KEEP silence before me, O islands; and let the people renew [their] strength: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Listen unto my words, ye islands, and let the kingdoms increase their strength.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Dedicate yourselves to me, Islands, for the Archons will gather new strength.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) is missing before me. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “And the nations take new strength.” ¶ Young says: “God does not appear before a judge, waiting to hear a verdict pronounced. Rather, He addresses the isles with the voice of absolute authority.” Gill has: “The great controversy in the world after the coming of Christ, which is expressly spoken of in the preceding chapter, was, as Cocceius observes, whether he was a divine Person; this was first objected to by the Jews, and afterwards by many that bore the Christian name; some, in the times of the apostles, especially the Apostle John; and others in later ages; some affirmed that he was a mere man ... and now, as when the judge is on the bench, and the court is set, and a cause just going to be tried, silence is proclaimed; so here, Jehovah himself being on the throne, and a cause depending between him and men being about to be tried, they are commanded silence (see Zechariah 2:13).” Not only is there a controversy as to whether Jesus be the Christ or the promised Messiah, but also if Jesus is the Son of God and divine in nature. The Jews, for the most part, are waiting for either the Messiah, or for the Messianic Age. Muslims recognize the Messianic nature of Christ but expressly deny His divinity—as well as His atoning sacrifice for us. There are a number of Christian religions who deny His divinity.¹ ¶ Barnes explains: “On the word ‘renew,’ . . . Here it means, ‘Let them make themselves strong; let them prepare the argument; let them be ready to urge as strong reasons as possible; let them fit themselves to enter into the controversy about the power and glory of Yahweh’ (see ISAIAH 41:21).” ¶ Regarding the islands, they sometimes refer to the American continent and islands of the sea, but they can also at times refer to the countries away from Israel. ¶ Silence. Faussett has: “God is about to argue the case; therefore let the nations listen in reverential silence.” ¶ Renew their strength. As Wordsworth noted in ISAIAH 40, these words from the end of Isaiah 40 are repeated here in ISAIAH 41. While there they referred to those who put their trust in Jehovah, here they are a sarcastic invitation to the enemies of God to attempt to show strength. ¶ Let them come near; then let them speak: let us come near together to judgment. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Let them come nigh, then let them speak; let us approach one another for judgment.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Let them draw near and confer together, then let them announce judgment.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has let them come near instead of let us come near. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has,

¹ The scriptures testify of the divinity of Christ: (1) turn to ISAIAH 6, footnote 4, in regard to John 12:36–41), for proof that Jesus Christ is the Jehovah of the Old Testament; and (2) for an example of a scripture speaking of the divinity of Christ as well as His sonhood, we have ISAIAH 9:6, “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace.” These verses make it clear that there would be a child, and that this child would also be God. And the greatest proof of all is the powerful testimony of the Holy Spirit. I received such a testimony as a young man of thirteen. I bear the most solemn witness of the Divinity of Jesus the Christ.

“Let them come near, and then speak, let us come near to judgment together.” ¶ This is an invitation to approach the bench, or judgment bar, with the best arguments that those who detest the Lord can muster. Delitzsch asks: “But if Jehovah is one party to the cause, who is the judge to pronounce the decision? The answer to this question is the same as at ISAIAH 5:3. ‘The nations,’ says Rosenmüller, ‘are called to judgment, not to the tribunal of God, but to that of reason.’ The deciding authority is reason, which cannot fail to recognise the facts, and the consequences to be deduced from them.” Wesley has, “I will give them free liberty to say what they can on their own behalf.” In his translation, Lowth has, for the last clause: “Let us enter into solemn debate together,” a translation particularly celebrated by Keith, who goes on to say: “The same form of address occurs in other instances, as when it is said, ‘Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord.’”

2 Who raised up the righteous [man] from the east, called him to his foot, gave the nations before him, and made [him] rule over kings? he gave [them] as the dust to his sword, [and] as driven stubble to his bow.

✓ righteousness

Who raised up the righteous [man] from the east, called him to his foot, gave the nations before him, and made [him] rule over kings? The Targum (T) has, “Who openly brought Abraham from the east? He brought the chosen of the righteous in truth to his place, He delivered up nations before him, and broke in pieces mighty (the Royal Polyglot omits יְהִי, ‘strong, mighty’) kings.” The LXX (G) reads, “Who raised up righteousness from the East—called upon it to attend his steps? when he marcheth on, he will exhibit it before nations and confound kings.” The Lamsa Peshitta (S) has, “Who has stirred up the righteous one from the east, and hastened him on? The nations shall surrender before him, and kings shall be confounded.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Who hath raised up the just one from the east, hath called him to follow him? he shall give the nations in his sight, and he shall rule over kings.” ¶ If we accept the ellipsis and permit the clause to read the righteous man, then we are speaking of Christ, or those that through Him may be called righteous. Wordsworth says: “We need not be surprised that many ancient interpreters (as S. Cyril, and S. Jerome) saw here a prophecy of CHRIST—‘the Lord our Righteousness.’ Cyrus, whose name signifies Sun, in many signal respects was a type of Christ,—the ‘Sun of Righteousness’ (Malachi 4:2) ... It will be found, that whenever Isaiah has made mention of Cyrus, he almost always proceeds to speak of Christ.” Cowles suggests that the proper meaning may well be that justice was raised up. When one considers that the word יָשָׁר can also be translated as salvation, or well-being, we have some interesting options here (for instance, see the 4th acceptance for יָשָׁר in HAL). Some interesting translations include: “Who awakened [from the east righteousness]” (ABP {LXX (G)}). Or, by substituting salvation, “Who awakened salvation from the east.” The emphasis is on God’s power to awake, or to bring forward salvation. That Cyrus could be meant in such circumstances is certainly possible. AMP renders it: “Who has roused up one [Cyrus] from the east, whom He calls in righteousness to His service . . .” Or, “Who hath raised up one from the east, whom he calleth in righteousness to his foot?” (ASV), or “Who appointed this ruler from the east? Who puts nations and kings in his power?” (CEV). Finally: “Who raised up iustice from the East, and called him to his foote?” (Geneva).

Alexander argues: “Here and elsewhere יָשָׁר means the righteousness of God as manifested in his providence, his dealings with his people and their enemies ... To call to one’s foot is a Hebrew idiom for calling to one’s service, or summoning to take a place among one’s followers. This act is here ascribed to the divine righteousness as a personified attribute. The other verbs may agree with the same subject or directly with Jehovah.” ¶ Gill writes: “The Targum interprets this of Abraham; and so the Talmud (T. Bab. Sabbat, fol. 156. 2. Bava Bathra, fol. 15. 1. Sanhedrin, fol. 108. 2. and Taanith, fol. 21. 1.); and this way go most Jewish and Christian commentators, and to him the characters agree; he was a righteous man ...” Birks writes: “The God of glory appeared to Abraham in Chaldea, stirred up his spirit to forsake his country’s idols, and made him heir of the righteousness of faith.” ¶ Any righteousness found in man is Christ’s righteousness. In the meridian of times a star to the East announced His coming: “Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him” (Matthew 2:2). Of the Second Coming we read: “For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be” (Matthew 24:27). While Cyrus, Abraham, Joseph of Egypt and others are given as types of Christ, it is the Messiah who is the Βασιλεὺς βασιλέων καὶ κύριος κυρίων, King of kings, and Lord of lords (Revelation 19:16). He will subdue the nations and overcome Satan as well as mystic Babylon. Horsley testifies: “Christ is perpetually described in the prophecies under the image of a conqueror, and the propagation of the Gospel under the image of universal conquest ... I have no doubt that Christ is the person meant under the character of the righteous man raised up from the east.” Horsley continues: “It is to be observed, however, that the LXX rendered the noun צַדִּיק by δικαιοσύνην, as if they conceived that righteousness, or the true religion, was personified in this chapter; and I think this notion deserves great attention. It is adopted in the margin of our English Bible. Righteousness was throughout all the Divine dispensations raised up from the east. Paradise was planted in the east of Eden. After the Fall, the symbols of the Divine presence, the cherubim, were placed at the east of the garden. Abraham was called from the east. The chosen people of God were a people of the eastern quarter of the globe. Our Lord was the righteous man raised from the east.” ¶ He gave [them] as the dust to his sword, [and] as driven stubble to his bow. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “He cast the slain down like the dust before his sword, and he pursued them like stubble before his bow.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And dash their swords to the ground, and their bows shall be driven away like stubble.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “As stubble driven by the wind, to his bow.” ¶ The expression, dust to his sword means that the sword found no resistance at all. Likewise, stubble to his bow, i.e., arrow propelled by a bow finds no resistance in wind-driven chaff (allusion to fanned grain). AMP provides an interesting translation in that the Lord is shown to be behind all things but Cyrus the instrument in His hands: “He [the Lord] subdues nations before him and makes him ruler over kings. He turns them to dust with the sword [of Cyrus], and to driven straw and chaff with his bow. [Ezra 1:2].” Wordsworth points out to 2 Chronicles 36:23a, “Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, All the kingdoms of the earth hath the LORD God of heaven given me; and he hath charged me to build him an house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah.” Alexander says: “Umbreit supposes a specific reference to the course of the sun, from which the name of Cyrus was derived.”

3 He pursued them, [and] passed safely; ✓ [even] by the way [that] he had not gone with his feet.

✓ in peace

The Targum (Ⲯ) has for the last clause, “The roughness of the path shall not affect his feet (Chaldee, ‘the strength of the path shall not enter his feet’).” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “When he pursueth them, the road for his feet shall pass through to peace.” The BPE (ⲱ) has, “He shall pursue after them, then make peace; but he shall not enter with his feet on the road.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “He shall pursue them, he shall pass in peace, no path shall appear after his feet.” ¶ Skinner says, “the path with his feet he does not tread”—a picture of the celerity of his movements (Daniel 8:5).” Alexander likewise has: “[Based on] Ewald’s supposition that the clause describes the swiftness of his motions, as flying rather than walking on foot. This, which would be natural and striking, even in itself considered, is confirmed by the analogy of Daniel 8:5, where we read that an he-goat came from the west on the face of the whole earth, and touched not the ground.” ¶ Rawlinson instead has: “Even by the way that he had not gone with his feet]; rather, a path with his feet he shall not tread. The meaning seems to be that he will dispense with customary paths, making his advance everywhere over all obstacles, by untrodden ways. Compare the frequent boasts of the Assyrian kings: ‘To the recesses of the deep forests and the peaks of the difficult mountains, which had never been trodden by the foot of man, I ascended’ (‘Records of the Past,’ 5:13). ‘Difficult mountain chains, and inaccessible hills, which none of our kings had ever previously reached tedious paths and unopened roads I traversed’ (ibid., p. 16).” As Horsley well says, so also the Gospel of Christ was taken by paths not taken before. ¶ Barnes writes: “He pursued them] – When they were driven away. He followed on, and devoted them to discomfiture and ruin. And passed safely] – Margin ||, as Hebrew, ‘In peace.’ That is, he followed them uninjured; they had no power to rally, he was not led into ambush, and he was safe as far as he chose to pursue them.”

4 Who hath wrought and done [it], calling the generations from the beginning? I the LORD, the first, and with the last; I [am] he.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Who hath promised these things and established them? Who hath spoken, and it was done? And who hath ranged the generations in their order from the beginning; yea, ages after ages are mine, and besides me there is no God.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Who hath performed and done these things? He who called that righteousness—who from the generations of the beginning is calling it—I God the First, and to the succeeding ages, THE I AM (Brenton, ‘I God, the first and to all futurity, I AM’).” Instead of wrought, the Peshitta (ⲱ) has prepared. Regarding the last clause, we have in the Peshitta (ⲱ), “I the LORD, the first and the last; I am he” (Lamsa); and “I the LORD, the first and the last; I am” (BPE) whereas the AV last clause follows the Masoretic text (ⲙ) and has אֲנִי-הוּא, I [am] he. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Who hath wrought and done these things, calling the generations from the beginning? I the Lord, I am the first and the last.”

אֲנִי יְהוָה רִאשׁוֹן וְאַחֲרֵימֵן אֲנִי-הוּא, I LORD, first and last, I He. LITV has: “I Jehovah am the first and the last; I am He.” The 1899 Douay-Rheims Bible

(ⲅ), based on the Vulgate (ⲅ), “Ego Dóminus: primus et novíssimus ego sum,” that is, “I the Lord, the first and the last, I am.” So also the Peshitta LBP (ܣ), “I the LORD, the first and the last; I am he.” ¶ We essentially have the same text in the Book of Revelation “I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last” (Revelation 22:13). In Doctrine and Covenants we often hear the equivalent expression, Alpha and Omega used in the same context as we have here: “Thus saith the Lord your God, even Jesus Christ, the Great I Am, Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end” (D&C 38:1a). ¶ We have another who ⲁⲓ question. Rawlinson has: “i.e. ‘by whom has this mighty conqueror been raised up?’ Can any of the idol-gods claim him as their protege? Assuredly not. He is my work; I, Jehovah, that have called (into being) the generations (of man) from the beginning (of the world) I, Jehovah, the First, and with the last, am he that he has done this thing. By ‘the First, and with the last’² a favourite phrase in these later chapters (see ISAIAH 45:6; 48:12) seems to be meant simply ‘the Eternal.’”

5 The isles saw [it], and feared; the ends of the earth were afraid, drew near, and came.

The Targum (ⲧ) translations (Chilton, Stenning, Pauli) have, from the second clause on, the future tense. Pauli has all of it in the future tense. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “The nations saw and were affrighted; the ends of the earth drew near and came together.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has astonished instead of afraid. ¶ The paronomasia or play on words regarding the words saw and feared is mentioned by Delitzsch and Young: “The isles saw and feared, ⲓⲣⲁⲓⲁⲓ ⲁⲓⲓⲁⲓ ⲓⲣⲁⲓⲁⲓ. The fear of the nations leads them to lean on each other and on idols—but to no avail.

6 They helped every one his neighbour; and [every one] said to his brother, Be of good courage. ✓

✓ Be strong

The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Let everyone help his neighbor, and every one say to his brother, Be of good courage (or, ‘be strong’).” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Every one is determining to help his neighbour and his brother, and one will say.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, “Every one shall help his neighbour, and shall say to his brother: Be of good courage.” Barnes has: “They helped everyone

² The Alpha and Omega with which Christ is often described in the Doctrine and Covenants.

his neighbor] – The prophet describes a state of general consternation existing among them, when they supposed that all was in danger, and that their security consisted only in confederation; in increased attention to their religion; in repairing their idols and making new ones ... Be of good courage] – Margin ||, as Hebrew, ‘Be strong.’ The sense is, Do not be alarmed . . . Make new images, set them up in the temples, show unusual zeal in religion, and the favor of the gods may be secured, and the dangers be averted.”

7 So the carpenter encouraged the goldsmith, ✓ [and] he that smootheneth [with] the hammer him that smote ✓ ✓ the anvil, saying, It [is] ready for the soldering: ✓ ✓ and he fastened it with nails, [that] it should not be moved.

✓ or, founder

✓ ✓ or, the smiting

✓ ✓ ✓ or, saying of the soder, It is good

The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Shall they not be confounded in their works? Because the artificer encourageth the silversmith, and he that smiteth with the great hammer him that smiteth with the small: It is time, one saith, for the soldering, it is ready; he fasteneth it with nails, that it may not be moved.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “The carpenter had strength, so had the smith who beateth with a hammer and plateth it. Sometimes indeed one will say, ‘It is a beautiful composition? ‘These things they made strong with nails; they will fix them up that they may not be moved.’” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, “The coppersmith striking with the hammer encouraged him that forged at that time, saying: It is ready for soldering: and he strengthened it with nails, that it should not be moved.” ¶ Rawlinson observes: “Each encourages the others to manufacture a right good god. When all is done, there is, however, need of soldering, and of nails, that the wretched object may be kept erect, and not show its weakness by falling, like Dagon, upon its own threshold (1 Samuel 5:4).” Faussett has: “nails — to keep it steady in its place. Wisdom of Solomon 13:15, 16³, gives a similar picture of the folly of idolatry.” ¶ Next, in contrast, we see how those who lean upon the Lord are sustained in their moments of need.

³ “And when he had made a convenient room for it, set it in a wall, and made it fast with iron: For he provided for it that it might not fall, knowing that it was unable to help itself; for it is an image, and hath need of help” (Apocrypha, Wisdom of Solomon 13:15–16).

8 But thou, Israel, [art] my servant, Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham my friend.

The Targum (C) has וְאֶתֵּרְעִיתִי,⁴ in whom I “delight” (Pauli) or in whom I am “pleased” (Stenning, Chilton) rather than chosen. The LXX (G) reads, “But thou Israel my servant; thou Jacob, whom I have chosen; thou seed of Abraham whom I loved! The last clause is rendered by the Peshitta (S) as, “The descendants of Abraham my friend, whom I have strengthened.”

Delitzsch writes: “The וְ [but—GB] before וְאֶתֵּרְעִיתִי [but thou—GB]⁵ connects together antitheses, which show themselves at once to be antitheses. Whereas the nations, which put their trust in idols that they themselves had made, were thrown into alarm, and yielded before the world-wide commotions that had originated with the eastern conqueror, Israel, the nation of Jehovah, might take comfort to itself. Every word here breathes the deepest affection. The address moves on in soft undulating lines.” ¶ My servant (עֶבֶדִּי, from servant, עָבַד). Hawker⁶ says “For all the promises of the Bible are first made to the Person of Christ, and then in Him, they are all yea and amen, to his people.” This is much like my How beautiful are the feel principle.

The Servant of the Lord (עֶבֶד יְהוָה) is Jesus Christ but that He shares this title with His people Israel and with His disciples, and at times even with others through whom He accomplishes work. Young suggests: “No sooner had intimations been given of a human deliverer than the prophet, rising from consideration of the nation as a servant, focuses attention upon the Servant par excellence, who will perform for Israel a work that neither they themselves nor Cyrus can accomplish. Whereas Cyrus will set the people free from Babylonia, the Servant will deliver them from the spiritual bondage of sin in which they find themselves.” ¶ Nägelsbach says, “The Prophet turns to Israel with well-founded and glorious consolation. The LORD calls His people Israel my servant. We consider here for the first time the significant notion of the עֶבֶד יְהוָה ... they are so named because the LORD has chosen Israel for his possession, His instrument, His servant. For a servant is the property of his lord, and Israel is the ‘peculiar people’ (Exodus 19:5; Deuteronomy 7:6; 14:2; Psalm 135:4; Malachi 3:17).” Matthew Henry says: “Happy are the servants of the Lord, whom he has called to be his friends, and to walk with him in faith and holy obedience. Let not such as have thus been favoured yield to fear; for the contest may be sharp, but the victory shall be sure.” Baltzer writes: “It is also unambiguously clear in this text who the servant is. It is ‘Israel/Jacob.’ Since the text goes on in the singular form of address, the servant is initially a single individual. The name ‘Israel’ and his description as ‘Abraham’s seed/offspring’ give the figure its special significance: he is the personification of God’s people.”

⁴ Gesenius defines as object of thoughts and desires.

⁵ So also Westermann, who explains that with the words וְאֶתֵּרְעִיתִי [but thou—GB] we have an oracle of salvation: “the address to Israel begins . . . they correspond to the waw adversative (= but) which in a number of psalms of lamentation indicates the change from distress to salvation in accordance with the oracle of salvation, or presupposing it.”

⁶ Robert Hawker, (1816–1820). Poor Man’s Old Testament Commentary, Volume 5.

¶ וְאֶתֵּרְעִיתִי וְאֶתֵּרְעִיתִי, Jacob whom I have chosen.

The Holy One of Israel has chosen Jacob, indeed He has chosen Israel. Westermann says, “Israel’s election is carried back to the patriarchs.” ¶ My friend (אֶתֵּרְעִיתִי).

More than just a friend, someone who is greatly beloved (“the seede of Abraham my beloued” 1568 Bishops’ Bible). GW renders it: “But you are my servant Israel, Jacob, whom I have chosen, the descendant of Abraham, my dear friend.” Westermann correctly has: “Whom I loved.” The expression “I have loved”

(Brenton) or “my beloved” (Bishops), as well as the others mentioned above, here come to mean both love and friendship. And the love and friendship here extend beyond Abraham to all of Israel. Note clearly the Hebrew word for love (אָהַב) in “seed of Abraham my friend / whom I have loved” (וְאֶתֵּרְעִיתִי אֶתֵּרְעִיתִי).

Literally, “Seed of Abraham [whom] I [have] loved.”

Kimhi (in Slotki) suggests, “Abraham . . . who loved Me.” In James we read: “And the scripture was fulfilled which saith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness: and he was called the Friend of God. Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only” (James 2:23–24).

Skinner says: “Among the Mohammedans, Abraham is designated chalil ullah [خليل الله], ‘Friend of God.’”

Alexander says, “Or absolutely, خَلِي the Friend.”

¶ Since the Restoration we similarly have: “And as I said unto mine apostles, even so I say unto you, for you are mine apostles, even God’s high priests; ye are they whom my Father hath given me; ye are my friends” (D&C 84:63, also see D&C 84:77).

9 [Thou] whom I have taken from the ends of the earth, and called thee from the chief men thereof, and said unto thee, Thou [art] my servant; I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away.

[Thou] whom I have taken from the ends of the earth, and called thee from the chief men thereof. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “I have brought thee out of the families of the earth, I have chosen thee out of a kingdom.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Have I not taken thee from the ends of the earth, and from the speculations thereof called thee.” The BPE (Ⲯ) leaves out the expression from the chief men thereof (BPE), while Lamsa has “from among the prophets.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “In whom I have taken thee from the ends of the earth, and from the remote parts thereof have called thee.” ¶ Abraham was found by God in Ur of the Chaldees, and taken from the ends of the earth to be the father of the nations. The very name Abraham may well mean father of the beloved [people], not just father of many (see ISBE). When Abram was about to be sacrificed in his father’s (Terah) house, he cried to God for help. The Lord tells him about the land that he would go to: “And his voice was unto me: Abraham, Abraham, behold, my name is Jehovah, and I have heard thee, and have come down to deliver thee, and to take thee away from thy father’s house, and from all thy kinsfolk, into a strange land which thou knowest not of (Abraham 1:16, emphasis added). This was a way to say that the land of Israel would be very far from his present residence. We next consider a completely different interpretation of this verse, from speaking of Abraham to speaking of Israel. But first, let us consider the clause in question. ¶ From the chief men thereof. The Vulgate (Ⲯ) has: “in quo apprehēdi te ab extrémis terræ, et a longínquis ejus vocávi te, et dixi tibi : Servus meus es tu: elégi te, et non abjéci te.” Rawlinson explains that the only other place where אֲצִיל appears in the Hebrew Bible, it “has the meaning of ‘chief men’ (Exodus 24:11).” There is another possible meaning to consider—that of a distant location. It is so rendered by most moderns (for example, see AMP, ASV, CJB, Darby, ERV, ESV, FDB, FLS, HCSB, ISV, JPS, LBLA, LITV, NASB, RV, RV60, RV2009 SUD [LDS 2009 Spanish edition⁷], Luther, YLT). The first acceptance of HAL for אֲצִיל is remotest parts; for Gesenius, sides, extremities. Whitehouse has: “We have a similar word אֲצִיל in Heb., Ezekiel 13:18; Jeremiah 38:12].” ¶ If we accept this last translation, about the extremities of the earth, then the verse ceases to focus on Abraham as our Patriarch. Instead it speaks of Israel and her calling to be a servant of the Lord (עֶבֶד יְהוָה). It would then be best understood of the latter-day gathering of Israel from the extremities of the earth: The NASB renders ISAIAH 41:9 thus: “You whom I have taken from the ends of the earth, And called from its remotest parts And said to you, ‘You are My servant, I have chosen you and not rejected you’” (NASB). This, then, would be a summary of Rain in Due Season. The Lord was to take, bring back or gather Israel [Ezekiel 36:24; 37:15 ff.] from the ends of the earth, even its remotest parts [Deuteronomy 30:1–8]. Israel would be charged with helping with this process, especially Ephraim at first with the help of Manasseh. Truly, Israel would be a servant of the Lord in this matter. ¶ And said unto thee, Thou [art] my servant; I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And I have said unto thee, Thou art my servant; I delight in thee, and I will not thrust thee away.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And said to thee, Thou art my servant I have chosen thee and have not forsaken thee.” ¶ Skinner says: “Note that Abraham is called ‘my servant’ in Genesis 26:24 [אַבְרָהָם עֶבְדִּי]; and Psalm 105:6 [אַבְרָהָם עֶבְדִּי]. Psalm 105:42 [אַתָּה-אַבְרָהָם עֶבְדִּי].” Here in ISAIAH 41:8, we have עֶבְדִּי-אַתָּה, my servant you are. ¶ Delitzsch writes of the past: “The leading thought, ‘servant of Jehovah,’ which is characteristic of chapters 40–46, and lies at the root of the whole spirit of these addresses, more especially of their Christology, we first meet with here ... On the one hand, Israel is the servant of Jehovah [עֶבֶד יְהוָה] by virtue of a divine act ... On the other hand, Israel was the servant of Jehovah, inasmuch as it acted out what Jehovah had made it, partly in reverential worship of this God, and partly in active obedience.” But Israel would play a key role in the latter days, also. ¶ And not cast thee away. This was promised to Israel in Rain in Due Season. Baltzer⁸ notes: “But Leviticus 26 [see Leviticus 26:42, 44], the end of the Holiness Code, justifies the exile on the grounds of the people’s transgressions, and goes on: ‘Yet even then, when they are in the land of their enemies, I have not rejected them (בָּאֵס), or abhorred them (נִעַל), so as to destroy them utterly by breaking my covenant with them; for I Yahweh am their God; I will remember on their behalf the covenant with their forefathers.’” I have chosen and not rejected you is also an allusion back to ISAIAH 40:1–2. The proof that Israel was not rejected is that she would once again have a vital role to play in the latter days. Most of the members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are direct descendants of Israel (and a few are adopted) and are, beginning with the Prophet Joseph Smith, servants of the Lord.

⁷ The LDS Spanish translation is absolutely wonderful and great care was taken in its production. No assumptions should be made, however, about the text itself being more correct or inspired than the KJV.

⁸ Baltzer also has: “Various scholars have noted that the section has rhythmical characteristics. In this relatively short section [ISAIAH 41:8–13], eighteen words end with the second person masculine suffix. In the present MT at least, the ך echoes throughout ... It contrasts with the fourfold ך of the first person masculine singular suffix (‘my servant’; twice ‘my friend,’ ‘I’). But this is not merely a superficial literary device. The correspondence between the ‘you’ of the servant and the ‘I’ of God is the real theme of the passage.”

vv. 10–20. Regarding the verses of comfort in this section, Jenour says: “... may not every believer [liken these] promises to himself? Who can doubt that they were intended for the strengthening and consolation of the church to the end of the world?” Keith considers yet another application: “The language of the 10th verse, which is renewed in the 13th and 14th verses, describes the fears and the deliverances of Israel at last, when all nations shall be gathered against Jerusalem ... It will be in the moment of their utmost extremity that deliverance will come.”

10 ¶ Fear thou not; for I [am] with thee: be not dismayed; for I [am] thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness.

Fear thou not; for I [am] with thee: be not dismayed. The Targum (ⓧ) has, “Fear not for my Word shall be thy support; be not dismayed.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “Fear not, for I am with thee; be not led astray.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “Fear not, for I am with thee: turn not aside.” Kay (as does Rawlinson) notes that I am with thee [אֲנִי-עִמָּךְ] will “fulfill all that was implied in the name, Immanu-El [אֱל-עִמָּנוּ].” Fear not אַל-תִּירָא.

Revelation 1:17 has: “And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last.” Young says: “God had once spoken, ‘Fear not, Abram: I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward’ (Genesis 15:1) [and then to Isaac in Genesis 26:24⁹].” Fear and hope cannot co-exist in the mind at the same instance. ¶ Yeah, or surely, אַךְ, we have a double instance, אַךְ-עֲזֹרְתִּיךָ אַךְ-תִּמְכָּתִיךָ (yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee). President Thomas S. Monson explained that this verse was given as a promise to those who will trust in the Lord.¹⁰ Once we have learned how to pray and hear the comfort that the Lord gives, we need to trust these promises. Here, God tells us not to be dismayed (אַל-תִּשְׁתָּע). The DBL has שְׁתַּע as: “[to] be in a state of great alarm, with a possible focus of discouragement about the future.” ¶ I believe this is one of the most significant lessons Heavenly Father wishes for me to learn: to trust in His reassuring spirit when dark clouds approach or doors close. Since joining the Church I have been able to see His hand in my life. Shortly after joining the Church I wanted to become a high school science teacher. I was asked to write an essay about the most important thing that happened to me when I was a college student as part of my application to enter a credentialing program. I knew that if I wrote about the most important thing that transpired during those years—my joining The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints—I would most likely not be accepted into the program. I wrote my testimony and I was not accepted. In the interest of full disclosure, I should say that my grades were not good, either. While that door closed, another opened. In a year I was hired by the University of California where I was able to develop—with the Lord’s help—several models of conflict management and improved worker productivity.¹¹ As we put our trust in God and refuse to yield to feelings of despair we will experience emotional wellbeing and joy. The Lord always comes through. When people have needed my empathic listening, I often have had things happen in my life to permit me to be more empathetic.¹² Yes, God loves us and knows us and our needs intimately. ¶ For I [am] thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee. The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “For I am thy God. I have strengthened thee and helped thee.” God knows of our weaknesses and will strengthen us if we will permit Him to do so. ¶ Yea, I

⁹ “And the LORD appeared unto him the same night, and said, I am the God of Abraham thy father: fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed for my servant Abraham’s sake.”

¹⁰ Monson, President Thomas S. Monson. Stand in Holy Places. Retrieved from LDS.org 18 January 2014.

¹¹ I cringe at the thought of the pressures that would have been placed upon me to teach science in a way that would have been incompatible with my religious views. While religion need not be afraid of science, for science will eventually conform itself to eternal truth, science is one of many of today’s idols. I have no problem with science as long as it does not contradict what God has taught through His scriptures and holy prophets. My work for the University of California, on the other hand, was guided by the hand of the Lord and permitted me to travel all over the world and especially to return frequently to the country of my birth. This also paved the way for my return to Chile with my wife after retiring.

¹² I have been blessed with amazing health. Yet sometimes we do need to suffer so that we can show empathy for others. In March 2014, I was operated and two benign tumors were found, associated with my salivary glands. The blood in the tube to drain my wound coagulated and within half an hour of coming home that night, I had to return to the hospital for a follow-up operation. I was able to clearly see the merciful hand of the Lord in all of this (I had a wonderful surgeon who was extremely careful not to sever nerves in the first operation and a wonderful second surgeon who was able to go in and clean up and thus permit me to avoid an infection during the second operation), and besides, I had a chance to bear my testimony to the medical staff as I was coming out of my second operation while I was still under the effects of the anesthesia. And He also knows how we can succor each other. When I came back to Church after my operation, young deacon Alan Uriel Martínez approached me and tenderly and empathically told me he understood what I was going through as he had been operated twice himself.

will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness. The Targum (Ⓒ) has קִישׁוּרִי, my truth rather than my righteousness.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And secured thee with my just right hand.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “And the right hand of my just one hath upheld thee.” ¶ President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “There are numerous passages in the scriptures referring to the right hand, indicating that it is a symbol of righteousness and was used in the making of covenants.” President Smith quotes this verse and others in teaching that the Sacrament and other ordinances need to—when possible—be partaken off or carried out with the right hand.¹³ ¶ It is by the right hand that Peter strengthened the man who had been disabled for a lifetime (Acts 3:1–8). In General Conference today 6 April 2014, Sister Jean A. Stevens spoke about the importance of our reaching out for that hand of comfort and healing. It is not enough for the Savior or others who kindly love us to extend their hand out to us. We must take hold of it.¹⁴ Indeed, the Lord’s hands are always stretched toward us in loving invitation (Matthew 23:37b). To Israel the Lord says: “And I will bring you out from the people [or rather, אֲרָצוֹת, the peoples, suggestive of the nations—GB], and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out” (Ezekiel 20:34).

11 Behold, all they that were incensed against thee shall be ashamed and confounded: they shall be as nothing; and they that strive[✓] with thee shall perish.

✓ the men of thy strife

Behold, all they that were incensed against thee shall be ashamed and confounded: The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Behold all thine adversaries shall be ashamed and confounded.” Instead of incensed against thee, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has reproach you (Lamsa) / envy thee (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has fight instead of incensed. While the Lord will comfort those who lean upon God for help, there is no such promise for those who reject Him. ¶ Cowles says: “God will confound and even annihilate the enemies of his people. They are described as having been enraged against Zion as having striven and fought against her; but God will bring them utterly to nought, so that, though sought for, they shall not be found.” ¶ Young says: “By means of an introductory Behold!

[Ⓔ] the prophet directs attention to his message. The two verbs immediately follow, the first of which may be rendered they will be ashamed, and the second they will be confounded [יִבְשׁוּ וְיִכָּלְמוּ].” Note that in the Hebrew text, these verbs follow immediately after the Behold! יִבְשׁוּ וְיִכָּלְמוּ, “Behold, they shall be ashamed and they shall be confounded ...” Leeser preserves the right emphasis: “Behold, ashamed and confounded shall be all that were incensed against thee.” ¶ They shall be as nothing; and they that strive with thee shall perish. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “For they shall be as nothing and all thine opponents shall be destroyed.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “They shall be as nothing, and the men shall perish that strive against thee.” All those who contend with thee shall perish. So it is that we read: “And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed” (Genesis 12:3).

12 Thou shalt seek them, and shalt not find them, [even] them that contended with thee: [✓] they that war against thee[✓] shall be as nothing, and as a thing of nought.

✓ the men of thy contention

✓ ✓ the men of thy war

Thou shalt seek them, and shalt not find them, [even] them that contended with thee: The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Thou mayst seek but thou shalt not find the men, who through drunkenness will dare to insult thee.” The Peshitta (Ⓔ) has, those who contend against thee shall not be found. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “Thou shalt seek them, and shalt not find the men that resist thee.” Those who fight against the Lord’s children shall not be found anymore. Those Saints who were persecuted, such as the Prophet Joseph Smith, will no longer be contending with the mobs and others who sought their harm: “Traitors and tyrants now fight him in vain” (Praise to the man¹⁵). ¶ They that war against thee shall be as nothing, and as a thing of nought. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “They shall be as nothing; the men that stirred themselves up to make war with thee shall be less than nothing.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “For they shall be as mere nothing: and they who war against thee shall be no more.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “They shall be as nothing: and as a thing consumed the men that war against thee.” Alexander notes, as we have previously (see אֵין in ISAIAH 40:17), that “אֵין and אֵין strictly denote nonexistence and annihilation.” אֵין is an expression of negation that also means non-existence, emptiness, vacuity (HALOT, Gesenius).

¹³ Joseph Fielding Smith, President. Answers to Gospel Questions, p. 153; Doctrines of Salvation 3:107–8.

¹⁴ Sister Jean A. Stevens: ‘Fear not I am with thee.’ Sunday Morning General Conference address, 6 April 2014.

¹⁵ William W. Phelps, 1792–1872.

13 For I the LORD thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee.

For I the LORD thy God will hold thy right hand. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “For I am the Lord thy God, that will hold thee fast by thy right hand.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For I am thy God, who have hold of thy right hand.” Instead of hold, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has strengthen. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “For I am the Lord thy God, who take thee by the hand.” ¶ Elder W. Craig Zwick quoted this scripture and observed that we must do our part: “If we will keep the commandments of God and walk hand in hand with Him in His paths, we will go forward with faith and never feel alone. Trust in His promise of eternal life, and allow peace and hope to distill upon you. When we connect with the Author of Peace and with His perfect and redeeming love, then we can come to know the reality of the Lord’s promise [in ISAIAH 41:13].”¹⁶ Note that the Lord offers to hold our right hand, which is very important, as it shows that the Prophet Joseph Smith did well in correcting the scriptures, for instance, where Abraham’s servant, incorrectly, entered into a covenant or swore, by putting his hand under Abraham’s thigh (Genesis 24:2, 9; 47:29). Instead, like here, it should be hand. The Lord gives us assurances, then, by taking hold of our right hand (also see Galatians 2:9, the right hands of fellowship). The Lord comes to our rescue. The Prophet Joseph Smith taught: “Nothing is so much calculated to lead people to forsake sin as to take them by the hand, and watch over them with tenderness. When persons manifest the least kindness and love to me, O what power it has over my mind ...”¹⁷ ¶ Saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Who saith unto thee, Fear not, my Word shall be thy help (or, ‘thy support’).” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And who say to thee, Fear not.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And say to thee: Fear not, I have helped thee.” There is nothing to fear when the Lord extends His hand to us. We must lay hold of it, however.

14 Fear not, thou worm Jacob, [and] ye men[✓] of Israel; I will help thee, saith the LORD, and thy redeemer, the Holy One of Israel.

✓ or, few men

Fear not, thou worm Jacob, [and] ye men of Israel. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Fear ye not, ye tribes of the house of Jacob, ye seed of Israel.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Jacob, diminutive Israel!” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the second clause, “You that are dead of Israel.”

¶ Alexander explains: “The same encouragement is here repeated, but with a direct contrast between Israel’s weakness and the strength of God.” Ibn Ezra suggests: “Israel had been considered by the Babylonians as worms.” Birks says: “This worm must prevail over all the banded strength of idolatrous kingdoms. This dying remnant shall beat into dust the confederacies of the world’s ungodliness ... above all, the time when the Stone shall smite the divided kingdoms of the fourth and latest empire (Daniel 2:34). Then all rule and authority that resists the dominion of Christ will be as the chaff of the summer threshing-floor, and the wind of judgment will carry it away for ever.” Regarding worm, Cowles says: “‘Not for your sake, be it known unto you, nor for your righteousness; but for my holy name’s sake’ (Compare with Ezekiel 36:32). There is but too much occasion to introduce this idea in connection with God’s exceeding great and precious promises, lest his people should assume that their own personal merits lie at the foundation of God’s discriminating mercies toward them.” ¶ One can always count on Kay to bring forth brilliant ideas and scripture links: “To accomplish that work the Redeemer Himself became ‘as a worm, and no man’ (Psalms 22:6¹⁸).” ¶ We here have an allusion to weakness—whether in numbers or strength as in: “That the fulness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers” (D&C 1:23). Some of the exegetes have suggested that the mountains (ISAIAH 41:15) may well represent the powerful. In D&C we also have: “The weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones” (D&C 1:19a). As members of the Lord’s Church we can only be an instrument in His hand if we retain the humble qualities of the weak and the simple. ¶ I will help thee, saith the LORD, and thy redeemer [ⲓⲁⲓⲁⲓ], the Holy One of Israel. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “My Word shall be your help (or, ‘thy support’), saith the Lord, and your Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “I have helped thee, saith thy God, who redeemeth thee, Israel.” ¶ Alexander suggests: “The word ⲓⲁⲓⲁⲓ, redeemer, would suggest to a Hebrew reader the ideas of a near kinsman (Leviticus 25:24, 25) and of deliverance from bondage by the payment of a ransom ... [as accomplished by the Son of God].” The Lord is our נִסְלֵל, all other instances being but a type of the deliverance from sin and from perdition through the infinite atonement and expiatory sacrifice of our Lord, Savior and Redeemer, even Jesus Christ.

¹⁶ Elder W. Craig Zwick, The Lord Thy God Will Hold Thy Hand, Ensign (CR), November 2003, p.34.

¹⁷ History of the Church 5:23–24.

¹⁸ “But I am a worm, and no man; a reproach of men, and despised of the people” (Psalm 22:6). Westermann suggests that we also look at Psalm 119:141.

15 Behold, I will make thee a new sharp threshing instrument having teeth: [✓] thou shalt thresh the mountains, and beat [them] small, and shalt make the hills as chaff.

✓ mouths

Behold, I will make thee a new sharp threshing instrument having teeth: The LXX (⚡) reads, “Behold I have made thee like the wheels of a wain¹⁹ bruising to pieces a brood of pigeons (Brenton, ‘saw-shaped threshing wheels of a wagon,’ NETS, ‘new threshing wheels of a cart, new and saw shaped’).” In the Peshitta (⚡) it then adds that this threshing instrument tears and crushes. The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “I have made thee as a new thrashing wain, with teeth like a saw.” The Talmud tradition (Seder Nezikin, Avodah Zarah 24b) has this related to goats who can then thresh the mountains. “What are *morigim*²⁰?— ‘Ulla said, It is a ‘turbel bed’, And what is a ‘turbel bed’? — Rab Judah said, A ‘goat with hooks’, wherewith the threshers thresh. Said Rabbi Joseph, What is the Scriptural [evidence]? It is written, Behold, I make thee a new *morag*²¹ having sharp teeth; thou shalt thresh the mountains” (Talmud, Soncino). ¶ Alexander says: “The image presented is [that of a] down-trodden worm reducing hills to powder, the essential idea being that of a weak and helpless object overcoming the most disproportionate obstacles.” Cowles says in part: “The ancient threshing sledge was built of planks of which two or three might be attached together in the manner of a stone-boat, with the forward ends raised, and the bottom set with sharp pieces of stone or iron, projecting downward to cut the straw and beat out the grain ... Here the bold figure makes it thresh the mountains and beat them fine as dust, and then the people fan their threshed-out grain and the Lord’s whirlwind scatters chaff and grain alike to the four winds—a clean and terrible destruction; in view of which the Lord’s people exult in him as their strength in the day of battle.” It is a day of battle for human souls. Ironside suggests, “The expression concerning Israel that God will make them a ‘sharp threshing instrument with teeth,’ points on to the great harvest of the last days when a remnant of Israel restored to the Lord will be used of Him to bring many down before Him in repentance and lead them to put faith in the message that they proclaim.” Jenour says: “It seems to intimate generally the gradual overthrow, by the instrumentality of the church, of all false religions and their upholders, who are compared to mountains and hills, which mean therefore idolatrous princes and governments.” ¶ Thou shalt thresh the mountains, and beat [them] small, and shalt make the hills as chaff. The Targum (⚡) has, “Thou shalt slay the nations, thou shalt consume the kingdoms, thou shalt make them like chaff.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “Thou indeed shalt grind mountains and reduce hills to small pieces, and make them like dust.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “Thou shalt thrash the mountains, and break them in pieces: and shalt make the hills as chaff.” ¶ Keith says: “The instrumentality of Israel in the infliction of the judgments of heaven upon the nations of the world, here represented by mountains, is often asserted. The very same figure is employed in another instance, in reference to the same events, ‘Arise and thrash, daughter of Zion: for I will make thine horn iron, and I will make thy hoofs brass (in allusion to the dragging of the thrashing machine by cattle): and thou shalt beat in pieces many people’ (Micah 4:13).” It speaks of the gathering of Israel.

¹⁹ “A wagon or cart” (Oxford).

²⁰ מורינים, Gesenius explains, “Spanish, trillo, an instrument of husbandry for rubbing out corn on a threshing floor. It consists of three or four wooden cylinders armed with stones or iron, and joined together as a sledge; it is drawn by cattle over the corn, to separate the grains from the ear.”

²¹ מורג

16 Thou shalt fan them, and the wind shall carry them away, and the whirlwind shall scatter them: and thou shalt rejoice in the LORD, [and] shalt glory in the Holy One of Israel.

Thou shalt fan them, and the wind shall carry them away, and the whirlwind shall scatter them: The Targum (⚡) has for the last clause, “And my Word shall scatter them as the whirlwind scattereth the chaff.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “And thou shalt winnow them; and a wind shall take them up, and a whirlwind shall sweep them away.” The Talmud tradition (Seder Nezikin, Avodah Zarah 44a), in speaking about the scattering, has: “It is an expression for scattering, as Rabbi Joseph translated the word in the passage, Thou shalt fan them and the wind shall carry them away, and we translate it: ‘Thou shalt winnow them and a wind will disperse them’!” (Talmud, Soncino). ¶ Whitehouse says: “The metaphor is continued: ‘Thou shalt winnow (literally, scatter) them, and a wind shall carry them away.’ This was the next stage in the agricultural operations. After the threshing of the corn, by the threshing-sledge driven over it, came the winnowing process. ‘The bruised corn-ears were thrown up on wooden shovels when a moderate wind was blowing. The wind carried away the chaff from the threshing-floor while the heavier grains remained behind' (Hebrew Antiquities, p. 92). This metaphor of the bruising and the scattering describes Yahweh's treatment of the enemies of Israel. We have a similar use of this agricultural metaphor in Jeremiah 15:7 ['And I will fan them with a fan in the gates of the land; I will bereave them of children, I will destroy my people since they return not from their ways.']. The metaphor is frequently used to describe the separation of the wheat from the chaff, spiritually speaking. ¶ And thou shalt rejoice in the LORD, [and] shalt glory in the Holy One of Israel. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "But as for thee, thou shalt rejoice in the Word of the Lord, thou shalt glory in the Holy One of Israel." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "But thou shalt be gladdened in the sanctuaries of Israel." The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, for the second clause, "In the Holy One of Israel thou shalt be joyful." ¶ Keith well says: "The conversion of the nation to God will follow or accompany these doings—they will then rejoice in him. The signal deliverance then vouchsafed to Israel will be blessed for the removal of the veil from their eyes at last." I love to rejoice in the Holy One of Israel, even Jesus the Christ. Tears stream down my face with joy and gratitude that I have this testimony of Christ. The two things I am most grateful in my life are my testimony of Jesus Christ and the knowledge that God hears [עָנָה] my prayers (see ISAIAH 41:17). These words about glorying or boasting in the Holy One of Israel, בְּקִדּוֹשׁ יִשְׂרָאֵל תִּתְהַלֵּל are further developed in Jeremiah:

כֹּה אָמַר יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵי יִתְהַלֵּל חָכָם בְּחֻמָּתוֹ
וְאֵלֵי יִתְהַלֵּל הַגִּבּוֹר בְּגִבּוֹרָתוֹ אֱלֹהֵי יִתְהַלֵּל
עֲשִׂיר בְּעֲשָׂרוֹ:
כִּי אִם־בְּזֹאת יִתְהַלֵּל הַמִּתְהַלֵּל הַשָּׂבִיל וַיֵּדַע
אוֹתִי כִּי אֲנִי יְהוָה עֹשֶׂה חֶסֶד מִשְׁפָּט וְצִדְקָה
בָּאָרֶץ כִּי־בְאֵלָה חִפְצָתִי נֶאֱמַר־יְהוָה:

"Thus saith the LORD, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches: But let him that glorifieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the LORD which exercise lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things I delight, saith the LORD" (Jeremiah 9:23–24, in Biblia Hebraica, Jeremia 9:22–23).

17 [When] the poor and needy seek water, and [there is] none, [and] their tongue faileth for thirst, I the LORD will hear them, I the God of Israel will not forsake them.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "The poor and the needy long after instruction (or, 'doctrine'), as the thirsty after water, but do not find it; their spirit faints in affliction. I, the Lord, will hear their prayer; I, the God of Israel, will not cast them off." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "And the poor and the needy shall exult with joy: for when they shall seek water and there shall be none, and their tongue is parched with thirst; I the Lord their God, I the God of Israel will hear and will not forsake them." The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) renders been dry instead of faileth. ¶ Rashi, in Rabbi Rosenberg correctly explains that this verse is similar to Amos 8:11, at it refers to the latter days. Rashi adds (see R. Rosenberg, who also mentions Shabbath 138b,²² Midrash Psalms 63:2): "He shall prepare for them bread and water and cause His Shechinah and His spirit to rest in the mouth of their prophets." ¶ This verse is a promise that the Lord will not abandon Israel and will also cause Zion to flourish like a rose. Horsley explains of Isaiah 41:17–19: "The images used in these verses are consecrated by the perpetual usage of the prophets to denote the spiritual blessings and graces of the Gospel." ¶ I the LORD will hear them. Alexander says: "עָנָה is not to hear in general, but to hear prayer in a favourable sense, to answer it." This is because of the new covenant wherein God will again be the God of Israel, and the children of Jacob His people.

18 I will open rivers in high places, and fountains in the midst of the valleys: I will make the wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water.

I will open rivers in high places, and fountains in the midst of the valleys: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "I will gather their captives from the midst of the nations, and I will lead them in the right path; and I will open for them rivers in torrent-beds, and fountains in the midst of the valleys." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "But will open rivers on the mountains, and fountains in the midst of plains." Instead of high places, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has the ²² "For Rab said, 'Our Rabbis taught . . . The Torah is destined to be forgotten in Israel, as it is said, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord. And it is said, And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east; they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it. "The word of the Lord" means . . . prophecy"' (Talmud, Mas. Shabbath 138b).

equivalent of הַר mountain (Lamsa) or mount (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “I will open rivers in the high hills, and fountains in the midst of the plains.” ¶ Orelli says: “Physical and spiritual here pass into each other ... hereafter it will enjoy, even in inhospitable paths, inwardly and outwardly divine fulness of blessing, as to which it is to be noted, that already such a recreating even of the most barren tracts of its land was often promised the nation in reference to the time of its gracious restoration.” ¶ The opening of rivers in high places seems an allusion to the river that will come out of the House of the Lord in Jerusalem—a river associated with the healing of the Dead Sea.²³ Keith explains: “Another consequent, or concomitant, of the foregoing events, is the restored fertility of the land. That this description is to be understood literally, and not of spiritual blessings, which are often represented by water, although these will then also be bestowed, appears from the 19th verse, which will not bear such an application.” Rashi (in Rabbi Rosenberg) suggests that the rivers also stand for the revelatory power of prophecy that will be manifest in the last days. Rabbi Rosenberg suggests we return to look at the Talmudic note we quoted in ISAIAH 41:7. Here is an additional quote of interest: “. . . for Rab [Rashi] said: ‘The Torah is destined to be forgotten in Israel, because it is said, Then the Lord will make thy plagues wonderful: now, I do not know what this wonder is, but when it is said, Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a wonderful work among this people, even a wonderful work and a wonder [and the wisdom of their wise men shall perish], it follows that this wonder refers to Torah.’” The context makes it clear that Torah means not just the law, or the five books of Moses. There also will be Torah הַרְוֵהוּ, or instruction. For more on this acceptance, see Gesenius, HALOT, BDB, DBL and other lexicons. In ²³ “Afterward he brought me again unto the door of the house; and, behold, waters issued out from under the threshold of the house eastward: for the forefront of the house stood toward the east, and the waters came down from under from the right side of the house, at the south side of the altar. Then brought he me out of the way of the gate northward, and led me about the way without unto the utter gate by the way that looketh eastward; and, behold, there ran out waters on the right side. And when the man that had the line in his hand went forth eastward, he measured a thousand cubits, and he brought me through the waters; the waters were to the ankles. Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through the waters; the waters were to the knees. Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through; the waters were to the loins. Afterward he measured a thousand; and it was a river that I could not pass over: for the waters were risen, waters to swim in, a river that could not be passed over. And he said unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen this? Then he brought me, and caused me to return to the brink of the river. Now when I had returned, behold, at the bank of the river were very many trees on the one side and on the other. Then said he unto me, These waters issue out toward the east country, and go down into the desert, and go into the sea: which being brought forth into the sea, the waters shall be healed” (Ezekiel 47:1-8).

ISAIAH 42:4, the children of Israel wait to receive the law or instruction from the Lord. This is to be understood as renewed revelation from on high. ¶ And this has been fulfilled beginning with the day a young Ephraimite boy went to the woods to pray. In Joseph’s own words we read: “I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun, which descended gradually until it fell upon me ... When the light rested upon me I saw two Personages, whose brightness and glory defy all description, standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name and said, pointing to the other—This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!” (JS-History 1:16–17). It is at this point where הַרְוֵהוּ has once again poured out upon the earth and the gathering of Israel begun in earnest as spoken about in Deuteronomy 30 and Ezekiel 37. Wordsworth similarly suggests that this verse is made manifest: “By the out-pouring of the Holy Spirit on all nations (ISAIAH 30:25; 35:6; 44:3).” ¶ Elder LeGrand Richards said of Isaiah: “He saw the water flow down from the high places where we have reservoired it in these mountain fastnesses for summer’s use.”²⁴ Besides its application to the Saints lodging in the Rocky Mountains, this verse speaks about the land of Israel. George Reynolds and Janne M. Sjodahl wrote: “On December 9, 1917, General Allenby took possession of Jerusalem, and on November 2, the same year, Balfour issued his famous letter to Baron Rothschild, in which he stated that, ‘His Majesty’s government view with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people.’ Ten nations, including the United States, gave official endorsement to that policy. ... The barren soil has been covered with trees, and herds and flocks have found feed on the hill sides (ISAIAH 41:18–20).”²⁵ Pools of water, especially in high places, as has been mentioned, can be applied to revelation and inspiration from God. Elder Bruce R. McConkie explained in part: “It will be but a similitude of the living waters then being poured out upon the Lord’s people.”²⁶ ¶ I will make the wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water. The Targum (Ⲯ) has חַיִּי, thirsty instead of יָבֵשׁ dry land in the Masoretic text (מ).²⁷ The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “I will turn the wilderness into watery fens (Brenton, ‘I will make

²⁴ Elder LeGrand Richards, A Testimony, Ensign (CR), November 1980, p.63.

²⁵ George Reynolds and Janne M. Sjodahl, Commentary on the Book of Mormon, The World War Predicted, edited and arranged by Philip C. Reynolds, 7 vols., 4:, p.263–264.

²⁶ Bruce R. McConkie, The Promised Messiah: The First Coming of Christ, p.204–206.

²⁷ Halfway through verse 18 to the end of the chapter, Pauli’s Targum (Ⲯ) translation is missing. For the rest of this chapter I lean mostly on Stenning and Chilton as well as on the Aramaic text in the CAL Targums.

the desert pools of water'), and with streams refresh the thirsty ground." The Douay-Rheims (D) has, "I will turn the desert into pools of waters, and the impassable land into streams of waters." ¶ Once again, water is used to describe the gift of revelation as well as gifts from on high.

19 I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the shittah tree, and the myrtle, and the oil tree; I will set in the desert the fir tree, [and] the pine, and the box tree together:

The LXX (G) reads, "And I will plant in the dry wilderness the cedar and box, the myrtle and cypress and elm." The Douay-Rheims (D) has olive tree instead of oil tree. ¶ The blessings that will accompany the gathering will be spiritual and physical. Cowles says: "He plants all the choicest trees in the most unlikely situations, where you would least of all expect them. With trees [fertility, verdure and beauty return]—God makes these extraordinary superhuman changes that all men may know that this is his almighty hand, working to new-create where needs be, for the relief, comfort and joy of his trusting people."

20 That they may see, and know, and consider, and understand together, that the hand of the LORD hath done this, and the Holy One of Israel hath created it.

The LXX (G) reads, "That they may see and know, and consider and understand at once that the hand of the Lord hath done these things; even what the Holy One of Israel hath pointed out." ¶ To see, and know, and consider and understand form a most forceful expression of comfort that a believer may put on the Holy One of Israel (יְהוָה וְיִשְׁמֹ וְיִשְׁכִּיל).²⁸

Alexander says: "יְשִׁמוּ, they may place, seems to be an elliptical expression for יְשִׁמוּ לֵב may place their heart, i.e. apply their mind, or give attention." LHI translates it as take to heart. Jenour says: "Here the reason why God had predicted these things is assigned. It was, that men, before ignorant of him, might see and know, by the accomplishment of these prophecies, that he, by whose inspiration they were uttered, is the only true God." This rings a bell to us as Latter-day Saints that realize that the Book of Mormon was specially preserved for us, in the latter days. Westermann says: "Here the verb [בְּרָאָה] has the overtone, inherent from the beginning, of miraculous new creation." Indeed, and the Holy One of Israel hath created it, וְקִדְּשׁ יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּרָאָה. It seems to bring forth the time spoken of by Jeremiah when a new heart²⁸ shall be put into us: "But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more" (Jeremiah 31:33–34, emphasis added).

vv. 21–29. Jenour says: "Jehovah, having proved his divinity by the prediction of future events; and having, as it were by the way, addressed his people in terms of consolation, now turns to the idolaters supposed to be assembled before him, and calls upon them to bring forth their idols, that they in their turn might speak and foretell something [that would] take place immediately, or more distant events, which would not happen for a long time: or, if they confessed themselves unable to do either of these, to shew by the performance of some action, either good or evil, that they at least possessed some power. But, in answer to this appeal, the idols can neither say nor do anything, and are therefore pronounced vain and unprofitable." Keith here goes beyond the nothingness of the idols to the nothingness of man—unless man leans upon God.

21 ¶ Produce your cause, saith the LORD; bring forth your strong [reasons], saith the King of Jacob.

✓ Cause to come near

The LXX (G) reads, "The trial of you is near, saith the Lord God; your councils are nigh at hand, saith the king of Jacob." The BPE (S), instead of your strong [reasons] has your arguments. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, "Bring your cause near, saith the Lord: bring hither, if you have any thing to allege, saith the King of Jacob." ¶ Birks has: "The controversy with the nations is resumed again, under the same figure of a trial or assize.²⁹ The idolaters are called to state their own case, and bring forward their strongest reasons, to disprove God's charge against them of blindness and folly. The appeal turns from God's power to His prescient wisdom, in which these idols, their priests, and their worshippers, have no share." ¶ King of Jacob,

²⁸ Also see Psalm 51:10.

²⁹ Judicial inquest (Webster).

מֶלֶךְ יִשְׂרָאֵל. Nägelsbach explains: “Jehovah is often called King of the chosen people (compare on ISAIAH 43:15); but the expression King of Jacob occurs only here ... In ISAIAH 41:22 the LORD addresses Israel, claiming them for His side, and identifying His and their cause.” ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie gave us an exquisite application for this scripture: “On the one hand we are obligated and required to know the doctrines of the Church. We are to treasure up the words of eternal life. We are to reason as intelligently as we are able. We are to use every faculty and capacity with which we are endowed to proclaim the message of salvation and to make it intelligent to ourselves and to our Father’s other children. But after we have done that, and also in the process of doing it, we are obligated to bear testimony—to let the world know and our associate members of the Church know—that in our hearts, by the revelation of the Holy Spirit to our souls, we know of the truth and divinity of the work and of the doctrines that we teach. Now let me, if I may, take a classical illustration from the ancient records of how this is done. Peter and his associates had the same obligation for their day that we have for ours: to carry the message of salvation to the ends of the earth. I suppose Peter read and taught the revelations that Isaiah and the prophets gave about Christ and his gospel. He reasoned with the people about them. He followed the divine counsel, ‘Come now, and let us reason together ...’ (ISAIAH 1:18). He obeyed the divine decree, ‘... bring forth your strong reasons’ (ISAIAH. 41: 21). But he did something more than that. After he had taught the doctrines and after he had reasoned, he bore a personal witness of the truth and divinity of what he was presenting to his fellowmen; and the Lord prepared him to do just that by giving him spiritual experiences, by letting the power of the Holy Spirit rest upon him.”³⁰

22 Let them bring [them] forth, and shew us what shall happen: let them shew the former things, what they [be], that we may consider them, and know the latter end of them; or declare us things for to come.

✓ set our heart upon them

Let them bring [them] forth, and shew us what shall happen: The LXX (6) reads, “Let them draw near and tell you what will happen.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Let them come, and tell us all things that are to come.” ¶ Cowles writes: “The single point here is a challenge to produce a case of real prophecy. It may be a prediction previously made, but of events then appearing or about to appear; or a new prophecy first brought out at that time.” ¶ People in the latter-days were challenged to come up with a prophecy to equal the least of those found in the Doctrine and Covenants: “Your eyes have been upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and his language you have known, and his imperfections you have known; and you have sought in your hearts knowledge that you might express beyond his language; this you also know. Now, seek ye out of the Book of Commandments, even the least that is among them, and appoint him that is the most wise among you; Or, if there be any among you that shall make one alike unto it, then ye are justified in saying that ye do not know that they are true” (D&C 67:5–7). A similar challenge is made by Allah regarding the Quran (Hud 11:13; Yunus 10:38), about coming up with ten surahs (i.e., chapters) or even one. ¶ Let them shew the former things, what they [be], that we may consider them. The LXX (6) reads, “Or such things as these before they come to pass. Tell us that we may apply our understanding.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Tell us the former things what they were: and we will set our heart upon them.” ¶ Barnes says: “Let the idols, or the worshippers of idols, bring forth the evidences of their divine nature and power. Or more probably it means, ‘let them draw near or approach.’” ¶ And know the latter end of them; or declare us things for to come. The LXX (6) reads, “And that we may know the final issue, and the train of events leading to it.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the second half, “And tell us the things that are to come.” Faussett, leaning on Maurer, has: “Show what former predictions the idols have given, that we may compare the event (‘latter end’) with them; or give new prophecies (‘declare things to come’) (ISAIAH 42:9).” The idols are challenged to bring forth any sort of prophecy, form the most basic.

23 Shew the things that are to come hereafter, that we may know that ye [are] gods: yea, do good, or do evil, that we may be dismayed, and behold [it] together.

Shew the things that are to come hereafter, that we may know that ye [are] gods: The Stenning Targum translation (T) has, “Declare the things that are to come hereafter, that we may know whether ye are serving idols wherein is any profit.” The LXX (6) reads, “Tell us, announce to us the things in successive train to the issue; and we will acknowledge that you are gods.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the second clause, “And we shall know that ye are gods.” ¶ Elder B. H. Roberts beautifully testified: “Such the challenge of God to those who questioned the things that he had done in

³⁰ Elder Bruce R. McConkie, Upon Judea’s Plains, Ensign (CR), July 1973, p.27.

Israel in ancient times; that doubted that he had made Israel; and now, looking into the future, doubted if God would bring forth Israel's deliverer, the Messiah. God was saying to these: Produce your cause, let us reason together; 'show us things that are to come, that we may know that ye are gods.' God's challenge to their unbelief, makes it clear that the future, the knowledge of it, belongs to God alone, and to his servants to whom he reveals it; not to those who question his work, or challenge his power. 'Prophecy' or power to penetrate into the future, is not given to Satan or to his emissaries. For them that veil will not part. 'For prophecy came not in olden time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.' So now, prophecy, knowledge of the future, is of God, and of his servants to whom he reveals it. Prophecy, in a way, is history reversed. Prophecy is a fore-telling of that which shall be; History, an aftertelling, events that have been."³¹ Elder Parley P. Pratt suggested, "Says the prophet to the idols, 'Tell us what shall be, that we may know that ye are gods.'"³² ¶ Cowles has: "The challenge, 'Do good, or do evil,' we must consider as addressed to idol gods. Let them really show that they do anything, good or evil; and they shall have all credit for it. The implication here—affirmed in the strongest form in ISAIAH 41:24—is that they are mere nothings, utterly powerless for any result, even the least possible, good or evil.—The word 'dismayed,' (here as in ISAIAH 41:10) has the meaning of looking about on all sides." ¶ I testify that Latter-day Prophets, Seers and Revelators have the gift of prophecy and prophecy to the whole world as directed by the Lord. Members receive revelation and inspiration for themselves. On occasion, members may receive revelation through the tender mercies of the Lord for their own edification.³³ Joseph

³¹ Roberts, B. H. Comprehensive History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. 6 vols. 1930. Reprint. Orem, Utah: Sonos Publishing Inc., 1991, p. 550.

³² Pratt, Parley P. A Voice of Warning and Instruction to All People Or, an Introduction to the Faith and Doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints By Elder Parley P. Pratt. New Edition. Salt Lake City: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1957. Included is the preface to the First American Edition (1837) and the Second European Edition (December 4, 1846), p. 27.

³³ I had one such experience in 1998. I feel that since the event has transpired, I may share it here. Elder Travis Tuttle and Elder Andrew Propst were taken hostage for a ransom, when they were serving as LDS missionaries in Samara, Russia, in March 1998. I wrote in my journal: "Two Elders were abducted in Russia last Wednesday. It came out in the local paper Friday morning. When I read the information to Linda she was quite shaken and filled with empathy for the missionaries and for their families. There was much prayer on their behalf around the world. Saturday night, as I was ready to go to bed, after having said my kneeling prayers, I heard the Spirit: 'The missionaries will be released tomorrow.' I wondered if that meant my tomorrow or if I would find out tomorrow (Sunday). Sunday morning, while I was working translating a patriarchal blessing for a friend in our ward, Linda came in all excited to tell me the Elders had been freed. Linda followed the whole event very closely, by Smith the Prophet taught that "No man can receive the Holy Ghost without receiving revelations. The Holy Ghost is a revelator."³⁴ Although most revelations are driven by a question or a request, this is not always the case. Many scholars deny the unity of Isaiah simply because they do not believe that God can reveal the future to man; and that Isaiah was too accurate about the future. Thus, they argue, someone else wrote ISAIAH 40 ff. One well-known present-day Rabbi and university biblical professor declared that you have to begin exegesis from the perspective of an atheist. At least he was willing to admit it on the record, and I heard him say it. The Savior warned: "Yea, wo unto him that shall deny the revelations of the Lord, and that shall say the Lord no longer worketh by revelation, or by prophecy, or by gifts, or by tongues, or by healings, or by the power of the Holy Ghost!" (3 Nephi 29:6).

¶ Yea, do good or do evil, אַף-יִשְׁכַּחוּ יַתְרָעוּ, that we may be dismayed, and behold [it] together. The LXX (Ϟ) reads, "Confer favours and inflict punishments, and we will pay respect and see at once." The Douay-Rheims (ϟ) has, "Do ye also good or evil, if you can: and let us speak, and see together." ¶ Of course the idols were no more able to do good or evil than to prophesy of something good or bad. ¶ Alexander says: "The Hebrews constantly employing and where or in English seems essential to the sense ... Most interpreters retain the idiomatic meaning of the same expressions elsewhere, namely, that of doing anything whatever, good or bad (see Jeremiah 10:5, Zephaniah 1:12)." Westermann cleverly suggests: "Do something, good or evil, so that we bow down and feel dread." Nägelsbach calls the clause אַף-יִשְׁכַּחוּ יַתְרָעוּ a "proverbial expression." ¶ And be dismayed, וְנִשְׁתַּחֲוּהוּ, שָׁתַע. Baltzer suggests: "The reaction that must be meant could be described as stupor, a word that can cover fear, awe, astonishment, and paralysis."

24 Behold, ye [are] of nothing, וְ and your work of nought: וְ an abomination [is he that] chooseth you.

- ✓ or, worse than nothing
- ✓ ✓ or, worse than a viper

The Stenning Targum (Ϡ) translation has, "wherein ye take pleasure" rather than "chooseth you." The LXX monitoring papers on the Web etc. Later on that day, Linda came in crying as she saw an interview of the parents of one of the missionaries. The mother, according to Linda, kept asking her son if he was Okay. 'I don't have to wait 'till Mother's Day to talk to you?' the mother had asked in disbelief" [Journal entry, 23 March 1998].

³⁴ Joseph Smith, History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 6:58.

(6) reads, “That wherever you are thence is your operation. They have chosen you an abomination from the earth.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Behold, you are of nothing, and your work of that which hath no being: he that hath chosen you is an abomination.” ¶ McFadyen says: “A dead silence follows the challenge. The gods have nothing to say; therefore they are of nothing, nonentities, not gods at all.”

25 I have raised up [one] from the north, and he shall come: from the rising of the sun shall he call upon my name: and he shall come upon princes as [upon] mortar, and as the potter treadeth clay.

The Targum (T) is explicit about making this one from the north a מֶלֶךְ, or king. Rather than call upon my name, Chilton (C) has “I will make him mighty by my name,” and Stenning (S) “I will make him strong in my name.” The LXX (6) reads, “But I have raised up that one from the north, and that other from the risings of the sun; they shall be called by my name: let the Archons come, and as the clay of the potter— even as a potter treadeth clay so shall you be trampled down.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “I have raised up one from the north, and he shall come from the rising of the sun: he shall call upon my name, and he shall make princes to be as dirt, and as the potter treading clay.”

¶ Whitehouse says about יִקְרָא בְּשֵׁמִי: “calleth upon my name” is the ordinary Hebrew phrase for ‘invoke’; cf. Genesis 4:26 [יְהוָה בְּשֵׁם יִקְרָא לַיהוָה] ‘then began men to call upon the name of the LORD’].” Many exegetes make much of this chapter, and certainly this verse, about Cyrus. Alexander explains it: “[The passage] affords a remarkable example of prophetic foresight. The act of calling on the name of Jehovah is commonly regarded as an allusion to the profession of the true religion, or at least the recognition of Jehovah as the true God, on the part of Cyrus (Ezra 1:2).” Birks has: “The change from the past to the future tense is ... to teach that this coming of Cyrus, though future, is as sure as if already past. The promise ‘he shall call upon my name’ is the counterpart to ISAIAH 45:3–4, ‘I have called thee by thy name.’ ... The Allwise God here calls Cyrus by his name, long before his birth; and Cyrus owns, in his turn, the Power which has exalted and honoured him. In his decree he calls Him by His own proper name, ‘Jehovah, the God of Israel, He is the God, Whose house is in Jerusalem.’” The Lord prophecies of such notable future events; the idols are left speechless.

26 Who hath declared from the beginning, that we may know? and beforetime, that we may say, [He is] righteous? yea, [there is] none that sheweth, yea, [there is] none that declareth, yea, [there is] none that heareth your words.

Who hath declared from the beginning, that we may know? and beforetime, that we may say, [He is] righteous? The Targum (T) translations render, instead of “[He is] righteous?” the expression “It is true” as a question (Stenning) and as an exclamation (Chilton). The LXX (6) reads, “Who now can tell these things from the beginning, that we may know, even these things before hand: that we may say, The prediction is true.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has and from time of old instead of and beforetime. ¶ Ibn Ezra says that here צָדִיק means correct (as compared to false) rather than righteous. HALOT likewise gives as one acceptance “I. of a thing which is examined and found to be in order: just: —a. נִאֲמָר צָדִיק we say, ‘It is correct’ [as in ISAIAH 41²⁶].” ¶ Yea, [there is] none that sheweth, yea, [there is] none that declareth, yea, [there is] none that heareth your words. The LXX (6) reads, “There is none who predicteth, nor doth any one hear your words.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Thou art just. ¶ Keith says: “The tone of irony is here resumed.” The Lord asks why there is silence.

27 The first [shall say] to Zion, Behold, behold them: and I will give to Jerusalem one that bringeth good tidings.

The first [shall say] to Zion, Behold, behold them: The Stenning Targum translation (S) has, “The words of comfort that the prophets prophesied aforetime concerning Zion, behold, they have come to pass.” Chilton renders it “The words of consolation which the prophets prophesied from the first to Zion, behold they come [to pass].” The LXX (6) reads, “I will first give notice to Sion.” For the first clause, the Peshitta (S) explains that these things are important for Zion. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the second clause, “Behold they are here.” ¶ Cowles explains: “The reader will scarcely get the sense of this verse unless he considers that ‘the first’ is taken from ISAIAH 41:4, ‘I the Lord, the first.’ ... The sense therefore is not, I was the first to make this prediction; but [rather that Christ is the Alpha and Omega.]” ¶ And I will give to Jerusalem one that bringeth good tidings. The LXX (6) reads, “And I will comfort Jerusalem on the way.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And to Jerusalem I will give an evangelist.” Cowles suggests this is intimately tied to ISAIAH 40:9.

28 For I beheld, and [there was] no man; even among ~~them~~ men, and [there was] no counsellor, that, when I asked of them, could answer [✓] a word.

✓ return

For I beheld, and there was no man; even among men. The Stenning Targum (Ⓢ) translation has, “And it is revealed before me that (lit. and) there is no man whose works are good.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “For of the nations behold there is none, and of the idols none giveth warning.” The Peshitta (Ⓟ) renders it something like, “I observed that there was none who could meditate upon these things.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “And I saw, and there was no one even among them to consult.” ¶ It is clear from the JST textual correction that it was not only the idols who were left speechless, but also the men who leaned upon them. ¶ And there was no counsellor, that, when I asked of them, could answer a word. The Stenning Targum (Ⓢ) translation has, “And of these that (lit. and) there is no one that giveth counsel: and I asked them, to see if they would answer a word,” while Chilton has, “Among these there is no counsellor. I asked them, if only they would give an answer!” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And should I ask them, Whence are you? They could not make me any answer.” The Peshitta (Ⓟ) renders it something like, “Nor that I could ask and receive an answer.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “Or who, when I asked, could answer a word.” ¶ And indeed, no answer would be forthcoming. All falsehood—whether it comes from philosophy, science or false religion—will fall before the truth of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

29 Behold, they [are] all vanity; their works [are] nothing: their molten images [are] wind and confusion.

Behold, they [are] all vanity. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “For are these they who made you? They are indeed those who vainly lead you astray.” The Peshitta (Ⓟ) has “Behold, they are all nothing.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “Behold they are all in the wrong.” ¶ Returning to the idols again, the Lord makes it clear that they have nothing positive to contribute to the conversation. Cowles notes: “The English version seems to assume that the Lord has looked among the heathen gods for some wise man to give counsel or aid, but finds none; and assigns this as a reason for what he is said in the verse previous to have done. A closer rendering will much improve the sense: ‘I will look’ (i.e., once more, to give the idol gods yet another trial), ‘but there is no one’ [to attempt it]; ‘even of them all, there is none to speak wisdom.’ The whole verse is remarkably elliptical. The last clause seems to mean; I will ask them yet again, and [perhaps] they will give back a word.” ¶ Their works [are] nothing: The Peshitta (Ⓟ) has their works are in vain (BPE) / their works are vanity (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “And their works are vain.” ¶ Their molten images [are] wind [ⓈⓇⓇ] and confusion [ⓈⓇⓇ]. The Stenning Targum (Ⓢ) translation has, “Plunder and destruction are the subject of their thoughts.” The Peshitta (Ⓟ) has their works are wind and vanity (BPE) / their images are wind and vanity (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “Their idols are wind and vanity.” The word for wind (ⓈⓇⓇ) in this instance is equivalent to the expression hot air. That is, nothing but empty and vain words. Cowles has: “But no; not the first word can be elicited from these senseless gods, even by the most reasonable call, the fairest opportunity, the most pressing exigency, or the most caustic sarcasm. They are utter vanity, mere nothings. Their molten images are only wind—void and empty as old chaos. The word rendered ‘confusion’ is the same that Moses applies to chaos (Genesis 1:2) [ⓈⓇⓇ, without form, KJV—GB].” A FINAL NOTE: Many suggest that this and other chapters that speak of Cyrus were written after-the-fact, to which Birks says: “Those who seek to degrade these chapters into forgeries after Cyrus had arisen and prospered, only range themselves, in this great controversy, side by side with the idolatrous heathen of ISAIAH’s days.” Birks chastises the critics: “The whole description is true, not only in reference to these old heathen idolaters, but to heathenized critics in modern times, who see only forgeries after the event in these Divine prophecies.”

FIRST POSTED: 10 April 2014

Isaiah 42

Henderson explains: “In determining the application of this prophecy, it is necessary to ascertain the meaning of the phrase, עֶבֶד יְהוָה, the servant of Jehovah. That Isaiah uses it in various senses, no one familiar with his writings will deny. It is applied to himself (ISAIAH 20:3); to Eliakim (ISAIAH 22:20); to the Jewish people (ISAIAH 41:8, 9; 41:8, 9; 44:1, 2, 21; 45:4; 48:20); and to a distinguished Divine Legate ... (in particular, ISAIAH 42:1–7; 49:1–9; 50:5–10; 52:13–53 with which compare Zechariah 3:8) ... That [these last mentioned apply] exclusively to the Messiah has been maintained by the great body of interpreters, both ancient and modern, and more especially by Vitringa, Michaelis, Lowth, V. d. Palm, Umbreit, Hengstenberg, Jenour, and Scholz. The principal reasons advanced in defence of this position are the following: First, the passage is directly applied to our Saviour by the inspired evangelist Matthew 12:17–21; and part of the first verse is verbally adopted in the Divine testimony to his Messiahship at the Jordan (Matthew 3:17), and on the mount of transfiguration (Matthew 17:5; Mark 9:7; Luke 9:35). To which add the reference made to the 6th verse by Simeon, in his inspired testimony (Luke 2:32). Secondly, this interpretation is that of the Chaldee Paraphrast, and is advocated by Kimhi and Abarbanel ... The latter writer scruples not to assert that all those who do not interpret the prophecy of the Messiah have been struck with blindness, סְנוּרִים. Thirdly, the totality of character exhibited in the passage is such as to render it inapplicable to any but our Lord ... Fourthly, the subject to which the prophecy has respect, is obviously identical with that exhibited in ISAIAH 49:1–12. The person and office of the same individual are described in both. They equally insist on his mediatorial character, and the universality of the dispensation of knowledge and happiness which he was to establish in the world. Lastly, every predicate here specified most aptly applies to Christ.” ¶ Simeon exhorts: “Surely if Moses was commanded to put off his shoes because the place where he stood was sanctified by the Divine presence, it becomes us to express the profoundest reverence, while we listen to the God of heaven giving his commission to his only dear Son respecting the redemption of a ruined world.” Spurgeon says: “Now Isaiah, by God’s Spirit, told the Israelites concerning Christ hundreds of years before Christ came; and yet the terms are so express that one might almost think that they were written after the event.” ¶ Jehovah speaks about Himself in this chapter (e.g., ISAIAH 42:6, “I Jehovah,” אֲנִי יְהוָה) through the principle of Divine Investiture (that is, He represents the Father):

אֲנִי יְהוָה קְרָאתִיךָ בְּצֶדֶק וְאֶתֵּן כִּי יָדְךָ וְאֶצְרֶךָ לְבְרִית עִם לְאוֹר בְּנֵי־אָדָם׃

(I the LORD [Jehovah] have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the nations.)

Jenour has: “The Messiah is called a servant,—how then can he be equal with God? ... But does not St. Paul solve the difficulty in the passage in ... Philippians 2:5 [Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God (Philippians 2:5)] ... The Son of God, then, is called a servant, because he undertook the obligations of a servant ... he acted not for himself, but as the minister of his Father ...”

vv. 1–3 make reference to the coming of our Savior in the meridian of times, while ISAIAH 42:4 speaks of the restoration of the Gospel in the last days, when His law shall be made known again. Rawlinson says: “There are comparatively few who deny that, in this place at any rate, the ‘Servant of the Lord’ is the Messiah. (So the Targum on the passage; so Abar-banel; so, among moderns, Oehler, Delitzsch, and Mr. Cheyne.) The portraiture has ‘so strong an individuality and such marked personal features, that it cannot possibly be a mere personified collective;’ and it goes so ‘infinitely beyond anything of which a man was ever capable that it can only be the future Christ’ (Delitzsch). It may be added that St. Matthew (Matthew 12:17–21¹) distinctly applies the passage to our Lord.” Indeed, contrasting The Servant of the Lord, Christ, to others who play servant roles also, Rawlinson says: “One is proclaimed to us greater than the sons of men the perfect model of a ‘servant of God,’ obedient in all things, unceasingly active in God’s service, never fainting, never wearying. ‘My Father worketh hitherto, and I work,’ said Jesus; (John 5:17); ‘My meat is to do the will of my Father which sent me, and to finish his work’; (John 4:34); ‘Wist ye not that I must be about my Father’s business?’ (Luke 2:49).” Cowles declares that these verses in Isaiah are about Christ but admits that the whom my soul is well pleased: I will put my spirit upon him, and he shall shew judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not strive, nor cry; neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets. A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench, till he send forth judgment unto victory. And in his name shall the Gentiles trust.” —Matthew 12:17–21

¹ “That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Behold my servant, whom I have chosen; my beloved, in Savior does call on others to help Him accomplish the work. This is what we have called the How beautiful are the feet principle. Cowles points us to John 20:21b: “As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you” (John 20:21). ¶ In these verses we will also see the scattering and gathering of Israel. The reader will probably say that I see the scattering and gathering of Israel everywhere, and certainly this is true in the Hebrew Scriptures. The work of gathering will be intimately—on a one-by one basis—carried out by the Lord Himself, as He invites us to come unto Him.

1 ¶ BEHOLD my servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, [in whom] my soul delighteth; I have put my spirit upon him: he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles.

BEHOLD my servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, [in whom] my soul delighteth. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “בְּחִירִי,” or, chosen.² Chilton (Ⲯ) has, “my chosen in whom my Memra is pleased.” Baltzer says: “There is something mysterious about the not naming of the one whom Yahweh installs. The name is ‘hidden’ with God—in petto,³ so to speak. This intensifies the dramatic tension.” According to Wordsworth: “The Chaldee Targum begins this chapter with the remarkable words, ‘Behold My servant, Messiah⁴, My Beloved, in Whom My Word is well pleased: I will put My Holy Spirit upon Him, and He will reveal My Judgment to the Gentiles.’” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “JACOB is my servant, I will uphold him, Israel is my chosen one, my soul hath embraced him.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Behold my servant, I will uphold him: my elect, my soul delighteth in him.” Redak (Rabbi David Kimhi) identifies “my servant” here with “King-Messiah” who will be an arbiter among the nations, bringing about world peace (in Rosenberg). ¶ הִנֵּן, behold. Henderson says: “The transition was easy, from the temporal deliverance to be effected by Cyrus, to the spiritual salvation to be accomplished by the Messiah, הִנֵּן has there all its force as a demonstrative interjection, and marks the transition to a new subject, on which it

² Pauli (Ⲯ) renders בְּחִירִי, chosen, as Messiah. On the other hand, see ISAIAH 43:10, עֲבָדִי מְשִׁיחָא. For מְשִׁיחָא also see Jastrow, my chosen, my select (but see next note on הָא עֲבָדִי מְשִׁיחָא).

³ A secret held closely in the breast (see Webster).

⁴ This is found in the “First and Second Rabbinic Bibles, the Antwerp Polyglot, Reuchlinianus, and Ms. Jews’ College” (Chilton, The Aramaic Bible: The Isaiah Targum). Wordsworth explains that this manner of language is also followed by Rabbis Kimhi and Abarbanel. Stenning, The Targum of Isaiah, in his critical apparatus has “הָא עֲבָדִי מְשִׁיחָא” [my servant, Messiah] according to R (Codex Reuchlinianus, Prophetæ Chaldaice) and N (Nürnberg MS).

fixes the attention of the reader.” Birks writes, “‘Behold!’ This word is a contrast to ISAIAH 41:24, 29, where God proclaims the heathen idols to be worthless. But here He sets before the islands and nations an object worthy of all admiration and reverence, the Seed of the woman, promised long ago, and more lately by Isaiah himself (ISAIAH 7), the Divine Saviour and Redeemer of a guilty world. The favour of the LORD, resting largely on this His Servant, is the ground of an appeal to all mankind. So the Baptist in the Gospel: ‘Behold the Lamb of God!’ The Son of God, from His birth, was His Father’s delight and good pleasure in the midst of sinful men (Luke 2:14).” ¶ Horsey says, regarding ‘my elect’: “I see not why the word רְצִיָּה may not be taken as a noun—‘my chosen one, the delight of my soul.’” Wordsworth explains: “The ancient Hebrew Church regarded ‘the Servant of Jehovah’ as the Messiah (see Bp. Chandler, 1:160); and this was the uniform judgment of all early Christian expositors.” Wordsworth testifies: “The ‘Servant of Jehovah,’ as represented by Isaiah, is a Person; He is a Prophet, Priest, and King. He is more than Prophet, as teaching the World; He is more than a Priest, as offering Himself for all; He is King of kings, and Lord of lords.” In the Targum we have מְשִׁיחָא, My servant Messiah, הָא עֲבָדִי מְשִׁיחָא. ¶ הָא עֲבָדִי מְשִׁיחָא. Clark has, “אֶתְמַךְ-בּוֹ, on whom I lean. Alluding to the custom of kings leaning on the arm of their most beloved servant.” Cheyne (in The Biblical Illustrator)⁵, explains that servant and son are synonyms in this case (see Psalm 2:7). ¶ I have put my spirit upon him: he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. The Targum (Ⲯ) has reveal rather than bring forth. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “I have put my spirit upon him; he will publish judgment to the nations.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, for the first clause, “I have given my spirit upon him.” ¶ According to Birks, “‘Judgment’ here denotes true righteousness, or ‘the end of the commandment, love out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned.’” Wordsworth notes: “Observe the connexion of this with the close of the foregoing address, at the end of the preceding chapter. There God says, ‘Their molten images are wind’ (Heb. רֵיחַ). But here God says of the Messiah, ‘I have put upon Him My Spirit’ (Heb. רֵיחַ). How striking is the contrast! Idols are mere wind; but God’s breath is in Christ.” Such are the stunning nuances that are often lost when we translate from Hebrew. ¶ When we think of Gentiles, we do so in contraposition to Jews or Israelites. Here is an instant where the better expression is as the LXX (Ⲅ), nations. The Lord will bring forth his judgment—or Gospel—to the nations, not just to the Gentiles. Leeser renders it

⁵ But not in my Cheyne (1889) two-volume commentary.

“that he may bring forth justice to the nations” [לְגוֹיִם]. AMP has, “He will bring forth justice and right and reveal truth to the nations.” About half the translators use Gentiles; the other, nations. Although not as literal, the ISV also gives the correct idea: “and he’ll deliver his justice throughout the world.”

2 He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “He shall not cry aloud, nor raise a clamour, and He shall not lift up His voice in the street.” Chilton and Stenning (ܬ) render בְּכִרָא, “outside.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “He will not scream, nor urge with vehemence: nor will his voice be heard abroad in the streets.” Instead of nor lift up, the Peshitta (ܫ) has, nor make a sound (Lamsa) / nor raise his voice (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ܕ) has, “He shall not cry, nor have respect to person, neither shall his voice be heard abroad.” ¶ According to Cheyne, Dr. Weir considers this verse “as an anticipation of ISAIAH 53,” and that before this time, “this view has been expressed ... by Kleinert (Theolog. Studien und Kritiken, 1862 (pp. 709–710).” ¶ Rawlinson fills in the ellipsis: “Supply, after ‘lift up,’ ‘his voice’ from the next clause. His methods shall be quiet and gentle.” Jenour well says: “The manner in which St. Matthew has applied this passage, affords us a clue to its true meaning. He tells us, that Jesus having healed great multitudes, ‘charged them that they should not make him known; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Isaiah the prophet,’ &c. (Matthew 12:17). The general import, therefore, of this verse is, that the Messiah, when he came, would teach the people in a mild and gentle manner; without contention and noise, and without disturbing the peace of the state by exciting popular tumults and seditions.” ¶ Jenour contrasts the Savior’s teaching by the Spirit—to priestcraft: “There seems to be an allusion to the manner in which fanatics and demagogues deliver their harangues to the deluded multitudes; their object being by impassioned declamations, and virulent abuse of others, to make themselves popular. Nothing could be further removed from any thing of the kind than our Lord’s method of teaching.” Cowles writes: “This describes the quiet, unostentatious manner of our Lord’s personal ministry and life. He never sought but rather shunned notoriety and applause.” Skinner notes that the teaching style of the עֶבֶד-יְהוָה, “... reminds us of the ‘still small voice’ in the which Elijah was made to recognise the power Jehovah (1Kings 19:12 f.).” Indeed, the Servant of the Lord usually invites and reproves with gentle tenderness. Govett says: “... when the Pharisees were enraged against him and sought his death, he did not oppose them on their own ground and dispute their power, but meekly retired from Capernaum to the neighborhood of the sea. Again, unlike the Pharisees, who made their prayers audible in the street, and sounded a trumpet before them to give notice of their alms-giving, the Lord retired frequently to desert places, and there taught the multitudes.”

3 A bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking[✓] flax shall he not quench:[✓] he shall bring forth judgment unto truth.

- ✓ or, dimly burning
- ✓ ✓ quench it

A bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench: The Targum (ܬ) makes the chosen one treat the meek and the poor with this care. The LXX (ϸ) reads, “A bruised reed he will not break, nor extinguish a dimly burning taper.” Horsley suggests that the quenching will not come “‘Until he have published judgment, so as to establish it perfectly,’ or ‘until he shall have published judgment firmly.’” In the word לְאִמָּה, the prefix ל signifies ‘until,’ and is to be understood in connection with the verb.” Rawlinson writes: “A bruised reed shall he not break] Egypt was compared to a ‘bruised reed’ by Sennacherib, (ISAIAH 36:6) as being untrustworthy and destitute of physical strength; but here in ISAIAH 42:3, the image represents the weak and depressed in spirit, the lowly and dejected. Christ would deal tenderly with such, not violently. Smoking flax shall he not quench] rather, the wick which burns dimly (margin ||) he shall not quench. Where the flame of devotion burns at all, however feebly and dimly, Messiah will take care not to quench it. Rather he will tend it, and trim it, and give it fresh oil, and cause it to burn more brightly.” Is this not the way the Brethren teach us? Are they not constantly inviting, with tenderness, the sheep who have wondered to come back to the fold? The study of Scripture is a never ending joy and the finding of hidden treasures and of multiple meanings. So it is, for instance, as we were reading Ezekiel 34 in Gospel Doctrine that I realized how this chapter is intimately linked with key phrases, types and shadows associated with the scattering and gathering of Israel. “For thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out. As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day. And I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country. I will feed them in a good pasture, and upon the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be: there shall they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel. I will feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord GOD. I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: but I will destroy the fat and the strong; I will feed them with judgment” (Ezekiel 34:11–16, emphasis added). Orelli explains that פֶּשֶׁתָּה normally represents “the single flax-stalk, but here the lamp-wick made of flax, which, when lacking oil, gives a dull, glimmering light easily extinguished (compare with ISAIAH 43:17).” ¶ He shall bring forth judgment unto truth. The LXX (Θ) reads, “But will publish judgment to establish truth.” Cowles has: “It shall be his great work as a teacher to correct prevalent errors and to teach men the vital things of divine truth.” Alexander suggests: “This passage also throws light on the true sense of the somewhat obscure phrase לְאֵמֶת, by showing that it means with respect to the truth, which is here equivalent to saying by the truth. This construction, by presenting an antithesis between the true and false way of bringing forth judgment to the Gentiles, is much to be preferred to those constructions which explain the phrase as simply meaning in truth, (i.e. truly), or in permanence, (i.e. surely), or unto truth, (i.e. so as to establish and secure it). All these may be suggested as accessory ideas; but the main idea seems to be the one first stated, namely, that the end in question is to be accomplished not by clamour, not by violence, but by the truth.”

4 He shall not fail nor be discouraged, ✓ till he have set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for his law.

✓ broken

He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till he have set judgment in the earth: ¶ The LXX (Θ) reads, “He will shine out, and shall not be broken until he hath established judgment on the earth.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϸ) has, for the first half, “He shall not be sad, nor troublesome.” ¶ Kay, enthusiastically endorsed by Cheyne, suggests rather, “He shall not burn dimly.” Skinner observes, “The words fail [יִכְהֶה / יִכְהֶה] and be discouraged [רָצִין / רָצִין] correspond in the original to “dimly burning” and “broken” ... in ISAIAH 42:3. The former is used of the failing eyesight of Eli (1Samuel 3:2). So Cowles: “The two Hebrew verbs, translated ‘fail’ [יִכְהֶה / יִכְהֶה] and ‘be discouraged,’

[רָצִין / רָצִין] are the same which appear in ISAIAH 42:3, in their participles or derived adjectives, qualifying ‘flax’ and ‘reed,’ expressing the failing, dying out of the burnt ‘flax,’ and the bruising of the ‘reed.’ This circumstance determines their meaning here with great precision and certainty. As the Messiah would not use violence upon others, so neither will he falter before the violence inflicted or attempted upon himself. He will not languish nor will his light be put out as one might quench burnt tow; neither will he be crushed or broken as a reed. Though apparently weak and apparently sure to be suppressed by the violence of his enemies, yet such means, however extreme, will fail to arrest his progress, not only during his personal life on earth, but evermore thereafter, until he shall have established pure religion in all the earth.” ¶ Wordsworth adds this observation: “Christ will not break, nor will He be broken. This was fulfilled literally of Him, of Whom it was written, ‘That a bone of Him shall not be broken’ (Exodus 12:46; John 19:36).” Alexander, along the same lines, says: “He shall neither conquer nor be conquered by violence. This verse is a new proof that the one before it does not describe mere tenderness and pity for the weak. The antithesis would then be, he shall neither be unkind to the infirm nor infirm himself.” Nägelsbach writes: “[Despite] his gentleness, He shall be firm as a rock (ISAIAH 17:10; 26:4), on which all attacks of His enemies shall dash to pieces, and He shall carry out His counsel victoriously.” ¶ And the isles shall wait for his law. The LXX (Θ) reads, “In his name therefore let the nations trust.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϸ) has, “Till he set judgment in the earth: and the islands shall wait for his law.” ¶ Rosenberg has that the isles shall long for the law or instruction, rather than wait. Torah, as we saw in ISAIAH 41:8, means not just the law, or the five books of Moses. There also will be Torah תּוֹרָה, or instruction, or in other words, brand new revelation. For Rashi (in Rosenberg), the coming of the Messianic age will promote the hearing and heeding of God’s word. ¶ In the prophets, אִי (island, or אִים, isles) is sometimes—especially when used together with the expression *wait for me*⁶ כִּי־לִי אִים יִקְוּ—used to refer to scattered Israel.⁷

⁶ Or, wait for the LORD. ISAIAH 42:4; 51:5; 60:9; as well, also, in a number of the servant songs.

⁷ Terry B. Ball, Dean of Religious Education, speaking of ISAIAH 49:1–9, explained how the word isles are associated with “scattered covenant Israel” and used 1 Nephi 21:1 to strengthen his argument. 38th Annual Brigham Young University Sidney B. Sperry Symposium: The Gospel of Jesus Christ in the Old Testament, “Isaiah’s other servant songs.” BYU Broadcasting, 14 March 2010. Bell argues that the portion of ISAIAH 49:1 that appears in the Book of Mormon clearly explains that scattered Israel becomes synonymous with the isles.

Nägelsbach suggests: “The islands are named as representing the remotest regions.” As LDS we often refer to the islands (אִיִּם) as representing both the American Continent as well as the isles of the sea, such as Samoa and other nations inhabited from Book of Mormon descendants. Interestingly, Henderson says: “For אִיִּם, in the sense of remote western countries [with] special reference to those of Europe and other western parts, in which Christianity has most prevailed.” So, we have in Jeremiah, “Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel (יִשְׂרָאֵל) will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock” (Jeremiah 31:10).

vv. 5–12. The Lord created the heavens and the earth and prepared the gospel to be delivered to both living and dead, that all may have the opportunity to partake of it.

5 ¶ Thus saith God the LORD, he that created the heavens, and stretched them out; he that spread forth the earth, and that which cometh out of it; he that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein:

Thus saith God the LORD, he that created the heavens, and stretched them out. He that spread forth the earth, and that which cometh out of it. The Targum (ܬ) has, “Thus saith the God of eternity, who hath created the heavens and suspended them.” The LXX (Θ) reads, “Thus saith the Lord, the God who made the heaven and fixed it.” The Targum (ܬ) has, “Who hath founded the earth.” The LXX (Θ) reads, “Who established the earth and the things therein.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has, “That established the earth, and the things that spring out of it.” The correct translation of the Masoretic text (מ) into English would be “Thus saith the God Yahweh (יְהוָה).” Or we may say, filling a possible ellipsis, “Thus saith the God even Jehovah.” Only a few translations render the expression literally, and these are from the Spanish: “Así dice el Dios Jehová” (RV1865, 1906, 1909, the latter of which I have often quoted as SRV). ¶ Nägelsbach explains: “יְהוָה ... meant to designate emphatically the true God, who alone has power, in contrast with the powerless false gods.” ¶ Alexander points out the present continuing tense: “... creating the heavens and stretching them out, &c.” ... —The substitution of the preterite for the participle in the English Version (he that created the heavens, and stretched them out) is not only a gratuitous departure from the form of the original, but hides from the English reader the allusion to the creative power of God, as constantly exercised in the continued existence of his works.” From latter-day revelation we know that Christ is involved in creating worlds without end. Cowles makes similar observations: “... these verbs which express the divine agency upon matter: ‘created,’ ‘stretched out,’ ‘spread forth’ etc., are all in the present tense. Hence they affirm more than the general fact that God did once create, stretch out, spread forth, and give existence to vegetables and animals. They affirm that he is doing so still and continually. The strongest affirmation of a present activity which is possible in the Hebrew tenses is used throughout the verse, as well of creating and causing the productions of the earth to be as of giving breath and life to its people.—This need not be pressed to mean that God is still creating new worlds although even this may be true; but it manifestly must mean that as Creator, God is still impressing his hand upon his works, perpetuating their motions, keeping their laws in force; or as said (Hebrews 1:3) ‘upholding all things by his powerful mandate.’” ¶ Thus we have, as far as I have found, from only the two literal translations: “... creating the heavens and stretching them out; spreading out the earth and its offspring, giving breath to the people on it, and spirit to those walking in it. (LITV); and “Thus said God, Jehovah, preparing The heavens, and stretching them out, Spreading out the earth and its productions, Giving breath to the people on it, And spirit to those walking in it (YLT). Most, but not all, the Spanish translations also have the present continuing tense (see LBLA, NBLH, RV60, RV95, RV2009 SUD {LDS}. RVG, SRV, SSE). ¶ He that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein: The Targum (ܬ) has, “And hath given breath to its inhabitants, even to the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein.” The LXX (Θ) reads, “And who giveth vital air to the people on it, and breath to them who tread thereon.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has tread rather than walk. Rosenberg translates “gave a soul” instead of “giveth breath.” Rosenberg says: “Rashi apparently explains the entire latter half of the verse as a reference to the creation of man, with the word soul נִשְׁמָה, pointing to the expression *a soul*⁸ of life (a breath of life, AV), נִשְׁמַת חַיִּים in Genesis 2:7. Rashi also suggests that the walking (לִהְיוֹת) in the Spirit is a righteous walking, “and Enoch walked [with] the God,” וַיִּתְהַלֵּךְ תְּנוּכָה אֶת־יְהוָה (Genesis 5:22) and also see Genesis 6:9, wherein Noah walked with God.

⁸ As LDS we believe that the body and the spirit together compose the soul.

6 I the LORD have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles;

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “I, the Lord, I will make Thee to grow in truth, and will hold Thine hand, and I will direct Thee, and give Thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles.” This is another of those places, however, where the word גוֹיִם, would be better translated as nations.⁹ Gladly, the Peshitta (Ⓢ), Nets as

⁹ President Joseph Fielding Smith, speaking of ISAIAH 42:6, taught: “By the name Gentile is meant all those who are not Israelites and who are outside of the covenant made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The name originally had reference to the descendants of Japheth (Genesis 10:5). It is used frequently in the scriptures in reference to the nations not of Israel. Since the covenant made with Abraham was to continue through Isaac and Jacob and the twelve tribes of Israel, the Gentile nations are under the necessity of receiving their blessings in the Gospel through that chosen lineage ... Let it not be forgotten, however, that in Asia others not of Israel held the Priesthood in early times, and after Israel became a nation. However, so far as we know none of these were pure Gentiles, but all were descendants of Abraham through some branch other than that of Jacob. We have had occasion to refer to Midian and the Midianites, to which people Jethro belonged. Jethro ordained Moses and there was close affiliation between Moses and his father-in-law while Israel was in the wilderness. We know nothing definite of Job and his nationality. All that has been written of Job partakes more or less of speculation and there are some who even suggest that he is only a character of fiction; but such a thought cannot be maintained. As time went on it seems clear that all vestige of Priesthood disappeared from other peoples, and even the Israelites proved unworthy of their blessings during a great part of the time. Nevertheless they were the chosen people of the Lord and while he was forced to punish them, he has never forgotten the covenants he made with their father. Israel was chosen by the Lord and it is through that lineage that the blessings of the Gospel come, yet we must not fall into the error which prevailed among the Jews at the time of the Savior in thinking that no other people can be blessed of the Lord. All men are his off-spring and therefore he is interested in all nations on the earth. It is logical to conclude that the Lord would have given Priesthood and the plan of salvation to the Gentiles even in the days of Abraham when the covenant of the Gospel was made with him, had they been willing to receive them. All of the descendants of Noah were directed in the light of the Gospel, but the majority of them rejected it. We can imagine them saying as the people said to Enoch and his predecessors ‘Who is the Lord that we should know him?’ For this reason they were left without divine guidance, and a chosen race was appointed to be the favored of the Lord. Even in the blessing given to Abraham we discover the truth that the Father had not forsaken him. He said to Abraham: ‘And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed. For this purpose, which we see in the dispersion of Israel, many of the descendants of Jacob were led away from time to time to various parts of the earth. Because of transgression many went into captivity, and, at those early days, before they had become firmly impregnated with the teachings of their prophets, or fully understood that they were a people separate from the world, they saw no harm in mixing with other peoples. While much of this scattering was meted out to them as a punishment, yet the Lord turned it to the salvation of the Gentile nations. The well as Ottley’s LXX (Ⓛ), Stenning’s Targum (Ⓣ), and Abegg, Flint and Ulrich’s DSSB (Ⓢ) translate it as nations. Also, it has been correctly translated by ABP {LXX (Ⓛ)}, BBE, CEV, Darby, ERV, ESV, FDB, FLS, GNB, HCSB, ISV, JPS, LBLA, LEB, LITV, MKJV, NASB, NBLH, NVI, Leeser, Rotherham, RV1865, RV60, RV2009 SUD (LDS), and YLT to name some. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I the Lord God have called thee for saving mercy, and I will take hold of thy hand and strengthen thee; for I have given thee for the covenant of a race—for the light of nations.” Instead of and will keep thee, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has and have strengthened thee. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓢ) has, for the first half, “I the Lord have called thee in justice, and taken thee by the hand, and preserved thee.” The DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⓢ) has I (אני), while both the DSS 4QIsa^b (Ⓢ) (אני יהוה) and the Masoretic text (Ⓜ) (אני יהוה) have I [the] LORD (literally, I Yahweh). Also, the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⓢ) has for a covenant [to the] people, לְבְרִית עַם, as does the Masoretic text (Ⓜ), לְבְרִית עַם. The DSS 4QIsa^b (Ⓢ) has, instead, for an everlasting covenant, לְבְרִית עוֹלָם. ¶ Lowth prefers, where we have a covenant to the people, “the everlasting covenant.” Henderson suggests: “בְּרִית, Covenant, is used elliptically, for מְלָאךְ בְּרִית the Messenger, or Agent of the Covenant¹⁰ ... and is employed as a personal title of the Messiah, because he was sent to be the medium through which the blessings conveyed by it were to flow to mankind [just like He is also] אֹר גוֹיִם, light of the nations ...” ¶ Rawlinson explains: “The covenant scattering of Israel among the nations began almost as early as their national existence ... The Savior in his ministry went only to the house of Israel. He said he was not sent to the Gentiles and therefore did not minister to them in any special manner. It was only occasionally when some individual Gentile showed great faith that the Lord gave attention to him. After his resurrection the Lord commissioned his apostles to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature. There were to be no exceptions, all were to have the privilege of receiving it. At first the apostles failed to comprehend the significance of the meaning of the Lord. It took a special manifestation to Peter to convince him that Cornelius was entitled to the blessings of the Church. When others of the Gentiles came in, some among the Jews who belonged to the Church questioned the propriety of admitting them, and desired to make the Gentile converts conform to Jewish custom which had been ended in the mission of Jesus Christ. The Jewish Christians were within their rights in the beginning in taking the message first to the Jews, for so it had been promised. The Gospel was then taken to the Gentiles. In this present dispensation it is to go first to the Gentiles and then to the Jews. The first are now last, according to the prophecy in the scriptures (1 Nephi 13:42).” Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Way to Perfection: Short Discourses on Gospel Themes. 9th ed. Salt Lake City: Genealogical Society of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1951, pp. 136–141.

¹⁰ מְלָאךְ בְּרִית, messenger of the covenant (see Malachi 3:1; 3 Nephi 24:1).

between God and his people being in Christ, it is quite consistent with Hebrew usage to transfer the term to Christ himself, in whom the covenant was, as it were, embodied. So Christ is called ‘our Salvation’ and ‘our Peace,’ and again, ‘our Redemption’ and ‘our Life.’ This is the ordinary tone of Hebrew poetry, which rejoices in personification and embodiment.”

¶ Cheyne’s notes are of particular interest to LDS: “... the question remains, ‘Which covenant is referred to? The old covenant of Sinai, or the new and spiritual one described by Jeremiah (31:31–34)? Surely the latter ... Observe, too, that in ISAIAH 54:10 Jehovah expressly contrasts his present ‘covenant of peace,’ not indeed with the Sinaitic covenant of Moses, but with that of Noah; and in that in ISAIAH 55:3 an ‘everlasting covenant’ is spoken of, which is at once new and old” (emphasis added). So it is that we understand that the original covenant that Jehovah was to have with Israel was had in the early days of this earth, even beginning with Adam, and that the restored gospel is also new and old. President Russell M. Nelson has: “Indeed, the Lord has not forgotten us. And to ensure that we do not forget him, children of the covenant receive his doctrine and claim it by covenant. Brigham Young said: ‘All Latter-day Saints enter the new and everlasting covenant when they enter this Church. ... They enter the new and everlasting covenant to sustain the Kingdom of God and no other kingdom’ (Discourses of Brigham Young, p. 160.).”¹¹ ¶ Henderson has: “עַם, people, and גּוֹיִם, nations, are here used antithetically, as in ISAIAH 49:6, 8, to denote the Jews, as God’s peculiar people, and the other nations of the earth by which he had not been known or served. The benefits of redemption were not to be confined to the former, but were to be extended throughout the world ... Though the two epithets are used distinctively in the antithesis, it is not meant that the Jews alone were to enjoy the privileges of the New Covenant, nor that the heathen were to enjoy the light to the exclusion of the Jews.” Such blessings are being poured out unto all who come unto Christ. ¶ Alexander notes: “The meaning put upon עַם בְּרִית by Hitzig and Ewald, although not philologically accurate, is perfectly consistent with the teachings of the Old Testament respecting the mission and vocation of Israel, the ancient Church, as a covenant-race or middle-people between God and the apostate nations.” ¶ בְּצִדְקָה. Leaning on Lowth, rather than “called thee in righteousness” Horsley prefers “‘for a righteous purpose,’ or, ‘for the purposes of righteousness.’” ¶ Keith explains: “Instead of the Almighty speaking of Christ, as before, he is now represented as speaking to him. The Father appears giving to the Son his high commission to carry redemption to a fallen world—to restore that lost jewel to the crown of the Eternal One. He prefaces his charge with a declaration of his own omnipotence ... assuring him [the Christ] that the cause he had undertaken was a righteous one; that he would ever experience the Father’s care and keeping, and that in him all nations, both Jew and Gentile, would be blessed, and light and liberty be given to the blind and captive sons of men.” Furthermore, Keith points out the difference in the tenses between the past and the future in: “I have called thee,” compared to “I will hold thine hand.” The principle of Divine Investiture is here fully manifested. As LDS we clearly see how Christ was called from the foundation of the earth to be our Savior and Redeemer and how the Father would support the Messiah in His earthly ministry—including those most difficult moments in the Garden of Gethsemane. Only for a brief moment on the cross, so that scripture might be fulfilled, did the Father have to leave His beloved Son. That moment, when the Savior had to be left alone and the Spirit withdrawn all the way to the moment when our Redeemer cried out “It is finished,” must have seemed eternal. ¶ ISAIAH 42:6, in terms of the light to the nations (even those in the Spirit World), is intimately related to ISAIAH 42:7, regarding the dead for whom vicarious work would be done.

7 To open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, [and] them that sit in darkness out of the prison house.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “To open the eyes of the house of Israel, who are blind to the law, to bring back their captivity from among the nations, where they are like prisoners, and to redeem them from the servitude of the kingdoms being shut up as those that are bound in darkness.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “To open the eyes of the blind; to lead out from chains them who are bound, and out of prison, them who are sitting in darkness.” The Douay-Rheims (ϙ) has, for the first two clauses, “That thou mightest open the eyes of the blind, and bring forth the prisoner out of prison.” ¶ Nägelsbach observes: “Should not one think here of the Urim and Thummim of the High-Priest (Exodus 28:30), and consequently construe this offering of light and right as the priestly activity of the Servant of Jehovah?” Yes, in more ways than one, as the Book of Mormon was also brought forward by God’s help through the Urim and Thummim. That Book of books opens the eyes of the blind and softens hearts. Of the opening of the eyes of the blind, Lowth says, “In this verse the Prophet seems to set forth the spiritual redemption, under images borrowed from the temporal deliverance.” Birks says:

¹¹ Nelson, Elder Russell M. “Children of the Covenant,” May 1995 Ensign.

“To open the blind eyes.’ This renews the promise (ISAIAH 35:5) where it is equally joined with the coming of the Lord to save His people. This Servant of the Lord is Immanuel ... Our Lord’s outward miracles must be included in the promise. But the main reference is to the removal of spiritual blindness, and release from the prison-house of sin and the grave.” ¶ Govett, while not able to fully understand the significance of these scriptures, gladly makes the connection between ISAIAH 42:7 and that of 1 Peter 3:19 (regarding the Savior’s visit to the spirit world): “... whence we learn that Hades is, in a certain sense, a prison, though the souls of the righteous in Abraham’s bosom are in joy and felicity.” Shalom Paul also misses the sublime and exquisite point about freeing from spirit prison, yet gives the very scriptures associated with that topic: “‘To rescue prisoners from confinement’—The hiph’il verbal expression הוֹצִיאָהוּ, similar to its Akkadian etymological cognate šūšū, the shaph’el of the verb wašū, ‘to leave’ (CAD A/2:373ff.), denotes ‘setting free.’ God, who freed His nation from under the Egyptian yoke, will now release His loyal subjects from their servitude in Babylonia. For אֲסוּר/אָסִיר, ‘bound, imprisoned,’ see ISAIAH 49:9; 61:1. מִסְכֵּר is literally ‘a place of confinement,’ i.e., a prison; see ISAIAH 24:22: ‘They shall be gathered in a dungeon as captives (אָסִיר) are gathered, and shall be locked up in a prison (מִסְכֵּר)’; Psalm 142:7: ‘Free me from prison (מִמִּסְכֵּר) that I may praise your name.’” Cheyne (1880) has: “The house of restraint] The prosaic Knobel understands this literally, in the face of v. 22 | It is the prison-house of physical and spiritual trouble which is meant (comp. Psalm 107:10, Job 36:8).” ¶ The Prophet Joseph Smith spoke powerfully on the subject of the spirit prison, which we quoted extensively under ISAIAH 24:20–22 and which speaks of the falsehood of thinking that the “destiny of man is irretrievably fixed at his death, and that he is made either eternally happy, or eternally miserable; that if a man dies without a knowledge of God, he must be eternally damned, without any mitigation of his punishment, alleviation of his pain, or the most latent hope of a deliverance while endless ages shall roll along ... [In 1 Peter 3:19, 20] we have an account of our Savior preaching to the spirits in prison ... and what did He preach to them? That they were to stay there? Certainly not! [see Luke 4:18].”¹² President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “We have good reason to believe that the righteous spirits in paradise did not mingle with the unrighteous spirits before the visit of our Lord to the spirit world. He declared that there was a gulf fixed that could not be crossed which separated the righteous from the unrighteous, therefore there was no sound of the voice of prophets and the Gospel was not declared among the wicked until Christ went into that world before his resurrection. He it was who opened the prison doors (ISAIAH 42:6–7; 61:1) ... Since the day when the Gospel was declared and the prison doors opened, this Gospel of the kingdom has been preached in power among the dead. We realize that there is no time to be idle among the members of the Church on the earth, if we are to accomplish the great work for the dead which the Lord has assigned to us. If we could see beyond the veil we would discover that there is great activity there. The dead have to have the Gospel preached to them, and in that world the righteous and repentant, those who died without a knowledge of the Gospel, who would have received it if that opportunity had come to them (D.H.C. 2:380), have to be prepared to receive the ordinances of the Gospel as they are administered by proxy in the temples on this earth. All of the spirits of the dead have to be taught and brought to repentance, so we see the work over there is of magnificent proportions.”¹³ President Joseph

¹³ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Way to Perfection: Short Discourses on Gospel Themes. 9th ed. Salt Lake City: Genealogical Society of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1951, pp. 315–320. This is a most powerful discourse of which I quote yet another portion here: “President Joseph F. Smith, in his vision of the dead, saw the spirits and thus he wrote of them: ‘I beheld that the faithful elders of this dispensation, when they depart from mortal life, continue their labors in the preaching of the Gospel of repentance and redemption, through the sacrifice of the Only Begotten Son of God, among those who are in darkness and under the bondage of sin in the great world of the spirits of the dead’ (Gospel Doctrine, p. 601) ... President Young also said: ‘The sisters who have made covenant with the Lord and who have received blessings and power in the temples will also have much to do in that work. This was made very clear by President Smith at the funeral of Sister Mary A. Freeze, when he said: ‘Now, among all these millions of spirits that have lived on the earth and have passed away, from generation to generation, since the beginning of the world, without the knowledge of the Gospel—among them you may count that at least one-half are women. Who is going to preach the Gospel to the women? Who is going to carry the testimony of Jesus Christ to the hearts of the women who have passed away without a knowledge of the Gospel? Well, to my mind, it is a simple thing. These good sisters who have been set apart, ordained to the work, called to it, authorized by the authority of the Holy Priesthood to minister for their sex, in the House of God for the living and for the dead, will be fully authorized and empowered to preach the Gospel and minister to the women while the elders and prophets are preaching it to the men. The things we experience here are typical of the things of God, and the life beyond us’ (Gospel Doctrine, pp. 581–2). The righteous dead look upon the long separation of their spirits from their bodies as a bondage (D.C. 45:17. Rev. 6:9–11), and are anxiously waiting for the resurrection. The wicked are looking forth to the day of judgment in fear and trembling. Yet the Lord in his mercy has prepared a place for all, according to their works. He will bless all men with all they are capable of and worthy to receive. The preaching of the Gospel is now going on with power among the spirits, while here on the earth the faithful saints are laboring industriously in the temples of the Lord to give to their kindred who are dead the blessings they require for their salvation.”

¹² Smith, Joseph. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith. Selected by Joseph Fielding Smith. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book Press, 1938., p. 219.

Fielding Smith further taught: “If the veil could be parted and we could see the world of spirits, we would likely discover many among them anxiously praying and hoping that their day of deliverance would come. Their hearts are turned towards their children on whom their hopes rely for deliverance from the prison house.”¹⁴

8 I [am] the LORD: that [is] my name: and my glory will I not give to another, neither my praise to graven images.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, beginning with the third clause, “And my glory in which I am revealed to you I will not give to another people; nor my praise to the worshippers of images.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “I am the Lord God¹⁵; this is my name: this glory of mine I will not give to another, nor these powers of mine to the graven idols.” ¶ Not “I the Lord,” but rather, I Lord, אֲנִי יְהוָה (see also, ISAIAH 41:4). There is a beautiful and powerful testimony in these words. In some scriptures we read of the Second David (e.g., Jeremiah 30:9). Some have incorrectly supposed that this will be someone other than the Christ. Yet, it represents the Savior himself, for, says He, “And my glory will I not give to another.” Nägelsbach suggests: “The words אֲנִי יְהוָה, that directly follow the pith of the strophe, seem to correspond to the words of similar meaning with which (ISAIAH 42:6) it immediately begins. They are therefore in apposition with אֲנִי יְהוָה at the beginning of ISAIAH 42:6, and to be translated ‘I Jehovah.’ Verily it must be something great which the LORD twice announces with the words, ‘I, Jehovah, do it.’ It must be something that only Jehovah can do; thus something far beyond the power of a man or of any other creature.” This something, of course, is the expiatory sacrifice of our Lord and our Savior Jesus Christ on behalf of the living and the dead.

9 Behold, the former things are come to pass, and new things do I declare: before they spring forth I tell you of them.

The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “With regard to the former predictions, behold they are come to pass; and these are ¹⁴ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Way to Perfection: Short Discourses on Gospel Themes. 9th ed. Salt Lake City: Genealogical Society of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1951, pp. 176–178. See also James E. Talmage, Articles of Faith, p.134, for further study on this most wonderful topic.

¹⁵ ἐγὼ κύριος ὁ θεός

new things which I now declare; and before their promulgation, they are revealed to you.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “The things that were first, behold they are come: and new things do I declare: before they spring forth, I will make you head them.” ¶ Regarding the new things, Birks explains: “This figure implies that he predicts events which have as yet foreshadowed no indications that human sagacity can discern—a declaration squarely opposed to the theories of those critics who maintain that these prophecies were written by some second Isaiah who lived near the restoration, after the events which he predicted had fairly germinated so that his sagacious eye could see the foretokens of their coming. One might almost suppose that (the divine Spirit foreshowing it) the true Isaiah foresaw the skepticism of these critics of our day and dropped this word as his rebuke and denial of their slander upon his prophetic unction!” ¶ New thing, explains Cheyne: “... not merely as being later, but as dimming the splendour of all previous achievements.” Probably referring to the salvation for the dead as well as the living made possible through the atonement of Jesus Christ, who died that we might live. Also, of the gathering of Israel from all the nations of the earth: “Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that they shall no more say, The LORD liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; But, The LORD liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land” (Jeremiah 23:7–8).

vv. 10–17. Even though the paragraph mark dividing sections of scripture begins in v. 13, I agree with Cheyne’s comment that vv. 10–17 form a unit, and that verse 18 seems to pick up where verse 9 left off. Cheyne says, “The difficulties of the commentators arise from not observing that vv. 10–17 are parenthetical.” A new song of praise is to be sung by the whole world, even those least likely to do so at this time in history. In the Second Coming, the Savior will come as a lion rather than a lamb. The Lord will guide all who are willing to the fountains of truth; those who refuse will be ashamed.

10 Sing unto the LORD a new song, [and] his praise from the end of the earth, ye that go down to the sea, and all that is therein; the isles, and the inhabitants thereof.

✓ the fulness thereof

Sing unto the LORD a new song, [And] his praise from the end of the earth. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Sing to the Lord a new sung, ye, his government! praise his name, ye from the utmost border of the earth.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has ends of the earth (extrémis terræ, Vulgate, V). ¶ Alexander explains: “To sing a new song, according to Old Testament usage, is to praise God for some new manifestation of his power and goodness. It implies, therefore, not only fresh praise, but a fresh occasion for it.” According to Rabbi David Kimhi (Redak), “Nations all over the world will recite His praises, for the redemption will become known throughout the world, wherever the Jews are scattered, and the nations, upon seeing the wonders, will sing His praise” (in Rosenberg). Skinner says, regarding ISAIAH 42:10–12: “A lyrical outburst calling on the whole earth to rejoice in the God whose glory is about to be manifested in the great redemptive act which ushers in the final salvation of humanity.” Skinner notes: “from the end of the earth] means (as in Genesis 19:4; Jeremiah 51:31) ‘from end to end.’” ¶ Ye that go down to the sea, and all that is therein; the isles, and the inhabitants thereof. The LXX (G) reads, “Ye who go down on the sea and navigate it, ye islands, and ye who dwell therein.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “and ye inhabitants of them” instead of “and the inhabitants thereof.” ¶ It seems that “ye that go down to the sea” refers to the Saints of the Most High God who are sent forth from the “land shadowing with wings ... that sendeth ambassadors by the sea” (ISAIAH 18:1). Why are these ambassadors sent? They are sent to gather scattered Israel. Govett comes ever so close with his exegesis: “The command to those that ‘go down to the sea’ to declare the praises of the Lord, the fathers understood of the apostles, originally fishermen, whose business was at sea, but were called by Christ to preach his Gospel. But it has a yet future and universal reference to the times of the renovated earth [as LDS we would say to the times of the restored Gospel], which is called in the succeeding verses to rejoice.”

11 Let the wilderness and the cities thereof lift up [their voice], the villages [that] Kedar doth inhabit: let the inhabitants of the rock sing, let them shout from the top of the mountains.

Let the wilderness and the cities thereof lift up [their voice], the villages [that] Kedar doth inhabit: The Targum (T) has these things done in praise, and for Kedar, עֲרַבָּי, Arvaei, Arabians. The LXX (G) reads, “Let the desert be glad and the villages thereof; the folds for flocks and them who inhabit Kedar.” Instead of Kedar doth inhabit, the Peshitta (S) has Kedar has become a meadow (BPE) / let Kedar be meadows (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Let the desert and the cities thereof be exalted: Cedar shall dwell in houses.” ¶ Alexander explains: “The mention of cities as existing in the wilderness appears less strange in the original than in a modern version, because both the leading words (עֵיר and מִדְבָּר) have a greater latitude of meaning than their usual equivalents; the first denoting properly a pasture-ground, and being applicable, therefore, to any uncultivated region, whether uninhabited or not, the other answering to town in its widest English sense, inclusive of both villages and cities ... Kedar was the second son of Ishmael (Genesis 25:13). Here, as in ISAIAH 21:16, the name is put for his descendants, or by a natural metonymy for the Arabians in general. The rabbinical name for the Arabic language is the tongue of Kedar.” Jenour, along the same lines, says: “‘Kedar’ was the name given to one of the sons of Ishmael, whose posterity inherited what we now call the Arabian Desert, the inhabitants of which dwell in tents and go by the name of Bedouins, or wandering Arabs.” ¶ Let the inhabitants of the rock [סֵלָע] sing, let them shout from the top of the mountains. The Targum (T) has, “Let the dead praise Him, when they go forth from their long abodes (בֵּית עוֹלָם, in the Chaldee and in the Rabbinic language, ‘the grave.’ Literally, ‘the house of eternity,’ or, ‘the house of the world’); from the tops of the mountains let them lift up their voice.” The LXX (G) reads, “Let the inhabitants of Petra rejoice; let them shout from the top of the mountains.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Ye inhabitants of Petra, give praise, they shall cry from the top of the mountains.” ¶ In Slotki we read, “Let the inhabitants of Sela [סֵלָע] exult.” Regarding סֵלָע, Slotki has: “Possibly Petra in Edom. Jewish exegetes, however, render it as a generic term, ‘the rock dwellers,’ those who dwell in towers built on rocks and mountains (Kimhi).” Ibn Ezra says, “The inhabitants of the rock, the nations that live in the rocks.” Rawlinson says: “The inhabitants of the rock] rather, the inhabitants of Sela, or Petra, the rock-city, which was the capital of Idumaea, or Edom. It is assumed that the return of the Israelites to their land ought to be a subject of rejoicing to all their neighbours.” Wordsworth explains why this is so significant: “Ishmael and Edom (see ISAIAH 21:11—17), formerly enemies of God’s Church, and here the representatives of her foes generally, are now represented as admitted into it, and reconciled to Israel (cp. ISAIAH 60:7¹⁶).” Birks contrasts the land of the rocks with that of the islands: “The sea and the islands may represent the lands of the west; the wilderness, and the tent-villages of Kedar, those of the east.” Some, like Cowles, speak of the *Mohammedan delusion*¹⁷ but God, in His mercy, gave the Prophet Mohamed to the descendants of Ishmael, as a stepping stone or training ground, much like He gave the Law of Moses to the children of Israel. Happy memories come to me, of my trip to Jordan, where one could hear, as it were, one Mosque answering another one, with their prayers. And speaking of Muslims, some of them have very fond feelings for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The day will come, however, when every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus is the Christ, “For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God” (ISAIAH 45:23, also see Romans 14:11; Philippians 2:10). This will be true of all peoples, even those in סֹלֶכָה. ¶ Hoyt W. Brewster, Jr. wrote: “In a poetic outburst, the Prophet invited the mountains to shout for joy (D&C 128:23). This expression is related to others which refer to the mountains or hills singing (ISAIAH 42:11; 44:23; 55:12; 1 Nephi 21:13). This appears to be an expression of the rejoicing of nature on occasions when God is praised by his creations or when he is particularly pleased because of the rolling forth of the work of righteousness and redemption.”¹⁸

¹⁶ “All the flocks of Kedar shall be gathered together unto thee, the rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee: they shall come up with acceptance on mine altar, and I will glorify the house of my glory” (ISAIAH 60:7).

12 Let them give glory unto the LORD, and declare his praise in the islands.

The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “To this God let them ascribe glory; let them proclaim his powers among the isles.” As we have said, these include the American Continent and the Isles of the Sea. I have had the opportunity to be in the Islands on the Sabbath day and sing praises to the Lord in such places as the Pacific Islands and New Zealand.

vv. 13–17. Please see above, vv. 10–17.

13 ¶ The LORD shall go forth as a mighty man, he shall stir up jealousy like a man of war: he shall cry, yea, roar; he shall prevail against his enemies.

✓ or, behave himself mightily

The LORD shall go forth as a mighty man, he shall stir up jealousy like a man of war: The Targum (Ⲛ) has,

¹⁷ Exegetes not only deride Muslims, but their comments against the Jewish people are quite painful to me.

¹⁸ Hoyt W. Brewster, Jr., Doctrine and Covenants Encyclopedia, p.372.

“The Lord shall be seen to do mighty things: He shall reveal Himself in anger to do a mighty work by the word of His wrath.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “The Lord God of Hosts will come forth and tread down battle; he will rouse up his zeal.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, for the second half, “As a man of war shall he stir up zeal.” As also explained by Cowles, to stir up jealousy in Biblical language is to stir up zeal: “‘Stir up jealousy,’ refers to his own. Jealous for his own honor, he will arouse himself in earnest to vindicate his cause, to cast down opposing powers, and to build up his own kingdom. The word for ‘prevail’ means strictly, will show Himself mighty against his foes.” Keith has: “Jealousy. The original signifies zeal, ardour, then jealousy, also anger, indignation. It is in this last sense that it occurs in the text.” Wordsworth puts all this in its context: “The LORD shall go forth] ‘Conquering and to conquer.’ Christ is ‘the stronger’ One, overcoming ‘the strong man’ (see Matthew 12:29; John 12:31); and He is thus represented in the first seal of the Apocalypse, describing His victories in the first ages of the Gospel (Revelation 6:2¹⁹),—victories to be consummated in the latter days (see Revelation 19:11—16).” ¶ He shall cry, yea, roar; he shall prevail against his enemies. The Targum (Ⲛ) has, “He shall reveal Himself to His enemies by His might in an earthquake.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And shout against his enemies with majesty.” Instead of roar, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has become valiant (Lamsa) / act with power (BPE); and instead of prevail, slay (Lamsa) / give death (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, for the first clause, “He shall shout and cry.” Cowles says of these verses: “... the thing really predicted here is the triumph of truth, the diffusion of the gospel, and the substantial victory of King Messiah over sin and Satan throughout all the earth ... that the Messiah shall push onward the victories of truth and righteousness until true religion shall pervade the earth and bless all the nations.” In speaking about the meekness in the Savior’s teachings, Govett adds: “The Savior’s meekness and inoffensiveness are not for ever to last, but only ‘till he send forth justice unto victory.’” This is a time when ... he shall put off the meekness of his first appearance, and show that ‘the Lord is a man of war.’” Nägelsbach says about these verses: “OEHLER begins the article Messias (in HERZ., R.-Enc.), with these words: ‘According to the view of Old Testament prophecy, the completion of salvation is brought about by the personal coming of Jehovah in His glory. He Himself appears amid the rejoicing of the whole creation for the restoration of His kingdom on earth

¹⁹ Christ either directly or through His servants, here according to Elder Bruce R. McConkie, Enoch (see Parry & Parry, Understanding the Book of Revelation). The whole idea of Wordsworth is that the time will come when the words we read in the Book of Revelation that are yet future, will be fulfilled and evil will be conquered by righteousness.

(Psalm 96:10 ff.; 98:7 ff.,’ etc.) It is remarkable that OEHLER, in support of his thought, cites precisely those Psalms which, as above shown, have such resemblance to our passage. It is admitted by expositors that these Psalms have generally a near relation to ISAIAH 40–66v (comp. MOLL on Psalm 96 ff.). May we not have in Psalm 96, 98, the oldest commentary on our passage [as it] referred to the Messiah, therefore that the unity of the Messiah and Jehovah was recognized?” The point Nägelsbach is making is that at a very early date it was believed that Jehovah was the very Christ. It is He, as the Psalmist says, “cometh to judge the earth: with righteousness shall he judge the world, and the people with equity” (Psalm 98:9b). While this particular reference points to His Second Coming when He shall appear as a Lion rather than a Lamb, it is clear from other portions of ISAIAH 42 that His coming as the Messiah in the meridian of time is also implied.

14 I have long time holden my peace; I have been still, [and] refrained myself: [now] will I cry like a travailing woman; I will destroy and devour[✓] at once.

✓ swallow, or, sup up

The Targum (T) has, “I have given them prolongation for a long time, if they would but return to my law; but they did not return. My judgment shall be revealed upon them, as pains on a woman in travail; they shall be destroyed, and come to an end together.” The LXX (G) reads, “I have been silent; but shall I always keep silence and forbear? Like a woman in travail I have endured suffering; I will strike with astonishment and wither at once.” The Peshitta (S) beginning with the second half, gives this a completely different meaning. The BPE (S) has, “I have waited like a woman in travail.” Lamsa (S) interprets this waiting as one of patience. But does a pregnant woman wait in patience or impatience to the joyful day of her delivery, when she can place her newborn child to her breast with untold anticipation? And further, a woman in travail, that is, in labor, goes through the anguish of the pain of the birth process. In México, instead of ‘giving light’ (dar a luz, the normal Spanish expression for giving birth, or sending forth the babe into the light from the dark womb), the term often used is to ‘get relief’ (aliviarse, from the weight of carrying the babe for all these months as well as the relief from the great pain associated with parturition). In the next clause, the Peshitta (S) translators give the complete opposite rendering one from another: “I have remained speechless and completely confounded” (Lamsa), and “I shall at once confound and astonish” (BPE). In this paragraph I suspect the BPE has the better rendition in both of these clauses. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “I have always held my peace, I have kept silence, I have been patient, I will speak now as a woman in labour: I will destroy, and swallow up at once.” ¶ Whitehouse writes: “The term עולם, which here expresses in Hebrew ‘old time,’ may indeed denote an unlimited vista.” Indeed, as it can mean forever! ¶ Cheyne says, “Jehovah has been thus silent ‘for an age’ or aeon (עולם), a period stretching indefinitely backward. It is the exaggeration of strong emotion.” Ibn Ezra says, “I have long time, etc. The First person refers to God.” Rosenberg, leaning on Rabbi Shmu’el Laniado of Syria (K’li Paz) has: “God is likened to a pregnant woman, who, during her pregnancy is quiet. When she enters labor, she cries, feels desolation, and gasps for air. Thus, with the Jewish people, all during their exile, God was silent. He did not react to the oppressions by the gentiles. When the redemption approaches, however, He will react and destroy the oppressors of His people. He ventures to say that the various expressions allude to the various exiles. I was silent during the exile in Egypt. I will be still during the Babylonian exile. I will restrain Myself during the exile of Edom. And finally—Like a travailing woman will I cry. This alludes to the final redemption.” Kimhi (in Slotki) regards this to mean: “Against the injustice done to Israel. God will no longer tolerate the sufferings of His people and continued ruin of their country.” Horsley feels the word forever relates to being silent and would translate as: “I have holden my peace. Shall I forever be silent? Shall I contain myself? Like a woman in travail I will cry out &c.” Jenour suggests: “‘He will shout.’ Alluding to the general practice of soldiers in former times of shouting when they rushed upon the enemy. ‘Like a travailing woman.’ Sometimes a metaphor is applicable only in part. Here the loudness of the cry, not the pain attending it, is meant.” ¶ Wordsworth follows closer to the margin ¶: “—I will destroy and devour at once] Rather, I will breathe forth, I will pant at once, an in eager longing and haste for some great consumption (cp. Job 7:2; 36:20; Psalm 119:131; Ecclesiastes 1:5, where the same verb נשף is used.” So the ASV (and many others) gives us: “I have long time holden my peace; I have been still, and refrained myself: now will I cry out like a travailing woman; I will gasp and pant together.” ¶ Wade says in part: “... that in Divine, as in human, personality, feeling, as well as thought and will, must be an element; and is designed to represent the Lord’s sympathy with His people and His longing to help them.” Also see D&C 43:25; 88:88–91). In the last days there will be great commotions. The disciples of Christ are commanded to “stand in holy places” and “not be moved” (D&C 45:32).

15 I will make waste mountains and hills, and dry up all their herbs; and I will make the rivers islands, and I will dry up the pools.

The LXX (6) reads, “I will lay waste mountains and hills, and dry up all the herbage on them. I will make rivers islands and dry up pools.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “I will lay waste the mountains and hills, and will make all their grass to wither: and I will turn rivers into islands, and will dry up the standing pools.” ¶ Birks says that in this verse “we read the effect of the Lord’s presence, when He comes in flaming fire.” Cowles says: “These figures signify extreme changes, yet are in somewhat frequent use by ISAIAH (see ISAIAH 35:6, 7). These changes must be destructive ... and therefore must be applied to the work and the defenses of sin; primarily perhaps to the idols, the temples, the graves, the idol priesthood, the idolatrous institutions, and all the corresponding social embodiments of sin among men ... The old things that are to pass away have long entrenched themselves in social institutions, in works of art, in pernicious literature—means and appliances for setting the basest passions of the human soul on fire.” Nägelsbach shows how this theme of rivers and islands also appears in the Psalms: “He turneth rivers into a wilderness, and the watersprings into dry ground” (Psalm 107:33). [PLEASE NOTE President Joseph Fielding Smith’s exegetical comment in ISAIAH 40:4, about the continents being fused together as they were before they were divided. Also note the allusion to the preparations for the coming back of Christ in the Second Advent.]

16 And I will bring the blind by a way [that] they knew not; I will lead them in paths [that] they have not known: I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. ~ These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them.

✓ into straightness

And I will bring the blind by a way [that] they knew not; I will lead them in paths [that] they have not known: The Targum (8) has, “And I will lead the house of Israel, who are like the blind, in a way which they knew not, in paths they have not learned I will lead them.” The LXX (6) reads, “And lead the blind in a way which they know not, and cause them to walk in paths which they have not known.” ¶ Rashi (in Rosenberg) suggests that the blind represents Israel: “Israel, who were heretofore blind from looking to Me,

I will lead in the good way, upon which they did not know to walk.” Henderson applies this verse to the deliverance of Israel from the Babylonian captivity. This is especially so if we see it as mystical Babylon. Nägelsbach suggests spiritual blindness. ¶ I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them. The LXX (6) reads, “For them I will make the darkness light, and the crooked ways a straight road. These things I will do, and I will not forsake them.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “And I will lead the blind into the way which they know not: and in the paths which they were ignorant of I will make them walk.” ¶ Rashi (in Rosenberg) explains: “Hebrew עָשִׂיתִּי, literally, I did them.²⁰ I will do. So is the language of prophecy, to speak of the future as if it was already done.” This is called the prophetic perfect tense.²¹ So we have, also, in the Book of Mormon: “And now if Christ had not come into the world, speaking of things to come as though they had already come, there could have been no redemption” (Mosiah 16:6). ¶ Birks says: “The close of this section answers to its opening. The true Lord, who had guided Abraham of old by a way that he knew not, so that he pursued his enemies, and passed safely, will also guide His people in the last generations of the world, and bring them, even through dark and rugged pathways, to a home of perfect rest. This beautiful promise completes and crowns the whole message. All the dark mysteries of Providence, which may seem now, even to God’s servants, utterly inscrutable, will find a blessed solution in the coming kingdom of Christ and of God.” Cowles says: “Truth is to the mind what light is to the body ... [those] long blind to the true God and to the way of salvation, are to be led in ways never known to them before; the way of holiness and heaven.” These things will take place not only on this earth, but in the Spirt World where all who have not had the privilege of hearing the Gospel will now be able to avail themselves of this opportunity.

17 They shall be turned back, they shall be greatly ashamed, that trust in graven images, that say to the molten images, Ye [are] our gods.

²⁰ In AV, “Will I do unto them.”

²¹ Joüon explains: “In prophecies a future event is sometimes regarded as having already been accomplished ... This prophetic perfect is not a special grammatical perfect, but a rhetorical device.” Joüon, P., & Muraoka, T. (2006). A grammar of biblical Hebrew (p. 335). Roma: Pontificio Istituto Biblico. NET has: “... the tense of the Hebrew verb that views an action as though it were as good as done.” Biblical Studies Press. (2006). The NET Bible First Edition Notes (see Jeremiah 49:23). Rabbi Rosenberg calls it the prophetic past; Nägelsbach, in Latin, praeterita prophetica; Delitzsch, perfect consecutive. Rawlinson calls it the “praesens historicum.” For the Lord all things—past, present and future—are before His eyes in one eternal round (D&C 35:1).

The LXX (6) reads, “But as for them they have turned backwards! be whelmed in shame, ye who trust in graven images—who say to the molten images, ye are our gods.” The Douay-Rheims (v) has, “They are turned back: let them be greatly confounded, that trust in a graven thing, that say to a molten thing: You are our god.” ¶ Nägelsbach observes: “Many will remain blind. Of these it is said: They shall be turned back, etc.” Wade suggests: “turned back. i.e. put to shame (Psalm 35:4; 40:14; Jeremiah 46:5), in consequence of the inferiority of their deities to the Lord, the champion of Israel.” To be turned back normally means to be shown the way back to repentance and to following the Lord. But it also can mean those who turn their backs away from the Lord. Those who will not heed the invitation to turn [בושׁ] to Christ and live, and who put their trust in the arm of man or idols, will suffer shame. Here, the expression turned back seems to mean to suffer the losses and consequences of sin. Certainly, there will be a day of reckoning after we pass from this mortal life, where we will be judged according to our works and the true desire of our hearts (Alma 41). To say to idols “ye are our gods” is accepting that which is worthless and rejecting the Lord’s offer: “[I] will be your God, and ye shall be my people.”

vv. 18–25. Come unto Christ. Only our Savior can deliver us from darkness.

18 ¶ Hear, ye deaf; and look, ye blind, that ye may see.

The Targum (t) has, “Ye wicked (who are like the deaf), have ye no ears? hear ye! and ye sinners (who are like the blind), have ye no eyes?” The LXX (6) reads, “Hear, ye deaf; and ye blind, look up that you may see.” The Peshitta (s) has, for the last clause, understand and see. The Douay-Rheims (v) has, “Hear, ye deaf, and, ye blind, behold that you may see.” This is an invitation to come unto Christ and partake of the plan of happiness. We seem to have a chiasmus here, with ISAIAH 42:6 and 7, where it is clear that the Lord has been sent to open the eyes of the nations.

19 Who [is] blind, but For I will send my servant? unto you who are blind; yea, a deaf, as my messenger to open the eyes of the [that] I sent? who [is] blind, and unstop the ears of the deaf; And they shall be made as [he that is] perfect; notwithstanding their blindness, if they will hearken unto the messenger, and blind as the LORD’s servant?

For I will send my servant unto you who are blind; yea, a messenger to open the eyes of the blind, and unstop the ears of the deaf. The Targum (t) has, “Is it not so? if the wicked and the sinners, to whom I have sent my prophets, will repent, they shall be called my servants; but the wicked shall be paid with vengeance for their sins.” The LXX (6) reads, “Who indeed is blind but my servants? And deaf, but those who rule over them?” The Douay-Rheims (v) has, “Who is blind, but my servant? or deaf, but he to whom I have sent my messengers?” ¶ That this verse makes no sense without the inspired corrections of the Prophet Joseph Smith is evident. Keith, in confusion, says: “The language, at least that of the 19th verse, is evidently ironical, else how could the blind be called the Lord’s servants? how could they be called perfect?” Henderson explains that the messenger (מַלְאָךְ) spoken of in this verse can be no other than the Messiah. Because of the corruption in the text, however, Henderson considers the language ironical. Henderson, who was working without the aid of the JST regarding the use of the word perfect, שָׁלֵם or²² מְשֻׁלָּם (from the root שָׁלַם) here, says: “To our Lord all the epithets here employed most aptly apply. He was the Father’s Servant; the Messenger whom he was to send; the Perfect One.” ¶ And they shall be made perfect notwithstanding their blindness, if they will hearken unto the messenger, the LORD’s servant. The Targum (t) has, “But if they will repent, they shall be called the servants of the Lord.” The LXX (6) reads, “Even the servants of God are become blind.” To the questions in the Masoretic text (m) as to who is blind, the Peshitta (s) adds yet another, “Who is blind as the ruler?” (BPE) / “Who is blind as the prince?” (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (v) has, “Who is blind, but he that is sold? or who is blind, but the servant of the Lord?” In 2 Corinthians 12:9 we read: “And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness.” Or, as we read in Ether: “Fools mock, but they shall mourn; and my grace is sufficient for the meek, that they shall take no advantage of your weakness; And if men come unto me I will show unto them their weakness. I give unto men weakness that they may be humble; and my grace is sufficient for all men that humble themselves before me; for if they humble themselves before me, and have faith in me, then will I make weak things become strong unto them” (Ether 12:26–27). In the process of coming unto Christ we are sanctified through the Holy Ghost, “until the perfect day” (D&C 50:24b). Becoming perfect is associated with the process of exaltation. The Savior in Matthew 5:48, while still in his mortal ministry, called upon us to be perfect, even as the “Father who is in heaven is perfect.” Only after the Redeemer had conquered death, did He say, “Therefore I would that ye should be perfect even as I, or your Father who is in heaven is perfect” (3 Nephi 12:48). An invitation for the blind to be perfect is an encouragement to be sanctified and exalted in the Kingdom of our God.

²² Henderson explains that Muslims derive their name from the Arabic cognate of מְשֻׁלָּם (Meshulam, مسلم) and explains that Muslim “signifies one who is devoted to the service of God, who obeys him, and submits to his will.” Cheyne adds, “Apparently this word became a favourite among the pious Jews in later times. It appears as a proper name in Ezra 8:16; 10:15, 29, and the feminine Meshullemeth (מְשֻׁלְמֶת, 2 Kings 21:19). Compare also the frequent expression lebh shalem, ‘a perfect (=devoted) heart.’” For instance, on the latter, and with a perfect heart, 2 Kings 20:3 [וּבְלֵב שָׁלֵם].

20 Thou art a people, seeing many things, but thou observest not; opening the ears to hear, but he thou hearest not.

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Ye see many things, but ye observe not; having your ears opened, but ye receive not instruction.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “You have seen again and again but have not regarded: your ears have been opened, but you did not hear.” The BPE (Ⓢ) has, “You have seen many things but have not kept them; I have opened your ears but ye have not heeded.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “Thou that seest many things, wilt thou not observe them? thou that hast ears open, wilt thou not hear?” ¶ Nägelsbach observes: “The words of ISAIAH 42:20 are difficult.” Indeed, without the JST we would be scrambling for creative solutions. There seems to be an allusion to what we read in ISAIAH 6:9, “And he said, Go, and tell this people, Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not.” Even though we are imperfect and deaf and blind, we can be made perfect through Christ, Jesus.

21 The LORD is not well pleased with such a people, but for his righteousness' sake he will magnify the law and make [it] honourable.

✓ or, him

Nägelsbach’s translator speaks of these verses and ISAIAH 42 as being “full of paradoxes and contradictions.” Cowles explains that the AV as it stands is not correct and that God is not well pleased:

“This verse declares, not that God is ‘well pleased’ with their course ...” As we see in the JST, indeed, the Lord is not pleased with those who will refuse to hear and to see. ¶ The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “The Lord delights in justifying Israel; He will magnify those that obey (literally, ‘they that do’) His law, yea, He will strengthen them.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “The Lord God came to a determination, that he might be justified and might magnify praise.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “And the Lord was willing to sanctify him, and to magnify the law, and exalt it.” ¶ Magnify [the] law, תִּגְדִּיל תּוֹרָה, that is, magnify [the] Torah and He will make [it] glorious, וְיִגְדִּיל (from the root, גָּדַל).

¶ The Talmud tradition (Mishnah, Seder Nezikin, Makkoth 23a) has: “Rabbi Hananiah ben Akashia says: the Holy-One, blessed be He, desired to make Israel worthy, therefore gave He them the law [to study] and many commandments [to do]: for it is said: the Lord was pleased, for His righteousness’ sake to make the law great and glorious” (Talmud, Soncino). The Soncino editor adds this footnote regarding the controversy regarding works vs. grace, “One may see in the words of R. Hananiah b. ‘Akashia a polemic against the Pauline conception that puts the Law in opposition to innocence and spiritual law and considers it a source of sin and wrath. Here it is asserted that the Law was given, not as a mark of divine wrath in order to increase sin so as to make all the greater the need of divine mercy, but as a mark of divine love designed to train Israel in moral holiness in order to make them all the more worthy in the eyes of the Holy One, blessed be He.” ¶ As LDS, we believe that the Lord gave the Law as a schoolmaster.²³ Isaiah and Jeremiah constantly warned against abuses, hypocrisies and misunderstandings about the Law. Whitehouse well suggests that Torah (תּוֹרָה) can also mean: “... the instruction or ‘word of Yahweh’ delivered by the prophets.” תּוֹרָה stands for all of the Scriptures.

22 But this [is] Thou art a people robbed and spoiled; thine enemies, [they are] all of them, have snared thee in holes, and they are have hid thee in prison houses; they are have taken thee for a prey, and none delivereth; for a spoil, ✓ and none saith, Restore.

²³ “The law of Moses consisted of many ceremonies, rituals, and symbols, to remind the people frequently of their duties and responsibilities. It included a law of carnal commandments and performances, added to the basic laws of the gospel. Faith, repentance, baptism in water, and remission of sins were part of the law, as were also the Ten Commandments. Although inferior to the fulness of the gospel, there were many provisions in the law of Moses of high ethical and moral value that were equal to the divine laws of any dispensation ... The law of carnal commandments and much of the ceremonial law were fulfilled at the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. The law functioned under the Aaronic Priesthood and was a preparatory gospel to bring its adherents to Christ ... The law as given through Moses was a good law” LDS Bible Dictionary.

✓ or, in snaring all the young men of them

✓ ✓ a treading

Thou art a people robbed and spoiled; thine enemies, all of them, have snared thee in holes. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “But this is a people robbed, and spoiled, and all their young men are covered with confusion,” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Whereupon I beheld and the people were plundered and dispersed: for the snare was every where in the private chambers.” Instead of all of them have been snared, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has the young men caught in traps (BPE) or snared (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “But this is a people that is robbed and wasted: they are all the snare of young men.” ¶ According to Wade, holes here stand for dungeons. This verse speaks in part of ISAIAH 18, of a people spoiled (Israel) and that none can deliver. At least no human hand can deliver. But the Lord sends ambassadors to deliver in the name of Christ (ISAIAH 18). ¶ And they have hid thee in prison houses; they have taken thee for a prey, and none delivereth; for a spoil, and none saith, Restore. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And shut up in prison houses: they are for a prey, and there is none who delivereth; for a spoil, and none saith, Restore.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And in the houses also where they had hidden themselves. They were for a prey and there was no rescuer—for a spoil; and there was none who said, restore.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And they are hid in the houses of prisons: they are made a prey, and there is none to deliver them: a spoil, and there is none that saith: Restore.” ¶ Most translate הָשִׁב as “Restore” but sometimes it is also translated as return, give back, give it back, retribute, Rabbi David Kimhi (Redak) says: “No one says to the enemy, ‘Return the spoils.’” Keith interprets this verse as no nation having pity on Israel when she is under attack and quotes Jeremiah 15:5: “For who shall have pity upon thee, O Jerusalem? or who shall bemoan thee? or who shall go aside to ask how thou doest?” This verse also seems to be a continuation of ISAIAH 42:7, with an allusion to the spirit world, and those in spirit prison. Cheyne is not alone in saying: “... it is very improbable than any large portion of the exiles suffered literal imprisonment.” Perhaps, this is because the verse is also speaking of those spirits in prison—as well as the imprisonment caused by the cords of sin (ISAIAH 5:18). Why could no one deliver? Because only the Christ could, through His expiatory sacrifice. No one could redeem, no one could save, except the Savior. Hosanna, הוֹשִׁיעָה נָא.

23 Who among you them will give ear unto this? [who] thee, or will hearken and hear thee for the time to come? ✓

✓ for the after time?

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Who is there among you that will listen to this? who will hearken, and consider for the time to come (Chaldee, ‘for the end’)?” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Who is there among you who will give ear to these things? Attend to those leading causes.” For the second half, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “Who will hearken to the other counsel?” (Lamsa) / “Who pays attention and finally heeds” (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the last clause, “That will attend and hearken for times to come?” ¶ The DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲙ) has or hearken, וְיִשְׁמָע. This is of particular interest to us as LDS. The grammarians²⁴ give us numerous possibilities for the translation of the וְ (besides and, for instance, we may have such words as that, then, so, or, and others). In this instance we know that the correct word is or, the expression used by the Prophet Joseph Smith in the Inspired Version (JST). For another example of the use of the word וְ translated as or, see Exodus 21:16, וְנִמְצָא, or be found. Slotki, leaning on the Targum, Rashi and Kimhi, says, “So that in the future Israel may abandon his disobedience and rebellion and live up to the Divine ideal set before him.” Once again, we have an allusion to ISAIAH 6, about giving ear and hearkening (ISAIAH 6:9). But also a question reminiscent of ISAIAH 6:8b, “Whom (מִי) shall I send, and who (וְיִמְ) will go for us?” Here it is, “Who (מִי) among them will give ear unto thee [Christ and His ambassadors of truth]?” Who will open their ears and hear the gospel of Jesus Christ? Throughout the scriptures there are a series of very important who questions. These are intended for us to ask of ourselves and not to point fingers at others. Will we, can we, be included in the יְיָ that will follow after Christ?

24 And who gave Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers? did not the LORD, he against whom we they have sinned? For they would not walk in his ways, neither were they obedient unto his law;

²⁴ For instance, see HALOT וְ—15, the use of the word or in Exodus 21:16, but strangely there, HALOT gives us a different example, one not followed by any of the translators, וְיִמְכְרֵהוּ, or sell him. This is probably just a distraction, as probably the example they meant to give was the one I have given in the text above.

And who gave Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers? The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Who delivered Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers?” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “For which he hath given Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to them who plundered him.” ¶ The question is asked, as to who permitted Israel to be plundered and robbed. The answer is given right away, that the Lord removed His protection for a moment to chastise those whom He loves and who were in need of correction. We see the many sufferings that the children of Israel have had to endure through time.²⁵ ¶ Did not the LORD, he against whom they have sinned? The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Was it not the Lord? Because they have sinned against Him.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “Hath not God, against whom they sinned.” The Targum (Ⓣ) and the LXX (Ⓟ) agree with the JST, that the proper rendering should be they in regards to sinned, rather than we. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “Hath not the Lord himself, against whom we have sinned?” Rashi (in Rosenberg) says: “This is what caused the plunder and the spoiling, what we sinned against Him.” ¶ Because God loves us so much, He gives us consequences for disobedience. But He also uses the Hosea principle. Yes, He reproves us with sharpness, but afterwards shows us an increase of love (D&C 121:43). Birks looks at this from the most positive perspective: “But it is rather a wondering search for the small remnant, who will lay the message to heart amidst the general unbelief. These are invited to lay up the prophecy in their memories, until its truth shall be triumphantly revealed.” ¶ For they would not walk in his ways, neither were they obedient unto his law. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And they would not walk in His righteous paths before Him, neither would they receive the instruction of His law.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “And in whose ways they would not walk, and whose law they would not obey.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⓢ) has, we instead of they. The BPE (Ⓢ) puts it as a question, “Have we not refused to walk in his ways and be obedient to the law?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “And they would not walk in his ways, and they have not hearkened to his law.” ¶ Despite the invitation to walk in the way of the Lord, to follow after Christ, many would reject the message.

25 Therefore he hath poured upon ~~him~~ them the fury of his anger, and the strength of battle; and ~~it hath~~ they have set ~~him~~ them on fire round about, yet ~~he~~ they know not, and it burned ~~him~~ them, yet ~~he~~ they laid [it] not to heart.

Therefore he hath poured upon him them the fury of his anger, and the strength of battle. In this verse, the Targum (Ⓣ), LXX (Ⓟ), and Lamsa Peshitta (Ⓢ) all agree with the JST in rendering each of the he / him in this verse into they / them. Therefore he hath poured upon them the fury of his anger, and the strength of battle. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Therefore He hath poured upon them the fury of His anger, and hath brought upon them the strength of His warriors.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “Hath not he brought upon them his fierce anger? Though war prevailed over them.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “And he hath poured out upon him the indignation of his fury, and a strong battle.” The Lord will deal justly with all. In 3 Nephi 29 the Lord warns against those who reject the Book of Mormon in the last days—as well as those who turn against the Jews. This verse is related to ISAIAH 42:4. ¶ And they have set them on fire round about, yet they know not, and it burned them, yet they laid it not to heart. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And hath slain them (literally, ‘among them’) round about, and they knew it not; and they ruled over them, and they did not lay His fear to heart.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “And they who were burning them up were all around, yet they did not, any of them know, nor lay it to heart.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “And hath burnt him round about, and he knew not: and set him on fire, and he understood not.” ¶ The translation “yet they know not” / “and it burned them, yet they laid it not to heart” given by the Prophet Joseph Smith, is almost exactly that given in the Jewish version (see Rosenberg), “and they did not know” / “and it burned among them and they did not take heed.” Rashi (in Rosenberg) says, “They actually did know, but they trod with their heels. They did not care to understand this and to repent of their wickedness.” Kimhi (in Slotki), regarding “laid it not to heart,” has, “To associate cause and effect.” Wordsworth suggests: “But see the promise which follows in the next chapter. Though their Temple and City have been burned, and though they have been scattered as exiles, yet His gracious words to them are, ‘Fear not, for I have redeemed thee; when thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee.’”

FIRST POSTED: 19 December 2014

²⁵ For instance, see “The Historical Atlas of Judaism” by Dr. Ian Barnes, 2009.

Isaiah 43

Even though Israel will face adversities she will be gathered and not abandoned. In the last days, Israel shall be converted. The legal or court scenes are resumed. Despite all that the Lord will do for His people, Israel shows ingratitude. The Lord will blot out the transgressions of those who return to Him.

vv. 1–7. The Lord wishes to comfort Israel, whom He has called to a special work. Israel will face adversities but shall not be forsaken. The Lord has loved Israel. The gathering of Israel will take place from every quarter of the earth.

1 ¶ BUT now thus saith the LORD that created thee, O Jacob, and he that formed thee, O Israel, Fear not: for I have redeemed thee, I have called [thee] by thy name; thou [art] mine.

BUT now thus saith the LORD that created thee, O Jacob, and he that formed thee, O Israel, Fear not: for I have redeemed thee. The LXX (6) reads, “Still however thus saith the Lord, the God who made thee Jacob, and who formed thee, Israel! fear not. Because I have redeemed thee.” ¶ Regarding יִצְרָאֵל Cowles says: “The introductory words, ‘But now,’ propose to enter more fully into the relations between God and his chosen yet inconstant and very imperfect people. God would not have Israel fear the final issue of those afflictions which will befall her. He created and formed her, which means that he has chosen the posterity of Abraham and has made the nation of Israel all that she is in the line of moral worth and of peculiar honor as his chosen people. Therefore she ought to trust her Lord to determine all her future ... ‘Redeemed,’ refers to the consecration of the first born to God and the special redemption required by the Mosaic Law in their case (see Exodus 13:13, and Numbers 3:11–13).” Such redemption is a type of the expiatory sacrifice offered by our Savior, Jesus Christ. Whitehouse explains that redeemed is written in the prophetic or perfect tense.¹

¶ Speaking of created thee, בָּרָאָךְ (root, בָּרָא), Whitehouse’s thoughts agree with the teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith: “‘Create’ (בָּרָא), however, which is employed in the first creation-story, is simply used to express God’s work in constructing the universe. The assumption that it signifies to create out of nothing is wholly gratuitous, and has been the unfortunate cause of many difficulties, and is obviously an impossible meaning here. The word for ‘create’ no more expresses this than the word for ‘form.’ The latter verb is really the term used to describe the work of a potter in Hebrew (the word for ‘form’ in Hebrew is יָצַר, which means to fashion, to mold. A ‘potter’ is יֹצֵר {lit. molder—participle of the verb), the very term that occurs in this verse.” Keith notes: “Although punished as they have been ... yet Israel is here represented as being addressed in the language of encouragement and endearment, as, in their national character, the workmanship and people of God; and their deliverance from all their evils is described as accomplished.” ¶ Alexander points out, “Fear not, i.e. fear not that thou canst be utterly destroyed. It is not an assurance of immunity from suffering, the experience of which is implied and indeed expressly threatened in what follows.” Sister Elaine S. Dalton wrote: “Believe in the Savior. He loves you, and I testify that He will not leave you alone. He has promised: ‘Fear not, I am with thee; oh, be not dismayed, / For I am thy God and will still give thee aid. / I’ll strengthen thee, help thee, and cause thee to stand, ... / Upheld by my righteous, omnipotent hand.’ (How Firm a Foundation, Hymns, no. 85).” ¶ I have called [thee] by thy name; thou [art] mine. The Targum (7) has, “I have called thee who art mine by thy name.” The LXX (6) reads, “Have called thee by thy name—thou art mine.” Shalom Paul reminds us that Israel, in Genesis 48:5, calls Joseph’s two eldest sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, his. Henderson says, “... to call a person by enouncing his name.” God the Eternal Father called Joseph Smith by name as did Angel Moroni.² Cheyne says (emphasis added): “Israel was especially honored, for Jehovah combined his own name with Israel's, calling it 'my people.'" Spurgeon tenderly suggests: "There was a day and we can never forget it, when the Gospel of God came to us with a pointed and personal power such as we never felt before. Like as Mary Magdalene did not know the Savior until He said unto her, 'Mary³,' so we did not know the Lord until He called us by our name! Surely, no love-call with which our mother awakened us in the morning from the happy sleep of childhood was ever more distinct than the call of God's Grace to us when He spoke to us and said, 'Seek you My face.' Blessed was the day when our heart replied, 'Your face, Lord, will I seek.'" ¶ Thou art mine (לִי-אַתָּה). This is THE greatest promise God can give us. When we become His (see Rain in Due Season, Leviticus 26:12).

² “One of them spake unto me, calling me by name and said, pointing to the other—This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!” (JS—History 1:17); and “The first thing that I can recollect was a voice speaking unto me, calling me by name. I looked up, and beheld the same messenger standing over my head, surrounded by light as before.” (JS—History 1:49). See also Exodus 31:1–2a, “And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, see, I have called by name Bezaleel” (i.e., in the shadow of God, or under God’s protection), Exodus 33:12b, “Yet thou hast said, I know thee by name, and thou hast also found grace in my sight.” Here, Moses is reminding the Lord that he is known by name by the Lord.

¹ See ISAIAH 42:19.

2 When thou passest through the waters, I [will be] with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee.

When thou passest through the waters, I [will be] with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: The Targum (ܬ) has, "For at first when ye did pass the Red sea my Word was your support (or, 'help')." The LXX (Ϛ) reads, "therefore when thou passest through water, I am with thee, and the streams shall not overwhelm thee." Instead of waters, the Peshitta (ܫ) has sea. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the second half, "And the rivers shall not cover thee." Wordsworth has: "As I showed thee of old by carrying thee on dry land through the waters of the Red Sea, and in driving back the waters of the river of Jordan, that they might not overflow thee (Joshua 3:13).

¶ Wordsworth says: "These miracles of old are pledges to thee of greater mercies in Christ." Shalom Paul writes: "When you pass through water, I will be with you [אֲנִי-יְהִי-עִמָּךְ]—I shall save you from drowning, since you are Mine and I will protect you. This formula is a variant of כִּי עִמָּךְ אֲנִי (see ISAIAH 41:10)." ¶ Simeon says: "The man that is in the presence of his God, and has the light of his countenance lifted upon him, is inaccessible to his enemies, and may laugh at all their assaults. See Paul and Silas in prison, under circumstances as painful as could well inflicted on them; yet, behold, they are singing praises to God at midnight ... Such are the interpositions of God in behalf of all his faithful servants, that 'where their afflictions have abounded, their consolations have much more abounded' (2 Corinthians 1:5). The very waves which desolated all the world besides, bore up the ark, and carried it to a place of safety. And so shall the sea itself afford a passage to all the 'ransomed of the Lord to pass over,' in the way to the land of promise (ISAIAH 51:10)." ¶ When thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee. The Targum (ܬ) has, "Pharaoh and the Egyptians, who were as many as the waters of the river, did not prevail against you. And again (literally, 'also a second time'), when ye came amongst nations, who were as mighty as fire, they did not prevail against you." The LXX (Ϛ) reads, "And when thou passest through fire, thou shalt not be burned up—the flame shall not quite consume thee." The Douay-Rheims (V) has, "When thou shalt walk in the fire, thou shalt not be burnt, and the flames shall not burn in thee." ¶ Keith says: "Water and fire are common scriptural symbols of trouble. In all the past calamities of the nation God has so far been with her as to have brought her through them, not unscathed certainly, but still undestroyed, although a tithe of her judgments would have swept other nations from the earth. Like the three men in the furnace who survived it [Daniel 3:21 ff.—GB], while those who cast them in were caught by the flame wafted aside by the breeze which was intended for others, and consumed, Israel still preserves her national existence, while the more ancient nations that oppressed her have almost or altogether disappeared. There may be allusion, however, to the period of universal national judgments in the promise made here, for similar assurances are given to Israel in connexion with the trials of the last days (see ISAIAH 66:12; Zechariah 13:9)." ¶ But why shall it not burn the righteous? See ISAIAH 33:14.

3 For I [am] the LORD thy God, the Holy One of Israel, thy Saviour: I gave Egypt [for] thy ransom, Ethiopia and Seba for thee.

The Targum (ܬ) has, for the last clause, "I gave Egypt in exchange for thee, Ethiopia, and Seba, in thy stead." The LXX (Ϛ) reads, "Because I the Lord thy God, the Holy One of Israel am thy Saviour, I have given Egypt for thy ransom and Ethiopia and Soena in thy stead." Instead of ransom, the Peshitta (ܫ) has sake (Lamsa) / in exchange for you (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (V) has atonement instead of ransom. ¶ Barnes explains: "The word rendered 'ransom' here is כֹּפֶר . . . whence the Latin cooperio; the French couvrir; the English cover, and means literally to cover; to cover over; to overlay with anything, as pitch, as in Genesis 6:14. Hence, to cover over sins; to overlook; to forgive; and hence, to make an expiation for sins, or to atone for transgression so that it may be forgiven.” Alexander explains: “This is an amplification of the phrase I have redeemed thee in ISAIAH 43:1. As the Israelite under the Mosaic law was obliged to redeem his first-born by the payment of a price, or by the substitution of some other object, so Jehovah secured Israel as his own by giving up the other nations.” Cowles says: “Ethiopia and Seba are grouped with Egypt, perhaps as her allies; at least in the same general sense. Both genealogically and geographically, they were near. Cush and Egypt (Misraim) were brothers; Seba was a son of Cush [Genesis 10:5, 6].” Gill has: “I gave Egypt for thy ransom; he sacrificed the Egyptians instead of the Israelites; he destroyed the firstborn of Egypt, and saved Israel his firstborn; he drowned the Egyptians in the Red sea, when the Israelites passed safely through it; and the destruction of the former was to make way for the salvation of the latter, and so said to be a ransom for them ... and the Lord, by putting his people in mind of these instances, suggests hereby that he will sacrifice all their enemies, rather than they shall be destroyed, and therefore they need not fear.” ¶ And what did God the Father give as a ransom for you and for me? He gave His only begotten son, even Jesus Christ, as an expiation and ransom for our sins.

³ "Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master" (John 20:16).

4 Since thou wast precious in my sight, thou hast been honourable, and I have loved thee: therefore will I give men for thee, and people for thy life. ✓

✓ or, person

Since thou wast precious in my sight, thou hast been honourable, and I have loved thee: The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Because thou hast been precious in my sight—hast been honoured and I loved thee.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Since thou becamest honourable in my eyes, thou art glorious: I have loved thee.” ¶ What a beautiful sentiment, אֲנִי אֶהְבֵּתִיךָ, and I have loved thee.

Indeed, “We love him, because he first loved us” (1 John 4:19). Birks says: “Israel had been precious, not from yesterday, but in God’s eternal counsel of love.” Cowles writes: “From the time when God set his heart on Israel, he had held her in honor and love, and therefore declares, ‘I will [on every occasion] give men and nations for thy life.’ This is to be taken in the same sense as ‘giving Egypt for thy ransom.’” ¶ Therefore will I give men for thee, and people for thy life. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And I gave nations instead of thee, and kingdoms for thy soul.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Therefore I will give men for thee and chiefs for thy life.” ¶ A number of exegetes have suggested that the term men, or people, here means mankind. Alexander explains: “Man is here used collectively or indefinitely for other men or the rest of men (as in Judges 16:7; Psalm 73:5; Job 31:33; Jeremiah 32:20).”

5 Fear not: for I [am] with thee: I will bring thy seed from the east, and gather thee from the west;

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Fear not, for my Word shall be thy support; I will bring thy children from the east, I will bring together thy captivity from the west.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Fear not. Because I am with thee, from the east I will bring thy seed, and gather thee together from the west.” Instead of seed, the Peshitta (Ⲯ) uses the synonym, descendants. Wade explains: “After the Fall of Jerusalem in 587 only a portion of its population was carried to Babylon; others dispersed to different parts of the world (see Jeremiah 43:7; 44:1).” ¶ The Lord speaks of the gathering of all of the tribes of Israel from every corner of the world under the heavens wherein they were scattered. Rabbi David Kimhi (in Rosenberg) explains that the Lord says: “... just as I delivered you from your oppressors in the past, so will I do to you in the future, when I will gather your exiles from all over the world.” Nägelsbach points out that the word gather (Ⲯⲓⲛ) in ISAIAH 43:5 is also used in Rain in Due Season (Deuteronomy 30:3, 4). ¶ Most associate the gathering with the return from the Babylonian captivity. Indeed, a small remnant was gathered after the exile. The return from Babylon was only a type of the latter-day gathering of Israel. This gathering was also predicted in 3 Nephi 29, wherein the Lord tells us that when the Book of Mormon comes forth, it will be a token that the latter-day gathering will begin to take place. ¶ The Prophet Joseph Smith quotes ISAIAH 43 and explains: “It is ... the concurrent testimony of all the prophets, that this gathering together of all the Saints, must take place before the Lord comes to ‘take vengeance upon the ungodly,’ and ‘to be glorified and admired by all those who obey the Gospel’ (DHC 4:272).”⁴

6 I will say to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back: bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth;

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “I will say to the north, Bring; and to the south, Keep not back: bring my sons from afar, and the captivity of my people from the ends of the earth.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “I will say to the north,

⁴ TPJS.

‘Give up’ and to the south, ‘Keep thou not back; bring my sons from afar and my daughters from the ends of the earth.’ The Talmud tradition (Seder Kodoshim, Menachoth 110a) makes the sons and daughters the totality of the matter⁵—regardless of where the children of Israel have been dispersed: “Bring My sons from far, and My daughters from the ends of the earth. ‘Bring My sons from far’: Rabbi Huna said, These are the exiles in Babylon, who are at ease like sons. ‘And My daughters from the ends of the earth’: These are the exiles in other lands, who are not at ease, like daughters” (Talmud, Soncino). ¶ The expression מִקְצֵה הָאָרֶץ, from ends of the earth, means exactly the same as the promise that: “If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven” (Deuteronomy 30:4a, Rain in Due Season) from there would the Lord gather His people. Alexander says: “This is a poetical amplification of the promise in the foregoing verse. As it was there declared that God would bring and gather the whole seed of Israel, so here he represents himself as calling on the north and the south to execute his purpose.” Govett says: “Their [The Jews]⁶ restoration, after being carried captive into all parts of the earth, is predicted in ISAIAH 43:5–6, for they will be the elect of God . . .” In 1850 Keith wrote: “The gathering of the nation to their own land will form another evidence of the love of the God of Israel. This language has never been fulfilled in their past history, and can refer only to what is future.” ¶ This future time has now become a prophecy fulfilled. Israel has begun to be gathered from every continent and today is a nation. Shortly before Keith’s book was published, in 1841, Elder Orson Hyde traveled to the Holy Land in the year 1841 and quietly dedicated the land of Israel for the return of her peoples. It is with great tenderness—besides the issue of totality—that the Lord speaks of the gathering of Israel, using such intimate terms as my sons (בְּנֵי) and my daughters

(וּבָנוֹתֵי). Rawlinson makes a few interesting observations regarding this verse, “—Bring my sons. The nations are called upon, not merely to ‘let Israel go,’ but to conduct and escort them from the places of their abode to their own country.” This will take place through missionary work, as we see in ISAIAH 18:7. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt explained—and note the gathering that takes place on both sides of the veil: “Paul saw this gathering, and he calls it a new dispensation that should come after his day. He says that in the dispensation of the fullness of times he would gather together in one all things in Christ, whether they be things in heaven or things on the earth. The dispensation of the fullness of times, then, was to be characterized by the gathering of all persons that were in Christ. All the righteous dead that are in heaven, whose bodies are asleep in the grave, together with all the Christians on the earth, will be gathered in one in that dispensation. Fulfilling another prophecy in the 43rd chapter of Isaiah, where the Lord says— ‘I will say to the north give up, and to the south keep not back; bring my sons from afar and my daughters from the ends of the earth, even every one that is called by my name.’ ... The Lord says, ‘I will say to the north give up.’ The Lord is going to speak the Lord is going to utter something— ‘I will say to the south keep not back. I will say, Come ye, my sons and daughters, from the ends of the earth, even every one that is called by my name.’”⁷ President Heber C. Kimball testified of that which had not, when the spoke, yet taken place: “We are informed in the Bible that in the last days the sons of God shall be brought from afar, and his daughters from the ends of the earth; and also that the elect will be gathered from the four quarters of the globe. Now, this will most assuredly be fulfilled, and this is the work which you and I have got to perform.”⁸ Is there anything more thrilling than to be involved in such a work? The Prophet Joseph Smith said: “After all that has been said, the greatest and most important duty is to preach the Gospel.”⁹

7 [Even] every one that is called by my name: for I have created him for my glory, I have formed him; yea, I have made him.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “All these things shall come to pass for the sake of your righteous fathers, upon whom my name was called, yea, for my glory I have created them. I will restore their captivity, yea, I will work wonders for them.” The LXX (ϥ) reads, “All that are ⁷ Pratt, Elder Orson. Journal of Discourses, Orson Pratt, March 26, 1876. Restoration Of The Gospel Probable And Scriptural, pp. 185–186. Elder Orson Pratt also testified: “Did the Prophets in ancient times testify that when the kingdom of God should be organized, the Saints should be gathered from the four quarters of the earth, that all that were called by the name of the Lord should be brought out from the north and from the south, and from the east and from the west, even the sons and daughters of God should be brought from all nations? The Latter-day Saints teach that the same angel which brought the Gospel (Revelation 14:6–7) the same God that has set up his kingdom on the earth in the latter days has commanded his servants that go forth with these doctrines, to gather out his elect from the four winds of heaven.” The Setting up of God’s Kingdom in These Latter Days. 4 February 1872.

⁸ Kimball, President Heber C. Gathering of the People of God in The Last Days—Return to Jackson County, &c. Discourse given in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 17 February 1861. Reported By: J. V. Long.

⁹ Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, sel. Joseph Fielding Smith, p. 113.

⁵ For a similar Hebrew expression using the masculine and the feminine, meaning the totality of the matter, see ISAIAH 3:1, מִשְׁעָן וּמִשְׁעָנָה.

⁶ Jews is correct, but should have also included all the tribes of Israel.

called by my name.’ For I have prepared him for my glory, I have fashioned him and made him.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, for the first clause, “And every one that calleth upon my name.” ¶ Birks says: “The people of Israel were called by the name of God, and His glory was involved in their deliverance. They were created, formed, and made, to be His witnesses ... Only not all who were of Israel would be gathered, but only those who were called by the Divine name; and not the natural seed only, but also those who were of the faith of Abraham, the Gentile proselytes, who were to be grafted in.” This speaks of all who would enter the waters of baptism—thus taking upon themselves the name of Christ—through the hand of an authorized priesthood holder.

vv. 8–13. In the following verses we have a renewal of the legal case. ISAIAH 43:8 speaks of the wonderful conversion of the children of Israel in the latter-days, as they are gathered from every corner of the world. This is now the topic of celebration; this is the new thing that the Lord will do: He will bring about the great gathering unto Himself. All these things are only possible because of the redeeming sacrifice of our Savior.

8 ¶ Bring forth the blind people that have eyes, and the deaf that have ears.

The Targum (T) has, “When I brought forth my people from Egypt, they were like the blind, although they had eyes; and like the deaf, although they had ears.” The LXX (G) reads, “And have brought out a blind people: for their eyes are as if they were blind; and they are deaf, though they have ears.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Bring forth the people that are blind, and have eyes: that are deaf, and have ears.” ¶ Alexander writes: “He hath brought out the blind people, and there are eyes (to them); and the deaf, and (there are) ears to them.” The two clauses are so constructed as to supply one another’s ellipsis ... On the whole, the most satisfactory interpretation of the verse is that which understands it as descriptive of the change wrought or to be wrought in the condition of mankind by Jehovah, through the agency of his people, whether the latter be expressly mentioned here or not. He (i.e. God, or Israel as his messenger) hath brought out a people (once) blind, and (now) they have eyes, and (once) deaf, and (now) they have ears, i.e. of course, seeing eyes and hearing ears. This agrees perfectly with all that goes before and follows, with respect to the mission and vocation of God’s people.” Rawlinson suggests: “Israel is first summoned, as ‘a blind people that have eyes;’ i.e. a people long blind, who have now, to some extent, recovered their sight, and are ready to witness for God.” Hitzig (in Birks) thinks of this as relating to the “promise of Jewish¹⁰ restoration.” ¶ This verse is the antithesis of ISAIAH 6:9–10, where the people refuse to see and to hear. Now, hearts have been softened and turned to the Lord so that eyes begin to see and ears begin to hear. ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie testified: “The gathering of Israel in the last days shall consist in bringing together ‘the blind people that have eyes, and the deaf that have ears,’ that is, the spiritually blind and deaf shall come to a knowledge of the things of God and they shall see and hear. In large part the opening of the eyes of the blind and the unstopping of the ears of the deaf shall take place by means of the Book of Mormon. ‘And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness’ (ISAIAH 29:18).”¹¹ My own change of heart began to take place as I read the Book of Mormon over a four day Christmas break in 1973. Seeing and hearing are lifetime efforts rather than a one-time event. “Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to ... stand before the Son of man” (Luke 31:36). Nägelsbach beautifully suggests that it would be the Servant of the Lord who would open the blind eyes and lead the captives out of prison, making it possible for the blind and the deaf to see and hear.

9 Let all the nations be gathered together, and let the people be assembled: who among them can declare this, and shew us former things? let them bring forth their witnesses, that they may be justified: or let them hear, and say, [It is] truth.

Let all the nations be gathered together, and let the people be assembled: The Targum (T), for the second clause, has “Let the kingdoms be brought together.” The LXX (G) reads, “All the nations were assembled together; now let all the archons be assembled.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “All the nations are assembled together, and the tribes are gathered.” ¶ This is a command for the Lord’s missionaries to go forth and invite all to come onto Christ (see ISAIAH 18). Wade has: “Probably the prediction of Israel’s restoration, which the idols cannot parallel.” ¶ Who among them can declare this, and shew us former things? Let them bring forth their witnesses, that they may be justified: or let them hear, and say, [It is] truth. The Targum (T) has, “Who among them can declare this, and give us the joyful tidings of old? let them bring forth their witnesses, that they may be justified; let them hear, and let them speak the truth.” The LXX (6) reads, “Can any among them announce these things? Or can any tell you these things before hand? Let them produce their witnesses and be justified, and let them hear and tell things true.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Who among you can declare this, and shall make us hear the former things? let them bring forth their witnesses, let them be justified, and hear, and say: It is truth.” ¶ What is being declared? What does the word this (זאת) refer to? Who could have ever predicted the gathering of Israel from every corner of the globe in the latter days? Only God could declare it. It is a thrilling subject to meditate upon, and to see it evolving before our very eyes. This prophecy is being fulfilled now, two and a half millennia after it was made. Barnes says: “That they may be justified” – That it may be demonstrated that they are what they pretend to be, and that they are worthy of the confidence of people. The word ‘justified’ here, is used in the sense of being right, or true; – let them in this manner show that their claims are just, and well founded.”

¹⁰ Best to think of it regarding Judah and Ephraim, as representatives of all the tribes of Israel.

¹¹ Bruce R. McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, 2d ed., p. 184. Similarly, see also, Bruce R. McConkie, The Millennial Messiah: The Second Coming of the Son of Man, p.173–174.

10 Ye [are] my witnesses, saith the LORD, and my servant whom I have chosen: that ye may know and believe me, and understand that I [am] he: before me there was no God formed,[✓] neither shall there be after me.

✓ or, nothing formed of God

Ye [are] my witnesses, saith the LORD, and my servant whom I have chosen: The LXX (6) reads, “Be you witnesses for me: and as for me I myself am a witness saith the Lord God; and this servant of mine whom I have chosen.” Instead of servant, the Peshitta (5) has the plural, servants. Skinner well says: “To bear witness to Jehovah’s divinity is one of the functions of Israel as the Servant of the Lord.” And in regards to the Savior of mankind, He always bore witness of His Father, with tenderness and love. The Targum (7) has, “יְעֲבֹדֵי מְשִׁיחָא” and my servant Messiah, “Ye are my witnesses (literally, ‘before me’), saith the Lord, and my servant, the Messiah, in whom is my delight.” In the first line of the beautiful Hebrew prayer, based on Deuteronomy, שְׁמַע יִשְׂרָאֵל, Shema Yisrael, (Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God is one LORD: — Deuteronomy 6:4, also see 6:4–9), the first letter and the last letter are written in larger type and together they spell out the word witness, עֵד:

שְׁמַע יִשְׂרָאֵל יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵינוּ יְהוָה אֶחָד :

Gill points out: “And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness” (Revelation 1:5a); and “These things saith the Amen,¹² the faithful and true witness” (Revelation 3:14b). Jesus the Christ is the chosen servant spoken of in this verse. ¶ Ibn Ezra (in Rosenberg/Judaica Press) explains: “The intention is that there is, indeed, no time before God or after God, since He has no beginning and no end.” The Prophet Joseph Smith explained: “The elements are eternal. That which has a beginning will surely have an end; take a ring, it is without beginning or end—cut it for a beginning place and at the same time you have an ending place ... So it is with God.”¹³ Nägelsbach, a Gentile author, writing in 1884 (40 years after the martyrdom of the Prophet Joseph Smith), proceeds to add a second intellectual witness that what Brother Joseph taught was true: “And since whatever is made must have a beginning, and necessarily, too, must have an end, so must all these fictitious gods cease to be.” ¶ The verb to know (יָדַע) is the expression used for a husband and wife’s intimacy. The Lord is inviting us to know Him—more than just casually—and to believe and put our trust in Him. Baltzer says, “... it becomes clear that this is not merely a question of knowing in the intellectual sense.” ¶ Elder Dallin H. Oaks spoke about the importance of witnesses: “Witnesses and witnessing are vital in God’s plan for the salvation of His children. In the Godhead, the function of the Holy Ghost is to bear witness of the Father and the Son (see 2 Nephi 31:18). The Father has borne witness of the Son (see Matthew 3:17; 17:5; John 5:31–39), and the Son has borne witness of the Father (see John 17). The Lord has commanded His servants to testify of Him (see ISAIAH 43:10; Mosiah 18:9; D&C 84:62), and all of the prophets have borne witness of Jesus Christ (see Acts

¹² Fausset explains: “The saints used Amen at the end of prayer, or in assenting to the word of God; but none, save the Son of God, ever said, ‘Amen, I say unto you,’ for it is the language peculiar to God, who avers by Himself. The New Testament formula, ‘Amen. I say unto you,’ is equivalent to the Old Testament formula, ‘as I live, saith Jehovah.’” ACCS has: “Christ is the Amen. Primasius: ‘He who is the Amen says these words, the faithful and true witness.’ We must consider the meaning here of ‘is’ and ‘Amen.’ The term amen is certainly said to mean ‘true’ or ‘faithful.’ And so, in this passage without question it refers to that essence of the divinity of which God spoke when he said to Moses, ‘Thus you shall say to the Israelites, “He who has sent me to you.”’ [Exodus 3:14.] For he truly is, who is always the same. Commentary on the Apocalypse 3.14. [CCL 92:42].” Robertson’s Word Pictures has: “The Amen (אָמֵן). Personal (masculine article) name here alone, though in ISAIAH 65:16 we have ‘the God of Amen’ understood in the LXX as ‘the God of truth’ (τὸν θεὸν τὸν ἀληθινόν). Here applied to Christ. See Revelation 1:5 for ο μαρτυρὸς ο πιστος (the faithful witness) and Revelation 3:7 for ο ἀληθινός (the genuine), ‘whose testimony never falls short of the truth’ (Swete).”

¹³ TPJS

10:43; Revelation 19:10).¹⁴ ¶ With an allusion to Rain in Due Season, Ironside notes: “It is to Israel the Lord says, ‘Ye are my witnesses,’ and this is true of them whether they are obedient to Him or disobedient ... because God has given His testimony through Moses and other prophets showing just how He was going to deal with His people down through the centuries, the blessings that would be theirs, if they walked in obedience; the curses and judgments that would come upon them if they were disobedient ... Frederick the Great who had been listening to Voltaire’s agnostic ideas once asked one of his court chaplains, ‘If the Bible is true it ought to be capable of very clear and succinct witness. Generally when I ask if the Bible is true, I am handed some long scholarly volume which I have neither the time nor the patience to read. If your Bible is true, give me the proof of it in one word.’ The chaplain answered, ‘Sire, Israel.’ And Frederick acknowledged that this indeed is a proof that the Bible is true, the Word of the living God.” ¶ That ye may know and believe me, and understand that I [am] he: before me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after me. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “In order that ye may know, and that ye may believe in me, and understand that I am He who was from the beginning; yea, ages after ages are mine, and beside me there is no god.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, ““That you may know and believe and understand that with respect to me, The I am (Brenton, ‘and understand that I am he’), There is no other God before me; and after me none will exist.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “And understand that I myself am” instead of, “And understand that I [am] he.” ¶ Barnes has: “This expression is equivalent to that which occurs in the Book of Revelation, ‘I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last’ Revelation 1:11; and it is remarkable that this language, which obviously implies eternity, and which in Isaiah is used expressly to prove the divinity of Yahweh, is, in the passage referred to in the Book of Revelation, applied no less unequivocally to the Lord Jesus Christ.” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt explains the apparent contradiction between LDS doctrine and this passage, by focusing on the principle of one in purpose or of one in knowledge: “But,” inquires one, ‘how are you going to get along with the passage, in Isaiah, where the Lord declared that, ‘There is no God before me, nor shall there be any after me?’ How can we believe this, when we believe in the revelation given through Joseph Smith, which says there are many Gods, and that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob are Gods, and that all good men in this Church shall become Gods? Paul also speaks of the only wise God. Perhaps some may suppose that it is translated improperly. But you will find the same thing in the Book of Mormon (Mosiah

12:35) translated by the Urim and Thummim; the same things are also contained in the new translation of the book of Genesis, given to Moses, where the Lord declares that, ‘There is no God besides me.’ In these expressions, God has reference to the great principles of light and truth, or knowledge, and not to the tabernacles in which this knowledge may dwell; the tabernacles are many and without number, but the truth or knowledge which is often personified and called God, is one, being the same in all; God is one, being a unity, when represented by light, truth, wisdom, or knowledge; but when reference is made to the temples in which this knowledge dwells (1 Corinthians 3:16), the number of Gods is infinite.”¹⁵ Elder Bruce R. McConkie testified: “There is one everlasting gospel, one Mediator between God and men, one alone who came to reconcile fallen men to their Maker. All men in all ages are saved by the same power, the same laws, the same Savior. And that Savior is Christ.”¹⁶

11 I, [even] I, [am] the LORD; and beside me [there is] no saviour.

The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I am God and there is no Saviour besides me.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “I am, I am the Lord: and there is no saviour besides me.” ¶ I, I, Jehovah, אֲנִי יְהוָה. The word אֲנִי is the full or longer version of the more common word used for I, or אֲנִי (Gesenius) and is sometimes used in introductory formulas (אֲנִי יְהוָה) as in Exodus 20:2; Deuteronomy 5:6; or Hosea 12:10) and sometimes for emphasis (HAL). Cowles says: “The repetition of ‘I’ is emphatic; I, and none but myself, am the one only Jehovah, the changeless, the ever truthful and faithful one. There is no Savior besides me. None else has power to save. But this implies in the strongest manner that God has such power, and is a perfect Savior for all who accept him as such.” Jesus, from Ἰησοῦς, is the Greek equivalent name of the Hebrew Joshua, יְהוֹשֻׁעַ, meaning savior. Indeed, Jesus Ἰησοῦς is the very Christ Χριστός.

12 I have declared, and have saved, and I have shewed, when [there was] no strange [god] among you: therefore ye [are] my witnesses, saith the LORD, that I [am] God.

¹⁴ Elder Dallin H. Oaks, The Witness: Martin Harris, Ensign (CR), May 1999, p. 35

¹⁵ Pratt, Elder Orson. The Holy Spirit and the Godhead. A Discourse delivered in the open air, on the Temple Block, Great Salt Lake City, 18 February, 1855. Reported By: G. D. Watt.

¹⁶ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. The Seven Christs (or, rather, of the one Christ whose works and words are shown forth in seven ways). 1982.

I have declared, and have saved, and I have shewed, when [there was] no strange [god] among you: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “I, I have declared to Abraham your father what would come to pass; I, I redeemed you out of Egypt, as I swore to him between the pieces¹⁷; and I, I have made you to hear the doctrine of my law from Sinai, and ye are still alive, when there was no strange god among you.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “I have announced and saved; I reproached when there was no strange god among you.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) renders it that there was no strange god among the people. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “I have declared, and have saved. I have made it heard, and there was no strange one among you.” ¶ Wordsworth says: “And therefore ye [Israel] would not have learnt anything of the future from any other god but Me. Then Israel said, ‘The Lord alone did lead me, and there was no strange god with me’ (Deuteronomy 32:12).” Rashi, in Rosenberg/Slotki explains: “The word god is not in the text, but is to be understood.” In other words, it is an elliptical expression. ¶ Therefore ye [are] my witnesses, saith the LORD, that I [am] God. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “You are witnesses for me; and I the Lord am still the same God from the beginning.” Shalom Paul has: “The rabbis based a very daring midrash on this verse: “When you are My witnesses, I am God. When you are not My witnesses, it is as if I am not God” (Sifre Deuteronomy 144 [ed. Finkelstein], 403–4).” ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught of the importance of a testimony derived of the Spirit: “Now I do not minimize in any degree or to any extent the obligation that rests upon us to be gospel scholars, to search the revelations, to learn how to reason and analyze, to present the message of salvation among ourselves and to the world with all the power and ability we have; but that standing alone does not suffice. When that is all over, we have to comply with the command the Lord gave for us in this day: ‘... ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God.’ (ISAIAH 43:12.) We have to put an approving, divine seal on the doctrine that we teach and that seal is the seal of testimony, the seal of a personal knowledge borne of the Holy Ghost ... after you have reasoned and after you have analyzed, you have got to stand as a personal witness who knows what he is saying. You have to ... speak and teach by the spirit of prophecy and the spirit of revelation; and the result is that you speak as one having authority. This is the great thing that separates us from the world, and thanks be to God we have this knowledge. We have received this revelation, and we are in a position to speak as those having authority. (Bruce R. McConkie, Conference Report, Apr. 1973, pp. 36–37.)”¹⁸

¹⁷ Between the pieces, this is an allusion to Genesis 15:9–10.

13 Yea, before the day [was] I [am] he; and [there is] none that can deliver out of my hand: I will work, and who shall let it? ✓

✓ turn it back?

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Yea, from eternity I am He; and there is none that can deliver out of my hand: I will do it, and who shall turn it back?” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And there is none who can rescue out of my hands. I will act; and who can prevent it.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “Yea, from the first day I am he; and there is none that can deliver out of my hands; what I will do, who can stop it?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And from the beginning I am the same, and there is none that can deliver out of my hand: I will work, and who shall turn it away?” ¶ “And who shall let it?” is the equivalent of saying, “and who shall stop it?” Keith says: “The word ‘let’ is here used, as in other parts of Scripture, in the old English. but now obsolete, sense of hinder. The marginal || reading [i.e., and who shall turn it back, וְיָשִׁיבָהּ, וְיָמִי—GB] expresses better the Hebrew original.” Kimhi (in Rosenberg) has: “... he continues to tell us that God was God even before the Creation of the world.” Yes, before day one, before the first day, יוֹם אֶחָד. We have literally, “Even (yeah, also), from the day, I He,” הוּא אֲנִי הוּא.

vv. 14–21. Babylon will be punished. The Lord opened the Red Sea for Israel to pass. Waters will now pass through the desert. The Lord will give waters to His people. Israel shall praise the Lord.

14 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, your redeemer, the Holy One of Israel; For your sake I have sent to Babylon, and have brought down all their nobles, ✓ and the Chaldeans, whose cry [is] in the ships.

✓ bars

Thus saith the LORD, your redeemer, the Holy One of Israel; For your sake I have sent to Babylon. The Targum (Ⲯ) has the last clause as, “Because of your sins I led you captive to Babylon.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Thus saith the Lord, the God who redeemed you, the Holy One of Israel; For your sakes I will send to Babylon.” The Talmud tradition (Seder Mo’ed, Megilah

¹⁸ Testimony. Compiled by H. Stephen Stoker and Joseph C. Muren. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1980. 165–166. Emphasis added.

29a) renders this somewhat differently and speaks of the love of the Lord for His people Israel: “It has been taught: Rabbi Simon ben Yohai said: Come and see how beloved are Israel in the sight of God, in that to every place to which they were exiled the Shechinah went with them. They were exiled to Egypt and the Shechinah was with them, as it says, Did I reveal myself unto the house of thy father when they were in Egypt. They were exiled to Babylon, and the Shechinah was with them, as it says, for your sake I was sent to Babylon. And when they will be redeemed in the future, the Shechinah will be with them, as it says, Then the Lord thy God will return [with] thy captivity. It does not say here we-heshib [and he shall bring back] but we-shab [and he shall return]. This teaches us that the Holy One, blessed be He, will return with them from the places of exile” (Talmud, Soncino). ¶ Henderson explains that I have sent, שְׁלַחְתִּי, is the “prophetic future, indicating the absolute certainty.” ¶ I have sent to Babylon. Poole says, “I have sent Cyrus, and the Medes and Persians with him, to war against Babylon, to this very end and purpose, that he might deliver you out of captivity, and restore you to your land according to promise.” So also, now in the last days, has the Lord sent His ambassadors—His witnesses—to gather scattered Israel from mystical Babylon into Zion. So also Govett: “. . . our blessed Lord speaks as the Deliverer of Israel and their King, and thence continues his address to the end of the chapter. For his people’s sakes he declares that he smote the mystic Babylon and its inhabitants.” ¶ And have brought down all their nobles, and the Chaldeans, whose cry [is] in the ships. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “But I will prostrate all of them with their oars, yea, the Chaldeans in the ships of which they boast.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And rouse up all who are fleeing; and the Chaldeans shall be bound in ships.” The BPE (Ⓢ) has, “And made the fugitives return, even the Chaldeans who pride themselves in their ships.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, following the margin || in part, “And have brought down all their bars, and the Chaldeans glorying in their ships.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “The Chaldeans, flying from the Persian attack, betake themselves to their ships with cries of grief, the ships thereby becoming ‘ships of wailing.’” Wade instead offers: “The ships of their rejoicing is literally the ships of their ringing cry, the cry being usually understood of the loud vaunts with which the Babylonians expressed their pride in their vessels ...” Cheyne proposes: “The ships of their shouting] is one of those équivoques in which the prophets delight. It suggests that the very ships, which formerly resounded with shouts of exultation, now only echo with the cries of despair, and thus forms a condensed elegy on the strange περιπέτεια in the fortunes of the Chaldeans.” Skinner says: “... the idea must be that they shall all be sent down the Euphrates as fugitives in ships, which was precisely the manner in which Merodach-baladan made his escape from Sennacherib (see Schrader, Cuneiform Inscriptions, E. T. vol. II. p. 36). A description of the ships on the Euphrates is to be found in Herod. I. 194; they are here called ‘ships of rejoicing’ as having formerly been used for pleasure.” Rawlinson suggests: “The Chaldeans are not in Isaiah, as in Daniel, a special class of Babylonians, but, as elsewhere commonly in Scripture, the Babylonians generally.” Most translations retain the word ships. The idea seems to be that the Chaldeans were very proud of their ships and leaned upon them for their strength, yet their joy would be short-lived. ISV, instead, has “Now as for the Babylonians, their ringing cry will become lamentation.” GNB has, “I will break down the city gates, and the shouts of her people will turn into crying.” CEV has, “I will send an army against Babylon to drag its people away, crying as they go.” Because so many of the exegetes and Biblical versions speak of the margin ||, bars, and also fugitives, as another possible translation. Barnes opines: “The word used (כְּרִיחַ), means sometimes bar, cross-bar, that which passed from one side of the tabernacle to the other through rings, in order to carry it; thou a harbor bolt of any kind Judges 16:3; Nehemiah 3:3. But the word may also denote one who flies; a fugitive; and is properly used in that sense here. The verb כָּרַח, from which the word is derived, means often to break away, to flee Genesis 16:8; 35:1; 35:7; 1 Samuel 19:12; Job 27:22; Jonas 1:3. Here it means those who endeavored to escape from the impending calamity and destruction ... Jerome, however, understands it of removing the strong bars with which the prisoners of the exile Jews were protected, so that they would be permitted to go forth in peace and safety.” Gill says: “and have brought down all their nobles] from their seats of honour and glory, stripped them of all their grandeur and dignity, and reduced them to a low and mean estate. This is to be understood of the princes and nobles of Babylon ...” Wordsworth suggests: “In the Apocalypse, they who had once traded, in spiritual commerce, with the mystical Babylon, are represented as fleeing from her (see Revelation 18:15—18, ‘In one hour so great riches is come to nought. And every shipmaster, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea, stood afar off, and cried when they saw the smoke of her burning.’”

15 I [am] the LORD, your Holy One, the creator of Israel, your King.

The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I am the Lord God, your Holy One, who pointed out Israel your king.” ¶ The Lord is our King, despite our having rejected Him when we asked for a human king at the time of the Prophet Samuel. Ezekiel 37:22 in the 1611 AV has "... one King shall be king to them all," testifying precisely that this King would be our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

16 Thus saith the LORD, which maketh a way in the sea, and a path in the mighty waters;

The Targum (ܬ) has, "Thus saith the Lord, I am He who prepared a way in the sea, and a path in mighty waters." The LXX (ϸ) reads, "Thus saith the Lord who made a highway in a sea, and a path in the mighty water."

¶ Regarding ISAIAH 43:16–19 Birks points out: "... the Israelites are now reminded of the mighty power of God at the Exodus, where chariot and horse, army and power, fell under the stroke of His hand. Those earlier acts of judgment are to be followed by new things, works of mercy more excellent than 'the former things ...' The 'new thing' most moderns apply to the Return, but the Christian Fathers and Jewish Talmudists to the times of Messiah (Kimhi, Abarb., Rashi, Vitringa, Stier, &c.). The event predicted is some greater antitype of the desert journey in the days of Moses. But the Return from Babylon ... fell very greatly short of the wonders of the Exodus, however striking as a fulfilment of express prophecies. This seems a strong proof of the Messianic reference." This verse begins with the prophetic formula, Thus sayeth the LORD,

כֹּה אָמַר יְהוָה, making sure the reader pays more careful attention. Keith writes: "What formed the path of the Israelites was made the grave of the Egyptians. As the flame of tow is extinguished by water, so were they quenched by the waters of the Red Sea. The scriptural allusions to that disaster furnish some of the most sublime descriptions to be found in any language: 'Thou didst blow with the wind, the sea covered them: they sank as lead in the mighty waters' (Exodus 15:10)." Cowles says: "The whole description is graphic and terse, full of fire and withal of most impressive truth for the comfort of God's people in every age."

17 Which bringeth forth the chariot and horse, the army and the power; they shall lie down together, they shall not rise: they are extinct, they are quenched as tow.

The Targum (ܬ) has, "I who brought out the chariots, and horses, and a great host, yea, much people; they were swallowed up together, they did not rise, they were extinguished, they are extinct like glimmering wick is extinguished." The LXX (ϸ) reads, "Who brought out chariots and horses and a mighty host, but they lay down to sleep and shall rise no more: they were extinguished like an extinguished taper." The Peshitta (ܣ) uses the plural, chariots and horses. Furthermore, instead of "the army and the power," the Peshitta (ܣ) has "mighty army." The Douay-Rheims (ܕ) has, "Who brought forth the chariot and the horse, the army and the strong: they lay down to sleep together, and they shall not rise again: they are broken as flax, and are extinct."

¶ Of the Egyptian army, Orelli says: "As a firebrand thrown into the water hisses and smokes, so their barbarous might was smothered and quenched in the waves." Poole has: "As the wick of a candle when it is put into the water is wholly extinguished, and not the least spark of fire left, so were they utterly destroyed, and not one of them remained." This extinguish (כָּבַדָּה), this quenched as tow or smoking flax representing Pharaoh's army being put out by the Red Sea (כִּפְשֻׁתָּה כָּבוֹ), is a play on words from ISAIAH 42:3, wherein we hear the Messiah would not extinguish or quench the faltering wick (וּפְשֻׁתָּה כִּהְיֶה לֹא יִכְבֶּנָה), representing the most spiritually fragile.

18 Remember ye not the former things, neither consider the things of old.

The LXX (ϸ) reads, "Mention not these former things, nor reason from the things of old." The Douay-Rheims (ܕ) has, "Remember not former things, and look not on things of old." ¶ Cowles explains that the former things would be eclipsed by the new things. As Jeremiah says: "Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that they shall no more say, The LORD liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; But, The LORD liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land" (Jeremiah 23:7–8).

19 Behold, I will do a new thing; now it shall spring forth; shall ye not know it? I will even make a way in the wilderness, [and] rivers in the desert.

The Targum (ܬ) has, "Behold, I make a new thing, and now it shall be revealed: and will ye not know it? I will even make a way in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert." The LXX (ϸ) reads, "Behold I am in act to do new things, which shall now spring up and you shall know them—I will make a way in the wilderness, and streams of water in the desert." The Douay-Rheims (ܕ) has, “Verily you shall know them,” instead of “Shall ye not know it?” ¶ Kimhi (in Rosenberg/Slotki) says that rivers in the desert is “a greater miracle than turning the Red Sea to dry land.” Regarding a new thing, Poole well says: “such a work as was never yet done in the world, even the redemption of the world by the Messiah.” Then Bishop LeGrand Richards quoted ISAIAH 43:19–20 and shared: “The Prophet Joseph had declared that the Saints would continue to suffer persecution and be driven, and many would apostatize, and some would be put to death, and that they should ultimately be driven to the Rocky Mountains, and here they should become a mighty people in the Rocky Mountains ... I want to read to you ... from Isaiah with respect to what the Lord promised to do in the redemption of this wilderness, to make it blossom as the rose, and I want to say to you it is a miracle in my mind the part ‘water’ was to play in the redemption of latter-day Zion. Isaiah said: ‘Behold, I will do a new thing,’ and as far as my understanding of this scripture is concerned, that new thing was the great principle of irrigation. It is true the Saints had to make the canals, they had to make the ditches, they had to put in the dams, but the land might have remained arid had not the Lord put into their minds the inspiration to do this very thing, and that is what Isaiah saw that the Lord would do.”¹⁹

20 The beast of the field shall honour me, the dragons and the owls: ✓ because I give waters in the wilderness, [and] rivers in the desert, to give drink to my people, my chosen.

✓ or, ostriches, HEB. daughters of the owl

The beast of the field shall honour me, the dragons and the owls: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They shall honour me, when I make habitable provinces at the desert, and the places where the dragons and the daughters of the ostrich dwell.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “The wild beasts of the field will bless me—the Seirens (NETS, ‘sirens’) and the daughters of the ostrich.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) uses the plural, beasts. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has glorify instead of honour. I wonder if ISAIAH 34:14–17 is associated with these verses, in terms of the creatures that there represent the disciples of Jesus Christ and will leave to have an increase. ¶ Skinner suggests: “Even the wild beasts shall honour Jehovah, unconsciously, through their joy at the abundant supply of water.” And surely, not so unconsciously. ¶ Because I give waters in the wilderness, [and] rivers in the desert, to give drink to my people, my chosen. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Because I will give water in the wilderness, rivers in the desert, to give drink to the captives of my people (the Royal Polyglot omits נְלִיָּיָהּ, ‘captivity’), in whom I delight (or, ‘I have chosen’).” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Because I have given water in the wilderness, and flowing streams in the desert, to give drink to this race of mine which I have chosen.” Lowth similarly has: “The image is elegant and highly poetical. God will give such an abundant miraculous supply of water to his people traversing the dry desert, in their return to their country, that even the wild beasts, the serpents, the ostriches, and other animals that haunt those adust regions, shall be sensible of the blessing; and shall break forth into thanksgiving and praises to him for the unusual refreshment, which they receive from his so plentifully watering the sandy wastes of Arabia Deserta, for the benefit of his people passing through them.” Both of these deserts would be blessed, that of the Holy Land and that of the Rocky Mountains. See Elder LeGrand Richards testimony above. And then we have the desert of apostasy and the refreshing waters of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. In Jeremiah we read: “For my people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water” (emphasis added, Jeremiah 2:13). But all of that would change with the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, the establishment of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and the gathering of Israel.

21 This people have I formed for myself; they shall shew forth my praise.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “This people have I prepared for my service, they shall declare my praise.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “My people whom I have preserved to recount my praises.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) renders it something like, drink.” ¶ Birks says: “God must without fail be glorified in those whom He has formed for Himself, to shew forth His praise.” Cowles says: “ISAIAH 43:21 contains obvious allusions to ISAIAH 43:7. ‘This people that I have formed for myself’ are the same whom he has ‘created, formed and made for his glory.’ And yet, further, ISAIAH 44:3–5, doubtless refers to this and heightens the proof that this describes spiritual blessings upon the whole church ...”

vv. 22–27. As Cowles well says, “From such glorious views of the distant future, the prophet falls back upon the present state of the chosen people.” Govett says: “After these signal instances of his mercy, the Saviour beautifully contrasts with it their ingratitude towards him. Yet in spite of all, he ‘would blot out their transgressions for his own sake, and not remember their sins.”

¹⁹ Bishop LeGrand Richards, General Conference, October 1948, pp. 44–45.

22 ¶ But thou hast not called upon me, O Jacob; but thou hast been weary of me, O Israel.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “It hath been said by the prophets, that ye of the house of Jacob have not met together for my worship; but that ye were weary of the doctrine of my law, O Israel.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “I had not now called upon thee, Jacob, nor caused thee Israel.” For the second clause, the Peshitta (ⲩ) does not say that Israel has been weary of Him, but instead simply has, “I called thee, O Israel.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the second half, “Neither hast thou laboured about me, O Israel.” ¶ McFadyen says: “Jehovah had called Israel (ISAIAH 43:1), but Israel had not called upon Jehovah, nor hast thou wearied thyself about me.” Cheyne suggests: “thou hast not called upon me,” is that Israel had forsaken her prayers. Spurgeon says: “Alas, some of my hearers have never spoken with God in all their lives! They are not on speaking terms with Him—they do not know Him!” Skinner has: “Yet thou hast not called upon me] To call upon Jehovah ‘in the day of trouble’²⁰ was the first and most obvious duty of Israel (Psalm 50:15), but this duty Israel has neglected. The statement is of course general; it does not exclude the existence of a believing minority which poured out its heart in prayer to God. The position of the word ‘me’ is emphatic in the original; but the emphasis on the object throws a corresponding emphasis on the subject: ‘But not upon me hast thou called, Jacob’; it is I who have called thee (ISAIAH 41:9, ISAIAH 42:6, ISAIAH 43:1 &c.).” Note the similarity with ISAIAH 1:3 “The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master’s crib: but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider.” Here a contrast is made with those who praise the Lord (ISAIAH 43:20). הַלְלֵנוּ יְיָ.

23 Thou hast not brought me the small cattle ✓ of thy burnt offerings; neither hast thou honoured me with thy sacrifices. I have not caused thee to serve with an offering, nor wearied thee with incense.

✓ lambs, or, kids

Thou hast not brought me the small cattle of thy burnt offerings; neither hast thou honoured me with thy sacrifices. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thou hast not brought unto me the lambs of thy burnt offerings, and with thy holy sacrifices thou hast not honoured me.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “To weary thyself: thou hadst not brought me thy sheep of thy whole burnt offering; nor honoured me with thine incense offerings.” The Peshitta (ⲩ) uses the margin ||, lambs. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Thou hast not offered me the ram of thy holocaust, nor hast thou glorified me with thy victims.” ¶ Barnes explains: “The small cattle – Margin ||, ‘Lambs,’ or ‘kids.’ The Hebrew word (שׁוֹר) denotes properly one of a flock – a sheep or a goat.” Wordsworth writes: “The emphasis is on Me: thou hast given to strange gods the honour due to Me alone. See on Amos 5:25, ‘Have ye offered—unto Me sacrifices and offerings in the wilderness forty years, O house of Israel?’ No—not to Me, but to idols. Cp. on Acts 7:42–43.” Nägelsbach says: “[This does] not mean that Israel has never fulfilled the duties of divine service therein mentioned, but only that they have not fulfilled them i.e., not fully satisfied the requirements.” Alexander explains: “The whole Mosaic ritual is here represented by an enumeration of some of the principal offerings: the עֹלֹת, or general expiation; the זִבְחֵי, or animal sacrifices in general; the minhah, or meal-offering; and the lebonah, or aromatic fumigation.” ¶ I have not caused thee to serve with an offering, nor wearied thee with incense. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “I have not caused thee to multiply offerings, neither did I burden thee with frankincense.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “I had not burdened thee with sacrifices of flour; nor wearied thee with demands of frankincense.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has oblations instead of offering. ¶ Wordsworth suggests: “I have not burdened thee with service; but thou hast burdened Me by sin.” Barnes explains: “I have not caused thee to serve with an offering – ‘I have not made a slave of thee; I have not exacted such a service as would be oppressive and intolerable – such as is imposed on a slave.’ The word used here (עֲבַד), is often used in such a sense, and with such a reference Leviticus 25:39; ‘Thou shalt not compel him to serve the service of a bondman’ Exodus 1:14; Jeremiah 22:13; 25:14; 30:8. The sense is, that the laws of God on the subject, were not grievous and oppressive.” So also Faussett: “I have not caused thee to serve—that is, to render the service of a slave (Matthew 11:30; Romans 8:15; 1John 4:18; 5:3).” Spurgeon, speaking about our sacrifices, says: “Often we have the posture of devotion without devotion; the words of praise without the praise.” Jeremiah 7:23 (emphasis added) has: “But this thing commanded I them, saying, Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people: and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you.”

²⁰ See D&C 101:7–9.

24 Thou hast bought me no sweet cane with money, neither hast thou filled me[✓] with the fat of thy sacrifices: but thou hast made me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied me with thine iniquities.

✓ made me drunk, or, abundantly moistened

Thou hast bought me no sweet cane with money, neither hast thou filled me with the fat of thy sacrifices: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thou hast not bought for me the aromatic reed with silver; with the fat of thy holy sacrifices thou hast not anointed (literally, ‘made fat’) mine altar.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Nor hadst thou purchased with silver perfumes for me; nor had I desired the suet of thy sacrifices.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has victims instead of sacrifices. ¶ Rosenberg/Slotki point out the paronomasia between thou has bought (ⲡⲓⲛⲁ) and sweet cane (ⲡⲓⲛⲁ). Birks says: “The sweet cane, calamus aromaticus, is in high esteem in India, Western Asia, and Africa. It was an article of traffic often brought from a distance (Jeremiah 6:20), and a main ingredient in the holy anointing oil (Exodus 30:23).” Regarding the fat, Wade suggests, “This, in peace-offerings (which were for the most part consumed by the priest or the worshippers), was appropriated to the Lord (see Leviticus 3:4, 10, and cf. on ISAIAH 34:6). ¶ But thou hast made me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied me with thine iniquities. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “But thou hast multiplied thy sins before me; thou hast burdened me with thine iniquities.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “But thou stoodest before me in thy sins and in thine iniquities.” Instead of made me to serve with thy sins, the Peshitta (Ⲯ) has “burdened me with your sins.” ¶ Regarding ⲙⲉⲛⲉⲃⲣⲉⲛⲓ (thou hast made me to serve OR burdened) and ⲙⲉⲛⲉⲃⲣⲉⲛⲓ (thou hast wearied me), Henderson explains: “The verbs ⲙⲉⲛⲉⲃⲣⲉⲛⲓ and ⲙⲉⲛⲉⲃⲣⲉⲛⲓ are repeated with great effect from the preceding verse; and, as here used, are strongly anthropopathical.²¹” Kay has, speaking of the servitude of our Lord as He paid for our sins: “He had not made them to toil for His good; but they had reduced Him to the necessity of servitude. Verily, thou hast caused Me to labour (as a servant) by thy sins; thou hast made Me to toil by thine iniquities.—The next verse informs us of the nature of the work here spoken of: it was for the blotting out of Israel’s sins.—So that here we have an explanation of the mystery respecting the ‘Servant of the Lord.’ He who ‘bore our iniquities’ (ISAIAH 53:11) was none other than Jehovah Himself.”

²¹ Anthropopathic here means ascribing human feelings to God.

25 I, [even] I, [am] he that blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “I, even I, am He who forgiveth thy sins (Chaldee, ‘debt’), for the sake of my name, and thy sins shall not be remembered.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “I even I, THE I AM, am (Brenton, ‘I, even I, am he,’ NETS, ‘I am, I am the one’) he who blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake; and of thy sins I will no more make mention.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, for the first half, “I am, I am he that blot out thy iniquities for my own sake.” ¶ I have loved the Septuagint translation here. Nägelsbach has, “For if before the LORD there was no god, and there will be none after Him, then He is the One that was and shall be the eternally Existent, i. e., Jehovah (comp. Exodus 3:14). And, because this entire part of Isaiah deals with the deliverance of Israel and the ground and consequences of it, it is added: and beside Me there is no Saviour. Therefore Israel must take care not to look for its salvation from any other” (emphasis added). Skinner says: “In accordance with O.T. analogies, the act of forgiveness is described simply as ‘not remembering’ sin; but the actual working out of forgiveness in history calls into exercise the resources of Omnipotence; it includes all Jehovah’s dealings with His people, His handing them over to the dominion of the heathen (ISAIAH 43:28), and saving them again in His marvellous providence. The verse, moreover, contains only one half of the prophet’s teaching about forgiveness; the other half is the process by which the people are brought to repentance, and this is the work of the Servant of the Lord, as described in ISAIAH 53.” Gill has: “[Sin] which is here expressed by a ‘blotting’ them out, in allusion to the blotting of a debt book: sins are debts, and these are many, and which cannot be paid by the sinner; Christ has made full payment; as the surety of his people: upon this the debt book is crossed; these debts are remitted for his sake: or as a cloud is blotted out, dispelled by the wind, or scattered by the sun.” ¶ We read in Alma: “But few understood the meaning of those things, and this because of the hardness of their hearts. But there were many who were so hardened that they would not look, therefore they perished. Now the reason they would not look is because they did not believe that it would heal them. O my brethren, if ye could be healed by merely casting about your eyes that ye might be healed, would ye not behold quickly, or would ye rather harden your hearts in unbelief, and be slothful, that ye would not cast about your eyes, that ye might perish? If so, wo shall come upon you; but if not so, then cast about your eyes and begin to believe in the Son of God, that he will come to redeem his people, and that he shall suffer and die to atone for their sins; and that he shall rise again from the dead, which shall bring to pass the resurrection, that all men shall stand before him, to be judged at the last and judgment day, according to their works” (Alma 33:20–22). ¶ There is an eternal principle at play here, to include repentance or turning unto Christ, an effort to forsake our sins, restitution where possible, the forgiving of others who have sinned against us and above all, the expiatory sacrifice and grace of our Lord—without which none of this would be possible. Elder Boyd K. Packard made this power statement, “Those who make one serious mistake tend to add another by assuming that it is then too late for them. It is never too late! Never! ... The discouraging idea that a mistake (or even a series of them) makes it everlastingly too late does not come from the Lord.”²² As a son of Israel, it is comforting to me, נְחַמְנִי נְחַמְנִי, to read: (1) “For I am with thee, saith the LORD, to save thee: though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet I will not make a full end of thee: but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished” (Jeremiah 30:11, emphasis added); (2) “And they also of the tribe of Judah, after their pain, shall be sanctified in holiness before the Lord, to dwell in his presence day and night, forever and ever” (D&C 133:35, emphasis added). In ISAIAH 44:22, we will continue this conversation and speak particularly of the gift of grace that is so strongly involved in God’s forgetting our transgressions and in permitting us to forgive others and ourselves.

26 Put me in remembrance: let us plead together: declare thou, that thou mayest be justified.

The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Speak now, we will plead together, declare thou for the purpose, that thou mayest justify thyself, if thou art able to do so.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “But do thou mention them and let us be judged; do thou first state thy transgressions, that thou mayest be acquitted.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the second half, “Tell if thou hast anything to justify thyself.” ¶ Jennings says: “ISAIAH 43:26 is a gracious parallel to ISAIAH 1:18: ‘Come now, and let us reason together.’” ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie explains how the Savior will join us in pleading with the Father, much as in the intercessory prayer: “‘Let us plead together.’ That is, I, Jehovah, will join with you in a plea for forgiveness from our Father, if you will keep my commandments.”²³ The Savior can be our advocate with the Father. We can be made clean so long as the Lord acknowledges us before the Father and does not bid us depart (see Matthew 7:21–23).

27 Thy first father hath sinned, and thy teachers[✓] have transgressed against me.

✓ interpreters

The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Thy first father hath sinned, and thy teachers have rebelled against my Word.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Your fathers first, then your chiefs transgressed against me.” Instead of teachers, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has rulers (Lamsa) / governors (BPE). ¶ There is a question as to what first father or אֲבִיךָ הָרִאשׁוֹן really means. Henderson suggests: “The parallelism requires us to understand a person in office, and none is so likely to be intended as the High Priest. רִאשׁוֹן, first, is used not only of time, but also of dignity, as 1 Chronicles 18:17; and כֹּהֵן הָרִאשׁוֹן, the lead or chief priest, and simply הָרִאשׁוֹן, the chief ... At the same time, there is no reason to conclude that only one High Priest is meant.” ¶ Regarding interpreters (see margin ¶), Birks suggests: “... thine interpreters, i.e. the professed expounders of the Divine will (cf. Job 33:23), especially the prophets: for the unfaithfulness of such.” So also Whitehouse, “The interpreters or ‘intermediaries’ are here the prophets, who are the interpreters of God’s will to men. The reference is to the false prophets such as Isaiah denounced (29:9–10) and whom Micaiah confronted (1 Kings 22), in the ninth century (853 BC), and in more recent times Jeremiah 23:11–18; 26:8–15; 27:9–18; 28:10–17, &c.). No doubt priests are also included.” Gill has: “and thy teachers have transgressed against me; or ‘interpreters’; of the law to the people, the Priests and Levites, Scribes and Pharisees; such who should have taught the people, and instructed them in the knowledge of divine things, and interceded with God for them; these were transgressors of the law themselves, as well as despisers of the Gospel ...” ¶ Cheyne makes a particularly beautiful contribution here, explaining that these passages “prepare us for the announcement of a Higher Mediator,” one in whom the Lord is “so ‘well pleased’ that he cannot refuse to accept his intercession.” So we see a contrast between the unconverted deceitful priests, high priests and false prophets with the perfect “merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people” (Hebrews 2:17b), even Jesus Christ our Lord.

²² Packer, Boyd K. Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1991.

²³ Bruce R. McConkie, The Promised Messiah: The First Coming of Christ, p. 332.

28 Therefore I have profaned the princes[✓] of the sanctuary, and have given Jacob to the curse, and Israel to reproaches.

✓ or, holy princes

The Targum (ܬ) has, “Therefore I have profaned the princes of the sanctuary, and I have delivered Jacob to the slaughter, and Israel to reproaches.” The LXX (Ϝ) reads, “When the chiefs polluted my sanctuary, then I gave up Jacob to be destroyed, and Israel to reproach.” For the first clause, likewise, instead of the Masoretic text (מ) rendering, the Peshitta (ܫ) has, “Thy princes have profaned the sanctuary.” The Douay-Rheims (ϥ) has, as in the margin ||, principes sanctos (Vulgate, ϥ), “And I have profaned the holy princes, I have given Jacob to slaughter, and Israel to reproach.” ¶ Regarding אֶתְּחַלֵּל, and profaned (root, חָלַל), Cowles has: “The Hebrew word means etymologically to pierce, to mutilate, to treat as worthless and not as sacred. Speaking of those who were by their office, sacred, holy men, God says, I will strip them of everything sacred and treat them as having no sanctity, but as being worthless ... blighting judgments that must come on a recreantly apostate people for their rebellion against God.” Barnes explains: “Therefore I have profaned –

The princes of the sanctuary, that is, the priests, were by their office regarded as sacred, or set apart to the service of God. To depose them from that office, to subject them to punishment, and to send them into captivity, was, therefore, regarded as profaning them. They were stripped of their office, and robes, and honors, and reduced to the same condition, and compelled to meet with the same treatment, as the common people. The sense is, that he had made them common (for so the word חָלַל is used in Exodus 31:14; 19:22; Leviticus 19:8; 21:9; Malachi 1:12; 2:2); he did not regard their office; he used them all alike.” Henderson suggests that “שָׂרֵי קֹדֶשׁ, princes of the sanctuary,²⁴ are the priests (1 Chronicles 24:5).” Barnes explains: “The princes of the sanctuary – Margin ||, ‘Holy princes.’ It means, either those who presided over and directed the services of the sanctuary, called in 1 Chronicles 24:5, ‘governors of the sanctuary;’ or those who were holy in office. The Septuagint renders it, Οἱ ἄρχοντες τὰ ἅγια μου – ‘Who preside over my holy things,’ or my sanctuary.”

FIRST POSTED: 21 April 2015

²⁴ Or, holy princess (see margin).

Isaiah 44

The Lord's tender mercies and love for Israel are manifested as He reiterates the glorious promises made in Rain in Due Season. Israel would be converted and forgiven of her sins. The atonement is declared as well as an invitation to come unto Christ and take full advantage of His expiatory sacrifice. Anything that retards our efforts to keep the commandments is a form of idolatry. President Brigham Young challenged: "... you dare not quite give up all your hearts to God, and become sanctified throughout, and be led by the Holy Ghost from morning until evening, and from one year's end to another ... If I were to ask you individually, if you wished to be sanctified throughout, and become as pure and holy as you possibly could live, every person would say yes; yet if the Lord Almighty should give a revelation instructing you to be given wholly up to Him, and to His cause, you would shrink, saying, 'I am afraid he will take away some of my darlings.' (Journal of Discourses, 2:134)." Cyrus is named by name before he was born.

vv. 1–8. Keith says of the first five verses: "The first verses are fully explained only by referring them to the final conversion of Israel" (emphasis added). There is a witness-redemption motif in these verses and chapters. Baltzer has: "The prophet Jeremiah 'redeems' a field during the siege of Jerusalem. His uncle's son sums up the nature of the legal act in a single sentence: 'Buy my field that is at Anathoth in the land of Benjamin, for the right of possession by inheritance and the "redemption" (הִנְאָלָה) is yours.' But in what detail the act is described, with the drawing up of the double document, the weighing up of the price—all of it in the presence of witnesses!" Baltzer then goes on to point out a similar situation in the case of Ruth the Moabite (Ruth 4:1–22). "As far as the text is concerned," Baltzer continues, "this means that Yahweh took advantage of the opportunity to buy back, or redeem." Israel, then, has been chosen by the Lord. The spirit, symbolized by water, is poured upon the converts. They, in turn, manifest their love for the Lord. Only those who receive revelation from God have the prophetic gift.

1 ¶ YET now hear, O Jacob my servant; and Israel, whom I have chosen:

The Targum (ܬ) has, "or, I delight in" as another translation of chosen. The LXX (Ϯ) reads, "But now, hear, Jacob my servant, and thou Israel, whom I have chosen." The Peshitta (ܫ) adds to me after hear. The Lord uses the command, "Hear, O Israel" (שְׁמַע יִשְׂרָאֵל), or "Hear, O Jacob" (שְׁמַע יַעֲקֹב), to announce that He is about to say something very important. The Prophet Joseph Smith taught: "It is a great thing to inquire at the hands of God, or to come into His presence." For that is precisely what happens, we come into His presence, as we pray and as we receive answers to our prayers. ¶ My servant Israel.

With these words the Lord is acknowledging his relationship with Israel as if He had said my people. Calvin suggests: "In this passage I consider the particle (י)¹ to mean But or Yet, as in many other passages. As if he had said, 'Though grievous afflictions are about to overtake thee, yet now hear what I will do for thy sake.' The verse must be viewed in connection with the former argument, because the Lord declares that he will never permit his people to perish altogether, though they be grievously afflicted." ¶ Whom I have chosen. A number of exegetes mistakenly confuse election as predestination: that is, the deceitful notion that men were chosen before the foundation of the earth to either be damned or to be saved so it matters not what man does during mortality. It proposes that there is no moral agency with the attendant consequences. Such a false notion of predestination is the satanic imitation of the concept of foreordination.² It negates the very purpose of mankind's coming upon the earth: to gain a body and to be tested. Regarding the use of the word predestinate in Romans 8:29–30, the Prophet Joseph Smith explained that an "unconditional election of individuals to eternal life was not taught by the Apostles" (DHC 4:358–360).³ ¶ Simeon has: "It is of great importance to notice the tender and affectionate manner in which God addresses his people; because it is from thence that we collect the most just conceptions of his condescension and grace, and derive the richest encouragement to wait upon him.”

¹ Often י is translated as and, but can also mean but, yet, and so on.

² "In the premortal spirit world, God appointed certain spirits to fulfill specific missions during their mortal lives. This is called foreordination. Foreordination does not guarantee that individuals will receive certain callings or responsibilities. Such opportunities come in this life as a result of the righteous exercise of agency, just as foreordination came as a result of righteousness in the premortal existence ... The doctrine of foreordination applies to all members of the Church, not just to the Savior and His prophets. Before the creation of the earth, faithful women were given certain responsibilities and faithful men were foreordained to certain priesthood duties. As people prove themselves worthy, they will be given opportunities to fulfill the assignments they then received." (<https://www.lds.org/topics/foreordination>). Also see notes associated with ISAIAH 44:2.

³ Teaching of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

2 Thus saith the LORD that made thee, and formed thee from the womb, [which] will help thee; Fear not, O Jacob, my servant; and thou, Jesurun, whom I have chosen.

Thus saith the LORD that made thee, and formed thee from the womb, [which] will help thee. The LXX (6) reads, “Thus saith the Lord, the God who made thee, and who formed thee from the womb, still thou shalt be helped.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Thus saith the Lord that made and formed thee, thy helper from the womb.” ¶ Formed from the womb. As members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints we believe that we are the literal spirit children of loving heavenly parents. We are known of God, the Eternal Father, “that made thee from before the womb,” which is what the expression (יְצַרְךָ מִבֶּטֶן) means, with the ellipses. The idea is more explicitly communicated in Jeremiah 1:5a: “Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee,” בְּטֶרֶם אֶצְוֶרְךָ בֶּבֶטֶן יָדַעְתִּיךָ. We here find out, that each one of us was known of the Father from the pre-existence. In the Book of Abraham we learn that like Jeremiah, there were others who were chosen before birth: “Now the Lord had shown unto me, Abraham, the intelligences that were organized before the world was; and among all these there were many of the noble and great ones; And God saw these souls that they were good, and he stood in the midst of them, and he said: These I will make my rulers; for he stood among those that were spirits, and he saw that they were good; and he said unto me: Abraham, thou art one of them; thou wast chosen before thou wast born” (Abraham 3:21–22). We further learn from the Prophet Joseph Smith: “Every man who has a calling to minister to the inhabitants of the world was ordained to that very purpose in the Grand Council of heaven before this world was ... I suppose I was ordained to this very office in that Grand Council.”⁴ Israel was also so called and chosen in the most beautiful sense of the word. Once we return to the presence of God, after we die, we will know who we were before we were born. Will we be filled with joy or regret? I am so grateful for latter-day prophets who make these matters perfectly clear to us. President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “Every soul coming into this world came here with the promise that through obedience he would receive the blessings of salvation. No person was foreordained or appointed to sin or to perform a mission of evil.”⁵ ¶ Fear not, O Jacob, my servant; and thou, Jesurun, whom I have chosen. The Targum (7) has in some instances יֵשׁוּרוּן, “Jesurun,” (or, Ishurun) and others יִשְׂרָאֵל, “Israel” while the Masoretic text (8) has יֵשׁוּרוּן, Jesurun (or, Ishurun). The LXX (6) reads, “Fear not, thou my servant Jacob, and thou, beloved Israel, whom I have chosen.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Fear not, O my servant Jacob, and thou most righteous whom I have chosen.” ¶ Regarding יֵשׁוּרוּן, Cowles explains: “‘Jesurun,’ another name for Jacob, occurs elsewhere only in Deuteronomy 32:15, and 33:5, 26. Etymologically it means the upright one; but whether it be a diminutive expressing the additional idea of endearment (my dear little one), is yet in dispute⁶ among learned critics.” Jenour likewise has: “[Jesurun means] “the upright, or holy one ... Thus the Jewish church is called Jeshurun: Deuteronomy 32:15. And St. Paul addresses the whole church at Corinth as ‘Sanctified in Christ Jesus.’” ¶ Many exegetes suggest that יַעֲקֹב Jacob was not a good person in his youth. It has been proposed that his name is associated with עֶקֶב, heel, or taking hold of the heel. To this last point I have no qualms with. But I have always resented the insinuations that Jacob’s true name was also linked with deceit, such as the word supplanter and others associated with this great prophet who undoubtedly was among the great and noble in the pre-existence. Of course there have been great prophets who have repented of their immoral youthful ways as was Alma the younger. But I have always felt that Jacob is unfairly judged. In one of my lexicons I find that עֶקֶב also means “‘may (God) protect’ or ‘(God) protected’” (HAL). The voice against Jacob is a voice of calumny—the same voice we so often hear against Abraham in the matter of Sarai—by those who do not see the hand of God in it. ¶ Elder Erastus Snow explains: “Now we will pass by the places in the Bible which speak of this birthright until we come to Isaac, the son of Abraham, and to Jacob, the son of Isaac, who bought the birthright of his brother Esau. From the story that is told of Rebekah helping her son Jacob to get the first blessing from his father Isaac, on purpose to secure the birthright from his brother Esau, many would be inclined to think that deceit, dishonesty and unrighteous means were employed to secure it, and they perhaps wonder why it should be so. This was really not the case; it is only made to appear so in the eyes of those who do not understand the dealings of God with man, and the workings of the Holy Spirit to bring about His purposes. There was neither unrighteousness in Rebekah nor in Jacob in this matter; but on the contrary, there was the wisdom of the Almighty, showing forth his providences in guiding them in such a manner as to bring about his purposes, in influencing Esau to transfer his birthright to Jacob, that He might ratify and confirm it upon the head of Jacob; knowing as He did that Jacob and his seed were, and would be, more deserving of the birthright, and would magnify it in its true spirit. While Esau did not sense nor appreciate his condition and birthright; he did not respect it as he should have done, neither did he hearken to the counsels of his father and mother. On the contrary, he went his own way with a stubborn will, and followed his own passions and inclinations and took to wife one of the daughters of the Canaanites whom the Lord had not blessed; and he therefore rendered himself unacceptable to God and to his father and mother. He gave himself to wild pursuits—to hunting, and to following the ways of the Canaanites, and displeased the Lord and his parents, and was not worthy of this right of seniority. The Lord therefore saw fit to take it from him, and the mother was moved upon to help the younger son to bring about the purpose of the Lord, in securing to himself the blessing through the legitimate channel of the Priesthood. And as you know, his father was induced to bless him and confirm this blessing upon him.”⁷ God also has a wonderful plan to bless Esau and his descendants.

⁴ History of the Church, 6:364; Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 365. Also see notes associated with ISAIAH 44:1, regarding foreordination.

⁵ Smith, Joseph Fielding, Doctrines of Salvation.

⁶ Nägelsbach in his “Textual and Grammatical” section does an excellent job in not only admitting the possibility of the diminutive in יֵשׁוּרוּן, but also of exploring the possibility that the word Zion has a similar root, and also means “firmly set up, firmly founded” and even explains that “Mt. Zion [is] called Zehjun in Syriac and Arabic.” I highly recommend the whole section of Nägelsbach’s thorough and logical discussion on יֵשׁוּרוּן (see pages 473–474). Plus, to his credit, Nägelsbach does not fall into the silliness of making a false contrast between יִשְׂרָאֵל and יֵשׁוּרוּן, using the negative tack of so many exegetes.

3 For I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring:

⁷ Snow, Elder Erastus. “The Order and Duties of the Priesthood, Etc.” Discourse by President John Taylor and Elder Erastus Snow, delivered at Paris, Bear Lake, Sunday Morning, August 8, 1880. Journal of Discourses, Vol. 21, No. 40, pp. 358–372. This portion of the talk was given by Elder Erastus Snow, in the presence of President Taylor.

The Targum (ⴚ) has, “For as waters are discharged upon the thirsty land, and are set flowing upon the dry land, so will I give my Holy Spirit unto thy children, and my blessing unto thy children’s children.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For I will give water in their thirst to them who are travelling in a desert. I will put my spirit on thy seed, and my blessings on thy children.” The Douay-Rheims (ⵔ) has, “For I will pour out waters upon the thirsty ground, and streams upon the dry land: I will pour out my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thy stock.” ¶ Ibn Ezra writes: “As I pour water over the place that is thirsty, so will I pour out the spirit of my holiness, or of my salvation, etc.” Nägelsbach says: “[Israel is called to] proclaim the praise of Jehovah (ISAIAH 43:21). It is enabled to do so by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. The Prophet here returns to the sphere of thought of ISAIAH 43:20.” Israel is now being gathered again from every continent and every clime. ¶ Simon states: “‘I will pour (not merely sprinkle, but pour) water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground;’ even such abundance, as shall be sure to reach the roots, and produce, not a transient change, like that of grass upon the house-top, but a radical and permanent change, both of heart and life.” Rawlinson says: “We may note here that the ‘water’ is only poured on him who is athirst for it.” Rabbi Rosenberg informs us that both “Redak and Abarbanel equate this prophecy with that of Joel (as do Ironside, Cowles, and others).” In Joel 2:28–29 we see: “And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit.” Cowles remarks: “The pouring forth of water, in showers or otherwise, is a frequent and pertinent figure for the bestowment of copious blessings. Thus Malachi 3:10; ‘I will pour you out a blessing till there is not enough;’ and Ezekiel 34: 26; ‘I will make the places round about my hill a blessing, and I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessings.’ It is an interesting fact that the Lord uses precisely this figure in prophecy to represent the copious effusions of his Spirit in the gospel age and especially in its latter days. That this passage refers to the Spirit is shown by the parallelism: ‘I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed; my blessing upon thine offspring.’ ... The words of Christ (as in John 7, etc.) seem to refer to this passage. The prophet says, ‘I will pour water on him that is thirsty;’ corresponding to which, Jesus cries, ‘If any man thirst let him come unto me and drink.’ ... Let it be further observed that Isaiah manifestly has the same great blessings in mind in the passage (43:18–21); ‘I will give waters in the wilderness and rivers in the desert, to give drink to my people, my chosen.’” ¶ Regarding Joel, in 1961, Elder Franklin D. Richards said: “When the Angel Moroni first visited the Prophet Joseph, he quoted from the second chapter of Joel: ‘And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh’ (see Joel 2:28; JS—H 1:41). Moroni told the Prophet that this was not yet fulfilled but would be soon. I am confident, my brothers and sisters, that this prophecy is now being fulfilled.” President Gordon B. Hinckley likewise said: “I think we are living in the day of the fulfillment of the word of the Lord given through the Prophet Joel, and repeated by Moroni in his first visitation to the Prophet Joseph. ‘And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh’ (Joel 2:28). I believe, my brethren, that we are living in the day when the Spirit of the Lord is being poured out upon all flesh.” ¶ Spiritual outpourings and blessings on the land often go hand in hand. We read in the Book of Mormon, “... inasmuch as ye shall keep the commandments of God ye shall prosper in the land; and inasmuch as ye will not keep the commandments of God ye shall be cut off from his presence” (Alma 38:1, also see 2 Nephi 4:4). Whitehouse observes that “a land that is cursed is devoid of rain (2 Samuel 1:21),” and that the pouring forth of rain [usually] “betokens ... the removal of the ban” through “God’s forgiving mercy.” I believe this is true and that when we follow God’s commandments He will pour rain (literal) as well as rain (blessings) upon us, to give us Rain in Due Season (see Leviticus 26:3–4a). And lest some think that these promises and warnings were only intended of people of old, the Lord says: “And they [these blessings and cursing] shall be upon thee for a sign and for a wonder, and upon thy seed for ever [עַד-עוֹלָם]” (Deuteronomy 28:46).

4 And they shall spring up [as] among the grass, as willows by the water courses.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “The righteous shall grow, and tender and delicate as the flowers of the grass, as a tree that sends forth its roots by the streams of water.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “; and they shall spring up like grass among water, and like a willow by the side of a flowing stream.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϲ) has, “And they shall spring up among the herbs, as willows beside the running waters.” ¶ About the willows, Wordsworth says: “A joyful contrast to the melancholy willows by the waters of Babylon, on which the exiles of Judah hung their harps in sorrow (Psalm 137:2). These willows, of which the Prophet now speaks, are like the festive willows of the joyful solemnity of Tabernacles (Leviticus 23:40).” ¶ Lowth strongly suggests the LXX (ϸ) reading (see above). Regarding בְּבִינִי, Alexander has: “the true explanation has been long since given by Vitringa, namely, that בִּינִי has here its primitive and proper use, as a noun corresponding to the English midst.” So also the correct translation of Zechariah 13:6, rather than the usual between. ¶ Barnes says: “A similar figure [as is found in ISAIAH 44:4] to denote the prosperity and happiness of the righteous occurs in Psalm 1:3: ‘And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water ...’”

5 One shall say, I [am] the LORD'S; and another shall call [himself] by the name of Jacob; and another shall subscribe [with] his hand unto the LORD, and surname [himself] by the name of Israel.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “This one shall say, I am of them that fear the Lord, and another shall pray in the name of the God of Jacob; this one shall offer his oblation before the Lord, and draw near in the name of Israel.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “One will say, ‘I belong to God;’ and another will call himself by the name of Jacob; and another will write on his hand, ‘I belong to God;’ and will surname himself by the name of Israel.” These three different examples of showing love for the Lord—or entering into a covenant relationship with Him—are each preceded by a בִּינִי (this one): “This one shall say, I am Jehovah’s; and this one will call himself by the name of Jacob; and this one shall write with his hand, For Jehovah, and be surnamed by the name of Israel” (LITV). This verse speaks of the seed of Israel (ISAIAH 44:3)—granted, most of whom do not *know*⁸ they are Jacob’s seed—and who now are converted and are represented as entering into a covenant with the Lord. Some have confused writing or subscribing with the hand with on the hand. Delitzsch well says in rejecting the latter: “But apart from the fact that כָּתַב, with an accusative of the writing materials, would be unprecedented (the construction required would be עַל-יָדוֹ)⁹, this view is overthrown by the fact that tattooing was prohibited by the Israelitish law (Leviticus 19:28; compare the mark of the beast in

⁸ Generally, it is mostly those of Judah who know of their literal descent from Israel. I watched a documentary that showed how a substantial portion of Jews, especially those who lived in 19th century Russia and were not able to emigrate, tried to hide their heritage. This sort of thing has probably been happening for centuries. I have two Hispanic friends, one from Argentina, and one from Mexico, both of whom were declared of the house of Judah by their patriarch, and neither of them knew it before their blessing. In the case of my Argentinean friend, he is probably a descendant of Jews who recently (perhaps last hundred years or so) emigrated to escape persecution. Perhaps my Mexican friend inherited her blood from the natives of the American continent who are descendants of Zedekiah through Mulek.

⁹ Upon the hand.

Revelation 13:16).” Regarding this verse Calvin says: “He describes something new and uncommon, for he who formerly had nothing to do with God shall boast that God hath adopted him.” My father has spoken to me about a book called God in Search for Man, by Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel, which title has a similar sentiment. I certainly feel as if I am that man who had nothing to do with God, yet have been invited by the Holy One of Israel to follow Him. And I feel to glory in the Father and the Son and praise them forever. ¶ Jenour explains, “Shall sign himself as Jehovah’s. That is, shall solemnly bind himself to become the servant of Jehovah. There seems to be an allusion to the manner making contracts among the Jews, when probably, as with us, the parties signed their names to the conditions mutually agreed upon.” ¶ “Your endowment is,” President Brigham Young explained, “to receive all those ordinances in the House of the Lord, which are necessary for you, after you have departed this life, to enable you to walk back to the presence of the Father, passing the angels who stand as sentinels, being enabled to give them the key words, the signs and tokens, pertaining to the Holy Priesthood, and gain your eternal exaltation . . .”¹⁰ Ibn Ezra suggests: “And another shall subscribe unto the Lord, that he is willing to go to the sanctuary of the Lord.” Barnes suggests: “It is enrolled by the voluntary desire of him who makes the profession among his friends. It is done, after the manner of solemn compacts among men, in the presence of witnesses” (emphasis added). Isaiah was seeing a future time when there would be many who would spring up throughout the world and dedicate themselves to be servants or disciples of the Lord Jesus Christ. ¶ In regards to יָכַתְבּ יְדוֹ (write with his hand) I wonder if it is symbolic of the law written deeply in the hearts of the disciples of Christ, “But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people” (Jeremiah 31:33). Note then, that if there is a writing to be done, it is the Lord who writes in our hearts. Part of our covenant, is it not, that we “turn away [our] foot [and also our hand] ... not doing [our] own ways, nor finding [our] own pleasure, nor speaking [our] own words [but rather, instead] honour Him” (see ISAIAH 58:13) and speak by the Spirit and live by the Spirit? Is it not also when we raise our hands to sustain the Brethren? Are not all of these things what it means to subscribe with [our] hand unto the Lord? Gill says, “... shall give his hand and seal to serve the Lord; shall esteem it his high and great privilege to be written among the living in Jerusalem and to have his name registered among the saints, and in their church book.” Better, I say, in the Lamb’s Book of Life.¹¹

6 Thus saith the LORD the King of Israel, and his redeemer the LORD of hosts; I [am] the first, and I [am] the last; and beside me [there is] no God.

The Targum (T) has, beginning with the third clause, “I am He who was from the beginning, yea, eternities of eternities are mine; and beside me there is no God.” The LXX (G) reads, “THUS saith God, the King of Israel, and his Redeemer, the God of Hosts, I am the first and I am the last: besides me there is no God.” Instead of redeemer, the Peshitta (S) has savior. ¶ Once again we have an allusion to the Shema Yisrael: “Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God the LORD is one — Deuteronomy 6:4):

שְׁמַע יִשְׂרָאֵל יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵינוּ יְהוָה אֶחָד :

See ISAIAH 43:10 for important additional comments—one in purpose. Horsley says: “... God here appeals as a proof of his sole Godhead, is the general redemption of mankind by a descendant of Abraham [Christ]. The deliverance of the Jews by Cyrus is mentioned afterwards only as an earnest of that greater mercy.” In other words, if God could make good what He said about Cyrus, He also would make good the promises made about the promised Messiah. ¶ I first and I last, אֲנִי רִאשׁוֹן וְאֲנִי אַחֲרִיִן. Govett reminds us that in Revelation 1:11, the Savior takes upon Himself this same title or name (τὸ Ἀλφα καὶ τὸ Ω, the Alpha and the Omega, also see Revelation 1:8; 22:13 and in the latter days, throughout the D&C). ¶ Keith says: “The Lord, as if to meet the weakness of Israel’s faith in his word, reminds them who had given the promise, and what was the relation in which he stood to them. While he was the Lord he was also the King of Israel; while he was the Lord of hosts he was also the Redeemer of Israel.” Nägelsbach explains what it means for the Lord to be the Alpha and Omega or the Beginning and the End: “To Him everything, beginning and end, is absolutely present.” Nägelsbach then adds: “Therefore, too, He can prophesy, and therefore prophesying by means of a decree is proof of His eternity, i.e., of His divinity.” ¶ When the Lord says that beside Him there are no Gods, He is speaking, on the one hand, of the unity of the Godhead; and on the other hand, related to that which pertains to us. “For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many,) But to us there is but one

¹⁰ Young, President Brigham. Journal of Discourses 2:31, 1854.

¹¹ Gill does mention the Lamb’s book of life, but does so in ISAIAH 44:7.

God, the Father” (1Corinthians 8:5–6a). There are a number of interesting scriptures that also give us a hint on the very same matter: “God has taken his place in the divine council; in the midst of the gods he holds judgment” (ESV). And in Genesis, of course, we have such scriptures as: “And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness” (Genesis 1:26a, emphasis added) and “And the LORD God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil” (Genesis 3:22a, emphasis added). We continue this conversation in ISAIAH 44:8.

7 And who, as I, shall call, and shall declare it, and set it in order for me, since I appointed the ancient people? and the things that are coming, and shall come, let them shew unto them.

The Targum (T) has, “Who like me shall proclaim this, shall declare it, and set it in order before me, from the time that I appointed the ancient people? and let them declare unto us the things that are coming, and shall come.” The LXX (S) reads, “Who is like me? Let him stand up and call and announce, and make ready for me: In as much as I have made a man for this age, let them now tell you the train of events before they come to pass.” The Lamsa Peshitta (S) has, “And who is like me? Let him announce it and set it in order and declare it, since I placed the people on the earth for ever. And let them show the wonders that are coming.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Who is like to me? let him call and declare: and let him set before me the order, since I appointed the ancient people: and the things to come, and that shall be hereafter, let them shew unto them.” ¶ Jenour has: “*Since I appointed the people of an eternal duration.*¹² That is, since I called Abraham and his posterity to be to me a peculiar people, that should never be destroyed. Vitranga refers to Genesis 17:7, and Jeremiah 31:36, as confirming this interpretation.” Wordsworth says: “The ancient people. Rather, the eternal people; literally, the people of eternity (Heb. עַם-עוֹלָם: cp. LXX (S) here), the visible Church of God, existing in Adam, Abel, Seth, Noah, Abraham, David, with whom God made an everlasting covenant (2 Samuel 23:5), berith olam [בְּרִית עוֹלָם], as He did with Noah (Genesis 9:16), and Abraham (Genesis 17:7), and to whom He promised eternal continuance, and an eternal kingdom in Christ, in Whom all who believe are admitted into an evesrlasting covenant (ISAIAH 55:3) [בְּרִית עוֹלָם], and are loved with everlasting kindness

(ISAIAH 54:8) [תְּסֵד עוֹלָם], and have a sure title to everlasting salvation. Cp. ISAIAH 45:17 [תְּשׁוּעַת עוֹלָמִים]. In all these passages the word olam [עוֹלָם] is used.” Delitzsch also believes that the people of eternity or עַם-עוֹלָם refers to “humanity as existing from the very earliest times” even to the Garden of Eden. Calvin believes it of Israel: “The antiquity of Israel, therefore, ought not to be estimated from the number of years, or from the outward condition of things, but from the election of God; and hence also the foundations of Jerusalem are called eternal (Psalm 78:69).” ¶ It is similar, to say that “I appoint the people of eternity,” because God is Eternal and Endless is His name (D&C 19:10). Because of the eternal nature of the expression עוֹלָם, perhaps it goes back to the pre-existence. ¶ Skinner summarizes as: “There is no God but Jehovah and Israel is His Witness.” This reminds me of the Muslim refrain, “There is no god but God, Muhammad is the messenger of God,” or in Arabic, “لا إله إلا الله محمد رسول الله.” The previous owner of my book by Skinner had thought the same thing and penciled in, “of Islam.” Muslims deny the divinity of Christ and believe that Muhammad was the last prophet and that there will be no more prophets. I testify that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; I testify of the divinity of our Lord and Savior, that He is God the Son; I testify that we have a living prophet today and that there has been a line of Prophets of God called in the last days beginning with the Prophet Joseph Smith up to this day (these men have been called to preside on earth over The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and have been given the priesthood keys to do so). I testify that we will continue to have living prophets upon the earth to guide His Church on this side of the veil—as directed by the Savior who is the Head of the Church—until the Second Coming of Christ in glory. I was given a personal witness by the Spirit of the divinity of Jesus Christ when I was thirteen, before I was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. I also testify that I received two very strong personal witnesses of the authenticity of the Book of Mormon before I was baptized. ¶ Cowles has: “The thought is, Who of all the heathen gods can foretell the future as I have and call events into existence and arrange them in their order ever since man was placed on the earth.” Keith beautifully says: “The importance of prophecy, as at least one principal evidence of the being of God, is apparent from the use which is made of it in this case. It is an evidence which was manifested through Israel, which was deposited with them, and of which they uniformly have been the subjects; for there is scarcely an event in their history, not only since their first captivity, but before it, from the first hour of their national existence, and even before that, from the time when Abraham left his father's house, which has not been the subject of prophecy. Hence, in every sense, they are the witnesses of God, The fulfilment of the long series of predictions, in the prophetic register, of all the remarkable events of Jewish history, has furnished, from the days of Abraham, proof of the divinity of the God of Israel. ¶ Let them declare. Slotki/Rosenberg give Rashi's explanation: "Just as I am predicting the return from exile, although the Temple has not yet been destroyed, you have not yet been exiled, nor has Cyrus even been born."¹³

¹² עַם-עוֹלָם

8 Fear ye not, neither be afraid: have not I told thee from that time, and have declared [it]? ye [are] even my witnesses. Is there a God beside me? yea, [there is] no God; [✓] I know not [any].

✓ rock

Fear ye not, neither be afraid: have not I told thee from that time, and have declared [it]? ye [are] even my witnesses. The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, "Hide not yourselves nor be led astray. Have you not heard from the beginning? And have I not told you?" Instead of that time, the Peshitta (ܣ) has former time (Lamsa) / beforehand (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, "Fear ye not, neither be ye troubled, from that time I have made thee to hear, and have declared: you are my witnesses." ¶ Barnes writes: "Fear ye not, neither be afraid. The word here rendered 'be afraid,' occurs nowhere else in the Bible. There can be no doubt, however, in regard to its meaning. The LXX render it μηδε πλανασθε,¹⁴ 'neither be deceived.' All the other ancient versions express the sense to fear, to be afraid." ¶ Is there a God beside me? yea, [there is] no God; I know not [any]. An ellipsis is used to try and make sense of a Hebrew expression where some words are implied, but not stated. But sometimes the philosophy of the translators gets in the way, and we end up with the expression: "I know not any." Instead, let us be totally certain that the Hebrew does not say anything about the word "any." What the Hebrew Masoretic text (ⲙ) really says is much closer to the Peshitta (ܣ) and the Vulgate (ⲫ) who make it clear that whatever other Gods there maybe, that the Lord knows them. And furthermore, in the case of the Targum (Ⲯ), that whoever has acted in strength to help in this work, that such strength has been delegated to them from God. There are Gods many but in relation to this work, only God the Eternal Father and His Son Jesus Christ; and those to whom they delegated power to act. ¶ The Masoretic text (ⲙ) upon which the KJV is based, has been better rendered in this instance by many versions (emphasis added in each): "Is there any God but me, or a Rock of whom I have no knowledge?" (BBE); "is there any God except me, or any maker, that I should not know hym?" (Bishops); "whether there be a God beside me, and that there is no God that I knowe not" (Geneva); "there is no Strong One that I do not know" (JUB); "yea, there is no rock, whom I know not" (Leeser); "que no haya Dios si no yo; y que no haya fuerte, que yo no conozca" (Reina Valera 1865); "que no hay Dios sino yo; y que no hay Fuerte, que yo no conozca" (SSE). There are also plenty of translations that agree with the AV, of course. If I may suggest a translation it might be something like: "In the formation of this earth, was there a Rock (God) beside me? Or, a helper that did not receive strength from me as I received it from the Father?" ¶ The Targum (Ⲯ), once again, has, "That there is no God beside me, and there is none strong, except he to whom strength is given from me." The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, "You are witnesses whether there be any God besides me. And have not then the fashioners and engravers heard?" The Peshitta (ܣ) renders it something like, "You are my witnesses, that beside me there is no God, nor powerful one whom I do not know." The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, "Is there a God besides me, a maker, whom I have not known?" The margin || has rock, as the literal text צֹרֶךְ אֵינִי. HAL says that צֹרֶךְ can mean God, also, especially used for Jehovah (see ASV, ESV). To repeat, then, "For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many,) But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him" (1 Corinthians 8:5–6).

vv. 9–20. Baltzer, leaning on Elliger, says, "The text has been defined as a 'taunt song.'" Jenour suggests: "These verses contain indisputably the finest exposition on the absurdity of idolatry that ever was written. They beauty and force of the passage are however considerably diminished by the manner in which it is translated into our Bibles. The prophet does not describe, first, the manufacture of idols of metal by the smith, and then of wood by the carpenter, as represented in the authorized version; but, his object being to set the folly of idolatry in the most striking light, he traces the production of idols from the very first, and shews that they are from first to last entirely the work of men's hands. He begins therefore with the manufacture of the instruments, with which the idol is to be formed, and describes the labour and exhaustion accompanying the work of the smith, in hammering and shaping the axe. He then proceeds to speak of the second part of the operation, which belongs to the worker in wood, or the carpenter, and gives a lively picture of his share in the formation of the image. Lastly, he shows how the wood itself is produced which is destined, at a future period, to become a god; and to make the absurdity of the practice still more glaring, he finely opposes the different uses for which the same tree is employed; with part the deluded idolater dresses [i.e., cooks—GB] his food, and warms himself, the remainder he forms into an object of divine worship.” This theory is backed up by multiple translations including the Bishop’s Bible (1568). ¶ Keith, representing the opposite view suggests: “But may not the description embrace the making of two images, the one of metal, the other of wood; or rather, does not the smith’s part of the work refer to the metallic covering with which wooden idols were often adorned?” ¶ Orelli says: “... nowhere is idol manufacture described so elaborately and idolatry reduced ad absurdum with such cutting irony as here.” Bishop Lowth notes: “[T]his passage of Isaiah far exceeds anything that ever was written upon the subject, in force of argument, energy of expression, and elegance of composition.” ¶ While we may be prone to scoff idolaters, have we ever considered whether we fall into that same category? Ironside writes: “Idolatry seems inherent in the heart of man. Today, men do not worship idols of gold and silver, and brass and iron, but every man who turns away from God sets up some kind of an idol in his heart. He either worships himself or some folly, pleasure, or fame. An esteemed servant of Christ spoke aptly when introduced on one occasion as a ‘self-made man.’ He said he regretted he had been so termed, though he appreciated the kindly thought, ‘for,’ he said, ‘I’ve noticed that these self-made men always worship their own creation.’ He knew that if men do not know the one living and true God, they set up the great god self, and worship him.” We may also add philosophical idolatry to this list. ¶ In summary, Isaiah ridicules idol makers as they use the same tree to warm themselves, to eat, and then to make an idol with the residue. But let us permit Isaiah to tell the story.

¹³ See ISAIAH 44:28.

¹⁴ Note that this is an alternate rendering of the Greek LXX (Ⲫ) text, Codex QSyh, Syrohexaplanische Übers., also known as Syro-Hexaplaric or Syro-Hexapla and refers to the Syriac translation of the LXX (Ⲫ), or the fifth column of Origen's Hexapla. For these alternate texts, see, for instance, Apparatus II, Ziegler, J. (Ed.). (1983). Isaias (Vol. XIV, p. 286). Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.

9 ¶ They that make a graven image [are] all of them vanity; and their delectable[✓] things shall not profit; and they [are] their own witnesses; they see not, nor know; that they may be ashamed.

✓ desirable

They that make a graven image [are] all of them vanity; and their delectable things shall not profit. The Targum (Ⲯ) has for the second clause, “And worship what does not profit them.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “They are all fools making things to please their fancies—things which cannot profit them.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “The makers of idols are all of them nothing, and their best beloved things shall not profit them.” ¶ Regarding vanity, וָהָרִי, it is the same expression that appears in Genesis 1:2, and is there translated as, “without form.” In Genesis the words rhyme, tohu and bohu, without form and void, וָהָרִי וְכֵהָרִי. Vanity is this, indeed, just hot air, just unorganized materials. ¶ Barnes explains: “A graven image is one that is cut, or sculptured out of wood or stone, in contradistinction from one that is molten, which is made by being cast. Here it is used to denote an image, or an idol god in general.” Cowles has: “The makers of graven images should be honest enough to witness against idols as worthless things; but alas, they have not the good sense to be ashamed of their folly. Or possibly the last clause may mean. They are morally blinded (‘see not, nor know’)—do not know enough to be ashamed—the result of which must be their utter confusion and shame.” ¶ And they [are] their own witnesses; they see not, nor know; that they may be ashamed. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And they shall be witnesses against themselves, that they do not see, nor know, that they may be ashamed.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But shame shall cover these god makers, and all the engravers of these useless things.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has the craftsmen being witnesses for they (Lamsa) / that they (BPE) see not, nor hear, nor know. The meaning of these Peshitta (Ⲫ) translations are quite divergent. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “They are their witnesses, that they do not see, nor understand, that they may be ashamed.” They put their trust in themselves rather than in God.

10 Who hath formed a god, or molten a graven image [that] is profitable for nothing?

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Whoever maketh a god or a molten image, it is for no purpose (Chaldee, ‘that it should not profit’). The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “When all by whom they were made are dried up.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has those who have graven images confounded (BPE) / ashamed (Lamsa). Alexander says: “Here as elsewhere there is pungent sarcasm in the application of the name אֱלֹהִים (mighty God) to idols.” ¶ Cowles similarly writes: “A especially sarcastic force is given to this question in the original by the use of the name ‘El’ for God. Who made this mighty God? ... The emphatic word is ‘Who,’

Who has done the labor of forming such gods? How came they into existence?” Whitehouse warns, “... the Hebrew interrogative מִי, ‘who,’ means also ‘whoever.’ We might therefore render (with Duhm and Marti) : ‘Whoever fashions a god, hath cast a profitless image.’ (Gesenius-Kautzsch, Heb. Grammar § 143 d). The LXX apparently support this interpretation.”

11 Behold, all his fellows shall be ashamed: and the workmen, they [are] of men: let them all be gathered together, let them stand up; [yet] they shall fear, [and] they shall be ashamed together.

Behold, all his fellows shall be ashamed: and the workmen, they [are] of men: The Targum (ܬ) has, “worshippers” instead of fellows. The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “Then let all the stupid among men be collected and stand together.” The Peshitta (ܣ) has “Behold, all their craftsmen are dumb men (BPE, dumb among men).” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, “Behold, all the partakers thereof shall be confounded: for the makers are men.” Nägelsbach explains: “By חֲבֵרִים many understand the companions, helpers of the idol-makers ... It is better to understand that the companions or followers of the idols are intended (compare, תְּבוֹרַ עֲצָבִים אֶפְרַיִם, Hosea 4:17¹⁵).” Rawlinson suggests: “The worshippers of a particular idol, or sometimes of a particular god, formed a sort of guild or company, bound together by common participation in certain rites, and under an obligation to defend each other.” ¶ Let them all be gathered together, let them stand up; [yet] they shall fear, [and] they shall be ashamed together. The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “And let them be confounded and ashamed together.” The Peshitta (ܣ) has “Let them gather and stand up and they shall at once be ashamed and confounded together.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, “They shall all assemble together, they shall stand and fear, and shall be confounded together.” Agreement among them amounts to nothing.

12 The smith with the tongs[✓] both worketh in the coals, and fashioneth it with hammers, and worketh it with the strength of his arms: yea, he is hungry, and his strength faileth: he drinketh no water, and is faint.

✓ or, with an axe

The smith with the tongs both worketh in the coals. The Targum (ܬ) has, “The smith maketh an axe out of iron, and bloweth the coals in the fire.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “For the carpenter sharpened an axe, with a hatchet he modelled it.” The Peshitta (ܣ) reads something like, “The carpenter sharpens the axe.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, “The smith hath wrought with his file, with coals.” ¶ Several translations make it clear that the blacksmith is shaping metal tools, such as an axe or other metal tools with which to work the wood: ASV has “The smith maketh an axe, and worketh in the coals, and fashioneth it with hammers, and worketh it with his strong arm: yea, he is hungry, and his strength faileth; he drinketh no water, and is faint.” GW has: “Blacksmiths shape iron into tools. They work them over the coals and shape them with hammers, working them with their strong arms. They get hungry, and their strength fails. If they don’t drink water, they will faint.” The Bishop’s Bible (1568) has: “The smith maketh an axe, and tempereth it with hotte coales, and fashioneth it with hammers, and worketh it with all the strength of his armes, yea sometime he is fainte for very hunger, and so thirstie that he hath no more power.”

¶ Alexander says: “Gesenius and the other modern writers draw from the Talmudical and Arabic analogy the sense of a sharp tool or graving instrument.” A number of tools have been suggested. ¶ And fashioneth it with hammers, and worketh it with the strength of his arms: The Targum (ܬ) has, “And maketh it firm with the hammer, and worketh it with the power of his strength.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “Then he put it into a lathe and with his strong arm fashioned it.” The Peshitta (ܣ) reads something like, “He fashions the image with a plane and outlines the design with a chisel and works it with the strength of his arm.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, “And with hammers he hath formed it, and hath wrought with the strength of his arm.” ¶ Yea, he is hungry, and his strength faileth: he drinketh no water, and is faint. The Targum (ܬ) has, “But when he that worketh it is hungry, and does not eat bread, he hath no strength (Chaldee, ‘no strength in him’); and if he is thirsty, and drinketh no water, he fainteth.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “Though he be hungry and faint, he must not drink water.” The Peshitta (ܣ) reads something like, “Then he feels hunger and thirst; he does not drink water and is faint.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, “He shall hunger and faint, he shall drink no water, and shall be weary.” ¶ Barnes says: “The Rev. J. Williams states that when the South Sea Islanders made an idol, they strictly abstained from food; and although they might be, and were sometimes, three days about the work, no water, and he believes no food passed their lips all the time.” ¶ Cowles has: “You are introduced into the blacksmith’s shop; you see the worker in iron getting a red heat upon it in his coals, giving shape to it with his hammer, working it with his strong right arm; but these makers of gods have their human weaknesses. This smith becomes hungry and his strength fails him; having no water to drink, he becomes faint. The poor man has worked hard to make a god; but the god ministers nothing to his help and strength in his time of need! Would not he, if he were a sensible, decent idol, and had any power to befriend his worshipers?" Baltzer cleverly notices: "The point ... is the ironical contrast between 'his strong arm' (בְּזִרְעוֹ כָּחַ) and 'no strength' (וְאֵין כָּח)."

¹⁵ “Ephraim is joined to idols” (Hosea 14:17a).

13 The carpenter stretcheth out [his] rule; he marketh it out with a line; he fitteth it with planes, and he marketh it out with the compass, and maketh it after the figure of a man, according to the beauty of a man; that it may remain in the house.

The carpenter stretcheth out [his] rule. The Targum (ܬ) has, "line" rather than "rule." The LXX (Ϯ) reads, "The carpenters having chosen a piece of wood framed it by rule." The Peshitta (ܣ) also explains that the carpenter selects a piece of wood. ¶ Horsley believes the carpenter uses a pencil rather than a line to mark and commends us to look up בִּשְׂרָד (שָׂרָד) in Parkhurst's Lexicon. Also see AMP, ASV, ESV, JPS, Rotherham, and RV, who use a pencil. Gesenius has: "שָׂרָד m., ISAIAH 44:13; according to Kimchi, red chalk; but more correctly, an awl, or rather stylus; with which the artist sketches out the figure to be sculptured." Some translations use a stylus, chalk or red mark. HAL suggests either a red pencil or "a sharp object, a stylus or the like, with which the woodworker marked out the line along which the wood was to be cut." From the Arab regarding something that pierces through (HAL). ¶ Cowles has: "Next we have the carpenter's shop where the wood-work is done. He uses his rule and line. His 'planes' are rather chisels, since his work consists mainly in carving. He gives it the human form, and finally makes a very pretty ornament for the parlor. You see the process step by step, and are shown some of the tools which he uses to make a wooden god." ¶ He marketh it out with a line. The Targum (ܬ) has, "He applieth the plummet to it." The LXX (Ϯ) reads, "And glued the parts together." The Lamsa Peshitta (ܣ) has, "And stretches out his rule; he marks it out with a line," while PPE has, "he measures it." ¶ He fitteth it with planes. The Targum (ܬ) has, "He carveth it with a knife." The Lamsa Peshitta (ܣ) has, "He fashions it with planes," while BPE (ܣ) fits it together with glue. The Douay-Rheims (ܝ) has, "He hath formed it with a plane." ¶ And he marketh it out with the compass. The Targum (ܬ) has, "And he dove-tailth it together." The Douay-Rheims (ܝ) has, "He hath made it with corners, and hath fashioned it round with the compass." ¶ And maketh it after the figure of a man, according to the beauty of a man; that it may remain in the house. The Targum (ܬ) has, "And he maketh it after the likeness of a man, according to the beauty of a woman, that it may remain in the house." The LXX (Ϯ) reads, "And made it in the form of a man and with the comeliness of a man, to set it in a house." The Douay-Rheims (ܝ) has, "And he hath made the image of a man as it were a beautiful man dwelling in a house." ¶ Rabbi Rosenberg tells us that "Rashi and Kara after Jonathan" explain that the beauty of a man "is a woman [for she is] the beauty of her husband." And indeed, numerous idol figures are figures of women. Ibn Ezra explains, rather, that it is the repetition of the idea (see Hebrew below) that has led some to speculate that the beauty of a woman is meant, "According to the beauty of a man, that is, the female, according to the opinion of some; but I think that it is in reality only a repetition of the preceding idea." I have purposely rendered the translation more literal to make the point, which may be lost in the more poetical English translations:

כְּתַבְנִית אִישׁ כְּתַפְאֶרֶת אָדָם
as the figure of a man, as the beauty of a man¹⁶

"Rabbi Joseph Kimchi, remarks that the idol is of no use," explains R. Rosenberg, "but 'to sit in the house.'" Or, as some suggest, perhaps in an idolatrous temple.

14 He heweth him down cedars, and taketh the cypress and the oak, which he strengthened ~ for himself among the trees of the forest: he planteth an ash, and the rain doth nourish [it].

✓ or, taketh courage

The Targum (ܬ) has, "and seasons them (or, 'makes strong') instead of strengthened for himself." The LXX (Ϯ) reads, "He cut wood from the forest which the Lord planted—a pine tree." The Peshitta (ܣ) then explains that this piece of wood, cut from a forest that was nourished by the rain is put in the house. The Douay-Rheims (ܝ) has, "He hath cut down cedars, taken the holm, and the oak that stood among the trees of the forest: he hath planted the pine tree, which the rain hath nourished." Perhaps, I thought, the idol maker finds and transplants a tree to a location where he can keep an eye on it. Rashi, according to Rabbi Rosenberg, has precisely this idea: after finding a sapling (יָרֵא) he then transplants it. Delitzsch is alone in suggesting that the tree planted was a fig tree. Horace¹⁷ was quoted by Greenfield as saying: “Olim truncus eram ficulnus, inutile lignum, Cum faber incertus faceretne, scamnum faceretne Priapum, Maluit esse deum: deus inde ego, furum avinumque Maxima formido” that is, “Formerly I was the stump of a fig-tree, a useless log; when the carpenter, hesitating whether to make me a Priapus¹⁸ [god] or a stool, at last determined to make me a god; thus I became a god, and a great terror to thieves and birds!”¹⁹ ¶ Wade suggests that instead of he “strengthened for himself” we should understand he “secureth for himself.” So Rotherham, “When one was cutting him down cedars, Then took he a holm-tree and an oak, And secured them for himself, among the trees of the forest,—He planted a fir-tree and the pouring rain made it grow.” Leeser has: “He felleth for himself cedars, and taketh cypress and oak, and he chooseth for himself the strongest among the trees of the forest; he planteth an ash, and the rain causeth it to grow.” A completely different translation is offered by the Spanish Reina Valera 1865, in which the idea is that the idol maker strengthens himself against the task of felling the trees that he finds: “Cortarse ha cedros, y tomará encina y alcornoque, y esforzarse ha contra los árboles del bosque [strengthens himself against the trees of the forest]: plantará pino, que se crie con la lluvia.” Alexander defends the AV, “as אֲמִץ, in every other case where it occurs, admits of the translation strengthened, it cannot be consistently abandoned here without necessity; and this necessity cannot exist, because the strict sense of making strong is not only relevant in this connection, but corresponds exactly to that of making great expressed by יָבִיל, both meaning here ‘o cause to grow.’ Thus understood, the word helps to bring out with more strength and clearness the main idea of the verse, viz. that the idolater not only chooses suitable trees, but plants and raises them for the purpose.” Cowles writes: “Note the underlying questions upon which the prophet would throw light, viz.. Is there any god at all in this image of metal or wood? If so, how did he get in, and when? Observe all the processes in the smith’s shop; did you see the god there? Go into the carpenter’s shop; mark carefully all he does in his department. Was the real god made there? And now lest some may still imagine that there was some antecedent sacredness in the wood before it came into the shop, the prophet takes you a step farther back. This idolater means to have first-rate timber; so he goes into the forest and selects some of the best varieties—cedar or cypress, oak or pine [‘ash’]; he transplants it; cultivates it well: the rains water it as they do other trees. That is, it is a mere tree, growing under the common laws of vegetation. Is the idol-god made and brought into existence so?” The idolater, for all his pretended self-sufficiency, still needs to use the trees given by God to man, as well as the nutrients and rain and plant nutrients that also come from God. Faussett points us to Jeremiah 14:22: “Are there any among the vanities²⁰ of the Gentiles that can cause rain? or can the heavens give showers? art not thou he, O LORD our God? therefore we will wait upon thee: for thou hast made all these things.” Gill offers yet a different proposition: “The word for ‘rain’ signifies a body in the Syriac [corpus, Luke 3:22. 2 Corinthians 10:10. Castel (Lex. Polyglott. col. 627. So in the Chaldee language). So, according to Schindler, signifies a body, Lex. Pentaglott. col. 347, 348] language, as Kimhi observes, and for which he produces (Daniel 4:33), and so Aben Ezra says it signifies in the Arabic language; and the sense is, ‘the body’ of the tree ‘grew up.’ and being grown up, was cut down . . .”

¹⁶ Ish (אִישׁ) and adam (אָדָם) are both synonyms for man.

15 Then shall it be for a man to burn: for he will take thereof, and warm himself; yea, he kindleth [it], and baketh bread; yea, he maketh a god, and worshippeth [it]; he maketh it a graven image, and falleth down thereto.

Then shall it be for a man to burn: for he will take thereof, and warm himself. The Targum (ܬ) has, “That it may serve a man to burn: and he taketh thereof, and warmeth himself.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “Which the rain had nourished, that it might be fuel for the use of man: and having taken some of it he warmed himself.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϸ) has, “And it hath served men for fuel: he took thereof, and warmed himself.” ¶ Yea, he kindleth [it], and baketh bread. The LXX (ϸ) reads, “And with other pieces they made a fire and baked cakes.” Gill has: “for he will take thereof, and warm himself; with some part of it he makes a fire in his parlour, and warms himself when it is cold weather:

¹⁷ Horace wrote his book of satires about 35 BC. Satyr, lib. 1. sat. viii.

¹⁸ Πρίαπος, of all things!, a god protector of viticulture and horticulture and also a god of fertility. See Greek Mythology Link, Carlos Parada and Maicar Förlag. I say of all things because my undergraduate degree at UC Davis was in plant science with a specialty in viticulture and horticulture (pomology). I was baptized half-way through my studies but ended up working in agricultural labor management, instead.

¹⁹ Greenfield, William, The Genuineness, Authenticity and Inspiration of the Word of God. Robert Carter and Brothers: New York, 1853, p. 192.

²⁰ Idols are sometimes called vanities. See also Jeremiah 10:14–15 (Geneva Bible translation notes).

yea, he kindleth it, and baketh bread; he heats his oven with another part of it, and bakes the bread he has made for himself and family to live on, and which is putting it to a good use.” ¶ Yea, he maketh a god, and worshippeth [it]; he maketh it a graven image, and falleth down thereto. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Yea, he maketh it a god, and worshippeth it, he formeth it an image, and prayeth to it.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And of the residue they made gods and worshipped them.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “But of the rest he made a god, and adored it: he made a graven thing, and bowed down before it.” ¶ Skinner explains: “The word rendered ‘falleth down (ⲡⲓⲛ)’ is an Aramaic verb meaning ‘worship,’ recurring in the O.T. only ISAIAH 44:17; 19; and ISAIAH 46:6. It is the root of the Arabic word mosque (musḡid).”

16 He burneth part thereof in the fire; with part thereof he eateth flesh; he roasteth roast, and is satisfied: yea, he warmeth [himself], and saith, Aha, I am warm, I have seen the fire:

He burneth part thereof in the fire. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Did he not burn half of it in the fire.” Instead of part, the Peshitta (Ⲯ) has half. The word חצי is often translated as half in the Scriptures, but this is somewhat artificial. Rawlinson suggests: “He burneth part thereof; rather, half thereof; ‘With half thereof’—not the other half, but the same—‘he eateth flesh.’ One fire serves for the two purposes of warming him and cooking his victuals.” So also Delitzsch who has: “The repeated חצי (the half of it) in ISAIAH 44:16 refers to the first half, which furnishes not only fuel for burning, but shavings and coals for roasting and baking as well. And as a fire made for cooking warms quite as much as one made expressly for the purpose, the prophet dwells upon this benefit which the wood of the idol does confer.” After reading Gill’s suggestion (ISAIAH 44:15) that all of this warming and cooking may be taking place indoors, I thought of the wood stoves that are used in Chile, that have a dual purpose as they function to both warm up a room and to cook therein. It is even clearer, then, how the one ‘half’ or portion of wood serves for giving warmth and for cooking; and the other portion used for making an idol. ¶ With part thereof he eateth flesh; he roasteth roast, and is satisfied: The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And, with the coals of that half, bake cakes; and having roasted meat with it did he not eat and was satisfied.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “And with part of it he dressed his meat: he boiled pottage, and was filled.” ¶ Yea, he warmeth [himself], and saith, Aha, I am warm, I have seen the fire: The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And when warmed say, ‘Aha! I am warmed, I have enjoyed the fire?’” In modern Hebrew it seems the word used for Aha! is the same as the English and Spanish: “אָהָה.”²¹ In Biblical Hebrew, the word sometimes used was הָאָהָה, Heaj (Spanish j). This is closer to the Spanish ¡Ea! which has a number of meanings, including something like “look at that!” There also is, of course, the Spanish expression ¡ajá! with its multiple meanings. Young says: “There is no need of taking the word ‘see’ in any other than its ordinary sense. Luther brought out the true meaning when he said that man has a desire to look into the fire. He sees and feels the fire and expresses his joy and satisfaction in its possession. In becoming fuel for fire, the wood truly serves man; in becoming an idol it does not serve him, but becomes an occasion for his stumbling.” ¶ When one lights up a fire and does not take for granted that he will be able to get it going, it is not unusual to say אָהָה in gratitude. So it was with me this morning, that I said אָהָה out loud when the fire caught on. I then remembered ISAIAH 44:16 and thought of this scripture with new understanding. These are אָהָה of gratitude and amazement at God’s wonders, of not taking things for granted. At this moment I am bursting with thankfulness that the Spirit of God reminded me of ISAIAH 44:16 when I had this experience. These tender mercies are easy to forget, so I mailed myself a reminder to add these words here today.²²

17 And the residue thereof he maketh a god, [even] his graven image: he falleth down unto it, and worshippeth [it], and prayeth unto it, and saith, Deliver me; for thou [art] my god.

And the residue thereof he maketh a god, [even] his graven image: The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Yet of the residue he made a carved god.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “But the residue thereof he made a god, and a graven thing for himself.” The DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲯ) has *to his Baal*²³ or *block*²⁴ {meaning uncertain, see DSSB, Accordance DSS–C), לְבַלְלִי, while the Masoretic text (Ⲯ) has to his graven image, לְפָסְלוֹ. ¶ He falleth

²¹ Oxford English-Hebrew Dictionary, 1998.

²² 23 September 2017.

²³ The god of the Babylonians, “בַּל” contr. from בַּעַל i.q. בַּעַל Bel (ⲡⲓⲗ)—Gesenius). Also see בַּעַל, ruler, or Phoenician god or idol (TWOT, Gesenius).

²⁴ בּוֹל עֵץ, block [off] wood (Gesenius, HALOT).

down unto it, and worshippeth [it], and prayeth unto it. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “he boweth down,” or Stenning (ⲧ) “paid homage to it,” rather than “falleth down.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And worshippeth it, and prayeth to it.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “He boweth down before it, and adoreth it, and prayeth unto it.” ¶ And saith, Deliver me; for thou [art] my god. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Saying, ‘Deliver me, for thou art my God.’” Instead of my god, the Peshitta (Ⲥ) has our god. ¶ The absurdity, then, comes to its culmination. An individual has used the same tree to warm himself and cook and then falls down before a piece of wood to pray and ask for deliverance.

18 They have not known nor understood: for he hath shut[✓] their eyes, that they cannot see; [and] their hearts, that they cannot understand.

✓ daubed

The Targum (ⲧ) has, “They know not, neither do they understand; for their eyes are closely shut up, so that they cannot see, and their heart, that they cannot understand.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “They had not sense to think; for they were so involved in darkness that they could not see with their eyes, nor understand with their hearts.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “They have not known, nor understood: for their eyes are covered that they may not see, and that they may not understand with their heart.” And, “Their eyes are besmeared, and they see not” (Tanakh). ¶ See the parallel verse in ISAIAH 6:11. Jenour has: “Their eyes hath he restrained from seeing [טַח מִרְאֵת]. The best commentary upon these words will be found in Romans 1:19–25. The apostle there shows that the unwillingness of men to retain in their minds the knowledge of the glory and perfections of the [incorruptible²⁵—GB] God, is the reason why he gives them up to the delusion and folly of idolatry.” Wordsworth has: “he hath shut their eyes. Literally, hath smeared them over, as with clay. See the use of this verb (טַח)²⁶ in Leviticus 14:42–43; Ezekiel 13:10–15. Hence the act of our Blessed Lord, in opening the eyes of the blind by means of clay *smeared*²⁷ on his eyes, is more remarkable (see John 9:6).” Kay has, “Or, ‘One hath plastered their eyes, that they see not, and their hearts, that they discern not’ (cp. 2 Corinthians 4:4, ‘In whom the god of this world [i.e., Satan—GB] hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of ²⁵ Romans 1:23.

²⁶ To cover over or smear with plaster or mortar or other material.

²⁷ ἀλείφω (anointed with or smeared)

Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them.’).”

19 And none considereth in his heart,[✓] neither [is there] knowledge nor understanding to say, I have burned part of it in the fire; yea, also I have baked bread upon the coals thereof; I have roasted flesh, and eaten [it]: and shall I make the residue thereof an abomination? shall I fall down to the stock of a tree?[✓]

✓ setteth to his heart

✓ ✓ that which comes from a tree?

And none considereth in his heart, neither [is there] knowledge nor understanding to say, I have burned part of it in the fire. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Nor did any reason in his mind, nor by his understanding recollect, that he had burned half of it in the fire.” Instead of part, the Peshitta (Ⲥ) translators have half. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “They do not consider in their mind, nor know, nor have the thought to say: I have burnt part of it in the fire.” ¶ The expression here is similar to Deuteronomy 4:39b, “and consider it in thine heart”; or in 1 Kings 8:47, “bethink [consider] themselves [literally, in their heart (אֶל-לִבָּם)], in that in each case both שׁוּב (to turn, but here more as in to reconsider, to really think something through) and לֵב (heart) are used. So it means something along the lines of really thinking something through in the heart:

וְלֹא-יָשִׁיב אֶל-לִבּוֹ

(And none considereth to/in his heart)

Rawlinson says: “It is implied that the idolaters had once had it in their power to think and reason justly upon the absurdity of such conduct as that which was now habitual to them. But they had lost the power. They had suffered themselves little by little to be deluded.” And that is how Satan works, little by little getting us to veer off a little here and a little there until we get to think everyone else is lost and going the wrong direction and do not consider that we might have gone astray. ¶ Yea, also I have baked bread upon the coals thereof; I have roasted flesh, and eaten [it]: The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And on the coals thereof baked cakes, and had roasted flesh and eaten.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has broiled instead of roasted. ¶ And shall I make the residue thereof an abomination? shall I fall down to the stock of a tree? The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And of the residue had made an abomination; so they bow themselves down to it.” Instead of fall down, the Peshitta (Ⲥ) has the synonym, worshipped. The Douay-

Rheims (V) has, “And of the residue thereof shall I make an idol? shall I fall down before the stock of a tree?” The Douay-Rheims (V) has broiled instead of roasted. ¶ This is the culmination of the satire.

20 He feedeth on ashes: a deceived heart hath turned him aside, that he cannot deliver his soul, nor say, [Is there] not a lie in my right hand?

He feedeth on ashes: a deceived heart hath turned him aside, that he cannot deliver his soul. The Targum (T) has, “Behold his god, part of it is in ashes,²⁸ his undiscerning (literally, ‘fat’) heart has caused him to err, so he cannot deliver his soul.” The LXX (G) reads, “Know thou that their heart is ashes, and they are led astray and none can deliver his soul.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Part thereof is ashes: his foolish heart adoth it, and he will not save his soul.” The DSS 4QIsa^b (Q), וְלֹא יִצִּיל, and the Masoretic text (M), וְלֹא-יִצִּיל, both have and not saved, while the 1QIsa^a (Q) has and not able [to save], וְלֹא יוֹכִיל. ¶ Cowles says: “The prophet’s thought is that the man has not the sense to look over the process he has himself gone through and think a moment of its significance. He lives out the absurdity, but will not let it come into his mind—will not give it a moment’s thought. ‘He feedeth on ashes,’ bitter and caustic, with sorrow in the end. The phrase is analogous to that of Hosea (Hosea 12:1²⁹) ‘He feedeth on wind.’ The phrase, ‘A deceived heart hath turned him aside,’ i.e., from truth and reason, assumes that the intellect is blinded by a wicked heart, perverted and misled by the strong love of sin. Hence he seems to have no power to say, Is not my whole system of religion a delusion? Is not this idol that I worship a lie in act, a mere falsehood, a vanity?” ¶ Nor say, [Is there] not a lie in my right hand? The Targum (T) has, “Nor say, Is it not a lie which I have made with my right hand?” The LXX (G) reads, “Take a view of it, will you not say, ‘There is indeed a lie in my right hand?’” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Nor say: Perhaps there is a lie in my right hand.” ¶ Jenour writes: “He hath turned aside. That is, he hath turned away from the true God, and is consequently become devoid of understanding, and has not power to deliver his soul from the bondage of superstitious folly; nor to discern, that whilst he is worshiping and idol, he is, as it were, holding a lie in his right hand; or, in other words that he is paying divine honour to a thing which cannot but disappoint all his expectations. Nor let the proud free-thinker of our times, who has also turned away from Jehovah, suppose that he is really any wiser than the poor idolater, whose folly he derides. He may have more intellect; but his idol which he worships will leave him as destitute and helpless in the time of trouble and in the hour of death, as the lifeless image of the idolater leaves its deluded votary.” ¶ It is selling our birthright for a mess of potage—actually, not even that, it is selling it for deception, for ashes. This holding the idol in his right hand is rejecting the right hand of the Lord with all of the attendant promises for strength, security, peace, and eternal life (ISAIAH 41:10, 13–14).

²⁸ As I am working on this chapter of Isaiah, for over a week now Volcán Calbuco has been erupting and spewing out ashes, here in the south of Chile. We have had a devastating amount of ashes come out of the volcano and we fear that this damage will be even greater if it rains tomorrow, as predicted. Cattle have had to be moved out of the whole affected area and thousands of people have been displaced from their homes by the ashes. We may well say that the ashes, in these sorts of quantities, kill life (30 April 2015). By April 24, two days after the eruption, (Eruption of Volcán Calbuco began 22 April 2015, at about 17:50. I took my first photo at 18:11. At 17:14, I took a pre-eruption panoramic video of Lake Llanquihue. It was a beautiful clear day. Today, 30 April 2015, we had our third eruption.) Rodrigo Álvarez Seguel, director of El Servicio Nacional de Geología y Minería, reported “that over 210 million cubic meters of ashes had been released from the volcano and that each cubic meter roughly corresponded to almost a ton of volcanic mater.” (Government of Chile, Ministry of Mines, URL accessed 30 April 2015, <http://www.sernageomin.cl/detalle-noticia.php?idNoticia=213>). Ashes have completely covered beautiful Volcán Osorno, so that it looks as a volcano might look in the moon, with hardly any snow visible on it (and none at all visible about a week ago). I am now putting the final touches on this chapter before posting it for the first time, and gladly there have been several snow falls over Volcán Osorno so it no longer has that eerie look (19 May 2015).

²⁹ “Ephraim feedeth on wind, and followeth after the east wind: he daily increaseth lies and desolation; and they do make a covenant with the Assyrians, and oil is carried into Egypt” (Hosea 12:1).

vv. 21–28. The Lord will not forget Israel. Her sins will be blotted out. The Savior has paid the price for redemption but now it is our duty to repent and come unto Him if we wish to take full advantage of the same. Understanding the plan of happiness and the atoning sacrifice of our Savior gives us reason to sing and to shout for joy. The Savior directed the work of forming the heavens and the earth. Those who lean on false gods will be disappointed. God confirms the word of His Servant, Christ, and of each one of us as we are moved to act by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost—which was poured out on our dry souls. Cyrus comes into the scene. A promise is given that Jerusalem will be rebuilt along with the foundation of the temple.

21 ¶ Remember these, O Jacob and Israel; for thou [art] my servant; I have formed thee; thou [art] my servant; O Israel, thou shalt not be forgotten of me.

Remember these, O Jacob and Israel; for thou art my servant; I have formed thee; thou art my servant. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Remember these things,” and for the last clause, “I have formed thee that thou shouldest serve me.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Remember these things, Jacob, even thou Israel, for thou art my servant.”

¶ In contrast to those who form idols, the Lord can deliver and reassures us that He has formed Israel. ¶ O Israel, thou shalt not be forgotten of me. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “O Israel, shouldest not forget my fear.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “I have made thee my servant; therefore O Israel do not thou forget me.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲫ) has what might seem a pleading cry, “O Israel, from henceforth forget me not.” Very different in meaning, BPE (Ⲫ) has, “O Israel, thou shalt not forget me.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “O Israel, forget me not.” ¶ What a reassuring promise is here given, that the Lord will not forget Israel.

22 I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and, as a cloud, thy sins: return unto me; for I have redeemed thee.

I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and, as a cloud, thy sins: The Targum (ⲧ) has for the last clause, “as a cloud vanisheth away,” and Stenning (ⲧ) has “as a passing cloud.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “For, lo! I have made thy transgressions vanish like a cloud—and thy sins like the murky vapour.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “I have blotted out thy iniquities as a cloud, and thy sins as a mist.” ¶ Delitzsch would translate the first expression of cloud as dark mist; Leoser as a vapor. Barnes has: “The true idea would be expressed by rendering it, ‘I have made them to vanish as a thick cloud;’ and the sense is, as the wind drives away a thick cloud, however dark and frowning it may be, so that the sky is clear and serene, so God had caused their sins to disappear, and had removed the storm of his anger. Nothing can more strikingly represent sin in its nature and consequences, than a dense, dark, frowning cloud—that comes over the heavens, and shuts out the sun, and fills the air with gloom; and nothing can more beautifully represent the nature and effect of pardon than the idea of removing such a cloud, and leaving the sky pure, the air calm and serene, and the sun pouring down his beams of warmth and light on the earth.”³⁰ ¶ Return unto me; for I have redeemed thee. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Return to my worship, for I have redeemed thee.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Return to me and I will redeem thee.”

¶ Rawlinson says: “This is an underlying condition, both of restoration and of forgiveness.” So also the Rabbis: according to Rabbi Rosenberg, Ibn Ezra and Malbin explain that we must return or turn unto God before sins will be blotted out: “Israel’s sins, too, will vanish likewise as soon as he will return wholeheartedly to his God.” The Prophet Jeremiah prayed that Israel would someday be converted: “Turn thou us unto thee, O LORD, and we shall be turned” (Lamentations 5:21a). Young says: “As in Jeremiah 31:18, 34, it refers to redemption from sin; it implies that a price has been paid in order that the people may be brought back from their sins and upon the basis of which God may forgive those sins” (emphasis added). One of the greatest miracles is that of redemption. The Lord is saying, speaking to each of us, I have already paid the price for your redemption through my atoning sacrifice, so, now, come back, return unto me. Make full use of the redemption. It is already paid for if only you will hold on to it.

23 Sing, O ye heavens; for the LORD hath done [it]: shout, ye lower parts of the earth: break forth into singing, ye mountains, O forest, and every tree therein: for the LORD hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified himself in Israel.

Sing, O ye heavens; for the LORD hath done [it]: The Targum (ⲧ) has for the second clause, “for the Lord hath wrought redemption for His people.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Rejoice, O heavens! because God hath compassionated Israel.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “Give praise, O ye heavens, for the Lord hath shewn mercy.” ¶ Young well says, “... the entirety of what God has created, are to burst forth into exultation, shouting and singing because of the great triumph their Creator has wrought.” ¶ Shout, ye lower parts of the earth: break forth into singing, ye mountains, O forest, and every tree therein: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Let the foundations of the earth rejoice; rejoice (or, ‘skip, dance’), O mountains, in praise, O forest, and all the trees therein.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Utter sounds of joy, ye foundations of the earth! Burst forth into songs, ye mountains and hills, and all ye trees which are thereon!” Instead of lower parts, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has foundations. The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “Shout with joy, ye ends of the earth: ye mountains, resound with ³⁰ I love the sweet sentiment behind Barnes’ words. However, I should add to say that when one lives in the South of Chile, one better also find beauty in the clouds and not be so blind as to only find joy in a sunny day. Right now, as I write, there are glorious clouds before me, tossed about by the wind. I am grateful that I am just as happy for a classical beautiful sunny day, as I am for a cloudy day full of personality. The scenery before me is constantly changing and it is never boring. During my Sabbatical here in Llanquihue, I took over 18 thousand photos and videos. I am in awe to the wonderful beauty. If you are willing to love the clouds and a cloudy day, you will never be bored. These are also part of God’s magnificent creations.

praise, thou, O forest, and every tree therein.” ¶ Govett explains: “By ‘the lower parts of the earth’ is signified the souls of the righteous dead. Thus we find in Revelations 5:13, ‘And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth ... heard saying, Blessing and honour ... be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and the Lamb forever.’ So Psalm 71:20 and Psalm 63:9.” I can just imagine the shout of joy coming from the Spirit World when the Savior fulfilled His work. President Joseph F. Smith received this wonderful open vision on 3 October 1918, regarding the righteous dead or the Savior’s visit to the Spirit World: “As I pondered over these things which are written, the eyes of my understanding were opened, and the Spirit of the Lord rested upon me, and I saw the hosts of the dead, both small and great. And there were gathered together in one place an innumerable company of the spirits of the just, who had been faithful in the testimony of Jesus while they lived in mortality; And who had offered sacrifice in the similitude of the great sacrifice of the Son of God, and had suffered tribulation in their Redeemer’s name. All these had departed the mortal life, firm in the hope of a glorious resurrection, through the grace of God the Father and his Only Begotten Son, Jesus Christ. I beheld that they were filled with joy and gladness, and were rejoicing together because the day of their deliverance was at hand. They were assembled awaiting the advent of the Son of God into the spirit world, to declare their redemption from the bands of death. Their sleeping dust was to be restored unto its perfect frame, bone to his bone, and the sinews and the flesh upon them, the spirit and the body to be united never again to be divided, that they might receive a fulness of joy. While this vast multitude waited and conversed, rejoicing in the hour of their deliverance from the chains of death, the Son of God appeared, declaring liberty to the captives who had been faithful; And there he preached to them the everlasting gospel, the doctrine of the resurrection and the redemption of mankind from the fall, and from individual sins on conditions of repentance” (D&C 138:11–19, emphasis added). ¶ All of nature sings. Baltzer has: “Here we must assume that the intention is to forge a link with the preceding scene. For there the most important trees in the forest were named. But now they need no longer fear that their wood will be misused for idols.” ¶ For the LORD hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified himself in Israel. The Targum (Ⓣ) has for the last clause, “and will glorify himself in Israel.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Because God hath redeemed Jacob and Israel shall be glorified.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and Israel shall be glorified.” The prophetic perfect (see ISAIAH 30:7) is used throughout, declaring the redemption as completed, “for the LORD hath redeemed,” hundreds of years before the Savior paid the expiatory redemptive price for all.

24 Thus saith the LORD, thy redeemer, and he that formed thee from the womb, I [am] the LORD that maketh all [things]; that stretcheth forth the heavens alone; that spreadeth abroad the earth by myself;

Thus saith the LORD, thy redeemer, and he that formed thee from the womb, I [am] the LORD that maketh all [things]. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “who prepared thee from the womb,” instead of formed thee from the womb. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “THUS saith the Lord, who redeemed thee — even He who formed thee from the womb; I am the Lord the Maker of all things.” Instead of redeemer, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has savior, and also adds helper (BPE) / and helped you (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “And thy maker, from the womb” instead of “Thy redeemer, and he that formed thee from the womb.” That is, from the beginning. ¶ That stretcheth forth the heavens alone; that spreadeth abroad the earth by myself. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “I have suspended the heavens by my Word, I have laid the foundations of the earth by my strength.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I alone stretched out the heavens and firmly established the earth.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “I am the Lord, that make all things, that alone stretch out the heavens, that establish the earth, and there is none with me.” ¶ Orelli explains the written (Ketib, כְּתִיב) vs. read (Qere, קִרְיָ) text: “מֵאֲתִי, with Keri: from me, out of my own means . . .; Kethib, more graphically, מִי אֲתִי, who was with me, who was there? Compare ISAIAH 40:12 ff.” So AMP has: “Who alone stretched out the heavens, Who spread out the earth by Myself [who was with Me]?” To me it is very interesting that Gill says that alone does not mean: “... to the exclusion of the Father and the Holy Spirit.” The definition of alone is important here, after all. Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg, explains: “... the Rabbis (Genesis Rabbah 1:2) state: All agree the angels were not created on the first day, lest it be said that Michael was stretching at the southern end of the firmament, Gabriel at the northern end, and the Holy One, blessed be He, was measuring from the middle.” Yet, we do believe, as LDS, that indeed Michael and others—yes, probably Gabriel, too—were involved—at some point—in the work of the earth’s formation. ¶ Then Elder Joseph Fielding Smith said: “It is true that Adam [Michael] helped to form this earth. He labored with our Savior Jesus Christ. I have a strong view or conviction that there were others also who assisted them.” Elder Bruce R. McConkie likewise taught: “... from other sacred sources we know that Jehovah-Christ, assisted by ‘many of the noble and great ones’ (Abraham 3:22), of whom Michael is but the illustration, did in fact create the earth and all forms of plant and animal life on the face thereof.”³¹ But, according to Elder McConkie, the formation of man was an exception and a role taken solely by the Father (see notes on ISAIAH 45:12). ¶ I was on the phone with our friends, Howard and Karleen Hamilton—the previous owners of Vista Tres Volcanes where we live. Because someone had tried to break into the home while Linda & I spent our Sabbatical here, they asked if there had been any further attempts to break in. I explained that I had fixed the section of the fence where the intruders had come in, and began to parenthetically explain that I had someone do this for me. They interrupted me with a “Yeah, yeah, of course, no need to explain that.” So, it is well possible that Jehovah is here saying that He directed the work of others as we mentioned in ISAIAH 44:8 (as He Himself was directed by the Father in all things) in the process of forming the earth. There were no idols or false gods there to help with the work. It is also possible that there were portions of either the spirit pre-creation or the creation process where the Savior was indeed working alone (but under the delegation of the Father). Christ has done nothing save what He has seen the Father do or what the Father commanded. ¶ We just quoted President Brigham Young explaining that after we die we will need to “[pass] the angels who stand as sentinels, being enabled to give them the key words, the signs and tokens, pertaining to the Holy Priesthood.”³² Yet we know that there is no contradiction between this and our knowledge from the Book of Mormon that after we die: “... the keeper of the gate is the Holy One of Israel; and he employeth no servant there; and there is none other way save it be by the gate; for he cannot be deceived, for the Lord God is his name” (2 Nephi 9:41). This will become clear to all at some future date.

25 That frustrateth the tokens of the liars, and maketh diviners mad; that turneth wise [men] backward, and maketh their knowledge foolish;

That frustrateth the tokens of the liars, and maketh diviners mad. The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “Who else can dispel from the heart the signs of belly speakers and divinations?” The Peshitta (ܣ) has the Lord making the efforts of diviners fail. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “That make void the tokens of diviners, and make the soothsayers mad.” ¶ Above we spoke of the signs and tokens of the Priesthood and we must be attentive to the counterfeits offered by Satan. Alexander has: “Signs are properly the pledges and accompaniments of predictions, but may here be regarded as equivalent to prophecy itself.” Horsley suggests that “the tokens of liars” should be translated as “the signs of astrologers.” JUB has, “that undoes the signs of the fortune tellers and makes the diviners mad; that turns the wise men backward and makes their wisdom fade away.” ¶ It has been my personal experience that those who accuse us of using Christ as a crutch are often the very people who give themselves to superstitious beliefs. Cowles says: “The ‘liars’ and the ‘diviners’ are false prophets and prognosticators whose pretended ‘signs’ it was God’s delight to frustrate ...” Jenour further explains: “It was customary for the false prophets, as well as the true ones, to give some sign or token that the predictions they uttered would be fulfilled. Thus we read, 1 Kings 22:11, that Zedekiah, the son of Chenaanah, made horns of iron, and put them upon his head, in token that Ahab would defeat and destroy the Syrians. But this was a lying token, for the Syrians were victorious, and Ahab was slain, according to the prediction of Micaiah, the prophet of Jehovah, who thus frustrated the lying token of the false prophet. The allusion here, however, is rather to the impotence and folly of the Chaldean astrologers and soothsayers, which were especially manifested on that memorable night when Belshazzar was suddenly arrested in his sinful mirth by the appearance of a man’s hand writing upon the wall the decree of Jehovah, meaning of which they were unable to explain (Daniel 5:5).” ¶ That turneth wise [men] backward, and maketh their knowledge foolish. The Targum (ܬ) has the last clause as, “and bringeth their knowledge into contempt.” The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “I am he who turneth sages backwards and maketh their counsel foolish.” ¶ Young reminds us of the expression used in 2 Samuel 15:31: “And one told David, saying, Ahithophel is among the conspirators with Absalom. And David said, O LORD, I pray thee, turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness [סָכַל].” This verse about putting the self-asserting wise in their place: that turneth the wise backwards, מְשִׁיב חֲכָמִים אָחוּר, is a common theme in Scripture. It goes along well with such declarations as: “O that cunning plan of the evil one! O the vainness, and the frailties, and the foolishness of men! When they are learned they think they are wise, and they hearken not unto the counsel of God, for they set it aside, supposing they know of themselves, wherefore, their wisdom is foolishness and it profiteth them not. And they shall perish” (2 Nephi 9:28); “For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent”

³¹ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. The Promised Messiah, p. 62.

³² Young, President Brigham. Journal of Discourses 2:31, 1854.

(1 Corinthians 1:19, see also ISAIAH 29:14); and also see Jeremiah 9:23–24 and Proverbs 3:5–7.

26 That confirmeth the word of his servant, and performeth the counsel of his messengers; that saith to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be inhabited; and to the cities of Judah, Ye shall be built, and I will raise up the decayed[✓] places thereof:

✓ wastes

That confirmeth the word of his servant, and performeth the counsel of his messengers. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “But establisheth the word of his servant, and verifieth the counsel of his messengers.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “That raise up the word of my servant and perform the counsel of my messengers.” ¶ Regarding the word establish or stand (קום), Young makes a brilliant observation: “Earlier (ISAIAH 40:8) Isaiah had stated that the word of [our] God would stand forever; and now, employing the same verb, he points out that God causes His servant’s word to stand.” So it is that in ISAIAH 40:8 we saw: “וְדָבַר אֱלֹהֵינוּ יָקוּם לְעוֹלָם” and here we have: “מִקֵּים דָּבַר עֲבָדִי.” ¶ Horsley testifies that “his servant” is here none other than Messiah. ¶ Each priesthood holder seeks to give blessings such as that they are the word of the Lord, and as such, that these words will be confirmed, or come to pass, because they are indeed His words. Furthermore, not a few times have I prayed to God that I might be able to teach by the spirit or testify by the spirit in such a way that those words are also confirmed to those who hear them.³³ One of my favorite scriptures of all time is found in Samuel: “And Samuel grew, and the LORD was with him, and did let none of his words fall to the ground” (1Samuel 3:19). I believe that this verse has a double meaning. That all the words that Samuel spoke as a prophet of God came to pass and none fell to the ground unaccomplished; and also, just as important, that Samuel did not permit the Lord’s words to fall to the ground but was obedient in all things. This was a type of Christ and His relationship with the Father. It is the privilege of every man, woman and child to live in this manner, so that our words will be confirmed as we follow the dictates of the Spirit. Can there be anything more wonderful? ¶ That saith to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be inhabited. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Who saith to Jerusalem, ‘Thou shalt be inhabited.’” Cyrus had a huge part in the re-building of Jerusalem in the early days (see ISAIAH 44:27–28). And now in the latter-days Jerusalem is once again being re-built. It is the Holy One of Israel who makes these things possible. ¶ And to the cities of Judah, Ye shall be built, and I will raise up the decayed places thereof: The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And to the cities of Idumea, ‘Ye shall be rebuilt, and in its deserts vegetation shall spring up.’” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has wastes instead of decayed places. ¶ This is just another witness that Jerusalem and other cities in the Holy Land would indeed be destroyed and have to be re-built.

³³ We read about such teaching and testifying by the spirit in D&C 100:5–8: “Therefore, verily I say unto you, lift up your voices unto this people; speak the thoughts that I shall put into your hearts, and you shall not be confounded before men; For it shall be given you in the very hour, yea, in the very moment, what ye shall say. But a commandment I give unto you, that ye shall declare whatsoever thing ye declare in my name, in solemnity of heart, in the spirit of meekness, in all things. And I give unto you this promise, that inasmuch as ye do this the Holy Ghost shall be shed forth in bearing record unto all things whatsoever ye shall say.”

27 That saith to the deep, Be dry, and I will dry up thy rivers:

The Targum (Ⲛ) has, “Babylon” rather than the deep. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Who saith to the deep, Thou shalt be wasted, and I will dry up the rivers.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) seems to make these commands. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has Be thou desolate instead of be dry. ¶ Gill says: “... most interpreters, Jewish and Christian, understand it of Babylon, which was situated in a watery place, by rivers of water, particularly the river Euphrates, and in a low valley.” Keith writes: “This may be understood as a general truth, or—and this appears to be the allusion here—as referring to the deliverance of Israel out of Egypt when a path was opened through the waters of the Red Sea, as in ISAIAH 43:16; or to the deliverance from Babylon, when the waters of the Euphrates were transferred into a new channel by Cyrus, that by the old one he might introduce his army into the city.”

28 That saith of Cyrus, [He is] my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure: even saying to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be built; and to the temple, Thy foundation shall be laid.

That saith of Cyrus (לְכֹרֶשׁ), note the great difference in pronunciation, Joresch, with a Spanish j). Gesenius notes: “The Greeks have remarked that the Persians called the sun by this name.” The Targum (Ⲛ), LXX (Ⲭ) and Vulgate (Ⲱ) also mention Cyrus by name. ¶ Keith writes: “A last illustration of divine power introduced by the prophet is the employment of Cyrus as the instrument of God in delivering the Jews from Babylon, and rebuilding Jerusalem and its temple. He was the son of Cambyses king of Persia, and of Mandane, the daughter of Astyages the king of Media, which two kingdoms were united in his reign. The employment of so celebrated a monarch as the shepherd of God in leading the Jews from Babylon to Judea, of which he was the means, is a fit illustration of divine power. The part he acted in the deliverance of the Jews, and in the rebuilding of the temple, is recorded in sacred history in 2 Chronicles 36:22–23; Ezra 1; and in profane history by Xenophon and others. Josephus relates that the prophecy by Isaiah was pointed out to Cyrus by the Jews when in Babylon. It has been supposed that it is to it that he refers in his edict inviting the Jews to return to Jerusalem: ‘Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, All the kingdoms of the earth hath the Lord God of heaven given me; and he hath charged me to build him an house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah: who is there among you of all his people? The Lord his God be with him, and let him go up,’ (2 Chronicles 36:23).” ¶ The naming of Cyrus was given long before his birth. Some say 150 years and others 300 (e.g., Henderson). This is considered by many exegetes, impossible. Whitehouse, for instance, has: “We can only conclude that we have here the language of a contemporary of Cyrus who watched his career with absorbing interest. The occurrence of this name in an oracle more than 150 years before he lived would be wholly unintelligible and purposeless.” And this is really the sum and substance, we have said, of why moderns believe that there were two or more authors to the book of Isaiah. They limit prophets to being wise men³⁴ that can see and interpret the present. ¶ The Savior castigated the Pharisees in Matthew 16:3 for leaning on their cleverness when it came to the weather but not on Scripture when it came to religious matters: “When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather: for the sky is red. And in the morning, It will be foul weather today: for the sky is red and lowering. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?” (Matthew 16:3b–4). Yet, for God all things are present. The Talmud, written by the Jewish Rabbis, testifies: “All the prophets prophesied not but of the days of the Messiah,” Sanhedrin 99a. Alfred Edersheim, The Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah. I humbly and most reverently witness that God does speak to man about the future. ¶ Jennings well says: “When one remembers the day in which the ending of this chapter was written, that Jerusalem was still a great and prosperous city, that the cities of Judah needed no rebuilding, that Babylon was but a struggling petty power, that no potentate of the name of Cyrus was known to exist; there cannot be the least surprise that modern rationalism has to make the prophecy to date after the event. Since no miracles are possible; since the Creator of all has been, always ‘reverently,’ expelled from His own universe; and since this would be as wonderful a miracle as any that could be conceived, then to them it follows that Isaiah did not write this prophecy.” ¶ [He is] my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “That promises Cyrus that He will give him a kingdom; and that he shall establish all my pleasure.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Who saith, to Cyrus [I will give] wisdom, and he shall execute all my pleasure. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Thou art my shepherd, and thou shalt perform all my pleasure.” ¶ Gill says: “Justin [Hist. ex Trogo l. 1. c. 5.] says, he had this name given him, while he was among the shepherds, by whom he was brought up, having been exposed in his infancy.” The Shepherd is Christ and he utilizes many shepherds to help him. Not all of them, Cyrus being an example, are members of His Church. ¶ Even saying to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be built. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Who saith to Jerusalem, ‘Thou shalt be rebuilt.’” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Who say to Jerusalem: Thou shalt be built.” Skinner says: “There have been abundant intimations that he is the destined instrument of Israel’s restoration, but these have hitherto occupied a secondary place in the prophet’s thoughts. Here, however, the figure of Cyrus is brought prominently on the scene, he is addressed directly and by name, and the ultimate scope of his mission is clearly unfolded. He is to set the exiles free, to rebuild Jerusalem and the Temple.” ¶ And to the temple, Thy foundation shall be laid. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And the house dedicated to me I will found.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “And to the temple: Thy foundations shall be laid.” Kay well says: “Both this title [My Shepard] and that of ‘My Anointed’ (in ISAIAH 45:1) shew that Cyrus, the actual liberator of the Jews, was also a type of the world’s Saviour ... Cyrus’s work fitted him to prefigure the Sun of Righteousness (Malachi 4:2), who should overthrow mystic Babylon,—the empire of darkness.” Clarke notes: “This Cyrus should say to the temple: ‘Thy foundation shall be laid.’ Not—thou shalt be built. The fact is, only the foundation was laid in the days of Cyrus, the Ammonites having prevented the building; nor was it resumed till the second year of Darius, one of his successors.”

FIRST POSTED: 20 May 2015

³⁴ Certainly, there are wise men who can read the present. One of the farm hands in my mother’s vineyard in San Javier, Chile, confidently and correctly predicted both of President Obama’s presidential elections. This was not a revelation from God, but simply astuteness on his part.

Isaiah 45

Just like Cyrus played a crucial role in the return of Israel from Babylon; so would the Book of Mormon to the return of Israel from mystic Babylon in the last days. Through prayer and study of the Book of Mormon, and through turning to Christ, every individual is promised that their “confidence [shall] wax strong in the presence of God; and the doctrine of the priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dews from heaven” (D&C 121:45, emphasis added). God makes it clear that we will not seek Him in vain, nor that mankind was created by accident. Finally, we are gloriously informed that every knee shall bend and every tongue confess and testify that Jesus is the very Christ, the Son of God.

vv. 1–4. From the pre-existence, Cyrus was set apart by the Lord to do an important work. Three reasons are given, all beginning with לְמַעַן that [or, to that end—Young], to explain why the Lord would bless Cyrus: (1) that Cyrus might know it was the Lord who helped him (ISAIAH 45:3); (2) that Israel might be blessed (ISAIAH 45:4); and (3) that the whole world might know the Lord (ISAIAH 45:6). In each of these cases the word יָדַע know is involved in some way. In the first instance, that Cyrus might יָדַע the Lord; in the last, that the world might יָדַע the Lord; in the middle, that even through Cyrus did not יָדַע he was an instrument of the Lord, yet he would be used to bless Israel and come to acknowledge His hand.

1 ¶ THUS saith the LORD to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden, ✓ to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut;

✓ or, strengthened

THUS saith the LORD to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden, to subdue nations before him.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “לְמַשִּׁיחָא” as does the Masoretic text (מ) “לְמַשִּׁיחָא,” to his anointed, or to his Messiah. Other individuals who have been anointed, such as kings (i.e., the Lord’s anointed) are often types of The Anointed One, or Christ the Lord. Here we have the title given to King Cyrus, כּוֹרֶשׁ, (or, כּוֹרֶשׁ in Aramaic), that is Jorash or Jorash, respectively (the ‘J’ or כּ, pronounced as a Spanish j, or German Ch). The Targum (ܬ) has, “Thus saith the Lord to His anointed, to Cyrus, whom I hold firm by his right hand, to deliver the nations unto him (literally, ‘before him’).” The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “Thus saith the Lord God, For mine anointed, for Cyrus, (whose right hand I have taken hold of that nations may listen before him).” The Douay Rheims (Ϟ) has, “Thus saith the Lord to my anointed Cyrus, whose right hand I have taken hold of, to subdue nations before his face.” ¶ Whose right hand. This is an emblem of being helped. See ISAIAH 41:10, 13. There is, indeed, nothing sweeter than to be taken by the right hand of the Lord. I love living life in which the Lord holds us continually by the right hand. Rawlinson follows the margin ¶ in suggesting, Whose right hand I have strengthened. Benson says: “... supporting and directing his right hand, and enabling him to surmount all difficulties, and to overcome all opposition.” ¶ Of Cyrus, Jenour writes: “He is described by Xenophon as remarkable for the beauty of his person, the strength and agility of his body, and the extraordinary qualities of his mind. Surpassing all others in every military exercise, he was at the same time endued with great intellectual powers; and with such sweetness of disposition, and such engaging manners, that he gained the hearts of all with whom he had to do, even of those whose country he had conquered, and rendered tributary to himself. ([For more details see] Cyropaedia. L. 1 § 1.1).”¹ Delitzsch says: “The politics of Cyrus were pervaded by purer motives [than the rest of the world’s leaders], and this brought him eternal honour.” ¶ לְמַשִּׁיחָא, מָשִׁיחַ, from the root, מָשַׁח, or in Greek, Christ, Χριστός. Slotki/Rosenberg have: “The Hebrew root of the verb does not necessarily imply actual anointment with oil. It may only mean ‘consecration’ or ‘appointment to a high office’ (Rashi, Kimhi, Ibn Ezra).” Some, in an effort to eliminate Christological references in the Old Testament, suggest that the Hebrew expression for Messiah or Anointed, מָשִׁיחַ, is never used for the future Christ in the prophetic books. While we have plenty of examples when the word מָשִׁיחַ is used for a king or “the Lord’s anointed,” yet there are at least three such references in the latter prophets that speak of Jesus Christ: two in the book of Daniel (Daniel 9:25–26) and one in the Minor Prophets (Habakkuk 3:13²). In addition, Young points out a powerful reference in the Wittings: “Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing? The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the LORD, and against his anointed [מָשִׁיחוֹ], saying, Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us. He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh: the LORD shall have them in derision. Then shall he speak unto them in his wrath, and vex them in his sore displeasure. Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion. I will declare the decree: the LORD hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee” (Psalm 2:1–7, emphasis added). ¶ Henderson explains: “The allusion is to the ancient rite of anointing with oil those who were invested with royal dignity (e.g., Judges 9:8; 1 Samuel 9:16; 15:1; 1 Kings 1:34). Today, of course, we tend to only think of Messiah or the Anointed מָשִׁיחַ, as especially associated with Jesus the Christ, fully understanding, of course, that in the Bible it is also used in other instances. Cowles has: “Some have considered [this title, i.e., my anointed] a special indication that Cyrus was a type of the great Messiah. The just view seems to be that he was anointed as king for the special work which the Lord had for him to do, as Jesus was for his special work, while yet their respective missions were exceedingly unlike.” ¶ To subdue nations before him. Alexander explains: “The treading down of nations is a trait peculiarly appropriate in this case, as the Greek historians give long catalogues of distinct nations subjugated by Cyrus, such as the Medes, Hyrcanians, Assyrians, Arabians, Cappadocians, Phrygians, Lydians, Carians, Babylonians, &c.” ¶ And I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut. The LXX (6) reads, “I will break the power of kings; I will open gates before him, and cities shall not be shut up.” The Peshitta (5) is missing the two leaved gates. The Douay-Rheims (2) has, “And to turn the backs of kings, and to open the doors before him, and the gates shall not be shut.” ¶ Skinner explains: “To loose (lit. ‘open’³)

¹ Some scholars consider the Cyropaedia by Xenophon as an interesting book but not necessarily based on fact (Xenophon, by the way, is the author of one of the early treatises on academic equitation and the art of dressage). Those who malign Cyrus are just as likely to be incorrect, however. When my father was young, Professor Albert Einstein told him—upon hearing of his desire to study history—“Half of history is true; the other, interesting.”

is to ungird, or disarm; see 1 Kings 20:11⁴, where the same verb forms the contrast to ‘gird.’” So also Birks who further explains: “The loosing is a contrast to the girding of the loins. It denotes the weakening of every adverse power, so that resistance would be vain. There is a special allusion to the night when the handwriting appeared on the wall, when ‘the king’s countenance changed, and his thoughts troubled him, so that the joints of his loins were loosed, and his knees smote together one against another’ (Daniel 5:6).” Alexander notes: “Clericus and J. D. Michaelis suppose an allusion to the removal of the sword-belt, as the ancient method of disarming or dismissing from active service ... But most of the modern writers are agreed that the words at least include a reference to the ordinary use of the girdle as a part of oriental dress, on which the activity of the wearer and his exercise of strength are in a great degree dependent, as it gathers up and tightens the flowing garments which would otherwise impede his movements.” Keith likewise has: “As girding the loins, or securing the flowing robe worn about the person in the East, indicated preparation for work, or war,—so loosing the loins, as it occurs in the text, expresses unpreparedness, unfitness, or feebleness ... If the loins be regarded as the seat of strength, to loose them is to render helpless.” ¶ To open before him the two leaved gate. Birks, referring back to Daniel says: “The opening of the doors and gates has a similar reference to that night of revelry, when the river-gates were carelessly left unclosed.” Rabbi Rosenberg has: “The dual form דְּלָתַיִם,⁵ used also in Deuteronomy 3:5, probably denotes two doors with which the gate was closed.” Alexander explains: “All interpreters admit that while this clause, in its most general sense, is perfectly appropriate to all the fortified places which were attacked by Cyrus, it is specifically and remarkably appropriate to the taking of Babylon. It can scarcely be considered a fortuitous coincidence, that Herodotus speaks of the gates which led to the river as having been left open on the night of the attack; and Xenophon says the doors of the palace itself having been unguardedly opened, the invaders took possession of it almost without resistance.” Calvin well notes: “God frequently chooses to hold us in suspense, and thus conceals from us the method which he has ready at hand, yet, in this instance he indulges the weakness of his people, and explains the method in which he will deliver them ... the Prophet shews that all defenses are useless, and that it serves no purpose to block up every entrance, when the Lord wishes to open up a way for the enemies.

² “Thou wentest forth for the salvation of thy people, even for salvation with thine anointed [מָשִׁיחְךָ]; thou woundedst the head out of the house of the wicked, by discovering the foundation unto the neck. Selah” (Habakkuk 3:13).

³ Open, אָפַתָּה, from the root פָּתַח.

⁴ We have הִנֵּה בְּמִצְחָתוֹ or “Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off.”

⁵ Gesenius explains: “Root דָּלָה, the leaf of a door, so called from its hanging and swinging.”

Although it is certain that the gates were shut and securely barred, yet ... the Prophet justly affirms that nothing shall be closed against him.” When the Lord opens, who is there who can shut? See Revelation 3:7b where Christ applies the following to Himself: “These things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man shutteth; and shutteth, and no man openeth.”

2 I will go before thee, and make the crooked places straight: I will break in pieces the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron:

I will go before thee, and make the crooked places straight: The Chilton Targum (Ⓢ) translation has, “My Memra will go before you, and I will level walls.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I will go before thee and level mountains.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, for the second clause, “And will humble the great ones of the earth.” I like the expression in the Masoretic text (Ⓜ), אֲנִי לְפָנֶיךָ where it says, “I before thy face.” Cyrus, given as a type of Christ, would have the crooked places made straight and all things prepared before him (see also ISAIAH 40:1 ff.). Birks has: “While Belshazzar and his nobles scoffed in their feasting, and drank wine, in scorn, in the vessels of God’s temple, the warning of God, published so long before, was fulfilled, first in their folly, and then in their speedy ruin. ‘If now the Babylonians had perceived beforehand, or learned what Cyrus was doing, they would, overlooking the entrance of the Persians, have destroyed them utterly. For by fastening all the gates towards the river, and themselves mounting on the walls along the river sides, they would have caught them as in a net. Now, however, the Persians come upon them unawares. Also from the size of the city, as those who live there report, when one end of it was taken, the Babylonians who lived in the middle did not know it; but as it happened to be a feast with them, they were dancing at the hour, and making merry, until indeed they knew it too well. And thus Babylon was taken for the first time’ (Herodotus 1:191).” There is no more beautiful understanding than to know that the Lord will go before us to open the way. ¶ I will break in pieces the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron: The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I will break in pieces the gates of brass, and burst asunder the bars of iron.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, for the second clause, “And will burst the bars of iron.” ¶ Skinner notes: “Babylon had 100 gates ‘all of brass,’ according to the description of Herodotus (I. 179). Cf. Psalm 107:16.” Alexander has: “Herodotus and Abydenus say expressly that the gates of Babylon were all of brass (compare Psalm 107:16).” When we are in the Lord’s errand, He will remove all obstacles for us—even though at the time they may seem insurmountable. Recall, for instance, Nephi’s return to Jerusalem to obtain the brass plates.

3 And I will give thee the treasures of darkness, and hidden riches of secret places, that thou mayest know that I, the LORD, which call [thee] by thy name, [am] the God of Israel.

And I will give thee the treasures of darkness. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And give thee treasures of darkness.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “And I will give thee hidden treasures.” ¶ The context suggests out of darkness, rather than of darkness. So also Skinner: “the treasures of darkness] i.e. treasures hid in darkness. The following word rendered hidden riches (Heb. מִסְתָּוִן, held by some to be the original of the N.T. ‘Mammon’), means properly treasure hidden underground (Job 3:21; Proverbs 2:4; Jeremiah 41:8). The treasures referred to are chiefly the loot of Sardis, which Xenophon describes as ‘the richest city of Asia next to Babylon’ (Cyrop. VII. 2. 11), and of Babylon itself (Jeremiah 50:37; Jeremiah 51:13).” Keith has: “The treasures which fell into the hands of Cyrus ... at the taking of Babylon, and in his other successes, is stated by historians to have been immense. These it was customary to secure in secret places; often, it is stated, in periods of hostile invasion, in caves; hence they are called ‘treasures of darkness,’ ‘hidden riches,’ riches ‘of secret places.’” ¶ And hidden riches of secret places, that thou mayest know that I, the LORD, which call [thee] by thy name, [am] the God of Israel. The Targum (Ⓢ) only has, “and hidden treasures” for the first clause. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Deep, hidden, unseen treasures I will disclose to thee, that thou mayest know, that I, the Lord thy God, who calleth thee by thy name, am the God of Israel.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, for the first clause, “And the concealed riches of secret places.” ¶ Wordsworth explains: “Cyrus did not require to be told that the Lord (Jehovah) was the God of Israel. All the heathen knew this; but he and they needed to be taught that the Lord God of Israel was the only God, and that all the gods whom the heathen worshipped were vanity.” Lowth has: “Sardes and Babylon, when taken by Cyrus, were the wealthiest cities in the world. Croesus, celebrated beyond all the kings of that age for his riches, gave up his treasures to Cyrus, with an exact account, in writing, of the whole, containing the particulars with which each wagon was loaded, when they were carried away: and they were delivered to Cyrus at the palace of Babylon (Xenophon Cyropaedia 7:503, 515, 540). The gold and silver estimated by weight in this account, being converted into pounds sterling, amount to £ 126,224,000 (Brerewood, De Ponderibus, cap X).” ¶ Treasures of darkness and hidden treasures essentially mean the same thing: that which is not apparent. These treasures may be material, but the most valuable riches are treasures of knowledge. The Book of Mormon is one such treasure. It was kept hidden for centuries until the boy Prophet was able to remove it from its dark place in Hill Cumorah and begin translating its pages. The Word of Wisdom offers: “And shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures” (D&C 89:19). We have powerful promises given to us in these last days: “God shall give unto you knowledge by his Holy Spirit, yea, by the unspeakable gift of the Holy Ghost, that has not been revealed since the world was until now; Which our forefathers have awaited with anxious expectation to be revealed in the last times, which their minds were pointed to by the angels, as held in reserve for the fulness of their glory; A time to come in the which nothing shall be withheld, whether there be one God or many gods, they shall be manifest. All thrones and dominions, principalities and powers, shall be revealed and set forth upon all who have endured valiantly for the gospel of Jesus Christ ... How long can rolling waters remain impure? What power shall stay the heavens? As well might man stretch forth his puny arm to stop the Missouri river in its decreed course, or to turn it up stream, as to hinder the Almighty from pouring down knowledge from heaven upon the heads of the Latter-day Saints” (DyC 121:26–30, 33, emphasis added).

4 For Jacob my servant's sake, and Israel mine elect, I have even called thee by thy name: I have surnamed thee, though thou hast not known me.

For Jacob my servant's sake, and Israel mine elect, I have even called thee by thy name: The LXX (6) reads, “For the sake of my servant Jacob, and of Israel my chosen one, I will call thee by thy name.” ¶ Benson suggests: “The prophet here gives us the reasons why God showed such favour to a prince, who had been addicted to the superstition of his country, and ignorant of the true God, that he prospered all his under takings, and gave success to all his endeavours. It was, 1st, For Israel's sake: For Israel, mine elect, I have even called thee, &c.—I have called thee to this honour, and that by name; not for thy own sake, but for Israel's: therefore, neither despise them, though a poor and despised people, nor be puffed up in a great opinion of thyself.” Luther points us to John 10:3: “To him the porter openeth; and the sheep hear his voice: and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out.” ¶ Elder

Bruce R. McConkie explains that the elect: “... are the portion of church members who are striving with all their hearts to keep the fulness of the gospel law in this life so that they can become inheritors of the fulness of gospel rewards in the life to come. As far as the male sex is concerned, they are the ones, the Lord says, who have the Melchizedek Priesthood conferred upon them and who thereafter magnify their callings and are sanctified by the Spirit. In this way, ‘They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, and the church and kingdom, and the elect of God.’”⁶ ¶ I have surnamed thee, though thou hast not known me. The Targum (7) has, “I have guided thee, though thou hast not known that thou shouldest fear me.”⁷ The LXX (6) reads, “and receive thee kindly. As for thee, thou didst not know me.” The Douay-Rheims (8) has, “I have made a likeness of thee, and thou hast not known me.” ¶ Kay has, “Long before he knew God, he was ‘known’ by Him (see Jeremiah 1:5).” So also Delitzsch (and many others who say): “The passage is to be explained in the same way as Jeremiah 1:5, ‘Before I formed thee in the womb, I knew thee.’” In other words, even from the pre-existence.⁸ ¶ Skinner says: “though thou hast not known me] ... the words present no difficulty in their natural sense, which is that Cyrus entered on his career of conquest ignorant of the true God who made his way prosperous.” How many have been led to incredible discoveries and yet did not know the Lord nor acknowledge His hand. ¶ Cowles has: “‘Surnaming’ (here as in ISAIAH 44:5), means to give a special name of honor, implying significant relations to him who gave the name.”

vv. 5–10. It is the Lord who has power. A double allusion—one to the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and one to the reuniting of the City of Enoch with the City of Zion in the last days—is given. The Lord foresees the persecution and murmuring that will arise with the coming forth of the Book of Mormon: Another Testament of Jesus Christ.

⁶ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. Doctrinal New Testament Commentary, 3:330–331; Mormon Doctrine, 2nd ed., p. 217; and Commentary 2:267–269, 271–278, 283–285.

⁷ Pauli has: “This paraphrase agrees with what Xenophon tells us of the end of Cyrus; when about to die, he sacrificed to Jupiter, to the sun, and to other idols, and supplicated to his wife, &c. (Cyropaedia, lib viii. cap 5).” In other words, that Cyrus only partially acknowledged the hand of the Lord in his great success.

⁸ See President Joseph Fielding Smith's notes on “Bible Evidences for Man's Pre-Existence,” Answers to Gospel Questions. Also, in the same book, see President Smith's comments on the talents we possessed in the pre-existence, under “Different Dispositions.” Furthermore, he taught that “pre-mortal callings [were not] confined to the prophets” (see under “Acceptance of the Prophet Joseph Smith”).

5 ¶ I [am] the LORD, and [there is] none else, [there is] no God beside me: I girded thee, though thou hast not known me:

Wordsworth renders the first clause: “I, the Lord (Jehovah), am God, and none else beside me is God.” The Lord’s concern here, and in other like places in the Scriptures, is that no one might confer godhood status to the idols and other no-gods of the heathen nations. ¶ The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the second half, “I have supported thee, though thou hast not known that thou shouldest fear me (the Royal Polyglot has לְמַפְלָא, ‘to worship’).” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Because I am the Lord God and there is no God else besides me; I strengthened thee when thou didst not know me.” ¶ Skinner points out: “I gird thee] the contrast to ‘loose the loins of kings’ in ISAIAH 45:1.” Birks says: “The former verse taught that it was the God of Israel, who, for Israel’s sake, led Cyrus to victory. Here the further truth is taught, that He is no mere tutelary, national God, like those of the heathen; but Jehovah, the unchangeable I AM, who claims justly the reverence and worship of all creation.” Alexander notes: “What is said before of naming him is here said of girding him, i.e. investing him with royal dignity or personally strengthening him; both may be included.” ¶ Though thou has not known me. At some point Cyrus finds out about the Lord, but these words suggest to a knowing that goes beyond a knowing about the Lord. In John we read: “And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent” (John 17:3).

6 That they may know from the rising of the sun, and from the west, that [there is] none beside me. I [am] the LORD, and [there is] none else.

The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “That they from the risings of the sun and they from its goings down may know, that there is no God besides me. I the Lord am God and there is none else.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, for the first half, “That they may know who are from the rising of the sun, and they who are from the west, that there is none besides me.” ¶ Parry, Parry and Peterson have: “This prophecy is similar to the one made by Malachi: ‘For from the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same my name shall be great among the Gentiles; ... for my name shall be great among the heathen, saith the Lord of hosts’ (Malachi 1:11).” Skinner has: “from the west] Lit. from the going down thereof.” Keith suggests: “No doubt, the capture of so famed a city as Babylon, by such a conqueror as Cyrus, would attract universal notice in the then known world, and the public recognition of Jehovah in his decree would spread the name and fame of the one true God.” Calvin explains: “He does not predict what shall happen immediately, but what shall happen afterwards, though these things were long concealed. God therefore did not permit the remembrance of this transaction to fade away, but determined that it should be handed down in permanent records, that it might be celebrated in all ages, and by the most distant nations, to the very end of the world.” The return of the Jews from Babylon would pave the way for the birth of the Savior.

7 I form the light, and create darkness: I make peace, and create evil: I the LORD do all these [things].

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Who prepares the light, and creates darkness, makes peace, and creates punishment for evil (בִּישׁ). I the Lord do all these things.” ¶ Pauli notes that regarding בִּישׁ, “Words expressing, as in Hebrew, evil, sin, signify sometimes the punishment for sin, or sacrifice for sin; thus 2 Corinthians 5:21, ‘He that made him αμαρτιαν, sin, (sacrifice) for us.’” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “It was I who provided light and made darkness; who make peace and create evils: I the Lord God am he who doth all these things.” Instead of evil, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has hardship (Lamsa) / adversity (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “I form the light, and create darkness, I make peace, and create evil: I the Lord that do all these things.” Instead of peace, שְׁלוֹם, found in the Masoretic text (ⲡ), the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲥ) has good, טוֹב. ¶ Light and darkness. See Genesis 1:14–19. In this Isaianic verse, the Lord is reminding us of the organization of the earth. Rabbi Rosenberg, leaning on the ancient Rabbis has: “Since darkness is merely the absence of light, it is not really a creation, but a decree that the light absent itself (Ibn Ezra, Redak).” So likewise, Westermann, “Though he is lord over the darkness, God is certainly not its creator. He took it into creation and set bounds to it ...” ¶ Cowles writes about the false doctrine of Zoroaster: “[So] the people of the distant East, the regions of the rising sun, might know that there is no God beside me. For Persia, pre-eminently to the Hebrews the land of the rising sun, was the home of the celebrated doctrine of Zoroaster, taught in the Zend-Avesta, viz, that there is not one God only, but virtually two; one the author of all good; the other, of all evil; one, the former of light; the other, of darkness. These two rival creators were held to be each eternal; and if not precisely equal; yet both indefinitely powerful, and by their very nature terribly and eternally antagonistic.—But squarely in opposition to this dualistic system, and that his word might go at once through all that Eastern world whence Cyrus came, the Lord here affirms that he alone both formed the light and created darkness ...” ¶ Evil, רָע. Better, calamity (Skinner), hardship (Lamsa) or adversity. Jenour speaks about what he calls a mystery: “That evil exists, we know; but how did it first come? To say that God permits it, is saying nothing to the point, for permitting is not originating, and the question is as to the source of evil. Nor does it help the difficulty, to say that Satan is its author. Doubtless the evil there is in our world originated with that fallen spirit; but, how did he himself become evil? ... Volumes have been written upon it, but it remains as inextricable as ever.” Gladly, latter-day revelation sheds a clear light over all these matters. At the heart of it were both pride, as well as a desire to destroy man’s agency: “Satan⁹ rebelled against me, and sought to destroy the agency of man, which I, the Lord God, had given him” (Moses 4:3b). ¶ I particularly appreciate Ironside’s comments: “[There are those who] insist that God has foreordained everything that takes place on the earth; therefore that man should sin, in order that He might have opportunity to display His redemptive grace. But that is not what is involved here when He says, ‘I create peace and I create evil.’ It is evil in the sense of calamity.” ¶ If you are like me, the first thing you do is rush to your footnotes and look for the JST. But there is not JST here. Yet, in a similar verse we do have a JST: “Shall a trumpet be blown in the city, and the people not be afraid? shall there be evil [רָעָה] in a city, and the LORD hath not done it?” (JST, know it, Amos 3:6). Since the prophet Joseph Smith was taken before he completed the JST, one possibility is that this verse might still need changes. But there are other, more likely, explanations at work here. We must begin by defining the word evil in English. Then we will look at the original word, רָע, in Hebrew. When we think of evil, we tend to first associate it with something that is “morally reprehensible, sinful, wicked” (Webster). Or, “disposition to do wrong; moral offence; wickedness; depravity” (Webster Unabridged Dictionary, pre-1923).¹⁰ NBD suggests that evil is more than sin, “The Hebrew word comes from a root meaning ‘to spoil’, ‘to break in pieces’: being broken and so made worthless. It is essentially what is unpleasant, disagreeable, offensive.” Dictionaries often distinguish between moral evil and physical evil (e.g., see evil, ISBE, רָע). One thing that should be absolutely clear is that God does not create moral evil and that there is nothing about Him that is evil. So let us move into the second definition of the word, using physical evil as a descriptor. The HarperCollins Bible Dictionary has: “Bad situations or natural calamities can be referred to as ‘evil,’ since such occurrences are typically interpreted as a consequence of human sin, if not a direct punishment for specific sin (e.g., Deuteronomy 31:17; Ezra 9:13; Proverbs 11:21 {רָעָה is translated as wicked—GB}; Jeremiah 26:19; Amos 3:6 {but see JST there}). It is only in this sense (evil as calamity as opposed to evil as immorality or wickedness) that God can be portrayed as the cause of evil. God is never presented as wicked or immoral in the Bible, but God does sometimes send evil upon people in the sense of causing misfortune to befall them (Deuteronomy 28:20 {רָעָה is translated as wickedness—GB}; 2 Samuel 24:16; Job 42:11; cf. 1 Kings 2:44 {רָעָהָה is translated as the wickedness—GB}; 14:10).” Furthermore, the Lord often permits or knows about such evil רָע, without causing it, as in the case of Job. Regarding Job, Jennings says: “Was not Job right in attributing both the giving and the taking away of his all to the Lord, even though Satan was the active intermediary?” We also know of Prophets sealing the heavens so it would not rain. See notes on ISAIAH 7:12.

⁹ In LDS.org we read: “Heavenly Father allows Satan and Satan’s followers to tempt us as part of our experience in mortality (see 2 Nephi 2:11–14; D&C 29:39). Because Satan ‘seeketh that all men might be miserable like unto himself’ (2 Nephi 2:27), he and his followers try to lead us away from righteousness. He directs his most strenuous opposition at the most important aspects of Heavenly Father’s plan of happiness. For example, he seeks to discredit the Savior and the priesthood, to cast doubt on the power of the Atonement, to counterfeit revelation, to distract us from the truth, and to contradict individual accountability. He attempts to undermine the family by confusing gender, promoting sexual relations outside of marriage, ridiculing marriage, and discouraging childbearing by married adults who would otherwise raise children in righteousness. Individuals do not have to give in to Satan’s temptations. Each person has the power to choose good over evil, and the Lord has promised to help all who seek Him through sincere prayer and faithfulness.”

8 Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness: let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together; I the LORD have created it.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “Let the heavens drop down from above, and the clouds flow with good, let the earth open itself, and the dead live, and let righteousness be revealed together; I the Lord have created them.” The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “Let the heaven above be glad; and the clouds shower down righteousness. Let the earth spring and bloom with mercy and let it cause righteousness to spring up with it. I the Lord am he who created thee. Instead of skies, the Peshitta (S) has clouds; instead of bring forth salvation, the Peshitta (S) has salvation be multiplied. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Drop down dew, ye heavens, from above, and let the clouds rain the just: let the earth be opened, and bud forth a saviour: and let justice spring up together: I the Lord have created him.” Nägelsbach has: “Under the figure of rain is represented, in oriental fashion, the fructifying influence of the heaven on the earth (compare Deuteronomy 32:2).” Shalom Paul has: “For Heb. מִמַּעַל (‘from above’) serving as an adverb, see Exodus 20:4: ‘Or any likeness of what is in the heavens above (מִמַּעַל);’ Job 31:28: ‘For I would have denied God above (מִמַּעַל).’” Gill, leaning in the Vulgate (V) sees an allusion to the Savior, “Or, ‘the righteous One,’ as the Vulgate Latin version; the Lord our righteousness, Christ the author of righteousness ... and whose coming was to be, and was, as the rain, as the former and latter rain to the earth, and who came from heaven to earth to fulfil all righteousness; and with him came an abundance of blessings of rich grace, even all spiritual blessings, peace, pardon, righteousness, salvation, and eternal life, which were poured down from above upon the sons of men ...” ¶ Lowth has: “These images of the dew and the rain descending from heaven and making the earth fruitful, employed by the prophet, and some of those nearly of the same kind which are used by the Psalmist¹¹, may perhaps be primarily understood as designed to set forth in a splendid manner the happy state of God’s people restored to their country, and flourishing in peace and plenty, in piety and virtue; but justice and salvation, mercy and truth, righteousness and peace, and glory dwelling in the land, cannot with any sort of propriety, in the one or the other, be interpreted as the consequences of that event; they must mean the blessings of the great redemption by Messiah” (emphasis added). Yes, definitely redemption by Messiah is involved. There could be nothing greater! But the how of this is quite glorious as well, as we shall see in a moment. Luther says that let the earth open means that “the earth sprouts through the Word of God” (emphasis added). Calvin is inspired when he says that: “The Prophet always speaks in the name of God, who, in the exercise of his authority, calls on heaven and earth to lend their services to the restoration of the Church” (emphasis added). ¶ We have a further hint in Deuteronomy 32, that these things are symbolic of the doctrine that would be poured forth in the First Vision: “My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass” (Deuteronomy 32:2). The tender herb here is symbolic of the boy prophet and the beginnings of the restored Church, even The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. ¶ We also find similar words in the Pearl of Great Price: “And righteousness will I send down out of heaven; and truth will I send forth out of the earth, to bear testimony of mine Only Begotten; his resurrection from the dead; yea, and also the resurrection of all men; and righteousness and truth will I cause to sweep the earth as with a flood, to gather out mine elect from the four quarters of the earth, unto a place which I shall prepare, an Holy City, that my people may gird up their loins, and be looking forth for the time of my coming; for there shall be my tabernacle, and it shall be called Zion, a New Jerusalem” (Moses 7:62). Nyman quotes the Prophet Joseph Smith: “In commenting on the passage in Moses, Joseph Smith said: ‘And now, I ask, how righteousness and truth are going to sweep the earth as with a flood? I will answer. Men and angels are to be co-workers in bringing to pass this great work, and Zion is to be prepared, even a new Jerusalem, for the elect that are to be gathered from the four quarters of the earth, and to be established an holy city, for the tabernacle of the Lord shall be with them.’ (TPJS, p. 84.)” ¶ I was particularly touched by the words of Elder L. Aldin Porter, who after quoting Moses powerfully testified: “Did you note that He said, ‘Truth will I send forth out of the earth’? To do what? ‘To bear testimony of mine Only Begotten.’ The Book of Mormon was compiled and translated for our day.¹² It came forth out of the earth as was prophesied to bless and guide the lives of the people of this day. It came in a day and time as the Lord knew it would when the dislocations caused by wickedness would be very intense. As Moroni concluded the immense work of his father and others, he made a promise that has been shared widely in a multitude of languages. But I fear it has become too commonplace among us. We learn about it in Sunday School, in seminary, in family home evenings, and we even memorize it as missionaries. But today I would ask that you listen as I read this promise as if you had never heard of it. ‘And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost.’ This is the promise, that our Eternal Father will give us a manifestation of truth—a personal revelation of eternal consequence. The Book of Mormon was given to the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, manifesting Himself unto all nations. Do not treat lightly the revelations of God. Do not treat lightly this astonishing promise. I bear a solemn testimony to you that this promise has been fulfilled not only in my life but in the lives of hundreds of thousands, even millions, of people. You will find that when Moroni's promise is fulfilled and you are given the knowledge that the Book of Mormon is truly the word of God, there will come with it a witness that Jesus is the Christ, the Redeemer and Savior of the world. I have never known an instance where this did not occur. Moreover, I do not believe a violation of this principle will ever take place. A spiritual witness of the Nephite scripture will always bring the certainty of the Savior's existence. With that witness borne of the Holy Ghost will come a sure knowledge that Joseph Smith told the truth when he said that he had seen the Father and the Son on that spring morning of 1820. A knowledge that Jesus Christ lives and is our Redeemer and Savior is worth whatever the cost may be. This is the fulfillment of Moroni's promise in our lives. After that, we then through study and prayer can come to know that He has given us life through the Resurrection. We will come to know that He has promised us a quality of life hereafter beyond our capacity to comprehend. We must understand that this testimony comes only through obedience to the principles and ordinances of the gospel. Read the Book of Mormon. 'With a sincere heart [and] real intent,' begin to read. Ponder the words. Often pause and ask your Heavenly Father 'if these things are not true.' Continue to read, to ponder, and to ask. It will not be easy reading. There will be roadblocks along the way. Persist. Approach your Father in Heaven having expelled your prejudices and biases. Leave your heart open to receive the impressions that come from eternal sources. Many inspiring treasures will be revealed to you. There will, in time, come into your heart and mind an assurance that Jesus Christ is the living Son of the living Father. With it will come a knowledge that Joseph Smith is the prophet of the Restoration and that there are apostles and prophets on the earth today ... I make this promise to those who are investigating the Church, to those who are members but who have lost enthusiasm for the work and are, therefore, in a state of confusion in a world that is in moral chaos. I make this promise to those who through transgression and faithless living are in despair over eternal things. Our hearts will overflow with gratitude for His sacrifice in our behalf. This doctrine of personal revelation is not new. After this sacred witness comes, you will see His hand in a thousand things. 'And behold, all things have their likeness, and all things are created and made to bear record of me, both things which are temporal, and things which are spiritual; things which are in the heavens above, and things which are on the earth, and things which are in the earth, and things which are under the earth, both above and beneath: all things bear record of me.' We will find great joy in contemplating His life, and we will shortly realize that in truth all things do bear witness of Him. Furthermore, in the midst of our trials and challenges, we will find peace, knowing that in the end it will be all right. We will find serenity in the face of affliction. We will find this serenity in life even as chaos swirls around us. Such is the power of a testimony and witness that Jesus is the Christ, the Redeemer, our Advocate with the Father, the Only Begotten of the Father in the flesh, the very Savior of the world."¹³ ¶ President Ezra Taft Benson mightily declared: "The Book of Mormon is the instrument that God designed to 'sweep the earth as with a flood, to gather out [His] elect' (Moses 7:62). This sacred volume of scripture needs to become more central in our preaching, our teaching, and our missionary work."¹⁴ Furthermore, President Benson testified: "The Lord promised, therefore, that righteousness would come from heaven and truth out of the earth. We have seen the marvelous fulfillment of that prophecy in our generation. The Book of Mormon has come forth out of the earth, filled with truth, serving as the very 'keystone of our religion.' The Book of Mormon God has also sent down righteousness from heaven. The Father Himself appeared with His Son to the Prophet Joseph Smith. The angel Moroni, John the Baptist, Peter, James, and numerous other angels were directed by heaven to restore the necessary powers to the kingdom. Further, the Prophet Joseph Smith received revelation after revelation from the heavens during those first critical years of the Church's growth. These revelations have been preserved for us in the Doctrine and Covenants. These two great works of scripture, then, become a major tool in the Lord's hand for preserving His people in the latter days: the Book of Mormon, written under the hand of inspiration for our day, preserved through the centuries to come forth in our time, translated by the gift and power of God. It is the keystone of our religion. It is the keystone of our doctrine. It is the keystone of our testimony. It is a keystone in the witness of Jesus Christ. It is a keystone in helping us avoid the deceptions of the evil one in these latter days. Satan rages in the hearts of men and has power over all of his dominions. But the Book of Mormon has greater power—power to reveal false doctrine, power to help us overcome temptations, power to help us get closer to God than any other book. The

¹⁰ Webster, Noah. Webster's Unabridged Dictionary: Vintage Pre-1923 Edition (Annotated).

¹¹ Psalm 85:10–14.

¹² We also have, of course, another scriptural reference to the Book of Mormon in: “And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people” (Revelation 14:6, emphasis added).

¹³ Porter, Elder L. Aldin. "To Bear Testimony of Mine Only Begotten," April 2001 General Conference.

¹⁴ Benson, President Ezra Taft Benson, Flooding the Earth with the Book of Mormon, October 1988 General Conference.

Book of Mormon must be reenthroned in the minds and hearts of our people. We must honor it by reading it, by studying it, by taking its precepts into our lives and transforming them into lives required of the true followers of Christ.”¹⁵ ¶ Skinner notes: “Two words are here used for righteousness, that which comes down from heaven is צְדָקָה, that which springs from the earth is צְדָקָה.” That is, the male and female versions of the word. The Lord speaks this way when He wishes to express the totality of importance. Birks says: “The figure is varied and complete. The heavens are to distil righteousness, like dew, and the skies to pour it down in copious showers. The earth is to open her bosom, and to receive these gifts of heaven. Both, in concert, are thus to yield the fruit of salvation; and the earth is to bring forth righteousness {צְדָקָה, feminine} in response to the floods of righteousness {צְדָקָה, masculine} from on high.” Jenour has: “As by prophetic command he bids the skies and the clouds, the former gently to drop down, the latter to pour forth, not the fertilizing dews, or the refreshing shower, but, what would be far more beneficial to the soul of man than even these having issued his command to the heavens, the source of natural and spiritual good, the same divine word bids the earth open her bosom to receive the good prepared for her; or, in other words, the inhabitants of the earth to open their hearts for the reception of the quickening, sanctifying gospel of Christ” (emphasis added). ¶ Alexander writes: “J. D. Michaelis explains this whole verse as relating to prophecy and its fulfilment.” Horsley suggests: “The universality of the blessing is the thing particularly described in this verse, under the images of the dew and the rain, falling indiscriminately on all parts of the earth, and the herbage sprouting spontaneously from its whole surface” (emphasis added). Horsley’s comments make us think of the creation: “But I, the Lord God, spake, and there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground” (Moses 3:6). But in this verse we will see both the revelatory aspect and the universality of the Book of Mormon, both of which, along with the restored Church of Jesus Christ, bring priesthood authority and salvation would be made available to both the living and the dead. Young interestingly says: “Parallel is the command to the clouds to pour out righteousness. Here the verb is best taken as a jussive, let them pour out.” What interests me here is the plural, for both the Father and the Son are represented as coming forth in the First Vision. Barnes says: “There cannot be found anywhere a more beautiful description of a genuine revival of pure religion than in this verse. It is descriptive, doubtless, of what is yet to take place in the better days which are to succeed the present, when the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth.” Such began to be fulfilled with the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, the restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ and the formation of His Church, even The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

9 Woe unto him that striveth with his Maker! [Let] the potsherd [strive] with the potsherds of the earth. Shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it, What makest thou? or thy work, He hath no hands?

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Woe to him who thinks of striving against the words of his Creator, and trusts that the images of a potter shall do him good, which are made out of the dust of the earth. Is it possible, that the clay could say to him that worketh it, Thou hast not made me? or thy work, He hath no hands?” (emphasis added). The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Is anything endowed with excellence? I fashioned it like the clay of a potter. Will the ploughman plough the ground all the day long? Will the clay say to the potter, ‘What art thou making? Or the work to the workman, ‘Thou hast not hands.’” For the last clause, the Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲯ) has, “Or am I not the work of your hands?” / “Was I not the work of thy hands?” (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Woe to him that gainsayeth his maker, a sherd of the earthen pots: shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it: What art thou making, and thy work is without hands?” ¶ Barnes suggests: “It may be designed to refer to the fact that any interposition of God; any mode of manifesting himself to men meets with enemies, and with those who are disposed to contend with him, and especially any display of his mercy and grace in a great revival of religion. In the previous verse the prophet had spoken of the revival of religion. Perhaps he here adverts to the fact that such a manifestation of his mercy would meet with opposition ... Men thus contend with their Maker; resist the influences of his Spirit; strive against the appeals made to them; oppose his sovereignty; are enraged at the preaching of the Gospel, and often combine to oppose him” (emphasis added). Is this not a perfect description to the opposition to the Book of Mormon, the Prophet Joseph Smith, and the restoration of the church of Christ?¹⁶ ¶ Alexander suggests: “The absurdity consists in the thing made denying the existence of the hands by which it was itself produced. The essential idea is the same as in ISAIAH 10:15, but the expression here much stronger, since the instrument is not merely charged with exalting itself above the efficient agent, but the creature with denying the power or skill of its Creator ...” Indeed, surely the refusal of the world to accept modern revelation and the Book of Mormon as the word of God, is pronounced in this and the next verse. The Book of Mormon warns against the resistance with which it would be received (see for instance, 2 Nephi 28:4b–5a, 9; 16a; 2 Nephi 29:1, 3–13). ¶ And why *potsherd*s (i.e., weaklings, fools)? Henderson has: “The language is that of contempt, being expressive of the mean [i.e., lowly in modern English—GB] and worthless character of the subject spoken of.” Barnes says: “The word rendered ‘potsherd’ (חֶרֶשׁ) means properly ‘a shard,’ or ‘sherd,’ that is, a fragment of an earthen vessel. It is then put proverbially for anything frail and mean¹⁷. Here it is undoubtedly put for man, regarded as weak and contemptible in his efforts against God ...” Efforts to ridicule the word of God are not limited to the Book of Mormon, but also to the Bible itself. ¶ Among the exegetes, there is almost total agreement that ISAIAH 45:9–10 constitute murmuring against the things of God, although the subject of the complaining varies (e.g., see Luther, Calvin, Nägelsbach, Wordsworth, Henderson, Jenour, Whitehouse, McFadyen, Benson, Lowth, Orelli, Wade, Cheyne and Rawlinson, to name but a few). Calvin paraphrases: “How far shall your insolence carry its excesses, that you will not allow me to be master in my own workshop, or to govern my family as I think fit?” Nägelsbach writes: “The whole [of ISAIAH 40–66] is a book of consolation. Hence it begins with ISAIAH 40:1 with the double ‘comfort ye.’ But the Prophet knows the human heart too well not to know, that among those for whom this book of consolation is written, there are many who will be content neither with the quality nor quantity of the comfort that is offered, and who strive with their Maker as if no comfort were there. Against these he justly utters a woe, for nothing offends God so much as unbelief. Thus there is an incisive contrast between ISAIAH 45:8 and ISAIAH 45:9 sqq. In ISAIAH 45:8 we see the future beaming in clear light. But this clear light exists not for those who, when things are not as they wish, immediately despair, because they see no human help, and will not see the divine help. Yet what is man in comparison with God?”

¹⁵ Benson, President Ezra Taft. The Gift of Modern Revelation. October 1986 General Conference.

¹⁶ JS—History 1:20–25.

10 Woe unto him that saith unto [his] father, What begetteth thou? or to the woman, What hast thou brought forth?

¹⁷ Insignificant.

The LXX (6) reads, “Will the thing formed reply against him who formed it? Will one say to his father, What wilt thou beget? Or to his mother, What art thou bringing forth?” The Douay-Rheims (2) has why in each of the two cases of what. The Stenning Targum (3) translation has, for the second half, “And to a woman, With what travailest thou?” Pauli (3) rather explains that the expression to a woman וְלִאִמָּה, in this case is a respectful title for a mother, and the signification or idea is rather, “And to his mother, What has thou brought forth.” ¶ In Syriac-Aramaic, ܐܡܐ, ܐܡܐ (see Targum Lexicon) can also mean wife,¹⁸ almost giving the impression that a husband is asking her “who is the father of this child?” Horsley says: “The Prophet, therefore, says, Wo to him who says to a father, to one who is already a father, Why goest thou about to beget children ? and to a woman, already a mother, Why art thou again bringing forth?” Although Horsley takes his argument in a different direction, he supports my belief that this is a complaint by the people about God bringing forth more—not more children—but more of His word beyond the Bible. This verse continues, then, the very same theme as the previous, with those who demand that God has already spoken what He has spoken and that He shall speak no more.

vv. 11–19. The Lord contrasts His own strength, wisdom, knowledge and understanding to that of the potsherds of the earth. Once again, the Lord chastises those who dare challenge His right to govern and speak again. In the latter days, Israel will be gathered from all the nations, and all the nations of the earth shall begin to look to Christ, our Savior. Those who are ashamed or those who despise the words of Christ, the Book of Mormon, and the Lord’s restored Church, will in turn suffer shame. Those who repent and seek the Lord will have everlasting joy and eternal life. This earth was not created in vain but in due time will become the abode of celestial beings. The Lord is ever inviting us to come unto Him with stretched out arms. Cyrus is a type of Christ.

11 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, the Holy One of Israel, and his Maker, Ask me of things to come concerning my sons, and concerning the work of my hands command ye me.

Thus saith the LORD, the Holy One of Israel, and his Maker. The Targum (3) has, “Thus saith the Lord, the ¹⁸ “Woe to him who says to a father, ‘What will you beget?’ or to a woman, ‘With what will you be pregnant?’” The Aramaic Bible: The Isaiah Targum (B. D. Chilton, Trans.).

Holy One of Israel, and He that formed him, Ye question me about things concerning my people, which shall come to pass.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Wherefore thus saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel, even he who made the train of events.” After his Maker, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has added the ܡ equivalent of,

יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת שְׁמוֹ, “Yahweh of Hosts is his name.”

¶ Jenour well writes: “The folly of those who dared to doubt the goodness and justice of God’s dealings is here further shewn. Did they think that they were authorized to demand of him what providential dispensations he should send upon his children? Or will ye, asks the eternal Creator, command me how I am to set towards the work of my hands? Will ye, my creatures, give direction to your Creator? Let Christians learn here an useful lesson.—Are we not all too ready to suppose that we know better than God himself what is good for us?”

¶ Ask me of things to come concerning my sons, and concerning the work of my hands command ye me. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And will ye command me concerning the work of my power?” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Do you question me concerning my children; and concerning the works of my hands give me directions!” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “Ask me of things to come, concerning my children, and concerning the work of my hands give ye charge to me.” Ibn Ezra explains: “Will ye command me. It is a question.” Wade has: “If the imperative is correct, it must be understood ironically; but many critics would substitute an indignant interrogation, Will ye question me? which harmonizes better with the mood of the parallel verb, which should be rendered, will ye command me!” Henderson suggests: שְׂאֵלֹנִי

[ask me] is subordinated to צַוֵּנִי [command me] in the Future, and both are to be rendered interrogatively.” So it is that either a question or exclamation mark is given in many versions, as if to show incredulity that mankind can be so presumptuous as to command God: “Thus hath said the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, and he who hath formed him, About events to come will you ask me? concerning my sons, and concerning the work of my hands will ye command me?” (Leeser).

¶ Concerning my sons. Cheyne suggests: “A deep saying. Jehovah implies at once that it must be well with those whom he regards as his sons (Hosea 1:10), and that those who murmur against him tacitly renounce the privilege of sonship.”

12 I have made the earth, and created man upon it: I, [even] my hands, have stretched out the heavens, and all their host have I commanded.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “It is I who have made the earth by my Word, and I have created man upon it; it is I who have suspended the heavens by my power, and I have laid the foundation of all the hosts of them.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “It was I who made the earth and man on it: it was I who with my hand established the heaven: it was I who gave direction to all the stars.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “I made the earth: and I created man upon it: my hand stretched forth the heavens, and I have commanded all their host.” ¶ Elder McConkie explains who the Father of our spirits is: “In a passage of great doctrinal worth and of surpassing literary beauty, Isaiah speaks of the Lord Jehovah, ‘the Holy One of Israel,’ who is Christ, as man’s ‘Maker.’ ‘I have made the earth, and created man upon it,’ says he who is the Son of God. ‘I, even my hands, have stretched out the heavens, and all their host have I commanded’ (ISAIAH 45:9–12). And once again we have the creation of man ascribed, seemingly, to the Son of God. However, from other sacred sources we know that Jehovah—Christ, assisted by ‘many of the noble and great ones’ (Abraham 3:22), of whom Michael is but the illustration, did in fact create the earth and all forms of plant and animal life on the face thereof. But when it came to placing man on earth, there was a change in Creators. That is, the Father himself became personally involved. All things were created by the Son, using the power delegated by the Father, except man. In the spirit and again in the flesh, man was created by the Father. There was no delegation of authority where the crowning creature of creation was concerned.”¹⁹ Elder McConkie teaches that we often misunderstand this point because Jehovah often speaks in the voice of the Father through the principle of Divine Investiture.^{20 21}

13 I have raised him up in righteousness, and I will direct[✓] all his ways: he shall build my city, and he shall let go my captives, not for price nor reward, saith the LORD of hosts.

✓ or, make straight

I have raised him up in righteousness, and I will direct all his ways: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “It is I who will verily bring him forth publicly, and all his paths will I direct.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “It is I who have raised him up with righteousness to be king; and all his ways shall be straight.” ¶ Gill says: “Though this may be said with some respect to Cyrus, yet chiefly to Christ, of whom Cyrus was a type.” Alexander says: “From the general proof of divine power afforded by creation, he descends to the particular exercise of his omnipotence and wisdom in the raising up of Cyrus, who is thus referred to without the express mention of his name, because he had been previously made the subject of a similar appeal, and the Prophet simply takes up the thread which he had dropped at the close of the fifth verse, or perhaps of the seventh.” ¶ He shall build my city, and he shall let go my captives, not for price nor reward, saith the LORD of hosts. The Targum (T) has, “He shall build my city, and he shall direct the captives of my people go, not for a price or for money, saith the Lord of hosts.” The LXX (G) reads, “He shall rebuild this city of mine, and send back the captives of this my people, not for ransom nor reward, said the Lord of Hosts.” Instead of reward, the Peshitta (S) has bribe. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, for the second half, “Not for ransom, nor for presents, saith the Lord the God of hosts.” ¶ Cowles says: “The last clause means that Cyrus would send home those Jewish exiles without demanding any redemption price, doing it his own generous free will.” In this way Cyrus would also be a type of Christ, who invites us to come unto Him without money and without price.

¹⁹ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. The Promised Messiah.

²⁰ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. The Promised Messiah. Elder McConkie explains that Jehovah sometimes “without hesitation or explanation [quickly] assumes the voice of the Father,” as in D&C 29:1, 42–43.

²¹ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. A New Witness for the Articles of Faith, p.63.

14 Thus saith the LORD, The labour of Egypt, and merchandise of Ethiopia and of the Sabeans, men of stature, shall come over unto thee, and they shall be thine: they shall come after thee; in chains they shall come over, and they shall fall down unto thee, they shall make supplication unto thee, [saying], Surely God [is] in thee; and [there is] none else, [there is] no God.

Thus saith the LORD, The labour of Egypt, and merchandise of Ethiopia and of the Sabeans, men of stature, shall come over unto thee, and they shall be thine: The Targum (T) has, “men of traffic” instead of men of stature. The LXX (G) reads, “Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, That for which Egypt laboured and the traffick of the Ethiopians, and the Sabeans men of tall stature shall come over to thee.” The Peshitta (S), besides having the men pass, in what appears to imply a surrendering or joining in forces, has an additional clause, “they shall come after you” (Lamsa) / “And they shall be yours” (BPE). ¶ It is of ISAIAH 45:14–15 particularly, that Keith sees a type in Cyrus’s efforts and success, of the gathering of Israel in the last days:

“There is now made by the prophet, what is so frequent a transition from the events of the deliverance from Babylon to those of the final deliverance of Israel ... If it seems to any an irrational thing to understand literally what is foretold of kings being her nursing fathers, and of her eating the riches of the Gentiles, let it be remembered that this will be nothing more than she experienced first at the hands of the Egyptians, and again at the hands of Cyrus and the Persians; and the thing is not more improbable in regard to the future than to the past. The prophet having foretold the aid Israel would experience from the greatest of monarchs, when she would return from Babylon, foretells next how similar honour will be put upon her when she shall be gathered from all the nations among which she has been scattered.²² Some of the consequences of the visible interferences of God in her behalf will be, that the nations around will place their wealth and service at her disposal, honouring God in honouring her ... The different incidents of the verse are as distinct and positive as those of the preceding, and will doubtless receive as literal an accomplishment; and if they have not their exact counterpart in any past historical facts—and with scarcely an exception no attempt has been made by commentators so to apply them—it must be waited for in future events. And may it not be one purpose of placing prophecies, whose fulfilment has been the most literal and minute possible, side by side with others of which no literal fulfilment has yet been given, to teach that the accomplishment of the latter may be expected to be as minute as that of the former; and that if not supplied by past history, it will be by what is to come. Predictions corresponding with those in the text are made in regard to the nations of the earth generally, and all in connexion with the return and conversion of Israel: ‘The abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, the forces (margin ||, riches) of the Gentiles shall come unto thee. The multitude of camels shall cover thee: they shall bring gold and incense; and they shall shew forth the praises of the Lord’ (ISAIAH 50:5–6). And in more particular coincidence with the text, we read, ‘Princes shall come out of Egypt; Ethiopia shall soon stretch out her hands unto God’ (Psalm 68:31, ‘The kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts’ (Psalm 72:10) ...)” ¶ The Sabeans, men of stature. Lowth explains: “That the Sabeans were of a more majestic appearance than common, is particularly remarked by Agatharchides, an ancient Greek historian quoted by Bochart, Phaleg. (2:26) ... So also the Septuagint understand it, rendering it ἀνδρες ὑψηλοί,

²² Ironside well says: “There are those who insist that all the prophecies connected with the return of Israel have been fulfilled already and, therefore, we are not to look for any future fulfillment of them, but God says in this very book of Isaiah, ‘I will set my hand a second time to recover my people,’ and that is what He has already begun to do, as they gather back as a people to their land.”

‘tall men.’ And the same phrase, אֲנָשֵׁי מִדָּה, is used for persons of extraordinary stature (Numbers 13:32²³, and 1 Chronicles 20:6:24” ¶ They shall come after thee; in chains they shall come over, and they shall fall down unto thee, they shall make supplication unto thee, [saying], Surely God [is] in thee; and [there is] none else, [there is] no God. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They shall walk according to thy command; they shall pass along in chains; and they shall bow down unto thee, and shall supplicate thee saying, Verily (Chaldee, ‘in truth’) God is in thee, and there is no God whatever besides Him.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And they shall be thy vassals and shall follow thee bound with chains. They will come over to thee and pay thee homage and pray to thee because God is in thee.” The Peshitta (Ⲯ) has, for the second half, “Shall make supplication to thee, saying, ‘There is no other God.’” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “They shall walk after thee, they shall go bound with manacles: and they shall worship thee, and shall make supplication to thee: only in thee is God, and there is no God besides thee.” ¶ Rabbi Rosenberg, leaning on Rashi, has: “The feminine form [of over to you] indicates that it refers to a city, all names of cities and lands being feminine.” Regarding this verse, Henderson also has: “The punctators²⁵, who are followed, among the moderns, by Michaelis, Döderlein, Dathe, Gesenius, Hitzig, and Scholz, apply it to Jerusalem, and rightly. The prophecy refers to the result of the Persian conquests in Egypt, &c., as regards the Jews and their religion. Favored as the people of God were by the victors, the inhabitants of these countries would be led to respect them, inquire into their peculiar polity, send them munificent presents, and, in great numbers, become proselytes to their religion.” Kay, gives support to the idea of Jerusalem by his comment that: “The phrase, make supplication unto, is the same that is used in 1 Kings 8:35, 42; where it is rendered, pray toward.” Nägelsbach likewise has: “And they shall fall,’ etc., does not say that they shall worship Israel, but that they shall worship in the direction of the land of Israel, for they know the Temple and the throne of the true God to be there (comp. Daniel 6:10).” The very idea that someone might prostrate themselves to any other than God the Eternal Father or His Son Jesus Christ is embarrassing to a disciple of Christ (Acts 14:13; 17:30; Revelation 19:10; 22:8–9). ¶ Alexander explains: “they shall pass in chains] Whether these are here considered as imposed by their conquerors, or by themselves in token of a voluntary submission, is a question which the words themselves leave undecided.” It seems to me and most exegetes that this will be a voluntary submission to the Lord, as we see also in ISAIAH 45:23.

²³ אֲנָשֵׁי מִדָּה

²⁴ Man of great stature, אִישׁ מִדָּה.

²⁵ That is, the Masoretes or the creators of the Masoretic text (ⲙⲓⲗ).

15 Verily thou [art] a God that hidest thyself, O God of Israel, the Saviour.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Verily (Chaldee, ‘in truth’), thou art He, who dost make thy Shekinah to dwell in the highest heaven, o God of Israel, the Saviour!” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “There is indeed no God besides thee. For thou art God and we knew it. The God of Israel is a Saviour.” The BPE (Ⲯ) has, “Of a truth, thou art a shelter, O God of Israel, and his Savior.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Verily thou art a hidden God, the God of Israel the saviour.” ¶ Young well says: “The profound truth is that God cannot be known by man apart from revelation, and His ways are hidden from the eyes of man until He Himself makes them clear.” Skinner suggests: “a God that hidest thyself] ... to the nations of the world Jehovah had hitherto been a hidden deity ... Now at length He is revealed in His true character, as a ‘Saviour’ (or Deliverer) (see on ISAIAH 43:3). Compare, however, ISAIAH 55:8 f.; Deuteronomy 29:29; Proverbs 25:2, for a sense in which Jehovah might be said to hide²⁶ Himself even from Israel.” The Lord hiding His face is the opposite of His pouring out knowledge²⁷ from heaven. ¶ Cowles writes: “Thou art a God that hidest thyself! How long the world has lain in darkness, ignorant of these glorious plans of God for its ultimate conversion!” Horsley suggests: “These words plainly allude to the concealment of the Divinity under the human form in the person of our Lord.” Keith beautifully has: “Similarly it is said, ‘I will wait upon the Lord who hideth his face from the house of Jacob; and I will look for him (ISAIAH 8:17); ‘In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee’ (ISAIAH 54:8).” ¶ At times we may feel all alone. In modern day the Prophet Joseph Smith poured out his heart to God likewise: “O God, where art thou? And where is the pavilion that covereth thy hiding place? How long shall thy hand be stayed, and thine eye, yea thy pure eye, behold from the eternal heavens the wrongs of thy people and of thy servants, and thine ear be penetrated with their cries? Yea, O Lord, how long shall they suffer these wrongs and unlawful oppressions, before thine heart shall be softened toward them, and thy bowels be moved with compassion toward them? O

²⁶ See also ISAIAH 45:19, Deuteronomy 32:20 (Kay). Also see Deuteronomy 31:16–18; 32:18, 20a.

²⁷ Deuteronomy 32:1–4 also represents part of the blessings associated with Rain in Due Season, including the pouring out knowledge as represented by the dews from heaven, the rain drops and the small rain.

Lord God Almighty, maker of heaven, earth, and seas, and of all things that in them are, and who controllst and subjectest the devil, and the dark and benighted dominion of Sheol—stretch forth thy hand; let thine eye pierce; let thy pavilion be taken up; let thy hiding place no longer be covered; let thine ear be inclined; let thine heart be softened, and thy bowels moved with compassion toward us” (D&C 121:1–4, emphasis added). To all of this the Savior answers: “My son, peace be unto thy soul; thine adversity and thine afflictions shall be but a small moment ...” (D&C 121:7, plus read the verses that follow). One of my all-time favorite scriptures is: “But behold, verily, verily, I say unto you that mine eyes are upon you. I am in your midst and ye cannot see me; But the day soon cometh that ye shall see me, and know that I am; for the veil of darkness shall soon be rent, and he that is not purified shall not abide the day” (D&C 38:7–8).

16 They shall be ashamed, and also confounded, all of them: they shall go to confusion together [that are] makers of idols.

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, for the second half, “The worshippers of images shall walk in confusion.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “Let all that oppose him be ashamed and confounded and in shame let them march along. Dedicate yourselves to me, ye islands!” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓜ) has, for the second half, “The forgers of errors are gone together into confusion.” ¶ Rawlinson explains that the language used here is the “perfect of the prophetic certainty.” In this verse we note who will be ashamed and confounded while in the next verse we see who will not be ashamed or confounded. Alexander explains: “... the sentence closes with a general expression, which has already been referred to as a proof that the war in question is a spiritual war, and that the enemies to be subdued are not certain nations in themselves considered, but the heathen world, the vast mixed multitude who worship idols. These are described as the carvers or artificers of images ...” All those who reject the divinity of Christ and the inspiration of the Book of Mormon shall suffer shame.

17 [But] Israel shall be saved in the LORD with an everlasting salvation: ye shall not be ashamed nor confounded world without end.

[But] Israel shall be saved in the LORD with an everlasting salvation: The Targum (Ⓣ) has it, “by the Word of the Lord,” rather than by the Lord. The LXX

(Ⓟ) reads, “The Lord hath saved Israel with an everlasting salvation.” The BPE (Ⓢ) is particularly interesting to LDS, “The salvation of Israel is in Yahweh, the Savior of the worlds; they shall not ever be ashamed nor confounded” (emphasis added). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓜ) has, “Israel is saved in the Lord with an eternal salvation.” ¶ Cowles, says, regarding ISAIAH 45:16–17: “Two grand facts are here put in antithesis: (1) That the makers of idols [but also note the words all of them, speaking of the potsherd of the earth, i.e., those who reject the Book of Mormon and the divinity of Christ—GB] shall be confounded and put to shame; (2) That the true Israel shall be saved with everlasting salvation and never be put to shame through disappointment by the failure of her God to fulfill his promises. These promises, now fresh in mind and deeply affecting, are in these words guaranteed against possible failure.” Young underscores that we are saved in the Lord, בַּיהוָה. ¶ *Ye shall not be ashamed nor confounded*²⁸ world without end. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Ye shall not be ashamed nor confounded for ever, yea, for ages after ages.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “They shall not be put to shame nor confounded any more forever.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓜ) has, “You shall not be confounded, and you shall not be ashamed for ever and ever.” ¶ In Lehi’s dream we encounter those who have partaken of the fruit of the Gospel and experience joy for a moment but then are ashamed when the mocking ²⁸ One of my frequent petitions to God is that a stamp of approval may be put upon my testimony as I teach by the Spirit. That is, that my testimony might be justified so that it may reach the hearts of others to strengthen them in the Lord, and so I might be an instrument in the hands of God. I have experienced the shame of speaking without the stamp of approval being given so my words have fallen flat on their face. I remember one particularly painful occasion, speaking to a group of non-members in Sonora, California, on the topic of avoiding defensiveness in communication. The Comforter had been strongly present before I made a comment that drove the Spirit away (it was my last presentation before I retired from the University of California, and I remember the situation with sorrow even now, years after). I believe that every participant in that classroom could tell the difference. Until I apologized and addressed the problem, I was not able to continue my presentation. I never take it for granted that I will speak by the Spirit and that the same will reach those whom I am addressing. Having experienced the difference between speaking my own words and teaching by the Spirit, I deeply hope and pray for the latter. Gladly, most of my experiences as a speaker either at work or at Church have been very upbeat. I will mention two. The first took place when I was the Branch President of the Modesto 12th Branch and we had a General Authority come and asked that a few of the Bishops / Branch Presidents would speak briefly on something that he had spoken on earlier. I chose the topic of “And as all have not faith, seek ye diligently and teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom; seek learning, even by study and also by faith” (DyC 88:118, emphasis added). The other was a talk I gave in the San Javier Branch on September 2014, at the request of Branch President Jaime Cancino. I spoke with much power and after the meeting an investigator came up to me to share his positive feelings and tell me about his upcoming baptism.

fingers point at them. Barnes writes: “No man on a dying bed regrets that he is a friend of God.” ¶ As I think of the notion of not being confounded, I am transported to a beautiful scripture in the Doctrine and Covenants: “Therefore, verily I say unto you, lift up your voices unto this people; speak the thoughts that I shall put into your hearts, and you shall not be confounded before men; For it shall be given you in the very hour, yea, in the very moment, what ye shall say. But a commandment I give unto you, that ye shall declare whatsoever thing ye declare in my name, in solemnity of heart, in the spirit of meekness, in all things. And I give unto you this promise, that inasmuch as ye do this the Holy Ghost shall be shed forth in bearing record unto all things whatsoever ye shall say” (D&C 100:5–8, emphasis added). ¶ עַד-עוֹלָמִי עַד,

Worlds without end. עוֹלָם can mean eternity, as also עַד. So we can have, time and eternity; from eternity to eternity. LHI has, forever to eternity. Kimhi in Slotki/Rosenberg has: “to the worlds of everlasting, to all eternity.” Gill has, “unto the ages of eternity.” Skinner writes: “world without end] More literally: to all eternity. The exact expression does not occur again.” But it does in the Doctrine and Covenants: “And they shall be servants of the Most High; but where God and Christ dwell they cannot come, worlds without end” (D&C 76:112).

18 For thus saith the LORD that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: I [am] the LORD; and [there is] none else.

The LXX (6) reads, “Thus saith the Lord who made the heaven, the same God who displayed the earth to view, and who, having made it, parcelled it out: he did not make it to be waste, but formed it to be inhabited: I am the Lord and there is none else.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, for the second half, beginning with he hath established it “The very maker thereof: he did not create it in vain: he formed it to be inhabited. I am the Lord, and there is no other.” ¶ Not in vain (literally, פֶּהֶר, translated as without form in Genesis 1:2, can also mean waste, Gesenius—see also ISAIAH 45:19). In other words, God organized (בִּנְיָא root בִּנְיָא) the earth for a purpose. This earth will be transformed from its present telestial state, then through the terrestrial during the millennium and eventually into a celestial globe. Kay writes: “[God] had brought light and order and life out of the waste earth (Genesis 1:2 ff.); He would also rescue the world out of the confusion caused by man’s sin, and make it the abode of ‘righteousness’ (2 Peter 3:13).” Alexander translates as: “... he established it—not in vain (or not to be empty) did he create it—to dwell in (or to be inhabited) he formed it.” ¶ The God. The Bishops, Leeser, ASV, NASB and WEB give a more literal translation of אֱלֹהִים: “the God.”

Cheyne interprets that as “the God of gods, the true God.”

19 I have not spoken in secret, in a dark place of the earth: I said not unto the seed of Jacob, Seek ye me in vain: I the LORD speak righteousness, I declare things that are right.

The Targum (7) has, for the second half, “Seek me reverently in vain: I the Lord speak the truth, declaring upright things.” The LXX (6) reads, “I have not spoken in secret nor in an obscure part of the earth. I have not said to the seed of Jacob, Seek ye a vain thing. I am THE I AM, the Lord, who speak righteousness and proclaim truth.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, for the second half, “I am the Lord that speak justice, that declare right things.” ¶ Birks has: “The God of Israel ... reveals himself, and always has revealed himself to His people, by clear declarations of His holy will ... The Creator of heaven and earth, and no vain idol, the God who has made known His will from the first by public messages, and no lying oracle, here invites the whole heathen world.” McFadyen has: “Though it is true that it is in Israel that Jehovah hides (and reveals) himself (ISAIAH 45:15), his words within Israel, spoken by his human representatives, the prophets, have not been obscure or mysterious, like the oracular utterances of the heathen, but clear, frank and true—righteousness and right, i.e., words which are right and true ...” Ibn Ezra writes: “Many refer this verse to the revelation on Sinai; but I refer it to those future events, of which the Lord informed the prophet, and which the prophet announced to Israel and all other nations.” The Book of Mormon has not been given in secret, but rather, has gone forth to flood the earth. ¶ In a dark place of the earth. Lowth explains: “In opposition to the manner in which the heathen oracles gave their answers, which were generally delivered from some deep and obscure cavern.” ¶ Righteousness. Wade has: “The Lord’s predictions and promises were true and consistent with the facts: hence they did not require secrecy, as being something that shunned the light. For righteousness in the sense of what is true ...” Cheyne suggests the following as a possibility: “The prophet, as it were, supplements the words of Moses, and declares that Jehovah’s Torah, or prophetic revelation, is not to be obtained by any occult arts from Sheól or the Underworld. For the phraseology, compare Job 10:21, Psalm 88:12.—The best commentary on alternate renderings is Jeremiah 2:31, where Jehovah pathetically exclaims, ‘Have I been a wilderness unto Israel? a land of darkness?’ i.e., Have I not been the source of light and happiness to my people, and all temporal blessings’ (compare Jeremiah 2:6)? ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught: “There are no private doctrines. All of the doctrines and practices of the Church are taught publicly. There are no secret doctrines, no private practices, no courses of conduct approved for a few only (ISAIAH 45:19; 48:16; 2 Nephi 20:16; D&C 1:34). The blessings of the gospel are for all men ... Everything that is taught and practiced in the Church is open to public inspection, or, at least, where temple ordinances are concerned, to the inspection and knowledge of everyone who qualifies himself by personal righteousness to enter the house of the Lord.”²⁹ ¶ In asking us to pray, God did not say to us to pray that we might seek Him in vain (literally, תהו). Rawlinson has: “God wills to be importuned. Not, however, for his own sake, but for ours. He would have us fervent and persistent in prayer, for the improvement of our characters, the increase of our faith by exercise, the intensifying of our sense of dependence upon him. Especially he would have us persistent in intercessory prayer, because we are then exercising, not only faith, but love; and by increasing in love, we advance in resemblance to himself” (see in Exodus 33:12). ¶ I cherish the Scripture that says: “And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me. And I knew that thou hearest me always: but because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me” (John 11:41b–42, emphasis added). I would suggest that Christ’s prayer was answered before he left Bethabara (beyond the river Jordan), where He first heard of Lazarus illness and impending death, and before he departed for Bethany (a village near Jerusalem where Martha, Mary and Lazarus dwelt). Christ is our example of what we can expect when we pray to the Father in His name. I bear the most solemn witness that God always hears our prayers (please see ISAIAH 1:15). Please note I am not suggesting that God will give us what we think is best for us. God will never forget a righteous prayer: such will never be uttered in vain.

vv. 20–25. The escaped of the nations makes reference to scattered Israel. All shall confess the Christ. The prophet Joseph Smith quoted ISAIAH 45:22–24, as an invitation for the whole world to turn to Christ and repent.³⁰

20 ¶ Assemble yourselves and come; draw near together, ye [that are] escaped of the nations: they have no knowledge that set up the wood of their graven image, and pray unto a god [that] cannot save.

Assemble yourselves and come; draw near together, ye [that are] escaped of the nations: The LXX (6) reads, “Assemble yourselves together and come; consult together ye who escape from among the nations. They are devoid of knowledge, who carry the wood—their carved image; and who pray to gods which cannot save them.” Instead of escaped, the Peshitta (5) has delivered (Lamsa) / liberated (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (8) has, for the second half, “Ye that are saved of the Gentiles.” ¶ Escaped from the nations (פְּלִיטֵי הַגּוֹיִם) is a reference to scattered Israel as a remnant and recovered back into the fold by conversion. Nägelsbach, speaking of the former days, of times related to the release of Judah from Babylon has: “the Israelites are called escaped of the nations, and he that helped them to this title can be no other than Cyrus.” In the last days there would be escaped from the nations in a much larger scale (see Deuteronomy 30:3–4). There seems to be an invitation to the former exiles as well as to the latter-day converts to put away idolatry—in any of its forms—and put their trust in God. ¶ They have no knowledge that set up the wood of their graven image, and pray unto a god [that] cannot save. The Targum (9) has, “They know nothing that carry about their wooden images, and who pray unto a god who shall not save.” Kimhi, in Slotki/Rosenberg has: “The idols are so helpless that they cannot even carry themselves. They must be carried by their worshippers to their temples, in their processions or into battle (compare 2 Samuel 5:21).” Skinner also: “That idols have to be carried is a sign of their powerlessness.” Rawlinson explains: “It was a practice of the idolatrous heathen to carry the images of their gods in processions, generally exposed to view upon their shoulders (Layard, Nineveh and its Remains, vol. 2. opp. p. 451), but sometimes partially concealed in shrines, or ‘arks’ (Rawlinson, Herodotus, vol. 2. pp. 100–101).” Alexander has: “The verse contains two indirect reflections on the idols: first, that they are wooden; then, that they are lifeless and dependent on their worshippers for locomotion.”

²⁹ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. Sermons and Writings of Bruce R. McConkie, p.234.

³⁰ Smith, Joseph. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith. Selected by Joseph Fielding Smith. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book Press, 1938, p. 81.

21 Tell ye, and bring [them] near; yea, let them take counsel together: who hath declared this from ancient time? [who] hath told it from that time? [have] not I the LORD? and [there is] no God else beside me; a just God and a Saviour; [there is] none beside me.

Tell ye, and bring [them] near; yea, let them take counsel together: The LXX (6) reads, “If they will proclaim, let them draw near and know at once.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Tell ye, and come, and consult together: who hath declared this from the beginning.” ¶ Alexander says: “According to Vitranga’s exposition, the idolaters are called upon to state their case, and to defend it.” McFadyen says: “Another scene like ISAIAH 41:1–4; 21–29; 43:9–13. The futility of the heathen gods is proved by their inability to predict the future.” ¶ Who hath declared this from ancient time? [who] hath told it from that time? [have] not I the LORD? The LXX (6) reads, “Who hath published these things from the beginning: then let them be announced to you.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Who hath foretold this from that time?” ¶ Alexander has: “[The Lord] in the common form of an interrogation, [is] asking who, except himself, had given evidence of prescience by explicitly foretelling events still far distant ...” ¶ And [there is] no God else beside me; a just God and a Saviour; [there is] none beside me. The LXX (6) reads, “I am God and there is no other besides me; a just God and a saviour besides me there is none.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Have not I the Lord, and there is no God else besides me? A just God and a saviour, there is none besides me.” ¶ A just God, or a righteous³¹ God (אֱלֹהִים צַדִּיק). Nägelsbach observes: “[The Lord] calls Himself Saviour in contrast with a god that cannot save, ISAIAH 45:20.”

22 Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I [am] God, and [there is] none else.

³¹ I was browsing through Geikie’s The Life and Words of Christ and came across this little pearl: “The word righteous receives an illustration of its meaning among the Jews, from the name by which the Zealots of the Law were known, from the time of John Hyrcanus. צַדִּיק (Tsaddouk) or צַדִּיקִי (Tsaddouki)—Sadducees—was the name given to the party who prided themselves on strict legality. It came from צַדִּיק (Tsaddik) ‘just, righteous’ applied both to God and men. —ISAIAH 45:21; Proverbs 29:7. Yet, besides legal exactness, it, in other cases, implied moral worth.” (p.562, 1896 Revised Edition).

The Targum (7) has, for the first half, “Turn unto my Word, and be ye saved, all that are at the ends of the earth.” The LXX (6) reads, “Turn to me and ye shall be saved, ye from the farthest part of the earth, I am God and there is none else.” The Peshitta (5) begins, “Draw near to me” (Lamsa) / “Come near unto me” (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Be converted to me, and you shall be saved, all ye ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is no other.” The Masoretic text (11) has: פְּנוּ-אֵלַי, rendered look unto me while some translate it as turn unto me. TWOT, DHB, Holladay and Lexham Theological Workbook particularly give the more complete idea of turn to face. ¶ It is Christ’s loving invitation to look unto Him, or turn unto Him, that is, repent, and follow Him. Alexander explains: פְּנוּ does not correspond exactly to the English look, but denotes the act of turning round in order to look in a different direction.” The Savior invites: “Look unto me in every thought; doubt not, fear not” (D&C 6:36). So also: “Behold, I am the law, and the light. Look unto me, and endure to the end, and ye shall live; for unto him that endureth to the end will I give eternal life” (3 Nephi 15:9). ¶ The invitation to turn unto Christ is to all the ends of the earth, כָּל-אַפְסֵי-אֲרֶץ, reminding us at once that in the last days, Israel would be gathered from all the nations [literally, מִכָּל-הָעַמִּים, from all the peoples], whither the LORD thy God hath scattered thee (Deuteronomy 30:3b), even from “the outmost parts of heaven” בְּקִצֵּה הַשָּׁמַיִם (Deuteronomy 30:4b).

23 I have sworn by myself, the word is gone out of my mouth [in] righteousness, and shall not return, That unto me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear.

I have sworn by myself, the word is gone out of my mouth [in] righteousness, and shall not return. The Targum (7) has, “I have sworn by my Word, the word is gone forth in righteousness from my presence, and shall not fail.” The LXX (6) reads, “By myself I swear (righteousness shall proceed from my mouth; my words shall not be reversed).” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “I have sworn by myself, the word of justice shall go out of my mouth, and shall not return.” ¶ Cheyne has: “Jehovah swears ‘by himself’ (‘because he could swear by no greater,’ Hebrews 6:13), when the accompanying revelation is especially grand, or especially hard to believe.” Skinner points out: “By myself have I sworn” Cf. Genesis 22:16; Jeremiah 22:5; and see Hebrews 6:13. The form of Jehovah’s oath by Himself is given in ISAIAH 49:18, ‘as I live, saith Jehovah.’” Beale and Carson give additional references in which the Lord swears or pronounces an oath in the Old Testament, including: “Exodus 32:13; Jeremiah 49:13; Ezekiel 20:5; Amos 6:8; cf. Heb. 6:13; see Chilton 1987: 264.” ¶ Benson says: “This plainly points us to the Messiah, whose very name is the Lord our righteousness, Jeremiah 23:6; and whose great business it was to bring in everlasting righteousness, Daniel 9:24; and who of God is made unto us righteousness, 1 Corinthians 1:30.” ¶ In the scripture before us, “The word is gone out of my mouth [in] righteousness, and shall not return” can benefit from the missing ellipsis unfulfilled. This is similar to the “... and did let none of his words fall to the ground [unfulfilled]” (1 Samuel 3:19) “So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it” (ISAIAH 55:11), and “For as I, the Lord God, liveth, even so my words cannot return void, for as they go forth out of my mouth they must be fulfilled” (Moses 4:30). ¶ Furthermore, this seems to have reference to the word gone out in righteousness spoken about in ISAIAH 45:8, regarding the First Vision and the Book of Mormon. In no case is the word clearer, the Gospel purer, than in the Book of Mormon. In a day when so many are attempting to sow seeds of doubt on the divinity of Christ—on the Sonship of Christ—The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and the Book of Mormon stand firm, as a beacon of light, in declaring these truths: “And we talk of Christ, we rejoice in Christ, we preach of Christ, we prophesy of Christ, and we write according to our prophecies, that our children may know to what source they may look for a remission of their sins” (2 Nephi 25:26). ¶ Elder Marion G. Romney, speaking of the Book of Mormon, testified: “From almost every page of the book, there will come to them a moving testimony that Jesus is indeed the Christ, the Son of the Living God, our Redeemer and Savior. This witness alone will be a sustaining anchor in every storm. In the Book of Mormon, they will find the plainest explanation of Christ’s divine mission and atonement to be found anywhere in sacred writ.”³² ¶ That unto me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “That before me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “That to me every knee shall bow and every tongue shall swear.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “For every knee shall be bowed to me, and every tongue shall swear.” ¶ Ibn Ezra well suggests: “These things here foretold I shall do, till ‘unto me every knee shall bow’ and ‘every tongue shall swear’ to belong to me. לִי ‘unto me’ must be repeated before תשבע ‘shall swear;’ it is an ellipsis, such as is frequently met with.” Cowles has: “Paul quotes this passage twice, first applying it (Romans 14:11) to the whole world standing before Christ’s judgment seat and recognizing his infinite supremacy there; and again (Philippians 2:9–11) to Christ’s glorious exaltation by the Father to the throne of the universe, with perhaps a tacit reference to the same judgment seat.” Wordsworth, leaning on the same scriptures, explains that Paul’s words are a testimony of Jesus Christ’s divinity. ¶ For years it has been my contention that the day will come when every knee shall bow and tongue confess gladly, without compulsion.³³ I would suggest that this will be so regardless of which kingdom of glory³⁴ people are assigned to, for each person will need to lean on the atonement of our Savior for that appointment. Every single person who is saved in any of the kingdoms of glory—at some point—will be moved to overflowing tears of gratitude and praise, תְּלַלְלוּ.

24 Surely, shall [one] say, in the LORD have I righteousness[✓] and strength: [✓] [even] to him shall [men] come; and all that are incensed against him shall be ashamed.

✓ righteousness

✓ ✓ or, Surely he shall say of me, In the LORD is all righteousness and strength

Surely, shall [one] say, in the LORD have I righteousness and strength: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Surely, He has promised to bring me righteousness and strength by the Word of the Lord.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “With respect to God, saying, Righteousness and glory shall come to him.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “And they shall say, In Yahweh is righteousness.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “Therefore shall he say: In the Lord are my justices and empire.” ¶ Righteousness. Henderson explains, “צְדָקוֹת, righteousness, is the plural of excellence or eminence; signifying the most distinguished righteousness.” Horsley, leaning on Lowth (and perhaps also on the Targum ⲧ) suggests: “... Surely to Jehovah it belongeth to speak truth.” And may we enlarge these comments, to speak additional truth, modern-day revelation beyond that which is preserved for us in our beloved Bible. ¶ [Even] to him shall [men] come; and all that are incensed against him shall be ashamed. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “In His Word they shall offer praise, and all the nations that are incensed (or, ‘have waged war’) against His people shall be ashamed.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And all that make distinctions among them shall be ashamed.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “Even to him shall mighty men come (Lamsa) / “Even the powerful shall come unto him” (BPE) and all who reproach (Lamsa) / envy (BPE) thee shall be ashamed.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has, “They shall come to him, and all that resist him shall be confounded.” ¶ We return to the theme of who will be ashamed, as we saw in ISAIAH 45:16.

³³ So also Delitzsch “This bending of the knee, this confession as an oath of homage, will be no forced one.”

³⁴ Nyman writes: “The prophet Abinadi gave an indication of the time when this prophecy will be fulfilled (see Mosiah 16:1–4), and his text was used by President Joseph Fielding Smith to show that those who ‘bow’ and ‘confess’ are not [only] celestial beings who will receive exaltation, but primarily telestial beings who will have to acknowledge the Savior and admit that his judgments are just (see DS, 2:30–31). The Doctrine and Covenants also uses similar language in reference to the telestial beings (see D&C 76:110; compare 88:104).” Parry, Parry and Peterson also suggest Romans 14:10–12; Mosiah 27:31; and D&C 76:111.

³² Romney, Elder Marion G. Romney. “Drink Deeply from the Divine Fountain,” Conference Report, April 1960, pp. 110–113.

25 In the LORD shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “In the Word of the Lord all the seed of Israel shall be justified and glorified.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “On account of the Lord they shall be acquitted; and in God all the seed of Israel will glory.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has, and praised instead of and shall glory. ¶ Baltzer well says, in explaining that they will more literally “‘praise’ (הַלְלָהוּ), that is, ‘the whole of Israel’s seed’ is to raise the ‘Hallelujah.’” That is, הַלְלָהוּ, praise Yah, praise the Lord. ¶ Both JUSTIFICATION and SANCTIFICATION have many elements in common and are part of the same process of helping us come unto Christ and be perfected in Him. Both require the atoning sacrifice of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, the Son of God. And both require that His grace be imparted upon us. Both are on-going processes rather than a single event—although there appears to be a time, in the future, when both justification and sanctification are imparted in a fuller and more complete way upon a person who has been faithful and endured to the end. Justification seems to be related to specific human acts revolving around what we do, say and think. For instance, anything we do, if we do it in righteousness—or often even with a righteous desire which falls short of perfect righteousness—through God’s tender mercies and loving kindness may be justified by the Holy Ghost. This may be any brief and finite action we take, such as giving a talk at Church, bearing a testimony, forgiving someone who has hurt us, speaking a word in kindness, feeding the poor, or showing mercy. We often feel the strong presence of the Spirit at those times, confirming that our offering before the Lord has been accepted. For instance, if we share a testimony humbly and teach by the Spirit “the Holy Ghost shall be shed forth in bearing record unto all things whatsoever ye shall say” (D&C 100:8b). That all includes the person who has spoken so that “... he that preacheth and he that receiveth, understand one another, and both are edified and rejoice together” (D&C 50:22b). Longer efforts may, in the same way, be justified or be accepted by the Lord, such as serving a mission, magnifying a Church calling, being faithful in our employment, or having a temple sealing ratified by the Holy Spirit of Promise. Of course, we are not aware of all the positive effects of our actions in this life. To summarize, then, it is what we do, together with the eternal effects of the atonement of Christ—wherein the imperfection in our offering is coupled with the perfection in His Holy offering—that brings about justification, or the acceptance of this offering we brought to the Lord. While justification has to do with a stamp of approval—or the acceptance of our offering before the Lord—sanctification appears to be the long process wherein we are transformed into a different, holier being. Wherein we begin to become like the person we hope to someday be. Like justification, we can never do this on our own merits. Rather, it is through the grace of Christ as the result of His holy expiatory sacrifice, after we “have expended [our] own best efforts” (Grace, LDS Bible Dictionary), that we are slowly changed or sanctified that we may in time enter into the presence of the Father. Satan attempts to discourage our efforts by pointing out our weaknesses. Yet Christ already knows these and comforts and reassures us. The Holy One of Israel is continually inviting us to turn unto Him—“look unto me” He beckons (ISAIAH 45:22)—and put our trust in Him and become His disciples. As with justification, we also have manifestations of the spirit—such as a great joy and feelings of gratitude—these help us understand that indeed this transformation is gradually taking place.

FIRST POSTED: 13 August 2015

Isaiah 46

A contrast is made between idols—that have to be carried around on the shoulders of men or on the backs of animals—and the Lord. Our Savior is capable of uplifting and carrying His children. In moments of need, we need to lean on God rather than on man or on idols. God sees the end from the beginning and has sent prophets to guide us back. Fulfillment of past prophecies shows that God will succor us in the future. As Cyrus was used to rescue Israel as a nation from the Babylonian conquest; so now man needs to look unto Christ. In the last days, through the First Vision and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, men’s hearts will be softened and turned unto the Lord so He can save us. It is the Lord who invites us to follow Him.

vv. 1–4. The Babylonian gods have to be carried around by their devotees, and will be powerless to resist being carried away by the conquering Persians. They have no locomotive power of themselves. In contrast, the God of Israel not only has power to move, but those who come unto Christ will also be supported by Him.

1 ¶ BEL boweth down, Nebo stoopeth, their idols were upon the beasts, and upon the cattle: your carriages [were] heavy laden; [they are] a burden to the weary [beast].

BEL boweth down, Nebo stoopeth, their idols were upon the beasts, and upon the cattle: The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “Bel is bowed down, Nebo is cut down. Their images are in the likeness of serpents and beasts.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Bel is fallen; Nabo is broken to pieces, Their graven images were a load for wild beasts and cattle.” The Peshitta (Ⓔ) has something like, “Bel has fallen, Nebo has been overthrown; their carved images were loaded as burdens upon beasts.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, for the first half, “Bel is broken, Nebo is destroyed.” ¶ Cowles explains that Nebo was derided, etymologically, from “a word [that] means a prophet or interpreter.” Barnes has: “Perhaps in the language [Bel has fallen] there is allusion to the fact that Dagon fell before the ark of God (1 Samuel 5:2, 3, 7). The sense is, that even the object of worship—that which was regarded as the most sacred among the Chaldeans—would be removed ... Their idols were upon the beasts. That is, they are laid upon the beasts to be borne away in triumph. It was customary for conquerors to carry away all that was splendid and valuable to grace their triumph on their return; and nothing would be a more certain indication of victory, or a more splendid accompaniment to a triumph, than the gods whom the vanquished nations had adored. Thus in Jeremiah 48:7b, it is said, ‘And Cheraosh shall go forth into captivity, with his priests and his princes together.’ (compare with Jeremiah 49:3, margin ¶¹.) What idols where once “carried by priests and nobles in solemn procession,” explains Cheyne, were now “packed up as a load” on the backs of beasts. ¶ Jennings has: “Bel! Who is Bel? What do we care about a piece of stone to which they may have attached the name ‘Bel.’ But behind that ‘Bel’ is he who was created the fairest of all the principalities and powers, to whom was given the name that he has long lost, ‘Shining one, star of the morning’ (Ephesians 6), and we—even you and I—wrestle not against human Babylonian or Assyrian potentates, but against Bel, Nebo, and all their lords, the spirit-powers that were behind those earthly empires ... [even Satan, who will be bound and cast out, see Revelation 20:2–3].” ¶ Boweth down and stoopeth. Baltzer notes that כָּרַע is used in the previous chapter in every knee shall bend, כָּל-בָּרָךְ יִכָּרַע (ISAIAH 45:23). Alexander explains: “כָּרַע is the common term for stooping, bowing, especially in death (Judges 5:27; 2 Kings 9:24).” Gill, leaning on Rashi, explains that these idols soil themselves in terror, without being able to reach the stool on time. ¶ Your carriages [were] heavy laden; [they are] a burden to the weary [beast]. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “The burdens of your idols shall be heavy upon those who carry them; because they be exhausted.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “You are carrying them bound like a burden on the weary, fainty, and hungry.” The Peshitta (Ⓔ) has something like, “Yea, upon weary (Lamsa) / hungry (BPE) beasts and cattle (Lamsa) / animals (BPE).” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “Your burdens of heavy weight even unto weariness.” ¶ Baltzer associates this burden with the idea of a prophetic burden (as we saw in ISAIAH 13:1; 17:1; 19:1; 21:1, etc.), and a load of heaviness as we see here: “The term ‘burden’ (מִשָּׁא) also shows that form and content cannot be divided in this text. Derived from the root נשא, ‘carry, lift,’ the word means especially the ‘load’ that has to be carried. But it can also be a technical term for the prophetic oracle (Jeremiah 23:33–40 is already a play on this ambiguity) ... the text can also be viewed as a prophetic oracle—as “burden” (משא) in this sense—about the downfall of Babylon, or more precisely as the fulfillment of this oracle, for the downfall is now taking place ... What is worth noting for the present ... text is that ‘the burden’ (משא) can be seen, and is therefore part of a visionary action.” Finally, Baltzer connects these words in ISAIAH 46 to those of an earlier prophecy: “ISAIAH 21 is of interest, since it is also a ‘burden’ (משא, ISAIAH 21:1) about the fall of Babylon. According to ISAIAH 21:6–7, a watchman is to be posted to await a ‘caravan of pack animals’—horses, donkeys, and camels. The caravan comes and the message is announced: ‘Fallen, fallen is Babylon, and all the images of her gods lie shattered on the ground’ (ISAIAH 21:9). For the person who was familiar with an oracle of this kind, the train of pack animals would already be an indication of Babylon’s fall, which is otherwise not explicitly mentioned.” ¶ Cowles explains: “Their images are packed upon beasts of burden. ‘Your carriages,’ are not vehicles, but the load itself, in the ancient and nearly obsolete sense of this word; the same which we find (1 Samuel 17:22) where David is said to have ‘left his carriage,’ i.e., his burden, the provisions borne by him to his brethren.—Your load is loaded, i.e., placed on the back of the animals, a burden to the weary beasts.—The prophet in keen sarcasm expresses his pity for the poor animals, doomed to stagger under such a load!” McFadyen, leaning of George Adam Smith, says: “The idea is that the gods could not save their own idols from the fate of captivity; they are simply ‘so much dead weight for weary beasts’ (G. A. Smith).”

¹ That is, instead of king, Melcom (or Milcom) de idol of the Ammonites. Leeser uses the margin ¶ in his translation: “for Malcolm shall go into exile, with his priest and his princes together.”

2 They stoop, they bow down together; they could not deliver the burden, but themselves[✓] are gone into captivity.

✓ their soul

They stoop, they bow down together. The Targum (ܬ) has, “They are cut off, yea, they are altogether cut to pieces.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “Who are all without strength and unable to escape from battle.” The Peshitta (ܫ) has something like, “They were overthrown, and together they have fallen down.” The Douay-Rheims (ṽ) has, “They are consumed, and are broken together.” ¶ Cowles explains: “These poor beasts sink down under their burden, quite unable to carry it through and deliver it at the desired point.—The verbs rendered, ‘stoop’ and ‘bow down,’ are the same which in ISAIAH 46:1 are used of Bel and Nebo, the thought being that the beasts are borne down to the earth very much as those gods were brought down by the heavy hand of God’s providential judgments. The last clause of the verse means that the gods themselves as distinct from their images, were borne away into captivity, powerless to resist the Almighty or even to render any aid to the poor beasts, staggering under their crushing load. The whole scene is intensely graphic and keen in its caustic irony. The full force of it will not be seen till we take into view the current notions of the age in respect to these gods as the tutelary defenders of their worshippers, and consequently as themselves going into captivity with the nation whom they should have saved if they could—with whose fortunes therefore their own were knit together.” ¶ They could not deliver the burden, but themselves are gone into captivity. The Targum (ܬ) has, “And they were not able to deliver them that carried them; and their worshippers are gone into captivity.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “And as for them, they are carried away captives!” The Peshitta (ܫ) has something like, “They were not able to rescue those who carried them, but rather they themselves are gone into captivity.” The Douay-Rheims (ṽ) has, for the first clause, “They could not save him that carried them.” ¶ But their soul (i.e., spirit) נפשם, see margin ¶. Calvin has: “And their soul hath gone into captivity. This is a Hebrew mode of expression, by which he ridicules those gods which have neither ‘soul’ nor understanding. He speaks ironically, therefore, against useless and dumb idols, when he says that they shall be carried into captivity along with their soul.” Birks has: [This] is an address to the men of Babylon, and describes these same images or idols, as wont to be carried by their votaries in solemn procession; but now consigned with ignominy by the Persian conquerors to beasts of burden, to be carried away as the spoil of conquest.”²

² An amusing story is told in The Legends of the Jews by Rabbi Louis Ginzberg, who synthesized much of the rabbinic literature. In it we learn how little by little Abraham became disenchanted with the idols that Terah, his father, made and worshiped. One day Abraham was sent to sell idols by Terah. When three of the five idols broke after his mule was frightened by a camel, Abraham began to doubt the power of idols. Next, Abraham asked one of the idols, Barisat, to keep a fire burning for him, while he had to leave for a moment. Upon returning, Abraham found Barisat had been burnt. On another occasion Abraham decided to feed his father’s gods, “but when Abraham brought the offering to the gods, he saw that they had no voice, no hearing, no motion, and not one of them stretched forth his hand to eat.” At first Abraham blamed himself for the idols’ lack of appetite but soon realized they were man-made vanities: “Abraham then took a hatchet in his hand, and broke all his father’s gods, and when he had done breaking them he placed the hatchet in the hand of the biggest god among them all, and he went out. Terah, having heard the crash of the hatchet on the stone, ran to the room of the idols, and he reached it at the moment when Abraham was leaving it, and when he saw what had happened, he hastened after Abraham, and he said to him, ‘What is this mischief thou hast done to my gods?’ Abraham

3 Hearken unto me, O house of Jacob, and all the remnant of the house of Israel, which are borne [by me] from the belly, which are carried from the womb:

Hearken unto me, O house of Jacob, and all the remnant of the house of Israel. The LXX (⚡) reads, “Hearken to me house of Jacob and all ye remnant of Israel.” ¶ Delitzsch has: “The Assyrian exile was earlier than the Babylonian, and had already naturalized the greater part of the exiles in a heathen land, and robbed them of their natural character, so that there was only a remnant left by whom there was any hope that the prophet’s message would be received.” While Judah seems to be the original audience, it is likely that the latter-day remnants of both Ephraim and Judah were also intended.³ Nägelsbach well says: “This expression (‘remnant,’ שְׁאֵרִית) is an honorable title designating the quintessence of the whole nation, without distinction of tribe, that remains after all siftings ... the thought is expressed that we find e. g., Jeremiah 3:14⁴: that no one belonging to the ‘remnant,’ even though he answered: ‘I set savory meat before them, and when I came nigh unto them, that they might eat, they all stretched out their hands to take of the meat, before the big one had put forth his hand to eat. This one, enraged against them on account of their behavior, took the hatchet and broke them all, and, behold, the hatchet is yet in his hands, as thou mayest see.’ Then Terah turned in wrath upon Abraham, and he said ‘Thou speakest lies unto me! Is there spirit, soul, or power in these gods to do all thou hast told me? Are they not wood and stone? and have I not myself made them? It is thou that didst place the hatchet in the hand of the big god, and thou sayest he smote them all.’ Abraham answered his father, and said: ‘How, then, canst thou serve these idols in whom there is no power to do anything? Can these idols in which thou trustest deliver thee? Can they hear thy prayers when thou callest upon them?’” Abraham then finished off the largest idol with the hatchet and ran away after admonishing his father to change his ways. Ginzberg, Rabbi Louis. The Legends of the Jews. Philadelphia, The Jewish Publication Society, 1913, pp. 1:209–215. Also see, Book of Jasher.

³ So also Whitehouse: “To whom do the parallel expressions house of Jacob and remnant of the house of Israel refer? It is quite reasonable to suppose that the Northern Israelites of the Ephraimite kingdom, both those who were deported by Sargon as well as those who still resided in Palestine, are referred to. That they were not forgotten by Hebrew prophets ... is clearly shown by the beautiful poem of Jeremiah 31:15–20 ... and Ezekiel 37:15–28 (the two sticks united). It is, however, certain that Judah is also included, since ‘Israel’ (as well as ‘Jacob’) is constantly used in [ISAIAH 40 ff.] as a designation of the Jewish race ... Similarly Yahweh is called ‘Holy One of Israel’ as the national deity of the entire Hebrew race.” Well, certainly, when we hear of deliverance (ISAIAH 46:4) we know that the gathering of Israel, both Ephraim (Northern tribes) and Judah (Southern tribes) are meant.

⁴ “Turn [שׁוּבוּ], O backsliding children, saith the LORD; for I am married unto you: and I will take you one of a city, and two of a family, and I will bring you to Zion” (Jeremiah 3:14). Spanish versions often using the term ‘Convertíos’ or be converted for שׁוּבוּ.

may dwell most concealed and solitary, will be forgotten.” Barnes has: “The utter vanity of the idols had been set before [Israel]; and in view of that, God now addresses his own people, and entreats them to put their trust in him. The address he commences with words of great tenderness and endearment, designed to lead them to confide in him as their Father⁵ and friend.” ¶ Which are borne [by me] from the belly, which are carried from the womb: The Targum (⚡) has, “Who are beloved above all nations, yea, beloved above all kingdoms.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “Who have been carried from the womb, and instructed from childhood to old age.” The Peshitta (⚡) eliminates the ellipsis, by me, but the meaning remains the same. The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “Who are carried by my bowels, are borne up by my womb.” ¶ As a nation, Cowles notes: “He had borne them from their birth; or, in other words, from the time when he first called Abraham, from the midst of his idolatrous connections, to be his servant; which event was, as it were, the birth of the people of Israel.” Birks remarks: “There is here a striking contrast between the idols, borne aloft by their votaries, or carried helplessly away; and the true God, who bears and sustains His people from infancy to old age, and in hours of sickness and sorrow.” Barnes points us to Deuteronomy 1:31: “And in the wilderness, where thou hast seen how that the LORD thy God bare thee, as a man doth bear his son, in all the way that ye went, until ye came into this place.” And not only are we carried and upheld physically, but also through the atonement, the Lord bears the weight of our sins if we will turn unto Him. President N. Eldon Tanner testified: “No one can state too plainly or emphasize too strongly this eternal truth that only through the atonement of Christ can mankind be saved.”⁶

4 And [even] to [your] old age I [am] he; and [even] to hoar hairs will I carry [you]: I have made, and I will bear; even I will carry, and will deliver [you].

And [even] to [your] old age I [am] he; and [even] to hoar hairs will I carry [you]: The Targum (⚡) has, “Even unto eternity I am He, and my Word shall endure for ages after ages⁷.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “I am the self-existent, even till you grow old, I am, I sustain you.” Instead of carry [you], the Peshitta (⚡) has endure. The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “Even to your old age I am the same, and to your grey hairs I will carry you.” ¶ Hoar hairs means white hair, or old age. Whitehouse writes: “The old age and the ‘grey hairs’ of Israel do not refer to the present but to the distant future.” Keith writes: “He had carried Israel in her infancy, and in her old age he would not forsake her. Similar language, implying affection and care, is employed in other places: ‘He bare them and carried them all the days of old’ (ISAIAH 63:9b); ‘I taught Ephraim also to go, taking them by their arms’ (Hosea 11:3a); ‘As the eagle fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings; so the Lord alone did lead him’ (Deuteronomy 32:11–12a). Babylon had to burden herself with her gods; but the Lord burdened himself with Israel. From the expression ‘the remnant of the house of Israel,’ and the allusion to old age and hoary hairs, it appears that the period of Israel’s history specially intended is the same as in previous chapters, viz., that connected with their return to their country and their God [i.e., the gathering of Israel—GB].” ¶ I have made, and I will bear; even I will carry, and will deliver [you]. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “It is I who have created all men, and I have scattered them among the nations, yea, I will forgive their sin (literally, ‘debts’), and I will pardon.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “I made you and I will bear with you; I will lift you up and I will save you.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “I have made you, and I will bear: I will carry and will save.” ¶ We again see a reference here to the atonement of Jesus Christ. Horsley explains: “[What] I have made, I will carry; and [what] I take upon my shoulders [אֶסְבֵּל] I will carry off safe.”

⁵ See “The Father and the Son: A Doctrinal Exposition of the First Presidency and the Twelve,” 30 June 1916. In MFP 5:26–34. Salt Lake City, 1971.

⁶ President N. Eldon Tanner, “Where Art Thou?” Ensign, December 1971, p. 32.

⁷ Reminds us of ISAIAH 40:8.

vv. 5–13. The gods are made with expensive materials, all of which are provided by nature. Idols are carried on the shoulders of men but are incapable of hearing the cries and petitions of men. In moments of fear, worry and doubt we need to look to the Lord. God is incomparably great and we should take comfort on what He has done for man from the earliest history. God has a plan and has declared, through His prophets, things to come. We again note the strong allusions to the First Vision and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. Just as God used Cyrus to bring temporal salvation to Israel, in the last days He will use the Book of Mormon to bring Israel unto Christ and be saved. The hard of heart are invited to look unto Christ and live.

5 ¶ To whom will ye liken me, and make [me] equal, and compare me, that we may be like?

The Targum (ⲧ) has, for the last clause, “And compare me in truth?” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “To what have you likened me?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, for the last clause, “And made me like?” ¶ See also, ISAIAH 40:18. In the Pearl of Great Price we read one of my favorite scriptures: “And the Lord said unto me: These two facts do exist, that there are two spirits, one being more intelligent than the other; there shall be another more intelligent than they; I am the Lord thy God, I am more intelligent than they all” (Abraham 3:19). ¶ And yet idol worshipers were putting Jehovah as just one more god among many, thus the incredulous question on the part of the Lord, “and make me equal?” Nothing, of course, could be so absurd.

6 They lavish gold out of the bag, and weigh silver in the balance, [and] hire a goldsmith; and he maketh it a god: they fall down, yea, they worship.

They lavish gold out of the bag, and weigh silver in the balance, [and] hire a goldsmith. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Behold, the people collect gold out of the bag, and weigh silver in the balance, and hire a goldsmith.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Look! Contrive, ye wanderers! Collecting gold from a bag, and silver by weight they will put it in a balance; and having hired a goldsmith.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) has something like, “To those who go astray (Lamsa) / have deviated (BPE), who take out gold from their bags and weigh silver in the balance and pay a goldsmith.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “You that contribute gold out of the bag, and weigh out silver in the scales: and hire a goldsmith.” ¶ Keith has: “It is in language of keen satire that it is said, the material of the idol was before shut up in a bag; it is put into a balance and weighed; it is given into the hands of a workman, and then the thing is worshipped.” ¶ Birks has: “Expense alone is in religion no pledge at all of a reasonable or acceptable service. These idols of Babylon were very costly and very worthless.” ¶ And he maketh it a god: they fall down, yea, they worship. The Targum (ⲧ) has, for the last clause, “They do it reverence (literally, ‘they make themselves servile’).” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “They made handiworks and bowing themselves down they will worship them.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “To make a god: and they fall down and worship.” Our minds turn, once again, to Jeremiah 9:23–24, and we may profitably ask in our lives: Do we tend to glory / trust in man’s wisdom, might / strength, or riches? Or, do we glory and put our trust in the Lord? The Lord will carry us and sustain us as we put our trust in Him. When fear comes upon us, do we lose our resolve to put our trust in the Lord? In ISAIAH 46:8, the Lord asks us to be brave. Let us not bend the knee except to the Lord.

7 They bear him upon the shoulder, they carry him, and set him in his place, and he standeth; from his place shall he not remove: yea, [one] shall cry unto him, yet can he not answer, nor save him out of his trouble.

They bear him upon the shoulder, they carry him, and set him in his place, and he standeth. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “They carry it on the shoulder and move on; but if they set it in its place, there it remaineth.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) does not have the clause, and he standeth. The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, for the first half, “They bear him on their shoulders and carry him.” ¶ Gill writes: “That is, the idol; men carry him upon their shoulders in procession, and expose him to the view and veneration of the people.” Gill has: “The idol being set in his place stands fast, being nailed; he stands upright as a palm tree, and can never stir from the place where he is, to help any of his worshippers, in whatsoever distress they may be; nor can he get out of the way of any danger to which he may be exposed; if the temple or house, in which he is, is on fire, or overflowed with water, or broke into by thieves, he cannot move out of his place, and escape the danger; a fine deity to be worshipped indeed! [And] as Baal’s priests and worshippers cried to him, but no voice was heard, nor answer returned (1 Kings 18:26, 29), for though they have ears, they hear not, and mouths, yet they speak not (Psalm 115:5–6) [and furthermore] the idol cannot save the idolatrous worshipper out of his distress, which has caused him to cry unto him.” ¶ From his place shall he not remove: yea, [one] shall cry unto him, yet can he not answer, nor save him out of his trouble. The Targum (Ⲛ) has, “It is not possible for him to move from his place; yea, one supplicates to him; but he does not answer him, nor save him out of his distress.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “It cannot move itself. And if any one cry to it, it cannot hear, nor can it save him from evils.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “And shall not stir out of his place. Yea, when they shall cry also unto him, he shall not hear: he shall not save them from tribulation.” ¶ Idols cannot move of their own volition, nor can they hear the pleas of the helpless. Today, individuals are less likely to fall down before idols of wood and stone, and are more likely to put their trust in philosophical idolatry.

8 Remember this, and shew yourselves men: bring [it] again to mind, O ye transgressors.

The Targum (Ⲛ) has, “Remember this, and be ye strong; and bear it in mind, O rebels!” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Remember these things and groan; reform, ye who have been led astray.” For the first half, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “Remember these things and discern.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “Remember this, and be ashamed: return, ye transgressors, to the heart.” ¶ See Rabbi Rosenberg here, explaining that some follow the idea of man, מַן; others, of fire, אֵשׁ thus shame. Similarly, a number of exegetes (e.g., Calvin, Cheyne and several others) suggest that Isaiah is predicting that the apostates will be ashamed if they do not repent. So Bishops Bible, “Consider this well, and be ashamed: go into your owne selues”; Geneva Bible, “Remember this, and be ashamed: bring it againe to minde, O you transgressors” as well as a number of more modern versions. Birks writes: “All superstition and idol worship is mental cowardice, while true faith and right worship are a manly and reasonable thing.” ¶ Alexander has: “... the proof just given of the impotence of idols, the worshippers of which, whether Jews or Gentiles, are addressed in this verse as apostates [פֹּשְׁעִים] or rebels against God.” Kay has: “Remember this”—this impotence of the idol-gods; of which you were warned from the beginning; and shew yourselves men (or ‘stand firm,’ Vulgate, ‘fundamini’); bring it back to mind...” One of the roles of the Holy Ghost is to help us remember.

9 Remember the former things of old: for I [am] God, and [there is] none else; [I am] God, and [there is] none like me,

The Targum (Ⲛ) has, for the last half, “And there is no god whatever beside me.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Return with the heart and remember the things of old, that I am God and there is none besides me.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “Remember the former age, for I am God, and there is no God beside, neither is there the like to me.” Birks says, continuing with his comments about cowardice: “Hope for the future, even more than memories of the past, is the duty and privilege of the faithful.” In other words, we need to remember what the Lord has done for us in the past; remember how He succored us—and so refuse to yield to fear. As the Lord has never abandoned us in the past, there is no reason to believe He will do so in the future. Living with such confidence is a life-long pursuit. We learn this lesson as we increase our faith and dependence on the Lord.

10 Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times [the things] that are not [yet] done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure:

Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times [the things] that are not [yet] done. The LXX (6) reads, “Who can declare events before they happen, as if they were already accomplished.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Who shew from the beginning the things that shall be at last, and from ancient times the things that as yet are not done.” ¶ Following with the theme of reassurances, the Lord knows the end from the beginning, and once having obtained reassurances from him we must lean on them in faith. ¶ Ibn Ezra has: “Declaring the end from the beginning, that is, declaring the event before it happens.” I never tire of reading the words of Elder LeGrand Richards, who bore one of the strongest, most enthusiastic testimonies of the restoration of the Gospel and of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. There are no less than a dozen instances in which Elder Richards quoted this verse in General Conference. I reproduce only a few thoughts: “Well, if prophecy is the most sure way of knowing what is to happen—and Isaiah said that the Lord had declared the end from the beginning it’s all there when we understand it ... We are advised to study the scriptures, the older scriptures and the modern scriptures, to see what the prophets have said. Remember the words of Peter, that we have a more sure word of prophecy and that we do well to take heed. I want to bear you my testimony here that this is the work of God the Eternal Father⁸ ... As far as my experience goes in studying the scriptures, Joseph Smith has given us more revealed truth than any prophet who has ever lived upon the face of this earth except the Savior of the world. I thank the Lord for this marvelous truth. This helps us to understand the words of Isaiah when he said: ‘Wherefore the Lord said, Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men’ (ISAIAH 29:13) ... I have talked to ministers for hours and only received one question from them, because I was explaining things to them out of God’s holy book, the Bible, that they had never understood before in their lives. I tell you, brothers and sisters, we have that marvelous work and a wonder! You would think that if the Lord raised up a prophet and a messenger to prepare the way for his coming, the first thing he would want that messenger to do would be to correct the false impressions in the world with regard to the personality of God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ. For at that time all churches taught that they were three in one, without body, without parts, and without passions. Moses knew that such a condition would prevail, for when he led the children of Israel into the promised land, he told them that ‘there ye shall serve gods, the work of men’s hands, wood and stone, which neither see, nor hear, nor eat, nor smell’ (Deuteronomy 4:28⁹). Just think how literally the very words of Moses spoken over 3,000 years ago are fulfilled in the doctrine that was proclaimed in all the Christian churches all over this world at the time that Joseph Smith had his marvelous vision. But Moses didn’t leave it at that. He said: ‘But if from thence thou shalt seek the Lord thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul. When thou art in tribulation, and all these things are come upon thee, even in the latter days, if thou turn to the Lord thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice’ (Deuteronomy 4:29–30). And we live in the latter days. Thank God we have found him through the raising up of this prophet. When the Father and his Son Jesus Christ revealed themselves unto him so that he understood what the Godhead really was, the next question that Joseph had was to know which of all the churches he should join. And who in the heavens above and on the earth beneath had a better right to pronounce judgment upon the churches of the world than the Savior of the world? He answered him that he should join none of them for they all taught for doctrine the precepts of men. There isn’t going to be time to outline very much more, but just think of Moroni’s coming, think of the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated. Where in all the world does anybody know about that other record that the Lord commanded Ezekiel should be written, that the Lord would bring forth and put with the record of Judah and make them one in his hand? We are the only people in the world that know where that record is. Just think what it contains of the knowledge that the Lord preserved for the convincing of the Jew and the gentile that Jesus is the Christ.”¹⁰ ¶ Saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure: The LXX (6) reads, “When I have spoken, all my counsel shall stand; and all that I have determined, I will effect.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Saying: My counsel shall stand, and all my will shall be done.” ¶ Ibn Ezra writes: “For who can annul my decree; ‘my counsel’ stands for ever, and I will do ‘all my pleasure.’” In ISAIAH 45 the Lord told the potshards of the earth not to question His perfect judgement about the Book of Mormon. Now, once again, we receive reassurances that the Lord’s will shall come to pass regardless of the murmuring of man.

⁸ Richards, Elder LeGrand. “The Second Coming of Christ.” April 1978 General Conference.

⁹ Deuteronomy 4 is part of the Rain in Due Season Scriptures.

¹⁰ Richards, Elder LeGrand. “Prophecy.” April 1974 General Conference.

11 Calling a ravenous bird from the east, the man that executeth my counsel[✓] from a far country: yea, I have spoken [it], I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed [it], I will also do it.

✓ of my counsel

Calling a ravenous bird from the east, the man that executeth my counsel from a far country: The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Who hath promised to gather together the captivity from the East, to bring openly, as a swift bird, the sons of Abraham, my chosen, from a distant land.” The Targum (Ⓣ) here helps us think of the work that will be carried out in bringing a present back to the Lord, in terms of gathering Israel, as mentioned in ISAIAH 18. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Calling from the east a winged fowl, even from a far distant land, for purposes which I have resolved on.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “Who call a bird from the east, and from a far country the man of my own will.” ¶ Birks has: “The ‘man of my purpose’ means one set apart by God’s decree for a special service.” Jenour suggests: “A swift bird from the east] Meaning Cyrus, who is so called from the rapidity of his conquests. Xenophon relates, that the standard of Cyrus was an eagle, with extended wings, upon the top of a lance (Cyropaedia B: 7:1).” Baltzer notes that the expression, מֵאֶרֶץ מְרֹחֶק, is precisely the one we see in the prophecy against Babylon, in ISAIAH 13:5. The ravenous bird from the east, then, could certainly be applied to Cyrus—as a type of Christ. ¶ There is a greater one than Cyrus that shall liberate Israel in the last days. Rabbi Rosenberg, leaning on Kimhi, has: “Rabbi Joseph Kimhi interprets it as a reference to the King-Messiah, who will come swiftly when the time arrives. So also Govett: “ISAIAH 46:11 predicts the advent of Christ under the emblem of an eagle, a bird swift of wing from afar, and to pounce upon the prey. He is promised as ‘the man of Jehovah’s counsel,’ as said the apostle, ‘He hath appointed a day wherein he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance in that he hath raised him from the dead’ (Acts 17:31). And he shall be the righteousness and salvation of God, as it is written, ‘I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgement and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is the name whereby he shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness’ (Jeremiah 23:5–6).” So also Keith: “The position of the passage in this chapter, which does not relate particularly to the capture of Babylon by Cyrus, the idols not being removed then, but which relates to the ‘remnant’ of the house of Israel, an expression which is applied pre-eminently to those who are left in the last days—to such as shall be gathered from their wanderings and spared from their judgments,—which relates also to the hoar hair, the old age of the nation,—this position of the verse, followed as it is by a description of the final conversion of Israel—every circumstance connecting it with events long subsequent to the time of Cyrus—seems to require that it also be understood of Christ when he comes to judge among the nations, and to reign in Zion. The figure of a ravenous bird corresponds with the character in which he shall then visit the nations: ‘He shall cry, yea, roar; he shall prevail against his enemies: I will destroy and devour at once’ (ISAIAH 42:13, 14b)” (emphasis added). ¶ Yea, I have spoken [it], I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed [it], I will also do it. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Yea, I have promised it; yea, I will bring it to pass; I have ordained it; yea, I will do it.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I have spoken and brought, I have created and made, I have brought it and made its way prosperous.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “And I have spoken, and will bring it to pass: I have created, and I will do it.” ¶ The Lord once again give reassurances that He has spoken these words, and not in vain, for they shall come to pass.

12 Harken unto me, ye stouthearted, that [are] far from righteousness:

The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Hear me, ye who have lost understanding—who are far from righteousness!” Or as the Peshitta (Ⓢ) translators render it, “stubborn of heart” (Lamsa) / “hard of heart” (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “Hear me, O ye hardhearted, who are far from justice.” ¶ These last two verses, as Birks points out: “the message passes on to the times of Messiah” or at least, to the dispensation of the fulness of times. ¶ Stout-hearted, לֵב אֲבִירִי. Shalom Paul writes: “For similar expressions denoting stubbornness, see Ezekiel 2:4: לֵב חֲזָקִי [stiff hearted]; Ezekiel 3:7: לֵב יָקִישׁ [and hard hearted].” Cowles has: “The stout-hearted [Hebrew ‘strong of heart’] are those who boldly and defiantly oppose God.—Their being ‘far from righteousness’ means that they are utterly unrighteous, void of integrity and uprightness. The Lord implores such to listen to his call. Reckless and desperate though they may be, yet the great compassion of God beseeches them to consider their ways, to cease from their folly and madness, and to return to reason and to their divine Father.” Orelli writes: “The ‘stout-hearted,’ i.e., those who, full of self-sufficiency, think to find strength and righteousness in themselves ...” In Alma, by contrast, we read of the consequences of leaning on the Lord: “Yea, and it came to pass that the Lord our God did visit us with assurances that he would deliver us; yea, insomuch that he did speak peace to our souls, and did grant unto us great faith, and did cause us that we should hope for our deliverance in him” (Alma 58:11). ¶ Rashi, in Slotki/Rosenberg thinks this of Judah, such that “in spite of their exile among the nations, were *obstinate in adhering*¹¹ to God’s worship, yet did not receive His righteousness” (emphasis added). Is this not what the Father and the Son told Joseph Smith about the modern professors of Christendom during the First Vision? “... the Personage who addressed me said that all their creeds were an abomination in his sight; that those professors were all corrupt; that: ‘they draw near to me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me, they teach for doctrines the commandments of men, having a form of godliness, but they deny the power thereof’” (JS-History 1:19, see ISAIAH 29:13). These words, of course, help us understand ISAIAH 46:13 in its proper context.¹² ¶ Young says, “The glorious news those who are far from righteousness are to hear it that God has brought His own righteousness near.” It was the reading of the Book of Mormon that softened my heart and prepared me to embark in a new life in Christ.

13 I bring near my righteousness; it shall not be far off, and my salvation shall not tarry: and I will place salvation in Zion for Israel my glory.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “My righteousness is nigh, it is not far off, and my salvation shall not tarry: and I will place salvation in Zion, and my glory in Israel.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “I have brought my saving mercy near; and the salvation which is from me I will not delay. I have placed in Sion salvation for Israel, for a subject of glory.” ¶ Young says: “What God brings to His people is righteousness, even salvation. It is this that man receives ... for God will bring it near ... This action is for the sake of Israel, for if God does not act, Israel cannot be saved. The glory Israel possesses, it possesses not in and of itself but receives from its Lord as a gift ... Through the saved Israel, the glory of the Lord, will be seen the Lord of glory, the Savior of His people.” ¶ It is so frequent and painful to read of the exegetes that God is not speaking at all of the descendants of Jacob, but rather these have been moved aside to make way for the Gentiles, that it is a breath of fresh air to read the words of Jennings here: “So our chapter closes with the constantly repeated promise of God’s salvation being found in Zion, His glory given to Israel ... —but when they tell us that the prophet himself meant the Church [here standing for the Gentiles grafted in rather than Israel] ... and not the nation to which he had been directly commissioned to go, in that, we are compelled to say, they greatly err.” ¶ Henderson writes: “There seems to be here a momentary transition to a greater deliverance than that from Babylon, but for which the latter was to be preparatory ... Jehovah declares that he would effect a still more wonderful work—that of redemption through the Messiah, in consequences of whose righteousness there would be in Zion that salvation which would be the glory or beauty of all believers.” ¶ While this verse certainly can be applied to the times of deliverance from the Babylonian captivity, I see in these words both (1) the birth of the Christ child and the ensuing salvation from His atoning sacrifice in the meridian of time; and (2) the restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ in the latter-days—including the publication of the Book of Mormon. Through these, the Lord brought His righteousness, or His presence, near. In the former He lived upon the earth with the children of men and in the latter He appeared in glory to the boy Prophet. In the first, through the atoning sacrifice of our Savior; in the latter, to the spreading forth of the good news and the gathering of the remnant of Israel to Zion.

FIRST POSTED: 20 August 2015

¹¹ Webster explains the word obstinate, in one of its significations, as adhering to something. It seems, from the context, that the holding on to these opinions was not bad in itself, except that they were far from righteousness. The adherence was not to truth.

¹² A few days after I wrote these words I was thrilled to find that Kay was thinking in exactly these same terms and even quoting the same verse: “far from righteousness” because they had ‘removed their heart far’ from God (ISAIAH 29:13).” Although not in the same context as that of ISAIAH 29, the Book of Mormon chapter, Kay goes on to say that God “would manifest His own righteousness (Romans 1:17), and communicate righteousness to ‘many’ (ISAIAH 53:11).”

Isaiah 47

This is a taunt-song celebrating the future fall of arrogant and prideful Babylon. Govett has: “This is another of the sentences against Babylon, both the literal and the mystic.” Indeed, if we turn to Revelation (e.g., Revelation 2:23; 9:21; 13:2; 16:10; 17:15–16, 18; 18:4, 7–8, 15, 20, 22–23; 19:2—Gill), we see that several of our verses in ISAIAH are quoted there regarding the end of times. While the conquest by Cyrus was sudden, Keith suggests that: “[The prophecy about the collapse of Babylon] must therefore be understood of her gradual downfall, which was not effected until after repeated shocks, of which the attack of Cyrus was the first. It is a general prophecy of her fate.” Ironside says: “Babylon, by her sorceries, her enchantments, is said to have bewitched the nations. Nation after nation followed her in the practice of idolatry. She was called, ‘The Lady of Kingdoms.’” Babylon, today, stands for the antithesis of Zion. Even though Babylon has ceased to exist as a nation, mystical Babylon is given as a representation of Satan’s dominions. Israel is being gathered from mystical Babylon—the world—and brought into Zion. Baltzer says of ISAIAH 47, that we will find a “correspondence between Babylon’s deposition here and Zion’s installation in ISAIAH 51.” False thinking and false reasoning are exposed.

vv. 1–6. Babylon, being personified as a pampered young woman, is commanded to descend from her throne of opulence and sit on the bare ground. When she was indulged her every wish and desire was carried out by her servants; but now she has the most menial of jobs, working the mill to grind cereal grains into flower. Babylon has had to remove her royal garments and show herself in public, fully humiliated. Formerly, her delicate feet would have been protected from the stones as she crossed rivers in a wagon. Now, she has to wade rivers on foot. She had not only punished the children of Israel but took pleasure in doing so.

1 ¶ COME down, and sit in the dust, O virgin daughter of Babylon, sit on the ground: [there is] no throne, O daughter of the Chaldeans: for thou shalt no more be called tender and delicate.

COME down, and sit in the dust, O virgin daughter of Babylon, sit on the ground: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Descend and sit on the dust, O kingdom of the congregation of Babylon; sit on the ground.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Come down, sit on the ground, Virgin daughter of Babylon!” ¶ Sit on the dust as well as sit on the ground are synonymous ways of saying that Babylon is captive. Abarbanel, in Slotki/Rosenberg suggests that this sitting on the ground is not just mourning, but also humiliation. While an upward change of status is easy to deal with, downward mobility¹ requires that we swallow our pride. Christ

¹ Members of The Church of Jesus Christ may one day serve as Bishops or Stake Presidents or Seventies, with great amounts of responsibility over a large number of people. And when released they

Jesus willingly left His divine position as the son of God to become the lowliest servant² on this earth. Though Christ had the command of legions, He never did anything that would not meet the approval of His Father. ¶ Whitehouse has: “The genitive is what is called an appositional genitive, the city or nation being personified (cf. ISAIAH 1:8).” Henderson says: “The Orientals are accustomed to speak of cities or empires that have never been conquered, as virgins ... By daughter is meant the people or inhabitants” (emphasis added). Similarly, see Rabbi Rosenberg, leaning on Ibn Ezra and Redak. ¶ The contrary view is given by Rawlinson who says: “‘Virgin’ does not mean ‘unconquered;’ for Babylon had been taken by the Assyrians some half-dozen times (‘Ancient Monarchies,’ 2:58, 130, 149, 157, 164, 175, etc.).” Kay explains: “Babylon boasted (Herodotus 1:191) that she had never been captured.” ¶ [There is] no throne, O daughter of the Chaldeans: for thou shalt no more be called tender and delicate. The Targum (ⲧ) adds, “of glory” after throne. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Sit on the ground, daughter of the Chaldeans! for thou shalt no more be called tender and delicate!” The Douay-Rheims go on to serve in other callings where they may command little notice or attention. This is the normal way in the Lord’s Church, for members learn they are serving the Lord when they serve each other. Position and rank do not matter to the true disciples of our Lord Jesus Christ. In the world, things are not quite like that. As a young man in Chile, I grew up in a home with four maids and a gardener. As a youth I never knew how to even saddle my own horse. For a time we had a woman who came in to cut our fingernails and toenails. This all changed when life took me to California. I not only learned to saddle my own horse, but to saddle horses for others. I worked at a country club in which part of my duties were to clean the toilets. I noticed I was not even considered a person to be greeted. I also cleaned horse stables. Also see my notes on the movie, The Last Emperor, in ISAIAH 21:12.

² I love to read The Ascension of Isaiah in the Pseudepigrapha. See ISAIAH 53:2.

(ו) has, for the first half, “There is no throne for the daughter of the Chaldeans.” ¶ Benson says: “Imperial power is taken from thee, and translated to the Persians.” Skinner explains: “The parallel phrase daughter of the Chaldeans ... describes Babylon as the city of (possessed by) the Chaldeans, the reigning dynasty.” ¶ The expression tender and delicate, רַכָּה וְעֵנִיָּה, as a number of exegetes point out, also appears in the Rain in Due Season: the tender among thee and the delicate (Deuteronomy 28:56), הַרַכָּה בְּךָ וְהָעֵנִיָּה.

2 Take the millstones, and grind meal:
uncover thy locks, make bare the leg, uncover the thigh, pass over the rivers.

Take the millstones, and grind meal: The Targum (ט) has, “Receive this calamity and go into servitude; put away the glory of thy kingdom, thy princes are overthrown.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “Take a millstone and grind corn.” The Peshitta (ܣ) also has “grind flour.” ¶ Barnes describes these: “The mills which were there commonly used, and which are also extensively used to this day, consisted of two stones, of which the lower one was convex on the upper side, and the upper one was concave on the lower side, so that they fitted into each other. The hole for receiving the grain was in the centre of the upper stone, and in the process of grinding the lower one was fixed, and the upper one was turned round, usually by two women (see Matthew 24:41), with considerable velocity by means of a handle. Jenour has: “The business of grinding corn among the Jews was performed by two women; one sat on the ground and turned the stone, whilst the other supplied the corn [i.e., rather, the wheat or other cereal—GB]. The same method is practiced in the east to this day. It was, however, the employment only of the lowest order of females (see Exodus 11:5)³.” ¶ Cowles has: “[Babylon’s] debasement is compared to the change from being a queen to being an abject slave. As in ISAIAH 47:1, so here the prediction of this change takes the form of command. Go, virgin daughter, strip off every badge of royalty; put on the wretched covering of the female slave and do her menial service.—‘Take the mill-stones,’ i.e., of the small hand-mill—a necessity in every oriental family, with which the grinding for each day’s use was done every morning, and always done by the lowest class of servants ... always of the female sex.” ¶ Uncover thy locks, make bare the leg, uncover the thigh, pass over the rivers. The Targum (ט) has, “The people of thy armies are scattered, they have vanished away like waters of the river.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “Doff thy veil; uncover thy grey locks. Make bare thy leg: wade through rivers.” The Peshitta (ܣ) has something like, “Remove your veil, cut your white hair, uncover your legs and ford the rivers.” The Douay-Rheims (ו) has, “Uncover thy shame, strip thy shoulder, make bare thy legs, pass over the rivers.” ¶ LITV renders it: “Take millstones and grind meal; uncover your veil; strip off the skirt; uncover the leg; pass over rivers”; and YLT has: “Take millstones, and grind flour, Remove thy veil, draw up the skirt, Uncover the leg, pass over the floods.” It is likely either the drawing up or removal of the skirt to cross the river, and thus expose the leg. Whether the word שָׁבֵל be translated as skirt (or some clothing, AMP, ASV, HCSB, JPS, NASB, LDS Reina Valera 2009⁴ or other versions; or in a number of other translations, shoe), or as leg (AV), it is given as singular in the Masoretic text (מ), שָׁבֵל, and plural in the 1QIsa^a, שָׁבֵלִים, your skirts. ¶ Cowles says, “‘Uncover thy locks,’ is precisely, strip off thy vail ... The next phrase should have been translated, ‘Strip off thy flowing robes,’ a dress with a long flowing train—another badge of the free and the honored class as opposed to the enslaved ... Her exposure of person would indicate and measure her debasement, the utter change of the condition from queenly dignity to abject servility.” ¶ Luther says: “As a servant you will have neither ship nor wagon. You will have to wade.” Jenour has: “To add to her degradation and misery, this great princess, who, to use the words of Moses, ‘would not have adventured to set her sole of her foot upon the ground for delicateness and tenderness,’ is represented as reduced to the necessity of exposing her tender and delicate limbs to the inclemency of the weather and the rude gaze of every idle spectator; and as being compelled, in this wretched condition, to walk barefoot upon the rough ground, and to wade a captive through rivers—none but the lowest class of females in eastern countries ever go uncovered or travel on foot; those who cannot afford a carriage ride on bullocks, and completely covered from head to foot with a long shawl. It is impossible to imagine anything more expressive than this imagery; and whoever contrasts the grandeur of ancient Babylon with her present desolate condition, cannot but be struck with the awful manner in which this figurative prediction has been accomplished.”

³ “And all the firstborn in the land of Egypt shall die, from the first born of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the firstborn of the maidservant that is behind the mill; and all the firstborn of beasts” (Exodus 11:5). The maidservant who is behind the mill is given as the lowest of people, in contrast to the Pharaoh. BBE renders it: “And death will come to every mother’s first male child in all the land of Egypt, from the child of Pharaoh on his seat of power, to the child of the servant-girl crushing the grain; and the first births of all the cattle” (emphasis added).

⁴ The LDS RV2009 translation, levanta la falda, coincides best with the YLT, draw up the skirt, which I believe is an excellent rendering. Literally, levanta la falda means lift up the skirt.

3 Thy nakedness shall be uncovered, yea, thy shame shall be seen: I will take vengeance, and I will not meet [thee as] a man.

Thy nakedness shall be uncovered, yea, thy shame shall be seen: The LXX (6) reads, “Thy shame shall be exposed; thy nakedness shall be seen.” As mentioned above, by having to cross the rivers with girded clothing, and by not being to wear the clothing of the rich and powerful. Faussett has: “... in the East the head is the seat of female modesty; the face of a woman is seldom, the whole head almost never, seen bare.” ¶ I will take vengeance, and I will not meet [thee as] a man. The Targum (7) has, “I will take full vengeance on thee and I will change thy judgment from the children of men.” The LXX (6) reads, “This vengeance I will take on thy account and no more deliver thee up to men.” The Douay-Rheims (8) has, “I will take vengeance, and no man shall resist me.” ¶ Exegetes and translators render this clause differently, without the ellipsis given by the AV. For instance, we have: “I will take vengeance, and will spare no man” (ASV); “I will take vengeance, and will let no man intercede” (JPS); and YLT, which eliminates the ellipsis entirely: “Vengeance I take, and I meet not a man.” Alexander suggests: “The true sense is that expressed by Rosenmüller, I shall encounter no man, i.e., no man will be able to resist me. This simple explanation is at the same time one of the most ancient, as we find it distinctly expressed by Symmachus (οὐκ ἀντιστήσεται μοι ἄνθρωπος) and in the Vulgate (non resistet mihi homo).” I prefer Birks: “Man (Adam, אָדָם) placed last, has its full emphatic contrast with God, and its proper meaning as the kind or race, not a class or individual. The ellipsis of the pronoun is common with the previous clause, and adds to the force, when the object is plain. The absence of the particle of comparison makes the thought still more expressive. ‘It is not man thou wilt meet, when I meet thee. Thou shalt suffer no common, or merely human retribution.’”

4 [As for] our redeemer, the LORD of hosts [is] his name, the Holy One of Israel.

The LXX (6) reads, “Thy deliverer is the Lord of Hosts, his name is the Holy One of Israel.” Cowles notes: “It was for the sake of saving Zion and punishing Babylon for her cruel oppression of God’s people that these terrible judgments came upon her.” Alexander suggests: “The fall of Babylon is brought into connection and subordination to the proof of God’s supremacy as shewn in the protection and salvation of his people.” Israel can be assured and call the Lord, our Goel (Cheyne), that is, our redeemer: גֹּאֲלֵנוּ. No one else can redeem but Jesus Christ.

5 Sit thou silent, and get thee into darkness, O daughter of the Chaldeans: for thou shalt no more be called, The lady of kingdoms.

Sit thou silent, and get thee into darkness, O daughter of the Chaldeans: The Targum (7) has, for the last clause, “O glory (the Royal Polyglot omits קִיָּה, ‘glory’) of the kingdom of the Chaldeans.” The LXX (6) reads, “Sit in compunction: enter into darkness, daughter of the Chaldeans!” ¶ Henderson has: “Silence and darkness characterize a state of imprisonment. Captives were usually shut up in dark dungeons, far removed from the noisy scenes of life.” Darkness is the opposite of the light of God: “And that which doth not edify is not of God, and is darkness. That which is of God is light; and he that receiveth light, and continueth in God, receiveth more light; and that light groweth brighter and brighter until the perfect day” (D&C 50:23–24). Finally, the extreme of darkness, is outer darkness. ¶ Calvin says: “When he bids her ‘sit’ and be ‘silent,’ it is an indication of shame or disgrace. Yet this silence may be contrasted with her former condition, while she reigned; for at that time not only did she speak loudly and authoritatively, but she cried with a loud voice, and by her commands terrified the whole of the East.” The time will come, also, when Satan will no longer have power over men, but will likewise be silenced. ¶ For thou shalt no more be called, The lady of kingdoms. The Targum (7) has, instead of lady, “mighty one.” The LXX (6) reads, “Thou shalt no more be called the strength of a kingdom.” Likewise, instead of lady, the Peshitta (9) has mightiest (Lamsa) / strength (BPE). ¶ Birks has: “Babylon, in the time of her disgrace, will seek to hide herself from the eyes of the world. A veil of oblivion must fall over the city, once so proud and haughty.” In ISAIAH 14:13–15 we read of the adversary: “For thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north: I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the most High. Yet thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit.”

6 I was wroth with my people, I have polluted mine inheritance, and given them into thine hand: thou didst shew them no mercy; upon the ancient hast thou very heavily laid thy yoke.

I was wroth with my people, I have polluted mine inheritance, and given them into thine hand: The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “I was angry with my people: thou didst pollute my heritage, I delivered them into thy hand.” Instead of I have polluted, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has for they have polluted. ¶ Other synonyms for polluted include defiled (LITV), desecrated (CJB), and profaned (ESV). Wade explains: “To profane is to ‘make common,’ the opposite of sanctify (i.e. set apart). The Lord had set apart Israel for Himself, and so long as it was faithful to its obligations, it was safe from aggression (cf. Jeremiah 2:3). But when the nation disregarded its duties, its privileges were cancelled and the land became ‘profane,’ at the mercy of any assailant (cf. Jeremiah 50:7; 12:7–8).” Vitringa (in Benson) has: “The metaphor in this verse is taken from a father, who, being angry with his children, delivers them up to chastisement; but his anger soon subsiding, and his affection reviving, he turns his indignation against those who had so executed his commands, as to punish immoderately and severely.” Calvin observes: “When he says that he ‘was angry,’ and that this was the reason why he ‘profaned his heritage,’ let us not imagine that he had changed his purpose, and was offended so far as to cast away the care of his people and the remembrance of his covenant. This is evident both from the event itself and from his deigning still to call them ‘his people’ ...” ¶ Thou didst shew them no mercy; upon the ancient hast thou very heavily laid thy yoke. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And thou didst shew them no mercy. The yoke of the aged thou madest very heavy.” Lowth has: “God charges the Babylonians, though employed by himself to chastise his people, with cruelty in regard to them. They exceeded the bounds of justice and humanity in oppressing and destroying them; and though they were really executing the righteous decree of God, yet, as far as it regarded themselves, they were only indulging their own ambition and violence.” Throughout the Book of Lamentations we see the horrors of how the conquered peoples were treated. They had to purchase their water, their women were raped, and their elders abused (e.g., Lamentations 4:16; 5:12). This is a fulfillment of the Rain in Due Season prophecy: “Because thou servedst not the LORD thy God with joyfulness, and with gladness of heart, for the abundance of all things; Therefore shalt thou serve thine enemies which the LORD shall send against thee, in hunger, and in thirst, and in nakedness, and in want of all things: and he shall put a yoke of iron upon thy neck, until he have destroyed thee. The LORD shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand; A nation of fierce countenance, which shall not regard the person of the old, nor shew favour to the young” (Deuteronomy 28:47–50).

¶ Barnes says: Laid the yoke] The yoke in the Bible is an emblem of slavery or bondage, Leviticus 26:13; Deuteronomy 28:48 [both of these scriptures come from Rain in Due Season—GB] ... Here it refers to the bondage and affliction which they experienced in Babylon.” We need to ever remember to be kind to our foes when they are defeated before us.

vv. 7–15. Babylon had conceitedly thought that her power would have no end. She is sarcastically challenged to put her confidence in that which would not save her.

7 ¶ And thou saidst, I shall be a lady for ever: [so] that thou didst not lay these [things] to thy heart, neither didst remember the latter end of it.

And thou saidst, I shall be a lady for ever: The Targum (Ⓔ) has, “And thou saidst, I shall be the mighty one of the kingdoms.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And saidst, I shall be empress forever.” Instead of lady, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has mighty one (Lamsa) / strengthened (BPE). ¶ Cowles has: “‘She was so confident of the perpetuity of this honor that she would not think of the natural consequences of such cruelty, would not consider the latter end and the sure though possibly distant results of such crimes.’” Benson says: “If we consider that the city of Babylon had no less than one hundred gates made of solid brass; that its walls were two hundred feet high, and fifty broad, according to the lowest account given of them by historians, and, according to some, three hundred and fifty feet in height, and eighty-seven in thickness, so that six chariots could go abreast upon them; that it was defended by the river Euphrates, and supplied with provisions for many years; it might well be deemed impregnable: and ‘such a city as this might, with less vanity than any other, boast that she should continue forever, if anything human could continue forever’ (Bishop Newton).” ¶ Calvin suggests: “Thus the children of this world are intoxicated by prosperity, and despise all men as compared with themselves; but Isaiah mocks at this confidence, and shews that God regards it with the greatest abhorrence.” (See note by Brigham Young under ISAIAH 5:8.) ¶ [So] that thou didst not lay these [things] to thy heart, neither didst remember the latter end of it. The LXX (⚡) reads, “These things did not enter thy heart; nor didst thou call to mind what might at last befall thee.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, for the second clause, “Neither hast thou remembered thy latter end.” ¶ Cowles says: “‘Thou saidst, Forever shall I be a queen—until thou didst not lay these things upon thy heart,’ i.e., thou didst repeat it with persistence and force until it produced this result, viz., to harden thy heart against all sense and fear of retribution.” In Jeremiah we read how the Babylonian captivity would be temporal, and last seventy years, after which many of the people of Judah (i.e., Judah and Benjamin) would return to the Holy Land, to Zion. “For thus saith the LORD, That after seventy years be accomplished at Babylon I will visit you, and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to return to this place. For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the LORD, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an expected end. Then shall ye call upon me, and ye shall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you. And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart. And I will be found of you, saith the LORD: and I will turn away your captivity, and I will gather you from all the nations, and from all the places whither I have driven you, saith the LORD; and I will bring you again into the place whence I caused you to be carried away captive” (Jeremiah 29:10–14). The greater fulfillment of these verses in Jeremiah is taking place right now as the children of Israel are gathered into Zion from every corner of the world. ¶ Regarding the end of it Baltzer says: “‘Babylon’ has not considered the consequences of her arrogance. אֶת־רֵיית is the ‘end’ (just as רֵאשִׁית is the ‘beginning’).”

8 Therefore hear now this, [thou that art] given to pleasures, that dwellest carelessly, that sayest in thine heart, I [am], and none else beside me; I shall not sit [as] a widow, neither shall I know the loss of children:

Therefore hear now this, [thou that art] given to pleasures, that dwellest carelessly, that sayest in thine heart, I [am], and none else beside me. The LXX (⚡) reads, “Now, therefore, hear these things, thou voluptuary! thou who art seated at ease, who thinkest thyself secure; who sayest in thy heart; ‘I am and there is none else.’” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, for the first half, “And now hear these things, thou that art delicate, and dwellest confidently.” ¶ Keith explains that one of the reasons why Babylon would be punished was “her pursuit of pleasures. This character belonged more or less to all the heathen cities of antiquity. Their prosperity has always been the mother of licentiousness; and abundant as have been the dissipation and sensuality of other capitals, in no case has the catalogue of vices been more foul than in that of Babylon, according to the testimony of Herodotus and others. Hence she is made the symbol of the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth (Revelation 17:5).” Skinner points us to Zephaniah 2:15, speaking of Nineveh, where we read similar sentiments: “This is the rejoicing city that dwelt carelessly, that said in her heart, I am, and there is none beside me: how is she become a desolation, a place for beasts to lie down in! every one that passeth by her shall hiss, and wag his hand.” Alexander eliminates the present ellipsis [i.e., though that art] and translates אֶת־רֵיית as “Oh voluptuous one!” So also, “And now hear this, thou voluptuous one” (Darby.); “Et maintenant, écoute ceci, voluptueuse” (FDB); “Ahora pues, oye esto, voluptuosa” (LBLA); “Oye, pues, ahora esto, mujer voluptuosa” (RV1960). Leeser translates it as: “And now hear this, luxurious one.” ¶ Birks has: “The phrase in the second clause has caused some perplexity. It is literally, ‘I am, and the absence of me beside.’ All beside me, says the proud city, is so worthless in comparison, that ‘it is not Babylon, no part of her empire,’ is description enough. The words are a profane parody of the Divine saying, ‘I am the Lord, and there is none else,’ (ISAIAH 43:10–11; 44:6, 8; 45:5–6, 14, 18, 21; 46:9). These chapters are full of the contrast between the false pride of Babylon and the true glory of the living God.” ¶ I shall not sit [as] a widow, neither shall I know the loss of children: The LXX (⚡) reads, “I shall not sit a widow, nor shall I know the loss of children.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, for the last clause, “And I shall not know barrenness.” ¶ Cowles observes: “The same Babylon, before shown under the figure of a virgin, is here by a slight change, a wife with children. She has been intensely pleasure-loving, dwelling in supposed security and saying, ‘None so great and mighty as I. I have put myself above the reach of great calamity.’ The loss of children and of husband are fitly named as the most fearful calamities that can befall a wife and mother. It is better to take them therefore as figures for the greatest calamities that can befall a nation, e.g., subjugation, captivity, and the sword, rather than to give them the more specific sense of the loss of her king (her husband) and of her soldiers or citizens (as her sons).” Whitehouse, in contrast, has: “The ‘childlessness’ refers to the depopulation caused by the sword, flight of inhabitants, or their captivity.” Several, including Redak (in Rabbi Rosenberg) suggest that widowhood, in this case, is a city left desolate without her king (see more in ISAIAH 47:9). Govett has: “‘I shall not sit as a widow, nor experience bereavement,’ is paralleled by St. John, ‘She saith in her heart, I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow' (Revelation 18:7)."

9 But these two [things] shall come to thee in a moment in one day, the loss of children, and widowhood: they shall come upon thee in their perfection for the multitude of thy sorceries, [and] for the great abundance of thine enchantments.

But these two [things] shall come to thee in a moment in one day, the loss of children, and widowhood: The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "But now upon thee shall come these two things, suddenly, in one day. The loss of children and widowhood." The Peshitta (Ⲫ) fills in the ellipsis, things with plagues (Lamsa) / wounds (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, "These two things shall come upon thee suddenly in one day, barrenness and widowhood." ¶ Rabbi Rosenberg points out that Babylon indeed lost her king: "For Belshazzar the king was killed at night, and the Persians and the Medes entered and captured the city (Daniel 5:30; 6:1)." Keith observes: "The wife deprived at once of husband and children, widowed and made childless in one day, is a touching illustration of utter bereavement." Certainly, it reminds us of Job. Jenour writes: "The capture of Babylon, as has already been observed, was sudden and unexpected. The inhabitants were dissolved in mirth and festivity, and had not the smallest anticipation of the design of Cyrus until his army was in the city. Indeed, Herodotus says, that those who lived in the middle were dancing and making merry after the extremities had been taken." Gill has: "Dr. Prideaux thinks this prophecy had its accomplishment when Babylon was besieged by Darius, who, to save provisions, slew all their own women, wives, sisters, daughters, and all their children, reserving only one wife and maidservant to a man; and when it was taken, Darius ordered three thousand of the principal inhabitants to be crucified⁵. And in much such language is the destruction of mystical Babylon expressed, when God shall 'kill her children with death; her plagues shall come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine' (Revelation 2:23; 18:8)." Govett leans on some of the same Scriptures and says: "From which and similar passages the proof is convincing that the Babylon of the Old Testament is identical with that of the New." Luther says that the Second Coming will come upon the arrogant in a similar way, and will be an unexpected shock. ¶ They shall come upon thee in their perfection for the multitude of thy sorceries, [and] for the great abundance of thine enchantments. The Targum (Ⲛ) adds, "notwithstanding" to modify the comments about Babylon's sorceries and enchantments. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "Shall come suddenly on thee, in the midst of thy sorcery, in the full strength of thy mighty enchantments." The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, "All things are come upon thee, because of the multitude of thy sorceries, and for the great hardness of thy enchanters." ¶ Cowles suggests that ⲕⲣⲃ be rendered despite instead of for "the multitude of thy enchantments." So also a number of versions, including Leeser, AMP, CJB, ESV, HCSB, ISV, NASB, Rotherham, and Reina Valera 1960. Lowth, for ⲕⲣⲃⲙⲉⲛⲉ prefers to lean on the LXX (Ⲯ) and Syriac (Ⲫ) and instead of perfection has suddenly. If it be perfection, it means to me that while Babylon was unrighteous in the punishments she meted out, God's punishment are always perfect (D&C 19:2b–13).

⁵ Faussett rather has, impaled.

10 For thou hast trusted in thy wickedness: thou hast said, None seeth me. Thy wisdom and thy knowledge, it hath perverted thee; and thou hast said in thine heart, I [am], and none else beside me.

✓ or, caused thee to turn away

For thou hast trusted in thy wickedness: thou hast said, None seeth me. The Targum (Ⲛ) has for the last clause, "None seeth thee (the Royal Polyglot reads ⲛⲓ, 'me')." The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "Confiding in thy wickedness thou indeed saidst; 'I am and there is none else.'" The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, "And thou best trusted in thy wickedness, and hast said: There is none that seeth me." The Masoretic text (ⲙ) has in thy wickedness, ⲕⲣⲃⲙⲉⲛⲉ, while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲙ) has in thy knowledge, ⲕⲣⲃⲙⲉⲛⲉ. ¶ Ibn Ezra says: "The prophet here alludes to that rationalism which denies the existence of God." Delitzsch well suggests that by saying none seeth me, Babylon was "thus suppressing the voice of conscience." Yet we read: "And the rebellious shall be pierced with much sorrow; for their iniquities shall be spoken upon the housetops, and their secret acts shall be revealed" (D&C 1:3, see also Luke 12:2–3). ¶ All those who trust in wickedness—or "astrology, divination, and magic" (Gill), or the occult (Skinner), or in evil in anyway—will be disappointed for "Behold, I say unto you, wickedness never was happiness" (Alma 41:10b). Once again, we must remember the underlying theme of leaving mystic Babylon and coming to the light of Zion. The Prophet Joseph Smith taught: "There was nothing indecorous in the proceeding of the Lord's prophets in any age; neither had the apostles nor prophets in the apostles"

day anything of this kind. Paul says, ‘Ye may all prophesy, one by one; and if anything be revealed to another let the first hold his peace, for the spirit of the prophets is subject to the prophets;’ but here we find that the prophets are subject to the spirit, and falling down, have twitchings, tumblings, and faintings through the influence of that [evil] spirit, being entirely under its control. Paul says, ‘Let everything be done decently and in order,’ but here we find the greatest disorder and indecency in the conduct of both men and women, as above described.”⁶ We know the Holy Ghost imparts peace and light; not darkness. And returning to the words of the Prophet Joseph Smith, “... nothing is a greater injury to the children of men than to be under the influence of a false spirit when they think they have the Spirit of God.”⁷ ¶ Thy wisdom and thy knowledge, it hath perverted thee; and thou hast said in thine heart, I [am], and none else beside me. The Targum (ⲧ) has for the first clause, “Thy wisdom and thy knowledge have corrupted thee.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Know thou, the consciousness of these things and thy whoredom shall be thy shame. Thou indeed saidst in thy heart, ‘I am and there is none else.’” Instead of perverted, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has misled (Lamsa) / deviated (BPE), much like the margin ||. The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “Thy wisdom, and thy knowledge, this hath deceived thee. And thou best said in thy heart: I am, and besides me there is no other.” ¶ וְדַעְתָּךְ וְחִכְמָתְךָ, thy wisdom and thy knowledge. Henderson suggests: “Babylon was proud, not only of her political wisdom, but also of her astronomical and mythological science. דַּעַת, γνῶσις⁸, in connexion, as here, with חִכְמָה superior knowledge, i. e., that of the [false] gods, &c.” ¶ Henderson has, regarding it hath perverted thee, שׁוֹבְתָהּ: שׁוֹב [from the root, to turn, שׁוֹב] is used both in a good and a bad sense; here, as ISAIAH 57:7⁹, it indicates a determined apostasy from the true God” (emphasis added). As we have said before, at every instance we decide to either turn [שׁוֹב] to the Lord or give Him our back, i.e., turn away [שׁוֹב] from Him. BBE translates this expression: “... by your wisdom and knowledge you have been turned out of the way”; YLT, “Thy wisdom and thy knowledge, It is turning thee back.” ¶ Young says: “No one is seeing me] Babylon did not speak these words aloud, but thought them in her heart.” ¶ And none else beside me. Similarly to what was noted above, Delitzsch writes: “אֵין signifies absolute non-existence [here] ... The form in which the presumption of Babylon expresses itself, viz., ‘I (am it), and I am absolutely nothing further,’ sounds like self-deification, by the side of similar self-assertion on the part of Jehovah (ISAIAH 45:5–6; 14:21–22; 46:9).”

11 Therefore shall evil come upon thee; thou shalt not know from whence it riseth: ♀ and mischief shall fall upon thee; thou shalt not be able to put it off: ♀ and desolation shall come upon thee suddenly, [which] thou shalt not know.

- ✓ the morning thereof
- ✓ ♀ expiate

Young points out the rhythmical ah (אָה) endings of the three calamities that will befall Babylon: evil, mischief, and desolation, i.e., רָעָה, חָהָה, and שׁוֹאָה. Baltzer observes about these (אָה) endings: “One can probably say that this is a triad of terms, but that these are treated as female personifications.” ¶ Therefore shall evil come upon thee; thou shalt not know from whence it riseth: The Targum (ⲧ) has, for the second clause, thou shalt not know how to “deprecate it” (Pauli), “pray against it” (Stenning), and “how to beseech” (Chilton) for לְמַבְעִי.¹⁰ The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “But upon thee shall come destruction, and thou shalt not know—a pit; and into it thou shalt fall.” Related to the margin ||, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has morning (BPE) / early morning (Lamsa), in association to when the evil would come upon her. ¶ Skinner well says: “evil” is the same word as ‘wickedness’ in ISAIAH 47:10; the play on the two meanings of the word is intentional.” Wickedness, in thy wickedness, בְּרָעָתְךָ (from the root, רָעָה), and here in ISAIAH 47:11 verse: רָעָה. Henderson explains that: “... after a night of calamity [speaking figuratively]” there will be no dawn of reprieve. Gill, following the margin || has: “thou shalt not know the morning of it” that is, on what day, or at what time, it will be.” Following the margin ||, Cowles suggests: “Since calamity suggests darkness and often appears in the scriptures under this figure, the probable sense of this phrase is, Thou shalt see no dawn beyond it. To you, no day shall follow this night of ruin. ¶ And mischief shall fall upon thee; thou shalt not be able to put it off: The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Yes, upon thee shall

⁶ The Latter-day Saints’ Millennial Star, Volume III, No. 3, July 1842, p. 40 (pp. 36 ff., Try The Spirits).

⁷ The Latter-day Saints’ Millennial Star, Volume III, No. 3, July 1842, p. 38 (pp. 36 ff., Try The Spirits).

⁸ γνῶσις, “comprehension or intellectual grasp of something” (BDAG).

⁹ ASV renders it: “... and he went on backsliding [שׁוֹבְתָהּ] in the way of his heart” (ISAIAH 57:17b).

¹⁰ To petition, request, beg (CAL Targum Lexicon), from בָּעִי.

come misery, of which thou shalt not be able to rid thyself.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And calamity shall fall violently upon thee, which thou canst not keep off.” ¶ McFadyen explains that all of these troubles that will beset Babylon, she will not be able to be put away through charms. Wade explains: “put it away] Literally, to propitiate it (cf. the Latin expiare prodigia), i.e., to avert it by propitiatory offerings. Diodorus Siculus (2:29) states : ‘The Chaldeans are devoted to divination, and predict future occurrences, of which they seek to avert the unfavourable and to promote the favourable by means of purifications or sacrifices or spells.’” The only true atonement can come through the Lord Jesus Christ. ¶ And desolation shall come upon thee suddenly, [which] thou shalt not know. The LXX (G) reads, “And destruction shall come upon thee suddenly of which thou wilt have no apprehension.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the first clause, “Misery shall come upon thee suddenly.” ¶ Lowth observes: “it is necessary to give the reader an exact verbal translation of the whole verse:—

‘And evil shall come upon thee, thou shalt not know how to deprecate it;

And mischief shall fall upon thee, thou shalt not be able to expiate it;

And destruction shall come suddenly upon thee, thou shalt not know’——

What? ... But as the ancient versions retain no traces of it, and a wide field lies open to uncertain conjecture, I have not attempted to fill up the chasm [or ellipsis—GB] ... which I cannot with any assurance pretend to supply.” Veiled threats are powerful, and perhaps this ellipsis is supposed to be filled out by the guilty party.

12 Stand now with thine enchantments, and with the multitude of thy sorceries, wherein thou hast laboured from thy youth; if so be thou shalt be able to profit, if so be thou mayest prevail.

Stand now with thine enchantments, and with the multitude of thy sorceries, wherein thou hast laboured from thy youth. The LXX (G) reads, “Persist now in thine incantations and in thy manifold sorcery, which thou hast learned from thy youth.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has thy enchanters instead of thine enchantments. The Masoretic text (M) has stand now, (N) is often translated as I pray thee, or some other admonition or entreaty, so one might also render it, stand, I pray thee, see Gesenius, BDB). This whole verse, as most exegetes point out, is extremely sarcastic. ¶ Nägelsbach and several others suggest that from thy youth is an allusion to the earliest days of the formation of Babylon as a nation. ¶ If so be thou shalt be able to profit, if so be thou mayest prevail. The Targum (T) only contains the second of these two clauses. The LXX (G) reads, “If thou canst be benefited by them.” Instead of prevail, the Peshitta (S) has strengthen yourself (Lamsa) / be strengthened (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “If so be it may profit thee any thing, or if thou mayst become stronger.” ¶ The Lord is challenging Babylon. Keith says: “[Their diviners] are tauntingly urged to deliver Babylon if they could.” These verses are similar to the taunt we find in 1 Kings 18 addressed at the Priests of Baal.

13 Thou art wearied in the multitude of thy counsels. Let now the astrologers, the stargazers, the monthly prognosticators, stand up, and save thee from [these things] that shall come upon thee.

✓ viewers of the heavens

✓ ✓ that give knowledge concerning the months

Thou art wearied in the multitude of thy counsels. The LXX (G) reads, “Thou hast wearied thyself with thy counsels.” Instead of counsels, the Peshitta (S) has thoughts (Lamsa) / conspiring (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Thou hast failed in the multitude of thy counsels.” ¶ Although Cheyne does not think so himself, he refers to Sayce (Transactions of Society of Biblical Archeology, 3:150), who believes that “the ‘consultations’ ... are astrological ones.” Keith explains: “The three classes [of diviners] enumerated here are generally supposed to be: (1) Those who divided the heavens for the purpose of auguries; (2) Those who judged from the appearances, the conjunctions, the colour, &c., of the stars; and, (3) Those who foretold what events might be expected in the course of each month. The term astrologers occurs only here. It signifies literally, dividers of the heavens.” Birks has: “These words describe the habitual state and character of Babylon before her calamity. She has abounded in wise men, diviners, interpreters of dreams, observers of the heavens, and has consulted them even to satiety. Such has been her wealth in counsellors, that to use them all has been even a toil and weariness. The clause ... portrays the character of the people in days of prosperity, full of expedients of human science and worldly wisdom.” ¶ Let now the astrologers, the stargazers, the monthly prognosticators, stand up, and save thee from [these things] that shall come upon thee. The Targum (T) has: “Let them now rise up, and save thee, who are familiar with the Zodiac of the heavens, who look at the stars, who make known appointed seasons: deceiving thee, saying, Thus it shall happen unto thee each month.” The LXX (6) reads, “Let the astrologers now stand up and save thee—let them who gaze on the stars tell thee what is instantly coming upon thee.” The Peshitta (5) has something like, “Let now the Chaldeans stand up and liberate you, those who observe the heavens and at the stars; let them foretell by the moon the things that shall come upon you.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Let now the astrologers stand and save thee, they that gazed at the stars, and counted the months, that from them they might tell the things that shall come to thee.” Instead of the Masoretic text (11), astrologers (or, dividers [of the] heavens, הַדּוֹבֵר שָׁמַיִם), the DSS 1QIsa^a (10) has *binder*¹¹ (i.e., enchanter) [of the] heavens, חֹבֶרֶת שָׁמַיִם. The Masoretic text (11) has stargazers (i.e., *the gazers in stars*¹²), הַזֹּהֲרִים בְּכּוֹכְבֵּימַיִם, while the DSS 1QIsa^a (10) has and stargazers (i.e., and the gazers in stars, וְהַזֹּהֲרִים בְּכּוֹכְבֵּימַיִם). ¶ Jenour speaks about the irrationality of the horoscope: “... founded on the absurd idea that the events of a person’s life are connected, in an inexplicable manner, with the particular aspect of the stars and planets at the moment of his birth, so that, if this were known, his future destiny might be predicted. Hence, when a woman was about to be delivered, they were accustomed to regard the stars with the greatest attention, in order that they might be able to prognosticate the fate of the new-born infant.” Wade writes: “Babylonian astrology became so famous that Chaldaei became amongst the Romans a synonym for all diviners who told fortunes by the stars (see Juv. Sat. 6:553, 10:94 ; cf. also Hor. Od. 1. 11: 2, Babylonios ... numeros).” Rawlinson says of astrology that “[it] leads ... into a labyrinth of absurdities.” Barnes calls it an “absurd science.” ¶ Elder McConkie says: “In effect a sorcerer worships Satan rather than God and uses such power as Satan can give him in a vain attempt to imitate the power of God.”¹³ I feel that horoscopes are satanic counterfeits of Patriarchal Blessings.¹⁴

¹¹ From הִבְרָה, binding “applied to incantations,” or putting on spells on serpents or knots (see, Gesenius, הִבְרָה—2), or charm, spell, enchantment (HALOT, הִבְרָה—2).

¹² The word for stars, or rather the stars (Hah-ko-kau-beam, the Prophet Joseph Smith’s transliteration for הַזֹּהֲרִים בְּכּוֹכְבֵּימַיִם), should be very familiar to LDS, as we read it in Abraham 2, Facsimile 5, Pearl of Great Price.

¹³ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. Mormon Doctrine (2nd ed.), pp., 56, 747.

¹⁴ Patriarchal Blessings are inspired revelations pronounced through a Patriarch about possibilities. Patriarchal Blessings include a declaration of lineage; as well as blessings, cautions and admonitions to help us endure to the end in righteous living. All blessings are conditional to worthy living. I have a testimony of the inspiration of Patriarchal Blessings. I find it interesting that where true religion is absent from the lives of individuals, superstition takes its place. So 14 Behold, they shall be as stubble; the fire shall burn them; they shall not deliver themselves ~ from the power of the flame: [there shall] not [be] a coal to warm at, [nor] fire to sit before it.

✓ their souls

Behold, they shall be as stubble; the fire shall burn them. The Targum (12) has, “Behold, they shall be weak as stubble. The nations which are as strong as fire shall consume them (the Royal Polyglot reads שִׁעֲיִינוּ, ‘each of the nations shall consume them’).” The LXX (6) reads, “Behold like brambles on a fire they shall all be burned up.” ¶ Wordsworth has: “the fire shall burn them] When Cyrus and his forces made an irruption into Babylon, he ordered them to set fire to the houses, which were very combustible, the doors being made of palm wood, smeared over with bitumen, and the roofs covered with reeds {Xenophon, Cyropaedia 7:5). So it is foretold by St. John in the Apocalypse, concerning the mystical Babylon, that it will be burnt with fire.” Cowles has: “Instead of affording to Babylon the least help, these magicians are themselves awfully consumed. They are as stubble; fire devours them. They cannot even save themselves; much less the nation and the people. The last clause seems to mean that the fire of this conflagration brings all the mischiefs and calamities of a fire with none of its uses. This fire is not the sort before which one may warm himself or sit by it to enjoy its light. It is simply a terrible conflagration, bearing nothing but destruction in its sweep.” As for stubble, Rawlinson says: “A favorite metaphor with Isaiah for extreme weakness and incapacity for resistance. In ISAIAH 5:24 it is connected, as here, with fire.” ¶ They shall not deliver themselves from the power of the flame: The Targum (12) has, “They shall not deliver themselves from the hand of the slayers.” The LXX (6) reads, “And shall not deliver their own life from the flame.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has flames instead of flame. ¶ Richard D. Draper of BYU observes: “John’s harlot [i.e., Babylon in the Book of Revelation—GB] is no commoner ... she represents a priestly class. The Levitical punishment for adultery or harlotry for the daughter of a priest was burning (see Leviticus 21:9) ... Babylon, as apostate—even also Ironside, who says: “Wherever people turn away from the one, true and living GOD and refuse the Word of GOD, they are always ready to turn to other things ... Astronomy is an exact science, astrology is a fraud, a fake. Yet how many people give heed to it ... Men still believe in these worse than follies. They turn away from the Word of the living GOD to turn unto fables.”

idolatrous religion—deserves her fate.”¹⁵ ¶ [There shall] not [be] a coal to warm at, [nor] fire to sit before it. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “There shall be no remnant nor escaped of them, yea, not a place, in which one might deliver himself.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Seeing thou hast coals of fire, sit upon them; will they give thee relief?” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “They shall not deliver themselves from the power of the flames: there are no coals wherewith they may be warmed, nor fire, that they may sit thereat.” ¶ Removing some of the ellipsis, HCSB renders it: “This is not a coal for warming themselves, or a fire to sit beside!” Wade explains: “it shall not be a coal, etc.] An ironical litotes,¹⁶ suggestive of the real magnitude of the fire which will be kindled for Babylon.” As has already been said, wood is useful for controlled burning; stubble burns fast and hot and is useless for warming oneself or for cooking.

15 Thus shall they be unto thee with whom thou hast laboured, [even] thy merchants, from thy youth: they shall wander every one to his quarter; none shall save thee.

Thus shall they be unto thee with whom thou hast laboured, [even] thy merchants, from thy youth: The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Thus shall the workers of thy lies be in thee, with whom thou wast occupied from thy youth.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Thou hast wearied thyself with this traffic from thy youth.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “Such are all the things become to thee, in which thou best labored.” ¶ Cowles explains: “Such is the doom of those with whom thou hast wrought even to weariness to find help from them for thyself. The fire of God’s judgments has utterly consumed them.” Whitehouse says, “If we adhere ... to the reading of our Hebrew text, ‘merchants,’ we should understand the term as referring to the magicians and soothsayers who trafficked in their arts with the deluded Babylonians.” This comment fits well with those about mystical Babylon, and the importance of escaping the grips of the adversary. So also Wade, leaning on and Duhm, Marti and Kittel: “Babylon’s commerce was famous. But the context seems to require a reference not to trade but to astrology or sorcery.” ¶ They shall wander every one to his quarter; none shall save thee. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “The princes of thy power, shall go into captivity; each one straight before his face, none shall save thee.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “The men have wandered away, everyone to his own home; but for thee there shall be no safety.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “Thy merchants from thy youth, every one hath erred in his own way, there is none that can save thee.” ¶ The expression, “They shall wonder each one to his quarter¹⁷,” means that the nations of the world would have nothing to do with trying to help Babylon in her troubles, despite the fact that they had been involved in commercial intercourse with her in the past. It is as when everyone runs to his own abode and leaves the battle field. Lowth warns: “... with equal truth, all that contributes to the commercial importance of New York, Philadelphia, Boston, London, or Paris, are under the control of God. By some secret causes he could make these cities a wide scene of ruins; and they may be, if they are like Babylon and Tyre and Tadmor in their character, yet like them in their doom. They should feel that the sources of their prosperity and their preservation are not in themselves, but in the favor and protection of God. Virtue, justice, and piety, will better preserve them than wealth; and without these they must be, in spite of their commercial advantages, what the once celebrated cities of antiquity now are.”

FIRST POSTED: 13 September 2015

¹⁵ Draper, Richard D., Opening the Seven Seals: The Visions of John the Revelator, p.201.

¹⁶ Litotes or understatement. To say it will not be a small fire to mean it will be a very large one. Too large to warm oneself or sit beside such as one would do at a campsite.

¹⁷ Alexander and several others explain it that literally it means: “Each to the own quarter, side, direction; substantially synonymous with אֶל-עֵבֶר פָּנָיו (Ezekiel 1:9, 12), and other phrases, all meaning straight before him, without turning to the right hand or the left.” Rotherham has, “every man stagger straight onwards.” Or, toward his own face. Here in ISAIAH 47:15, we have אִישׁ לְעֵבֶרוֹ תָּעוּ, each man wondering his way.

Isaiah 48

Israel is called out on her hypocrisy. The Lord reminds His people what He has done and will yet do for Israel, and what He would have done more if she had been obedient. The purpose of ISAIAH 48, says Westermann, is to lead Israel to repentance. A great many of the exegetes have pointed us to similar invitations for repentance found in various passages throughout the book of Ezekiel. God can see the future as easily as the past. The Lord has made marvelous promises to us, including the first and second comings of our Lord. We need to lean on these promises and not get distracted. Luther well says, “It is characteristic of the ungodly to snatch us away from the true promises and direct us to false ones.” We must hear the word, turn to the Lord, flee and go out of Babylon, draw near to Him, tell and declare His word to others. All this we need to do with great joy and singing. Nyman points out that this is the first chapter of Isaiah quoted in the Book of Mormon.

vv. 1–8. Israel has been hypocritical—she has only shown the outward signs of discipleship. The Lord is able to predict the future. Israel is accused of being stiffnecked. The Lord is offended when people are ungrateful (i.e., and credit themselves or others instead of God).

1 ¶ HEARKEN and hear ye this, O house of Jacob, ~~which~~ who are called by the name of Israel, and are come forth out of the waters of Judah, or out of the waters of baptism, who ~~which~~ swear by the name of the LORD, and make mention of the God of Israel, [~~but~~] yet they swear not in truth nor in righteousness.

HEARKEN and hear this, O house of Jacob, who are called by the name of Israel, and are come forth out of the waters of Judah, or out of the waters of baptism.

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Hear ye this, O house of Jacob, who are called by the name of Israel, and are come forth from the stock¹ of Judah.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Hear these things, ye house of Jacob, ye who are called by the name of Israel! ye who are descendants of Juda!” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) has loins of Judah (Lamsa) yet the BPE (Ⓢ) has waters of Judah. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “Hear ye these things, O house of Jacob, you that are called by the name of Israel, and are come forth out of the waters of Juda.” Delitzsch explains that in ISAIAH 48:1–2 the Lord summons Judah, after which He begins His address to them. ¶ Several exegetes mention the frequent use of the word hearken, or synonymous of the same. The chapter opens with an invitation to hearken (listen ye), שמעו, ¶ יהודה. Whitehouse says:

“waters of Judah” is very strange and hardly intelligible.” Rabbi Ibn Ezra and most exegetes suggest that the waters of Judah are meant as another way of saying from the loins of Judah, i.e., descendants of Judah. Rawlinson has: “Compare with Psalm 68:26, ‘Ye are of the fountain of Israel,’ marginal || rendering.” So also Skinner, who mentions but then questions the common view that this verse is related to the ancestors of Judah, “This clause cannot be explained in a satisfactory manner ... there remains the difficulty that Judah is nowhere named as the ancestor of the people.” ¶ Indeed! We instead find the answer to the enigma in the Book of Mormon. There it is clear that this is an allusion to baptism. The Jewish Encyclopedia confirms the use of baptism in ancient days: “Baptism: A religious ablution signifying purification or consecration. The natural method of cleansing the body by washing and bathing in water was always customary in Israel (see Ablution, Bathing) ... According to rabbinical teachings, which dominated even during the existence of the Temple (Pes. viii. 8), Baptism, next to circumcision and sacrifice, was an absolutely necessary condition to be fulfilled by a proselyte to Judaism (Yeb. 46b, 47b; Ker. 9a; 'Ab. Zarah 57a; Shab. 135a; Yer. Kid. iii. 14, 64d).” This same article explains the pouring out of water before the Lord has reference to Israel pouring “out their hearts in repentance.” The article from The Jewish Encyclopedia continues: “The bathing in the water is to constitute a rebirth, wherefore ‘the ger is like a child just born’ (Yeb. 48b); and he must bathe ‘in the name of God’—‘leshem shamayim’—that is, assume the yoke of God’s kingdom imposed upon him by the one who leads him to Baptism (‘maṭbil’), or else he is not admitted into Judaism (Gerim. vii. 8).” Finally, “... in the Messianic time God will Himself pour water of purification upon Israel.”²

² Singer, I. (Ed.). (1901–1906). In The Jewish Encyclopedia: A Descriptive Record of the History, Religion, Literature, and Customs of the Jewish People from the Earliest Times to the Present Day, 12

¹ Family, clan (CAL lexicon), יְהוּדָה.

¶ While Israel had received baptism as an external ordinance, they had not been sincere. They had not poured out their hearts in repentance. We have a first thought with an implied ellipsis, followed by a parallel idea: (1) Israel had shown the outward tokens of contrition through baptism—and here we have an ellipsis—yet their hearts had not poured out in repentance. (2) Israel had sworn and oath to the Lord, but this oath had not been in truth nor in righteousness. In other words, we have an external baptism, but not the waters of repentance; an external confession, but not done in truth and righteousness. In ISAIAH 48:2, a third example is given of the variance between the claim and the reality: (3) Judah declares to live in a holy city but has profaned herself (ellipsis) by not leaning on the Lord. Yet the Lord would soon speak comfort to Judah and Israel. Such as: “In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the LORD thy Redeemer” (ISAIAH 54:8). ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie spoke of the ancient origins of baptism, “All of the apostles and prophets had the gospel; all were baptized and all performed baptisms. We have scriptures that speak of baptism in connection with Enoch, Noah, Abraham, and Moses (Moses 6:47–68; 8:19–24; JST, Genesis 17:3–7; 1 Corinthians 10:1–4.) ... The very law of Moses itself is ‘the gospel of repentance and of baptism, and the remission of sins’ (D&C 84:27). The molten sea, standing on twelve brazen oxen in Solomon’s Temple, was a baptismal font ... When John the Baptist cried repentance and invited all Jewry to report at Bethabara and have their sins washed away in the Jordan, he was following a familiar pattern. The Jews of that day understood and practiced the law of baptism. It was a normal and natural thing for penitent persons to flock to John and desire immersion at his hands.”³ ¶ Who swear by the name of the LORD, and make mention of the God of Israel, yet they swear not in truth nor in righteousness. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “With whom he hath made a covenant in the name of the Lord, the God of Israel, that the remembrance of them shall not cease. Shall not His Word stand in truth and righteousness?” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Ye who swear by the name of the Lord God of Israel, making mention of it, but not with truth, nor with righteousness.” ¶ Barnes quotes a similar sentiment in Jeremiah: “And though they say, The LORD liveth; surely they swear falsely” (Jeremiah 5:2). Cowles summarizes: “This verse strikes the key-note of this chapter in respect to the point of view in which God’s people are contemplated. They are insincere and untruthful in their religious professions.” We can certainly liken these Scriptures unto us. Are we true disciples⁴ of the Lord Jesus Christ? ¶ Judah. Nägelsbach observes regarding the physical delivery from former Babylon: “The promise of deliverance by Cyrus relates only to the people of the kingdom of Judah.” The lower two tribes, Judah and Benjamin (and some of Levi) constituted Judah.

2 ~~For~~ Nevertheless, they call themselves of the holy city, ~~and~~ but they do not stay themselves upon the God of Israel, who is the LORD of hosts; yea, the Lord of Hosts [is] his name.

Nevertheless, they call themselves of the holy city. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For their portion is in the holy city.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And who stay themselves on the name of this holy city.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲯ) has, “For they have taken the name of the holy city.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “For they are called of the holy city.” ¶ Young says, the introductory Ⲯ has puzzled commentators. The Hebrew word Ⲯ is here translated by the KJV as for, but the better translation is nevertheless. Barnes, who uses a similar word, explains: “The word rendered ‘for’ here, Ⲯ, means, as it often does, although; and the sense is, although they call themselves of the holy city, they do not worship God in sincerity and truth.” LBLA and NBLH also use aunque, which means although in Spanish. Two of the synonyms of although are notwithstanding and nonetheless. RV1995 uses precisely nevertheless, the Spanish sin embargo. Cowles says that one option is to consider this verse as “a continued description of the insincere professions of the people.” ¶ But they do not stay themselves upon the God of Israel, who is the LORD of hosts; yea, the Lord of Hosts [is] his name. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And their confidence is in the God of Israel; the Lord of hosts is His name.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And rely for support on the God of Israel, whose name is the Lord of Hosts.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “And are established upon the God of Israel: the Lord of hosts is his name.” Is there not a great similarity between these verses in Isaiah and those in Helaman 4 regarding the Nephite nation? “Now this great loss of the Nephites, and the great slaughter which was among them, would not have happened had it not been for their wickedness and their abomination which was among them; yea, and it was among those also who professed to belong to the church of God. And it was because of the pride of their hearts, because of their exceeding Volumes (2:499). Also available on-line, URL accessed 13Sep2015: <http://www.jewishencyclopedia.com/articles/2456-baptism>.

³ McConkie, Bruce R. A New Witness for the Articles of Faith. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1985, pp. 250–251.

⁴ See Elder Robert D. Hales, “Becoming a Disciple of Our Lord Jesus Christ,” April 2017 General Conference.

riches, yea, it was because of their oppression to the poor, withholding their food from the hungry, withholding their clothing from the naked, and smiting their humble brethren upon the cheek, making a mock of that which was sacred, denying the spirit of prophecy and of revelation, murdering, plundering, lying, stealing, committing adultery, rising up in great contentions, and deserting away into the land of Nephi, among the Lamanites—And because of this their great wickedness, and their boastings in their own strength, they were left in their own strength; therefore they did not prosper, but were afflicted and smitten, and driven before the Lamanites, until they had lost possession of almost all their lands” (Helaman 4:11–13). ¶ Most exegetes agree and often use the word hypocritical in relation to these two opening verses. The LDS Bible Dictionary defines hypocrisy, in part, as: “... one who pretends to be religious when he is not.” Elder Uchtdorf taught: “The Savior was understanding and compassionate with sinners whose hearts were humble and sincere. But He rose up in righteous anger against hypocrites ...—those who tried to appear righteous in order to win the praise, influence, and wealth of the world, all the while oppressing the people they should have been blessing. The Savior compared them to ‘whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men’s bones, and of all uncleanness.’ In our day, the Lord has similarly strong words for priesthood holders who try to ‘cover [their] sins, or to gratify [their] pride, [or their] vain ambition.’ When they do this, He said, ‘the heavens withdraw themselves; the Spirit of the Lord is grieved; and when it is withdrawn, Amen to the priesthood or the authority of that man.’ [Yet with] patience and persistence, even the smallest act of discipleship or the tiniest ember of belief can become a blazing bonfire of a consecrated life. In fact, that’s how most bonfires begin—as a simple spark.” ¶ The Lord of hosts, יהוה צבאות. Kay suggests, “[This name], was especially associated with the ark and temple; in other words, with the holiness of God (cp. 2Samuel 6:2; Psalm 24:3, 10).” These verses in Psalm 24 are among my all-time favorites: “Who [מִי] shall ascend into the hill of the LORD? or who [מִי] shall stand in his holy place? ... Who [מִי] is this King of glory? The LORD of hosts, he is the King of glory. Selah.”

3 Behold, I have declared the former things from the beginning; and they went forth out of my mouth, and I shewed them. I did show [them] suddenly and they came to pass.

Behold, I have declared the former things from the beginning. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Oh. I have already told you former things.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) only has, “The former things of old I have declared.” ¶ Regarding ISAAH 48:3, Nägelsbach says: “This is the seventh time the Prophet presents this argument.” And it is a truly important argument. Barnes says: “That is, in former times I have predicted future events by the, prophets, which have come to pass as they were foretold. Though the fulfillment might have appeared to be long delayed, yet it came to pass at the very time, showing it to be an exact fulfillment of the prophecy.” ¶ In Matthew we read: “Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought [in Greek, do not fret—GB, μεριμνᾶτε (see μεριμνάω). “① to be apprehensive, have anxiety, be anxious, be {unduly} concerned” (BDAG).] ... [for the things associated with our mortality] ... O ye of little faith? ... for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. Take therefore no thought [once again, do not fret, from μεριμνήσητε] for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil [עָוֹן], not moral evil intended here, but the little and big misfortunes associated with being alive, see ISAAH 45:7, κακία, 3rd definition, “a state involving difficult circumstances, trouble, misfortune” (BDAG).] thereof” (Matthew 6:25, 30b, 32b–34). About two weeks after I wrote the comments above, I found this from Martin Luther: “Therefore He is singularly urgent that we must wait patiently and cling to the promises. When it comes to this counsel, I, Martin Luther, am the weakest of all.” Except, Luther wrote his comments regarding ISAAH 48:15. I am constantly asking Heavenly Father for reassurances and He patiently provides them for me. As I have mentioned elsewhere in this book, this is an area of weakness I hope will someday become a strength. ¶ And they went forth out of my mouth, and I shewed them. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “And they have gone forth from my Word, and I announced them.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “When they proceeded from my mouth and were published.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, for the second clause, “And I have made them to be heard.” The Lord has not hidden His words or His works. ¶ I did show them them suddenly. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “I did them speedily and they came to pass.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “I did them suddenly and they came to pass.” ¶ Faussett has: “They came to pass so unexpectedly that the prophecy could not have resulted from mere human sagacity.” Perhaps the notion of suddenly is also related to the scripture: “Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the LORD, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in:

behold, he shall come, saith the LORD of hosts” (Malachi 3:1). As President Hugh B. Brown testified: “The scriptures are replete with predictions and warnings concerning [Christ’s appearance again on the earth at the Second Coming].” So also many prophecies that have been fulfilled and will be fulfilled. It is a matter of just choosing any one of them, “For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled” (Matthew 5:18).⁵

4 And I did it because I knew that thou [art] obstinate, and thy neck [is] an iron sinew, and thy brow brass;

✓ hard

And I did it because I knew that thou art obstinate. The Targum (ܬ) has, “I knew (literally, ‘it was revealed before me’) that thou wouldst be a rebel.” The LXX (Θ) reads, “I know that thou art of an intractable temper.” The Douay-Rheims (ϐ) has, “For I knew that thou art stubborn.” ¶ Birks says: “The foreseen stubbornness of Israel was one reason why the predictions were made so clear, in order to shame them into the acknowledgment of God’s hand. [And, the following, with an allusion to the higher critics who deny that Prophets are permitted to see into the future—GB:] Those who treat them as mere guesses, or forgeries after the event, share in the blindness here so strongly condemned.” ¶ And thy neck is an iron sinew [וְנִיד בְּרִזָּל עֲרֶפֶךָ], and thy brow brass [וּמִצֵּחַךְ נְחוֹשֶׁת]. The Targum (ܬ) has, “And thy neck would be as hard iron, and thy brow (literally, ‘the place of thine eyes’) strong as brass.” The LXX (Θ) reads, “That thy neck is a sinew of iron and thy brow, brass.” The Douay-Rheims (ϐ) has forehead instead of brow. ¶ Cowles says: “The special reasons assigned here for the mission of the prophets and for the messages they bore, reveal a degree of apostasy that is startling. Because the people were morally hardened so that their neck was an iron sinew (stiff-necked), and their brow unyielding as brass: lest, if God had not predicted the events beforehand they would have attributed them to their idol gods.” Faussett suggests a string of interesting scriptures: In Ezekiel 3 we read, “But the house of Israel will not hearken unto thee; for they will not hearken unto me: for all the house of Israel are impudent⁶ [HEB, stiff of forehead] and hardhearted [חֲזָק־מִצַּח וְקָשִׁי-לֵב הָמָּה]. Behold, I have made thy face strong against their faces, and thy forehead strong against their foreheads. As an adamant harder than flint have I made thy forehead: fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house” (Ezekiel 3:7–9): “They are all grievous revolvers, walking with slanders: they are brass and iron [נְחֹשֶׁת וּבְרִזָּל]; they are all corrupters” (Jeremiah 6:28); “Therefore the showers have been withholden, and there hath been no latter rain; and thou hadst a whore’s [lit., female whore] forehead [וּמִצֵּחַ אִשָּׁה זֹנֵה], thou refusedst to be ashamed” (Jeremiah 3:3). ¶ So Gill writes: “and thy brow brass] impudent, not ashamed of sin, nor blushing at it, refusing to receive correction for it, having a whore’s forehead.” So we have a combination of stiff-neckedness and shamelessness. Rabbi Ibn Ezra has: “And thy brow brass. And thou dost not blush, as if thy forehead were brass.” Keith writes: “The obstinacy of Israel in refusing the yoke of God, which is easy, is described in language borrowed from the refusal of its yoke by the bullock. The expression ‘the brow brass,’ denotes the insensibility, the want of shame, the unblushing effrontery, with which the nation pursued sin.” Keith continues: “‘Ye stout-hearted’ they are called; ‘They refused to hearken, and pulled away the shoulder, and stopped their ears, that they should not hear. Yea, they made their hearts as an adamant stone, lest they should hear’ (Zechariah 7:10, 12).” Faussett points us to Acts: “Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye” (Acts 7:51). ¶ Some exegetes seem to bask in their comments against Israel. As I was purchasing some books in a second-hand Christian bookstore a couple of decades ago, the clerk asked me if I was Jewish in the most shame on you fashion. How different the kindness of the Lord, who after making His comments of reproof, comes back with a word of consolation (such we see, for instance, in ISAIAH 48:12). The Savior Himself said: “Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again” (Matthew 7:1–2, but also read verses 3–5).

5 And I have even from the beginning declared [it] to thee; before it came to pass I shewed [it] them thee; and I showed them for fear lest thou shouldst say--Mine idol hath done them, and my graven image, and my molten image hath commanded them.

⁵ The yud (יוד) and tittle (κεραία) as representing the smallest letter of the Hebrew alphabet, the י, as well as the little horn, hook or projection (BDAG) in the Hebrew letters, such as what we find in כ in contrast to כּ.

⁶ Shameless (Webster).

And I have even from the beginning declared to thee; before it came to pass I shewed them thee. The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “Therefore I told thee beforehand what would come upon thee.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “I foretold thee of old, before they came to pass I told thee.” ¶ Ibn Ezra explains: “I foretold the coming events, in order that thou shouldst not say when they happened, that thy idols worshipped by thee in thy land had prepared them, that by their decree the events took place.” Calvin says it shows our ingratitude not to honor God’s prophecies and give Him the credit for them. ¶ And I showed them for fear lest thou shouldst say-- Mine idol hath done them, and my graven image, and my molten image hath commanded them. The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “I published them that thou mightest not say, ‘The idols have done this to me,’ nor say, ‘The graven or molten images have ordered it for me.’” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has plural for idols and graven images. ¶ Birks writes: “Inspired prophecies are the proof of God’s real dominion, in contrast to the reign of mere chance, or of vain idols. The chief ‘molten image’ of modern times is the self-developing force of human intellect.”

6 Thou hast seen and heard ~~see~~ all this; and will ye not ~~ye~~ declare [it] them? And that I have shewed thee new things from this time, even hidden things, and thou didst not know them.

Thou hast seen and heard all this; and will ye not declare them? The Targum (Ⲫ) has, “And as for you, will ye not declare it? Hast thou heard whether that was revealed to any people which was revealed unto thee?” The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “You have heard all these things, and did not yourselves know them.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) begins in first person, I have heard and seen &c., before switching to third person in this clause. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “See now all the things which thou hast heard: but have you declared them?” ¶ Along with the words already mentioned in the notes on ISAIAH 48:1, שמעו, hear ye and שובו, turn ye, the Lord adds, declare ye, הגידו. Indeed, after hearing and turning to the Lord, we must truly declare the word to others.⁷ ¶ In

⁷ “Therefore, verily I say unto you, lift up your voices unto this people; speak the thoughts that I shall put into your hearts, and you shall not be confounded before men; For it shall be given you in the very hour, yea, in the very moment, what ye shall say. But a commandment I give unto you, that ye shall declare whatsoever thing ye declare in my name, in solemnity of heart, in the spirit of meekness, in all things. And I give unto you this promise, that the Doctrine and Covenants the Lord says that our very testimonies may be lost if we do not declare His word: “But with some I am not well pleased, for they will not open their mouths, but they hide the talent which I have given unto them, because of the fear of man. Wo unto such, for mine anger is kindled against them. And it shall come to pass, if they are not more faithful unto me, it shall be taken away, even that which they have” (D&C 60:2–3). ¶ And that I have shewed thee new things from this time, even hidden things, and thou didst not know them. The Targum (Ⲫ) has, “I have shewed thee new things from this time, and hidden things, and thou didst not know them.” The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “But now I have made thee hear new things, which shall hereafter come to pass.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “I have shewn thee new things from that time, and things are kept which thou knowest not.” ¶ Several exegetes suggest that these new things are related to what comes next in Isaiah, a focus on the redeeming power of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Horsley has: “But the manner of the first promulgation of the Gospel, our Saviour’s mode of teaching, his reception among the Jews, his behaviour, the circumstances of his death, the success of the Gospel, and its effect upon the Gentile world, are nowhere so distinctly described in detail as in the subsequent chapters of Isaiah.” Faussett explains: “From this point forward, the prophecies as to Messiah’s first and second advents and the restoration of Israel, have a new circumstantial distinctness ... Hidden] which could not have been guessed by political sagacity (Daniel 2:22, 29; 1 Corinthians 2:9–10).”

7 They are created now, and not from the beginning, even before the day when thou heardest them not they were declared unto thee, lest thou shouldst say-- Behold I knew them.

They are created now, and not from the beginning. The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “Yet hast thou not said, ‘Things done now and not formerly!’” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, for the second clause, “And not of old.” ¶ The situation appeared so quickly and suddenly, as to not have permitted enough time for the sages to have predicted them. ¶ Even before the day when thou heardest them not they were declared unto thee, lest thou shouldst say-- Behold I knew them. The Targum (Ⲫ) has, “Yea, I have not announced them before the day of their coming to pass, lest thou shouldst say, Behold, I have known them.” The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “Yes, never in former days didst thou hear these things. Thou shouldst not say, ‘Indeed I know them.’” The BPE (Ⲫ) has, inasmuch as ye do this the Holy Ghost shall be shed forth in bearing record unto all things whatsoever ye shall say” (D&C 100:5–8).

“Before today thou hast not heard them &c.” ¶ The expression, even before the day, וְלִפְנֵי יוֹם, is an interesting one, as it literally means even before the face of the day; perhaps, before the day where they showed their face or themselves. ¶ Faussett, leaning on Maurer has, “And before the day (of their occurrence) thou hast not heard of them”; that is, by any human acuteness; they are only heard of by the present inspired announcement.”

8 Yea, and thou heardest not; yea, thou knewest not; yea, from that time [that] thine ear was not opened; for I knew that thou wouldest deal very treacherously, and wast called a transgressor from the womb.

Yea, and thou heardest not; yea, thou knewest not; yea, from that time thine ear was not opened. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Yea, thou didst not listen to the words of the prophets; yea, thou didst not accept the instruction of the law; yea, thou didst not incline thine ear to receive the words of the blessings and curses⁸ of my covenant which I made with you in Horeb.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Thou didst neither know nor didst thou believe, nor did I from the beginning open thine ear.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “Thou hast neither heard, nor known, neither was thy ear opened of old.” ¶ Delitzsch points out the triple וְ, yea, or often, also. Gill has: “This, as Kimhi rightly observes, is said by way of reproof; showing that they were so far from knowing these things before the prophecy of them was given out, that when it was, they did not hearken or listen to them; they did not understand them, nor receive and embrace them, but turned a deaf ear to them; their hearts being hardened, and they given up blindness of mind; which was the case of the Jews, even when the Messiah, the antitype of Cyrus, came, and there was a more clear revelation of Gospel truths, as was foretold, ISAIAH 6:9. To this sense is the Targum (Ⲯ), ‘Yea, thou has not heard the words of the prophets; yea, thou hast not received the doctrine of the law; yea, thou hast not inclined thine ear to the words of the blessings and curses of the covenant I made with thee at Horeb.’” ¶ Wordsworth has: “The word ‘that’ before thine is not in the original, and would be better omitted.” So also the Book of Mormon. ¶ Faussett has: “from that time”—Omit ‘that.’ ‘Yea, from the first thine ear did not open itself,’ namely, to obey them [Rosenmüller]. ‘To open the ear’ denotes obedient attention (ISAIAH 50:5); or,

‘was not opened’ to receive them; that is, they were not declared by Me to thee previously, since, if thou hadst been informed of them, such is thy perversity, thou couldst not have been kept in check [Maurer]. In the former view, the sense of the words following is, ‘For I knew that, if I had not foretold the destruction of Babylon so plainly that there could be no perverting of it, thou wouldest have perversely ascribed it to idols, or something else than to Me’ (ISAIAH 48:5).” This verse also makes an allusion to ISAIAH 6:8–9, “And he said, Go, and tell this people, Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not. Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and convert, and be healed.” Not that Israel had not understood, but rather, as Skinner says, God had not opened her ears to hear—that is, had not revealed—for a reason. In this case, lest the people give credit either to their own intelligence of to their idol-gods. ¶ For I knew that thou wouldest deal very treacherously, and wast called a transgressor from the womb. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For it was manifest to me that thou wouldest altogether deal falsely, and be called a rebel from the womb.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For I knew that, being in rebellion, thou wilt continue to rebel and wilt still be called a transgressor from the womb.” Instead of treacherously, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has would lie (Lamsa) / act in falsehood (BPE); and instead of transgressor, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has wicked. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “For I know that transgressing thou wilt transgress, and I have called thee a transgressor from the womb.” ¶ Cowles continues to explain why God’s manifestations were withdrawn: “For he says, ‘I knew that thou wouldest deal very treacherously.’ The principle which underlies this policy is brought out by our Lord in his relations to the Scribes and Pharisees in a similar moral state; ‘Whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that which he hath’ (Matthew 13:10–16) ... Hence these hardened perverse men received far less light from prophecy than they otherwise would ...” ¶ From the womb. Birks (also see Faussett and Calvin) suggests: “From the days of Egypt they had sinned and been rebellious, as foretold in the Song of Moses.”

vv. 9–15. The Lord, for His name sake, will not obliterate Israel. The children of Jacob will need to be refined in the furnace of affliction. The Lord is the Great I AM. Faussett explains that in ISAIAH 48:12–15, “The Almighty, who has founded heaven and earth, can, and will, restore His people.” Indeed, He does promise to bring His people out of Babylon. If we would follow, the Lord points the way for us to find peace and joy. The Lord will still honor the Abrahamic covenant as people leave mystical Babylon and come into the waters of baptism—but no such blessings are promised to the disobedient.

⁸ An allusion to the blessings and cursing found in Rain in Due Season.

9 ¶ Nevertheless, for my name's sake will I defer mine anger, and for my praise will I refrain ~~for~~ from thee, that I cut thee not off.

Nevertheless, for my name's sake will I defer mine anger. The LXX (6) reads, “For mine own name’s sake I will shew thee my wrath.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “For my name’s sake I will remove my wrath far off.” ¶ Wordsworth observes: “The contraction of the nostrils was a sign of wrath; the relaxation of them a sign of patience and long-suffering.” Wordsworth so comments because the word translated as anger here and in most translations is אַפִּי, my nostrils. Gesenius has: “אַפִּי (for אָנַף from the root אָנַף), with suff. , אַפִּי אַפִּי, m. prop. a breathing place, the member with which one breathes, hence—(1) the nose. Used of the nose of men, Numbers 11:20, and of animals, Job 40:24; אָנַף גְּבוּהָ used of pride, see אָנַף רִיחַ; גְּבוּהָ the blowing of breath through the nostrils, as of those who are enraged, Schnauben, Job 4:9. Hence—(2) anger, which shows itself in hard breathing; אָנַף בְּעַל Proverbs 22:24, and אִישׁ אָנַף Proverbs 29:22, angry. Very often used of the anger of God, Deuteronomy 32:22; 29:19; Job 36:13.” Cartoons often illustrate the anger of a bull with his head low to the ground, snorting and pawing the dirt. Here at the farm in Llanquihue, Linda & I came across a herd of Holstein cows with a bull present. Gladly, there was a sunken waterway between the herd and ourselves, but it was truly frightening to see a bull in the full manifestation of his fury toward us, the intruders. There was a cloud of dirt around the bull as he violently pawed and snorted onto the soil. We decided not to stay but quickly left. ¶ And for my praise will I refrain from thee, that I cut thee not off. The Targum (7) has, “And for my praise I will preserve thee, so as not to destroy thee.” The LXX (6) reads, “And bring upon thee my marvellous things; that I may not cut thee off utterly.” Instead of I refrain from thee, the Peshitta (5) has I keep you (Lamsa) / I will preserve you (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “And for my praise I will bridle thee, lest thou shouldst perish.” ¶ Faussett says, regarding refrain: “Literally, ‘muzzle.’” Muzzles are put on horses, for instance, to keep them from eating; or on dogs, to keep them from biting. Leaning on Rashi, Rosenberg explains that אָנַף, whose root is אָנַף, or what we have as muzzle, also means to restrain the nose (also see BDB). Some sorts of bridles act on the nose rather than on the mouth of the horse. But returning to Rosenberg, “I will close My nose not to allow the smoke of My nostrils to go out and not to be angry with you, for when one is angry, smoke comes out of his nostrils ... My nose is heated from much heat.” Barnes says: “The word here used (אָנַף) properly to muzzle, and is commonly employed with reference to an animal in order to tame or subdue it. Here it means that God would restrain himself.” Cowles says: “Under great provocation, the Lord yet restrained himself from inflicting the punishment they had deserved.” ¶ In Eastern nations the motif of saving face is strong. I enjoyed much of the book, Misreading Scripture with Western Eyes: Removing Cultural Blinders to Better Understand the Bible by Randolph Richards and Brandon J. O’Brien. Because especially Isaiah’s readership at the time he lived would have really understood this issue of suffering shame, I wonder if the Lord did not use that as an explanation for His mercy toward the children of Israel.⁹ Barnes gives the motives for divine patience as God’s own character: “It was on his own account—in order to show his covenant faithfulness; his fidelity to the promises made to their fathers, his mercy, his compassion, his readiness to pardon, and his unchanging love.” This theme is picked up again in ISAIAH 48:11.

⁹ See also Jacob 5, as well as the Torah, where prophets intercede on behalf of others using these very same arguments. So it is, for instance, that we read in Exodus 32: “And the LORD said unto Moses, I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people: Now therefore let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and I will make of thee a great nation. And Moses besought the LORD his God, and said, LORD, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt with great power, and with a mighty hand? Wherefore should the Egyptians speak, and say, For mischief did he bring them out, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? Turn from thy fierce wrath. Thy people will repent of this evil, therefore come thou not out against them. Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, to whom thou swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, and all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for ever. And the LORD said unto Moses, if they will repent of the evil which they have done, I will spare them, and turn away my fierce wrath [אָנַף] — Or, as Lexham Interlinear, from the blazing of your nose.]; but, behold, thou shalt execute judgment upon all that will not repent of this evil this day. Therefore, see thou do this thing that I have commanded thee, or I will execute all that which I had thought to do unto my people” (Exodus 32:9–14, Inspired Version). Joseph Smith’s Translation of the Bible Electronic Library, OT2 69 – Exodus 21:21–33:1 (OT Photo) Edited by Scott H. Faulring and Kent P. Jackson, 2011. Compare with The Complete Joseph Smith Translation of the Old Testament: A Side-By-Side Comparison with the King James Version. 2009, by Thomas A. Wayment; and Joseph Smith’s “New Translation” of the Bible, Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, Edited by Paul A. Wellington, 1970.

10 For, behold, I have refined thee, ~~but not with silver;~~ I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction.

✓ or, for silver

The Targum (T) has, “Behold, I have refined thee, but not in the crucible of silver; I tried thee in the distress of poverty.” The LXX (G) reads, “Behold I sold thee; but not for money; and I have rescued thee out of the furnace of affliction.” The first half, the BPE (S) has, “Behold, I have refined you, but not as silver; I have tried you in the furnace of affliction.” For the last clause, the Lamsa Peshitta (S) has, “I have purified you in the furnace of affliction.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Behold I have refined thee, but not as silver, I have chosen thee in the furnace of poverty.” ¶ Cowles has: “Egypt ... was historically their ‘furnace of affliction.’” The furnace of affliction that Judah had to endure in recent times, in the 20th Century, leaves me speechless and full of anguish. Yet Barnes suggests: “Possibly this may be the idea, that their affliction had prepared them to embrace his offers and to seek consolation in him; and he may design to teach that one effect of affliction is to prepare the mind to embrace the offers of mercy” (emphasis added). ¶ Elder Neal A. Maxwell, speaking of the process of refinement explained, “The painful and sometimes protracted process of refining is thus necessary in order to identify, separate, and cast off the dross. Uncharitableness, for instance, is to be burned away ‘in the furnace of affliction’ (ISAIAH 48:10; see also Alma 34:29). Our mortal tours in the ‘furnace of affliction’ will vary widely as to frequency and intensity. How could our personal empathy be genuinely and lastingly established and enlarged without refining experiences in the furnace of affliction? Even so, you and I do not loiter around these furnaces waiting for extra tours in those ovens. Yet without enduring there could be no finishing or polishing. It is not only the dross impurities that must go but also coarseness of all kinds. This is necessary in order for us to develop the highest forms of personality and character. In fact, the Greek word translated as perfect in Matthew 5:48 means ‘finished,’ ‘fully developed,’ or ‘complete.’ Therefore the dross is to be steadily removed in the refining process, while the precious cardinal qualities and attributes are to be etched everlastingly into one’s soul.”¹⁰ Elder Orson F. Whitney also testified: “No pain that we suffer, no trial that we experience is wasted. It ministers to our education, to the development of such qualities as patience, faith, fortitude and humility. All that we suffer and all that we endure, especially when we endure it patiently, builds up our characters, purifies our hearts, expands our souls, and makes us more tender and charitable, more worthy to be called the children of God ... and it is through sorrow and suffering, toil and tribulation, that we gain the education that we come here to acquire and which will make us more like our Father and Mother in heaven.”¹¹ President Brigham Young warned, speaking of the Saints, “Tell them that, in gathering, they are going to the thrashing machine—that they will then be run through the smutter, afterwards through the mill; and if they prove to be fine flour, they will be saved: if not, all their previous righteousness will be counted as nothing.”¹² ¶ Years ago I wrote in my journal: “Last Sunday, I had a very spiritual experience out of a small, even inconsequential trial. I had a plate of spaghetti in my hands, and dropped it all over the kitchen floor. The splash made a terrible greasy red mess! I was tired and frustrated, and rested my head against the wall.” I remember feeling a bit sorry for myself and wishing someone would come and help me pick up my mess—or at least keep me company while I did. A very sweet Spirit came over me and I thought how wonderful it would be to help others with their spilled spaghetti, so to speak. I continue with my journal, “As I cleaned up the mess, I was almost in tears, but this time, with the thought of how beautiful it would be to ‘Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees’ (ISAIAH 35:3, cf. Hebrews 12:12), and help someone else. I made the resolve to be quick to help others who [might] spill their mess, or be helpful where I could.”¹³ ¶ The expression, not with silver, does not appear in the Book of Mormon (but was not removed from the Bible in the Inspired Version). I find it interesting that Skinner, regarding the silver, says, “None of the proposed interpretations is entirely satisfactory.” Gill says: “But it is not usual to refine with silver; not silver with silver, nor any other metal with it; that itself is what is refined; this therefore cannot be the sense of the words ...” ¶ Wordsworth is here filled with love and tenderness towards Israel: “Rather, not as silver, but as something far more precious; and therefore to be refined with much greater care. Compare 1 Peter 1:7, ‘The trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth.’ The refiner of silver may lose some grains of the good ore in the smelting; but I will not lose a single grain of ¹¹ Quoted in Dawn Anderson, Dloria Dalton, and Susette Green, eds., Every Good Thing: Talks from the 1997 BYU Women’s Conference, p.22, and in turn from President Spencer W. Kimball, ‘Tragedy or Destiny,’ Brigham Young University Speeches of the Year (Provo, 6 Dec. 1955).

¹² Young, President Brigham. Religion of the Saints. JD 8:71b.

¹³ Billikopf, Gregorio. Journal. 18 May 2000.

¹⁰ Maxwell, Neal A. If Thou Endure It Well. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1996. pp. 3–4.

thee, in the spiritual process of refining thee by the furnace of affliction at Babylon.”

11 For mine own sake, [even] yea, for mine own sake will I do [it] this, for how should I will not suffer [my name] to be polluted?, and I will not give my glory unto another.

For mine own sake, yea, for mine own sake will I do this, for I will not suffer my name to be polluted. The Targum (T) has, “For my name’s sake, for the sake of my Word, that it may not be profaned, I will do it, and my glory in which I have revealed myself unto you.” The LXX (G) reads, “For mine own sake I will deal with thee; because my name hath been profaned.” The BPE (S) has, “For my own sake will I do it, that it may not be profaned.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, for the last clause, “That I may not be blasphemed.” The repetition of for mine own sake appears not only in the Masoretic text (M), לְמַעַנִּי לְמַעַנִּי, but also in the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q), לְמַעַנִּי לְמַעַנִּי, and in 4QIsa^d (Q), לְמַעַנִּי לְמַעַנִּי. The Masoretic text (M) has how should be polluted,¹⁴ אֵיךְ יִחַל, while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) has how should be profaned,¹⁵ אֵיכָה אִיחַל. The DSS 4QIsa^c (Q) has a small fragment in which אִיחַל is preserved. DSS 4QIsa^d (Q) has, how should be profaned, אֵיךְ אִיחַל. ¶ Regarding the elliptical expression, my name, Lowth says: “The word שְׁמִי, my name, is dropt out of the text: it is supplied by a MS. which has שְׁמִי; and by the LXX.” It is also supplied by the Book of Mormon. ¶ And I will not give my glory unto another. The Targum (T) has, “I will not give to another people.” The LXX (G) reads, “And my glory I will not give to another.” The BPE (S) has, “That I may not give my glory to another.” ¶ Nägelsbach says: “The words: and I will not give my honor to another, ver. 11b, in which manifestly the thought of ISAIAH 48:9–11 culminates, is a literal repetition of ISAIAH 42:8. By this the Prophet intimates that in these words, too (ISAIAH 48:9–11), he only repeats what he had said before.” Faussett writes: “not give my glory unto another”—If God forsook His people forever, the heathen would attribute their triumph over Israel to their idols; so God’s glory would be given to another.” Delitzsch and Nägelsbach point us to Ezekiel 36, as a commentary on this verse: “And I scattered them among the heathen, and they were dispersed through the countries: according to their way and according to their doings I judged them. And when they entered unto the heathen, whither they went, they profaned my holy name, when they said to them, These are the people of the LORD, and are gone forth out of his land. But I had pity for mine holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the heathen, whither they went. Therefore say unto the house of Israel, thus saith the Lord GOD [or more literally, אֲדֹנָי יְהוָה]¹⁶; I do not this for your sakes, O house of Israel, but for mine holy name’s sake, which ye have profaned among the heathen, whither ye went. And I will sanctify my great name, which was profaned among the heathen, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the heathen shall know that I am the LORD, saith the Lord GOD [or rather, אֲדֹנָי יְהוָה], when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes” (Ezekiel 36:19–23).¹⁷

12 Harken unto me, O Jacob, and Israel, my called, for I [am] he; I [am] the first, and I am also [am] the last.

Harken unto me, O Jacob, and Israel, my called. The LXX (G) reads, “Harken to me, Jacob! and thou Israel whom I call.” Instead of my called, the Peshitta (S) has whom I called. The Masoretic text (M) has hearken unto me, שְׁמַע אֵלַי, as does DSS 4QIsa^d (Q), שְׁמַע אֵלַי, while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) has *hearken [unto] these [things]*¹⁸, שְׁמַע אֵלֶּה. ¶ Whitehouse well notes: “We note the friendly tone towards Israel my called.” This expression is parallel to that of my people. ¶ For I am he; I am the first, and I am also the last. The Targum (T) has, “I am He, who was of old, yea, ages after ages are mine, and besides me there is no God.” The LXX (G) reads, “I am the first and am forever.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, for the last clause, “I am the last.” In this clause we have something interesting to LDS. Let us first look at Table 48–1. It provides the Masoretic text (M), the literal English translation of both the Masoretic text (M) and the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) (they are the same other than a small difference in the spelling of the word he) and finally, the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q). The KJV (also the AMP, ASV, DSSB, JPS and RV) render the last clause as: “I also am the last.” The

¹⁴ See Gesenius, HALOT, DBL, חָלַל.

¹⁵ See Gesenius, אִיחַל.

¹⁶ The AV version follows the Jewish tradition of pronouncing the words as Lord God.

¹⁷ This chapter in Ezekiel is preparatory for the great Ezekiel 37, wherein the groundwork is being laid in order to remind Israel about the importance of the coming forth of both the Bible and the Book of Mormon.

¹⁸ DSSB.

Book of Mormon corrected the order to read: “I am also the last.” Although either translation is appropriate, it is interesting that two very respected versions have since followed the Book of Mormon’s lead, including the HCSB and the NASB. Regarding the expression I he, Baltzer has “‘I am the One’ (אֲנִי הוּא), means the one who is already known.” Baltzer goes on to compare the idea to the meaning of the word Jehovah, יְהוָה. So Gill, “... the everlasting I AM, the immutable Jehovah, the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending.”

Table 48–1

אֲחֵרֹן	אֲנִי	אֲף	רִאשׁוֹן	אֲנִי	אֲנִי-הוּא	מ
last	I	also	first	I	He – I
אֲחֵרֹן	אֲנִי	אֲף	רִישׁוֹן	אֲנִי	אֲנִי הוּא	ק

From top to bottom we have (1) Masoretic text (מ), (2) literal English translation of both Masoretic text (מ) and of the DSS 1QIsa^a (ק) and finally, (3) we have the DSS 1QIsa^a (ק). Read the English from right to left.

The DSS 4QIsa^d (ק) has also been preserved, the major differences are that the word אֲחֵרֹן (last) is missing, and that a synonym of אֲף (also) is used, that is גַּם, אֲנִי הוּא אֲנִי רִאשׁוֹן גַּם אֲנִי. Also, הוּא (he) is spelled as in the Masoretic text (מ).

13 Mine hand hath also ~~hath~~ laid the foundation of the earth, and my right hand hath spanned the heavens. [✓] [when] I call unto them and they stand up together.

✓ or, the palm of my right hand hath spread out

Mine hand hath also laid the foundation of the earth, and my right hand hath spanned the heavens. The Targum (ט) has, for the second clause, “And by my might I have suspended the heavens.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “My hand hath founded the earth, and my right hand hath established the heaven.” The Douay-Rheims (ϛ) has, “My hand also hath founded the earth, and my right hand hath measured the heavens.” ¶ Jennings testifies: “‘All things were created by Him, and for Him; and He is before all things, and by Him all things subsist’ (Colossians 1:16–17 summarized).” Jesus is Jehovah!” ¶ I call unto them and they stand up together. The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “Let me summon them and let them stand together.” ¶ Ibn Ezra speaks of the authority that God has over the heavens and the earth: “The literal meaning ... is: ‘I have made them, and when I call them to do My will and desire they stand both before Me like servants.’” In LDS theology the earth is alive and will someday die and be resurrected, and certainly is obedient to the word of the Lord.

14 All ye, assemble yourselves, and hear; which who among them hath declared these [things] unto them? The LORD hath loved him; yea, and he will fulfil his word which he hath declared by them; and he will do his pleasure on Babylon, and his arm [shall be on] come upon the Chaldeans.

All ye, assemble yourselves, and hear; who among them hath declared these things unto them? The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “Let them all be assembled and listen. Who hath told them these things?” The Douay-Rheims (ϛ) has, “Assemble yourselves together, all you, and hear: who among them hath declared these things?” ¶ The people are called to pay very careful attention to what is about to be said. The KJV has, “Which among them hath declared &c.” The Book of Mormon corrects this to who instead of which. The AMP, BBE, DRB (based on Vulgate), DSSB (based on the DSS), LBP (based on Peshitta), LITV, Brenton (based on LXX), LHI, MKJV, NASB, Webster, and YLT all use who, as does the Book of Mormon. The Hebrew in the Masoretic text (מ) and in the DSS 1QIsa^a (ק) both have מִי, which is typically translated as who, but not always. ¶ Alexander writes: “Who among them, i.e. the false gods or their prophets, hath declared (predicted) these things, the whole series of events which had been cited to demonstrate the divine foreknowledge.” The new things and the hidden things would be declared: the things that idols or wise men could not reveal. The expression, the word declared by them seems to be an allusion to the predictions brought forth by the Lord’s righteous prophets from the beginning, as inspired by the Spirit; especially those things that have to do with the coming Messiah. His word which has been declared by them, clearly refers to the words of Christ, as uttered from the mouths of the Prophets from the beginning. By careful reading of this verse, we see that the same person whose words have been fulfilled, is also the person who God loves: Christ. Isaiah already has his eyes on the coming prophecies about Messiah, and has here just barely cracked the door for us. The beloved Son, the only begotten of the Father, is next to be revealed, especially beginning with ISAIAH 49, but with a hint of it right here in this and other verses in ISAIAH 48 (Isaiah used the same pattern, when slowly revealing Cyrus as a type of Christ). We earlier noted that when one takes a video, the frames move quite quickly to give the idea of action. But in reality, changes of scene often have a natural fade, wherein a scene that is being completed dissolves into the new one. So it is here, where Cyrus and Babylon dissolve into the prophecies regarding the Messiah. ¶ The LORD hath loved him. Yea, and he will fulfil his word which he hath declared by them; and he will do his pleasure on Babylon, and his arm shall come upon the Chaldeans. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “He will do his pleasure on Babylon, and He will reveal the strength of His arm on the Chaldeans.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “I who love thee” and “Have executed thy will on Babylon, to take away the seed of the Chaldeans.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “The Lord hath loved him, he will do his pleasure in Babylon, and his arm shall be on the Chaldeans.” The Targum (Ⲯ) has the closing clause as, “hath declared these things ever since the Lord loved Israel?” ¶ Regarding the loved one, some—such as the Targum (Ⲯ), Alexander and Cowles—suggest these words speak of Israel. There is no doubt that Israel is beloved of the Lord, but this is not the main meaning of this expression. Remember what we have already said, the same person whose words have been fulfilled, is the person who God the Father loves. Even without the benefit of the Book of Mormon rendering, Kay beautifully says: “Cyrus is here alluded to in language, which seems studiously designed to prepare for the coming forward of Him who will soon occupy the whole field of vision.” Faussett likewise has: “Jehovah’s language of love is too strong to apply to Cyrus, except as type of Messiah, to whom alone it fully applies.” Christ is frequently mentioned as the beloved of God in the Scriptures: “And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased” (Matthew 3:17; also see Mark 1:11; Luke 3:22; Ephesians 1:6); “But, behold, my Beloved Son, which was my Beloved and Chosen from the beginning, said unto me—Father, thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever” (Moses 4:2); and of course, from the boy Prophet, “When the light rested upon me I saw two Personages, whose brightness and glory defy all description, standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name and said, pointing to the other—This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!” (JS—History 1:17). ¶ The Chaldeans. Horsley suggests: “I suspect that something has been lost out of the text between the two words וְזַרְעוֹ [and his arm] and כְּשָׂרָיו [Chaldeans]. The ellipsis in this verse is filled in the KJV by shall be on. AMP uses will be against; NAS77, shall be against; and YLT, is on. The Book of Mormon renders shall come upon as connecting words: and his arm shall come upon the Chaldeans. The meaning is the same, but I find the Book of Mormon especially pleasing. There is a historical allusion regarding Babylon and the work that would be carried out by Cyrus. Ibn Ezra has: “His pleasure] The pleasure of God. Cyrus will perform the will of God concerning Babylon, and show ‘His arm’ against the Chaldeans.” Barnes says: “None of the astrologers, soothsayers, or diviners of Babylon had been able to foretell the expedition and the conquests of Cyrus, and the capture of the city. If they had been able to foresee the danger, they might have guarded against it, and the city might have been saved. But God had predicted it a hundred and fifty years before it occurred, and this demonstrated, therefore, that he alone was God.” Although Alexander provides a different meaning as to who the beloved of the Lord is, he says: “(Jehovah’s) arm (shall be upon) the Chaldees.” Cyrus is only an extension of the Lord’s arm. It would also be the arm of Christ that would help Israel escape mystical Babylon in the latter days.

15 Also, saith the Lord; I the Lord, yea, [even] I have spoken; yea, I have called him to declare, I have brought him, and he shall make his way prosperous.

Also, saith the Lord; I the Lord, yea, I have spoken; yea, I have called him to declare. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “I by my Word have made a covenant with Abraham your father.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “I have spoken, I have called.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “I, even I have spoken and called him.” ¶ Barnes has, “The word ‘I’ is repeated to give emphasis, and to furnish the utmost security that it should be certainly accomplished. It means that Jehovah, and he alone, had declared this, and that it was entirely by his power that Cyrus had been raised up, and had been made prosperous.” In the Masoretic text (ⲙ) it appears as אֲנִי, אֲנִי, אֲנִי “I, I, I ...” ¶ I have brought him, and he shall make his way prosperous. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Yea, I have called him, I have brought him into the land of the place of my Shekinah, and I prospered his way.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “I have brought him, and have made his way prosperous.” Instead of he shall make his way prosperous, the Peshitta (ⲥ) has I have made his way prosperous. ¶ Westermann says that “the hiph ‘l of וַיַּעַל properly means ‘to make solid by treading,’ and so ‘to make a way.’ This is the same preparing of the way as is spoken of in ISAIAH 40:3 f.” Indeed, the Lord, through His expiatory sacrifice has paved the way for us, has made the way passable. It is the Lord who both prepares the way for us and prospers it for our benefit.

vv. 16–22. Come unto Christ, our Redeemer. Peace is poured out upon the Lord’s disciples—but not on the disobedient. Flee from mystic Babylon.

16 ¶ Come ye near unto me; ~~hear ye this;~~ I have not spoken in secret; from the beginning, from the time that it was declared have there [am] I spoken; and now the Lord GOD, and his Spirit, hath sent me.

Come ye near unto me; I have not spoken in secret; from the beginning. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Come ye near to my Word; hear ye this; I have not spoken in secret from the beginning.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Draw near to me and hear these things: from the beginning I have not spoken in secret.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “Come ye near unto me, and hear this: I have not spoken in secret from the beginning.” ¶ Barnes suggests: “The idea here is, that he had foretold the raising up of Cyrus, and his agency in delivering his people, in terms so plain that it could not be pretended that it was conjectured, and so clear that there was no ambiguity.” Horsley brilliantly has: “In this passage, Messiah, comparing the enigmatical style and manner, the studied reserve as it were of the earlier revelations, with the clear and open manner of the Gospel, justly says, that in former times He had spoken in mystery. To us now the prophecies of the universal redemption, and even of the manner of it by our Lord’s humiliation and sufferings, seem in many parts at least sufficiently perspicuous and explicit. But if we consider the manner in which they were delivered, in figurative language, many of them grafted upon other subjects, introduced abruptly in the midst of other things, and the clearest of them often interrupted by subordinate matter occasionally thrown in,¹⁹ we may easily conceive that the obscurity of them must have been very great, till they were expounded by the actual accomplishment. And this we may the more easily understand by the obscurity which yet remains upon those that relate to things yet to come—the conversion of the Jews, and the fall of Antichrist—which though very perspicuous as to the general promise of final peace and prosperity to the Church, are obscure enough with respect to the detail of the events which they seem to contain. Certainly therefore the Messiah may well be supposed to say, that before his coming in the flesh He had spoken in mystery. In comparison with the clear language of the gospels, the earlier revelations had been ‘a speaking darkly’ in mystery. In comparison with the pretended oracles of the heathen, the prophecies were ‘a speaking not darkly,’ not in the disguise of equivocation” (emphasis added). The words קָרְבוּ אֵלַי, draw near unto me (Ⲅ, ESV, ISV, LEB, Rotherham, TLV) are trully beautiful, and a constant invitation from our Savior to do precisely that. The Lord never stops beckoning unto us, to draw near unto Him, and to reason with Him. ¶ From the time that it was declared have I spoken; and the Lord GOD, and his Spirit, hath sent me. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “At the time when the nations separated themselves from fearing me, at the time I brought Abraham your father (the Royal Polyglot omits אֲבִיכֶם ‘your father’) to my service. The prophet saith: And now the Lord God, and His Word, hath sent me.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “When it was doing I was there. And now the Lord Lord (Brenton, ‘and now the Lord, even the Lord’) hath sent me and his spirit.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “From the time before it was done, I was there, and now the Lord God hath sent me, and his spirit.” Or more literally, Lord LORD, Adonai Yahweh [אֲדֹנָי יְהוָה]. ¶ Even so, the expression still seems to speak of the Godhead. The author of this verse is Jehovah who is speaking through the principle of Divine Investiture, for the Father. I find it extremely interesting that others also believe in the principle of Divine Investiture, even if they do not give it this name. For instance, the Editor of the Soncino edition of the Babylonian Talmud, in a footnote, says that Isaiah is here speaking in first person on behalf of the Lord (Seder Mo’ed, Mo’ed Katan 16b, footnote 9). Alexander even uses such words as being articulated: “by divine authority and inspiration” (emphasis added). Westermann says: “The speaker is someone who is certain that he has been sent by God and endowed with his spirit. Precisely the same sentiments are expressed in the Servant Song in ISAIAH 49:1–6.” A song about Christ! Cheyne explains that there are two ways to look at the Hebrew: “It has been much debated ... whether the Spirit is the sender or the sent ... Grammatically, both renderings are equally admissible.” So also Lowth, quoting Origen, “Who is it that saith in Isaiah, And now the Lord hath sent me and his Spirit? in which, as the expression is ambiguous, is it the Father and the Holy Spirit who hath sent Jesus; or the Father who hath sent both Christ and the Holy Spirit? The latter is the true interpretation (Origen. cont. Cels. lib. i.)” Alexander has: “The main proposition is, the Lord God hath sent me. The supplementary expression and his Spirit may be introduced, without absurdity or any violation of the rules of syntax ...” Cowles has: “For all the difficulties [in this verse] are at once obviated by the supposition that the distinction of persons in the Godhead [is meant] ... [Christ] commissioned the prophets of the Old Testament no less distinctly than the apostles of the New. They were not only prophets of Christ, but prophets speaking for Christ—inspired and sent by him.” ¶ Elder Mark E. Petersen gave scriptural proof that the Prophets of old, such as Isaiah, were moved upon by the Holy Ghost and quoted Acts 8:27–39, 28:25; 2 Peter 1:20–21. Regarding ISAIAH 48:12–13, 16–17, Elder Peterson says: “Not only is this another affirmation of the Savior on the part of the Isaiah, but it also indicates the influence of the Holy Spirit which ‘hath sent me.’”²⁰ ¶ Kay, in another part of ISAIAH 48 well has: “The ‘new things’ being those that are soon to be announced in ISAIAH 49–55.”

¹⁹ It had to be done this way, at least in part, in order to avoid further corruption of the Biblical text by “designing and corrupt priests” (TPJS).

17 And thus saith the LORD, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel; I [am] have sent him, the LORD thy God which who teacheth thee to profit, which who leadeth thee by the way [that] thou shouldest go, hath done it.

And thus saith the LORD, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel; I have sent him. The LXX (6) reads, “Thus saith the Lord who hath redeemed thee, the Holy One of Israel.” ¶ Ibn Ezra explains: “Thy redeemer, etc. The words which follow are to announce the reward of those that listen to the words of the Lord. Baltzer writes: “The formula for the prophetic oracles is of course: ‘Thus says Yahweh’ (כֹּה־אָמַר יְהוָה). It could well be, however, that this is indeed the same formula, but that it has been expanded by ‘your redeemer’ (גֹּאֲלְךָ) ... (Who is) ‘our redeemer?’ The answer is, ‘Yahweh Sabaoth is his name, the Holy One of Israel.’” Likewise: “Who he this King of glory? מִי הוּא זֶה מֶלֶךְ הַכְּבוֹד.” ANSWER – shout it out with joy! “The LORD of hosts, He is the King of glory, יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת הוּא מֶלֶךְ הַכְּבוֹד” (Psalm 24:10). ¶ The LORD thy God who teacheth thee to profit, who leadeth thee by the way thou shouldest go, hath done it. The Targum (7) has, “Who teacheth thee what will profit thee, who sheweth the way wherein thou shouldest walk.” The LXX (6) reads, “I am thy God. I pointed out to thee, how to find the way in which thou shouldst walk.” Instead of to profit, the Peshitta (5) has not to do wrong (Lamsa) / that you may not exalt yourself (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (8) has, “I am the Lord thy God that teach thee profitable things, that govern thee in the way that thou walkest.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “God’s teachings are all directed to the ‘profit’ of those to whom they are addressed; and, if received in a proper spirit, actually ‘profit’ them more than anything else can do.” Rawlinson does well is quoting 2 Timothy 3:16. Wade notes: “The conception of the Lord as a teacher appears in Jeremiah 32:33²¹; Psalm 71:17; perhaps cf. also ISAIAH 30:20.” Faussett has: “teacheth ... to profit—by affliction, such as the Babylonish captivity, and the present long-continued dispersion of Israel (Hebrews 12:10).” The Talmud interestingly has: “R. Huna reporting R. Eleazar said: From the Pentateuch, the Prophets and the Hagiographa it may be shown that one is allowed to follow the road he wishes to pursue. From the Pentateuch, as it is written, And God said to Balaam, Thou shalt not go with them (Numbers 22:12) and then it is written, [If the men came to call thee] rise up and go with them (Numbers 22:12). From the Prophets, as it is written, I am the Lord thy God who teacheth thee for thy profit, who leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go (ISAIAH 48:17). From the Hagiographa, as it is written, If he is of the scornors, he will [be allowed to] speak scorn and [if] of the meek, he will show forth grace (Proverbs 3:24)” (Makkoth 10b, Babylonian Talmud, Soncino, emphasis added). Rabbi Rosenberg explains this Talmudic section as one of moral agency. Using the words of the Prophet Alma, we might say to follow after the desires of our heart. As a result of such desires (for the true desires of our hearts will turn into action), “The one raised to happiness according to his desires of happiness, or good according to his desires of good; and the other to evil according to his desires of evil; for as he has desired to do evil all the day long even so shall he have his reward of evil when the night cometh” (Alma 41:5). There is another reason why the Talmudic quote is so interesting. Many exegetes seem to make no sense of ISAIAH 48:22, “There is no peace, saith the LORD, unto the wicked.” Yet that note is exactly the same one we find in the Book of Mormon, in the very chapter of Alma we have quoted, “Do not suppose, because it has been spoken concerning restoration, that ye shall be restored from sin to happiness. Behold, I say unto you, wickedness never was happiness” (Alma 41:10, emphasis added). The point is this; both ISAIAH and Alma invite us to follow the Lord. Both also warn us to be careful about the desires of our heart, because these will be followed by consequences both in this life, and throughout eternity. Both Isaiah and Alma warn us to avoid wickedness. There is אֵין שְׁלוֹם an absence of peace, a want of Shalom (i.e., of true joy). And what does Alma tell us? Precisely the identical thing, once again, that wickedness never was happiness.

18 O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments—then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea.

O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments. The LXX (6) reads, “And hadst thou hearkened to my commandments.” ¶ Horsley suggests that ISAIAH 48:18–19 are closely related to Matthew 23:37. Barnes points to Psalm 81: “Oh that my people had hearkened unto me, and Israel had walked in my ways! I should soon have subdued their enemies, and turned my hand against their adversaries. The haters of the LORD should have submitted themselves unto him: but their time should have endured forever. He should have fed them also with the finest of the wheat: and with honey out of the rock should I have satisfied thee” (Psalm 81:13–16). And Calvin well suggests the similarity in the lament found in the Rain in Due Season: “O that they were wise [לִי חָכְמוֹן], that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end!” (Deuteronomy 32:29). Nephi’s brother, Jacob, also pleads with us: “O then, my beloved brethren, repent ye, and enter in at the strait gate, and continue in the way which is narrow, until ye shall obtain eternal life. O be wise; what can I say more?” (Jacob 6:11–12). ¶ Then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea. The Targum (ܬ) suggests that the river is the Euphrates. The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “Thy peace would have been like a river and thy righteousness like a wave of the sea.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Thy peace had been as a river, and thy justice as the waves of the sea.” ¶ Barnes says: “Rivers are often used by the sacred writers, and particularly by Isaiah, as symbolical of plenty and prosperity.” Alexander notes: “The ideas suggested by the figure of a river, are abundance, perpetuity, and freshness, to which the waves of the sea add those of vastness, depth, and continual succession.” There are similar verses in the Book of Mormon, spoken by the mouth of Lehi—who like his son Nephi—must have loved the writings of the Prophet Isaiah: “And it came to pass that he called the name of the river, Laman, and it emptied into the Red Sea; and the valley was in the borders near the mouth thereof. And when my father saw that the waters of the river emptied into the fountain of the Red Sea, he spake unto Laman, saying: O that thou mightest be like unto this river, continually running into the fountain of all righteousness! And he also spake unto Lemuel: O that thou mightest be like unto this valley, firm and steadfast, and immovable in keeping the commandments of the Lord! Now this he spake because of the stiffneckedness of Laman and Lemuel; for behold they did murmur in many things against their father, because he was a visionary man, and had led them out of the land of Jerusalem, to leave the land of their inheritance, and their gold, and their silver, and their precious things, to perish in the wilderness. And this they said he had done because of the foolish imaginations of his heart” (1Nephi 2:8–11). The context of both scriptures is quite similar. They are both laments for what could have been. ¶ In the last days, through the gathering this anguishing news—for any father—would be turned into unutterable joy. Keith adds: “The same illustration of divine compassion often occurs; the same affectionate and mournful lament is often made for Israel: ‘that there were such an heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my commandments always, that it might be well with them, and with their children forever’ (Deuteronomy 5:29).” Given life’s vicissitudes and our tendency to fret, the expression שְׁלוֹם לָךְ, peace unto thee, “is used to encourage one who is fearful, and to assure him of peace, in this sense, There is nothing for thee (for you) to fear, thou art (ye are) in safety” (Gesenius). שְׁלוֹם means much more than the absence of war, but it includes inner peace, health, even joy. The link between peace and joy is found throughout. For instance, we read in Helaman: “... and they were filled with that joy which is unspeakable and full of glory. And behold, the Holy Spirit of God did come down from heaven, and did enter into their hearts, and they were filled as if with fire, and they could speak forth marvelous words. And it came to pass that there came a voice unto them, yea, a pleasant voice, as if it were a whisper, saying: Peace, peace be unto you, because of your faith in my Well Beloved, who was from the foundation of the world” (Helaman 5:44b–47). ¶ President Ezra Taft Benson testified: “Men and women who turn their lives over to God will discover that He can make a lot more out of their lives than they can. He will deepen their joys, expand their vision, quicken their minds, strengthen their muscles, lift their spirits, multiply their blessings, increase their opportunities, comfort their souls, raise up friends, and pour out peace. Whoever will lose his life in the service of God will find eternal life.”²² It makes sense, then, that the opposite would also be true, as we read in ISAIAH 48:22.

²⁰ Petersen, Elder Mark E., Isaiah for Today, p.124–125.

²¹ “And they have turned unto me the back, and not the face: though I taught them, rising up early and teaching them, yet they have not hearkened to receive instruction” (Jeremiah 32:33, note that פָּנָה seems to be a synonym of שׁוּב [to turn towards God or away from Him, to repent, or to apostatize].

19 Thy seed also had been as the sand; and the offspring of thy bowels like the gravel thereof; his name should not have been cut off nor destroyed from before me.

Thy seed also had been as the sand; the offspring of thy bowels like the gravel thereof. The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “And thy seed would have been as the sand, and the issue of thy bowels as the dust of the ground.” The DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) has and your offspring, וְצִמְצִימְךָ, while the Masoretic text (M) has and offspring [of] thy bowels, וְצִמְצִימְךָ מִעֵיךְ. ¶ Whitehouse correctly points to promises associated with the Abrahamic covenant found in Genesis: “And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered” (Genesis 13:16); and “That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies” (Genesis 22:17). Jenour explains: “Great increase in their numbers was one of the blessings frequently promised to the Israelites if they continued obedient; and on the contrary, diminution in their numerical strength, was one of the curses threatened against their disobedience. Compare Deuteronomy 28²³ throughout.” ¶ His name should not have been cut off nor destroyed from before me. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The name of Israel should not have ceased nor have been destroyed from before me for ever.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Still however thou shalt not be utterly cut off; nor shall thy name perish from before me.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “His name should not have perished, nor have been destroyed from before my face.” Without apostasy, the name of Jehovah would have been always honored.

²² Benson, President Ezra Taft. “Jesus Christ—Gifts and Expectations,” Christmas Devotional, Salt Lake City, Utah, 7 December 1986.

20 Go ye forth of Babylon, flee ye from the Chaldeans, with a voice of singing declare ye, tell this, utter it ~~it~~ ^{even} to the end of the earth; say ye: The LORD hath redeemed his servant Jacob.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the last clause, “The Lord hath redeemed His servants from the house of Jacob.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Haste out of Babylon! flee from the Chaldeans: proclaim the joyful news: and let this be published. Proclaim even to the end of the earth— Say ‘The Lord hath delivered his servant Jacob.’” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “Come forth out of Babylon, flee ye from the Chaldeans, declare it with the voice of joy: make this to be heard, and speak it out even to the ends of the earth. Say: The Lord hath redeemed his servant Jacob.” ¶ We have additional words of invitation—go ye out of Babel, flee ye from Chaldeans: צֵאוּ מִבָּבֶל בְּרַחוּ מִכַּשְׁדִּים. ¶ Regarding former times, Rawlinson observes: “It might have seemed that no exhortation would be needed; that, as soon as the prison-doors were set open, there would be a general rush to escape. But, when the time came, it was not so. Those only availed themselves of the edict of Cyrus ‘whose spirit God had raised to go up and build his house’ (Ezra 1:5). The wealthier classes, Josephus tells us (‘Ant. Jud.’ 11:1), remained... Motives of various kinds detained others. The result was that probably a larger number elected to continue in the country than to return to Palestine.” Delitzsch has: “They are to go out of Babylon, and with speed and joy to leave the land of slavery and idolatry far behind.” Birks says, “The message closes with a direct command to the exiles of Israel to set out joyfully on their way to Zion.” Horsley likewise writes: “It is a mystical Babylon therefore that is here intended (compare Revelation 18:4).” Indeed, and the message in the latter-days is to all of scattered Israel—leave mystical Babylon and come unto Zion. Come unto Christ! ¶ With a voice of singing, בְּקוֹל רִנָּה. Or, with a voice of rejoicing, of joy, of gladness, shouting, proclamation. This is the voice with which we are to share the gospel with others. ¶ Utter to the end of the earth. Israel has been scattered to the ends of the earth, and we are to proclaim the good news to the ends of the earth (Deuteronomy 30:1–6) through the Book of Mormon (Ezekiel 37:15 ff, including 37:21). What is the good news? The LORD hath redeemed his servant Jacob. Our Savior has paid the price of redemption.

21 And they thirsted not; ~~when~~ he led them through the deserts; he caused the waters to flow out of the rock for them; he clave²⁴ the rock also and the waters gushed out.

And they thirsted not; he led them through the deserts. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “He will not suffer them to thirst in the desert; He will guide them.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And if they shall thirst (for he will lead them through a desert).” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “They thirsted not in the desert, when he led them out.” ¶ Wordsworth observes: “God always connects the mercies of the Anodus (or return from Babylon) with those of the Exodus from Egypt ...” Birks has, in part, “This verse may be explained either as a memorial of the mercies of the Exodus, called afresh to mind by the later deliverance, or as a prediction of blessings in that later redemption. In this case the words must be figurative. ... The whole series of mercies, from the Exodus onward, are thus summed up in one song of triumphant praise. The God of Israel was the same through every age, the unfailing Friend and Deliverer of His people. His earlier mercies might be varied in their form, but their substance would be the same in every successive age. He opens evermore ‘streams in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert.’ But these blessings belong to the faithful alone.” Waters are symbolic of blessings to be poured out upon the Saints. ¶ He caused the waters to flow out of the rock for them; he clave the rock also and the waters gushed out. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “He will cause water to flow for them from the rock: Yea, he will cleave the rock, and the waters shall gush out.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “A rock shall be cleft and water shall gush forth, that my people may drink.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “He brought forth water out of the rock for them, and he clove the rock, and the waters gushed out.” ¶ At the time of the exodus the waters flowed out of the rock. Now there is an allusion, once again, to the waters of baptism, but this time, in righteousness and not in hypocrisy. Horsley says, as a summary of his thoughts on this verse: “It is true it describes the spiritual deliverance, which is its real object, in allusions to the deliverance from Babylon.” Keith says: “If it be regarded as a continuation of the previous verse, it does not appear from anything recorded to have received a literal fulfilment in the return from Babylon. It may, therefore, receive, like the previous verse, a yet future accomplishment. That such events as it describes will yet take place in connexion with Israel’s final return is often stated very clearly.” Govett beautifully says: “Did not the Lord open the rock for them in the wilderness in the days of Moses? Is it too difficult for him now?” ¶ Wordsworth suggests we liken these words unto ourselves: “In a spiritual sense, let us regard these words of the Prophet as spoken to ourselves. Let us quit the Babylon of error and confusion. Let us flee from the Chaldeans. Christ has redeemed us with His blood, and leads us through the wilderness of this world, and brings forth water from the Rock—which is Himself (1 Corinthians 10:4).” ¶ Throughout this chapter, Jennings tells us that God has not forgotten His people Israel. Regarding present-day Christendom, Jennings laments, “We see the avalanche of apostasy that is sweeping the great mass of professing Christians ...” Benson says of the people: “... they were exceeding prone to cry, Peace, Peace, to themselves, when there was no solid ground of peace.” Luther warns that arrogance is not only found in the people of Israel, but also of within the Christian community, “We are Christians, therefore we are safe.” As Latter-day Saints, we also are warned that we need to be humble followers of Christ: “And others will he pacify, and lull them away into carnal security, that they will say: All is well in Zion; yea, Zion prospereth, all is well—and thus the devil cheateth their souls, and leadeth them away carefully down to hell” (2 Nephi 28:21). After reciting the usual scriptures associated with “For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel” (Romans 9:6b and others), Jennings wonderfully says, “But it is a serious error to distort such texts into the denial of the national recovery of Israel ... [for the day will come in which] joyous and willing missionaries go, with feet beautiful, to tell of what God hath done for the final deliverance of His people, the children of Jacob.” Amen, see ISAIAH 18.

²³ Rain in Due Season.

²⁴ Divided, broke open.

22 And notwithstanding he hath done all this, and greater also, [there is] no peace, saith the LORD, unto the wicked.

And notwithstanding he hath done all this, and greater also. There is no peace, saith the LORD, unto the wicked. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “There is no peace, saith the Lord, for the wicked.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “There is no peace to the wicked, saith the Lord.” ¶ The invitation to go out of Babylon is to partake of the plan of happiness as the Gospel of Jesus Christ is sometimes called. Those who will not partake of this plan may have moments of gladness, but not the deep powerful peace and joy that come from living the gospel. In Doctrine and Covenants we read: “But learn that he who doeth the works of righteousness shall receive his reward, even peace in this world, and eternal life in the world to come” (D&C 59:23, emphasis added). ¶ Unto the wicked, לְרָשָׁעִים. Keith writes: “The concluding assertion (ISAIAH 48:22) may be regarded as in contrast with that in ISAIAH 48:18; while peace, like a river, is promised to hearkening to God’s commandments—to those who do not there is no peace.” In ISAIAH 57 we likewise read: “But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked” (ISAIAH 57:20–21). ¶ Rawlinson, leaning on Cheyne, has: “This warning phrase occurs again, ‘in the manner of a refrain’ (Cheyne), at the close of what most commentators regard as the second section of this portion of Isaiah’s work (ISAIAH 57:21). The third section closes with a still more solemn warning (ISAIAH 66:24).” ¶ Delitzsch has: “From this time forth the name Koresh (Cyrus), and also the name Babel, never occur again; the relation of the people of Jehovah to heathenism, and the redemption from Babylon, so far as it was foretold and accomplished by Jehovah, not only proving His sole deity, but leading to the overthrow of the idols and the destruction of their worshippers. This theme is now exhausted, and comes into the foreground no more. Wordsworth observes: “... and we now pass on from the type to the Antitype, till at length the magnificent scenery of Universal Redemption and Everlasting Glory is fully revealed to the eye.” The type was Cyrus, as a type of the Messiah, and the Antitype is Jesus Christ, the Messiah.

FIRST POSTED: 13 October 2015

Isaiah 49

Jennings has: “This brings us to the very heart of this book of Isaiah, to the very heart of ‘the Salvation of God,’ nor surely do we need to be told whom we may expect to find there! For the very ‘heart of the heart’ is the 53rd chapter with which we are all familiar, and yet of which we never weary. Hitherto, we may say, we have trodden the ‘court,’ now we shall enter the ‘Holy Place,’ and soon we shall be conducted into the ‘Holy of Holies!’” Christ takes an active role in gathering Israel on both sides of the veil, but He also delegates the work to His servants. Nephi explains ISAIAH 49, after his brothers ask if these things were to be understood physically or spiritually: “And I, Nephi, said unto them: Behold they were manifest unto the prophet [Isaiah] by the voice of the Spirit; for by the Spirit are all things made known unto the prophets, which shall come upon the children of men according to the flesh. Wherefore, the things of which I have read [ISAIAH 48–49] are things pertaining to things both temporal and spiritual; for it appears that the house of Israel, sooner or later, will be scattered upon all the face of the earth, and also among all nations. And behold, there are many who are already lost from the knowledge of those who are at Jerusalem [especially the Ten Tribes taken away captive by Assyria]. Yea, the more part of all the tribes have been led away; and they are scattered to and fro upon the isles of the sea; and whither they are none of us knoweth, save that we know that they have been led away [as warned in Rain in Due Season]. And since they have been led away, these things have been prophesied concerning them, and also concerning all those who shall hereafter be scattered and be confounded [both Ephraim and her companions and Judah and her companions], because of the Holy One of Israel; for against him will they harden their hearts [allusion to rejection of the Christ in the meridian of times]; wherefore, they shall be scattered among all nations and shall be hated of all men. Nevertheless, after they shall be nursed by the Gentiles [gathered principally by Ephraim and her sister Manasseh from among the Gentile nations], and the Lord has lifted up his hand upon the Gentiles and set them up for a standard [in other words, restored the Gospel upon the earth], and their children have been carried in their arms [that is, the children of Israel will be carried—principally by the arms of Ephraim and Manasseh but with the help of other tribes, also], and their daughters have been carried upon their shoulders, behold these things of which are spoken are temporal; for thus are the covenants of the Lord with our fathers; and it meaneth us in the days to come [or the descendants of Lehi and other Book of Mormon peoples], and also all our brethren who are of the house of Israel [this will include a physical gathering to Zion]. And it meaneth that the time cometh that after all the house of Israel have been scattered and confounded, that the Lord God will raise up a mighty nation among the Gentiles [especially the USA, but perhaps other nations in the American Continent are also included], yea, even upon the face of this land; and by them shall our seed be scattered [speaking most especially of the Lamanites who would be scattered throughout the American continent]. And after our seed is scattered the Lord God will proceed to do a marvelous work among the Gentiles [the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and the Gospel restored through the Prophet Joseph Smith], which shall be of great worth unto our seed; wherefore, it is likened unto their being nourished by the Gentiles and being carried in their arms and upon their shoulders [the sharing of the Gospel is then looked at from a spiritual perspective]. And it shall also be of worth unto the Gentiles [descendants of Israel, mostly, within the Gentile nations]; and not only unto the Gentiles but unto all the house of Israel [and to the house of Israel wherever they be], unto the making known of the covenants of the Father of heaven unto Abraham, saying: In thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed [so that Abraham’s covenant would be re-established beginning with Ephraim and Manasseh]. And I would, my brethren, that ye should know that all the kindreds of the earth cannot be blessed unless he shall make bare his arm in the eyes of the nations [which would be done through the appearing of the Father and the Son to the boy Prophet and the coming forth of an angel bearing the everlasting Gospel, as prophesied in the book of Revelation]. Wherefore, the Lord God will proceed to make bare his arm in the eyes of all the nations, in bringing about his covenants and his gospel unto those who are of the house of Israel [including the gathering through the preaching of the Word]. Wherefore, he will bring them again out of captivity [so the gathering begins to take place with much power], and they shall be gathered together to the lands of their inheritance [including the American continent and Israel]; and they shall be brought out of obscurity and out of darkness [obscurity in so many ways, so that the house of Israel had not only lost the Gospel but also, for the most part, with the notable exception of Judah, and then only parts of Judah, knowledge of their heritage in the house of Israel]; and they shall know [not just believe, but know, they will have a strong testimony of it] that the Lord is their Savior and their Redeemer, the Mighty One of Israel” (1Nephi 22:1–12).

vv. 1–6. The Savior is commissioned by the Father to gather Israel. In turn, Israel, a personification of the Lord's disciples, is commissioned to gather the children of Jacob and raise up the Standard of Christ as the light to the nations. Messiah and a servant speak about the gathering. The servant is discouraged and is rebuked for the same. Although we have used the singular, it is clear that all of the Lord's disciples and servants are subsumed under the name of Israel. Israel was scattered because she did not heed the warnings in Rain in Due Season.

1 ¶ AND again: Hearken, O ye house of Israel, all ye that are broken off and are driven out because of the wickedness of the pastors of my people; yea, all ye that are broken off, that are scattered abroad, who are of my people, O house of Israel. LISTEN, O isles, unto me, and hearken ye people from far; The LORD hath called me from the womb; from the bowels of my mother hath he made mention of my name.

Christ is the speaker. When he says, "The LORD hath called me from the womb; from the bowels of my mother he made mention of my name," Christ is speaking of the Father's commission to the Son from the preexistence, and does so through Divine Investiture. ¶ AND again: Hearken, O ye house of Israel, all ye that are broken off and are driven out because of the wickedness of the pastors of my people. Yea, all ye that are broken off, that are scattered abroad, who are of my people, O house of Israel. In Rain in Due Season we read of the scattering of Israel as well as the eventual gathering of the same from the four quarters of the earth. The words my people constitute an elliptical expression utilized by the Lord to speak of the Abrahamic covenant and Rain in Due Season. ¶ Birks well says: "The prediction was fulfilled in the double message to Joseph and Mary, Matthew 1:18; Luke 1:28. The mother here named is the same with the Virgin, mentioned before, ISAIAH 7:14, and plainly confines the words to one definite Person. Thus neither 'the prophetic order,' nor the nation of Israel, nor 'the better part of them,' nor 'the Church of Christ,' can be here intended; but one Person alone, marked off from every other by features which none can share, the Son of the Virgin, the Messiah of God." ¶ Christ speaks the words of the Father about Himself through the principle of Divine Investiture. Our beloved KJV translation—in contrast to the Hebrew text—obscures the more literal language. Instead of "The LORD hath called me from the womb," יהוה נִבְּטֵן קִרְאָנִי for the Hebrew we have: "Jehovah from the womb hath called me" (YLT). The Spanish has: "Jehová me llamó desde el vientre" (RV1960, RV2009). The LORD is Jehovah as represented by the Tetragrammaton (יהוה). When we read "The LORD hath called me from the womb," it gives the false impression that Christ is saying that He called Himself from the womb. We must comprehend, then, that Christ is speaking the words the Father has asked Him to speak. Our Redeemer was foreordained from the preexistence. ¶ The wickedness of the pastors of my people, reminds us of warnings in Jeremiah and Ezekiel.¹ ¶ LISTEN, O isles, unto me, and hearken ye

¹ For instance, we have: "The priests said not, Where is the LORD? and they that handle the law knew me not: the pastors also transgressed against me, and the prophets prophesied by Baal, and walked after things that do not profit" (Jeremiah 2:8, emphasis added); "For the pastors are become brutish, and have not sought the LORD: therefore they shall not prosper, and all their flocks shall be scattered" (Jeremiah 10:21, emphasis added); "Many pastors have destroyed my vineyard, they have trodden my portion under foot, they have made my pleasant portion a desolate wilderness" (Jeremiah 12:10, emphasis added); "Woe be unto the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture! saith the LORD. Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel against the pastors that feed my people; Ye have scattered my flock, and driven them away, and have not visited them: behold, I will visit upon you the evil of your doings, saith the LORD" (Jeremiah 23:1–2, emphasis added). Note that none of these are called my pastors by the Lord. Such pastors have not known the Lord neither have they sought Him, have preached falsely, have transgressed themselves, are involved in priestcraft and have helped scatter God's people. They shall not be scattered forever: "And I will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds; and they shall be fruitful and increase. And I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them: and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall they be lacking, saith the LORD" (Jeremiah 23:3–4, emphasis added). Note that the Lord will replace the wicked pastors with righteous shepherds who will help gather Israel from their scattered condition. And immediately following these words Jeremiah announces the coming of the Great Shepherd, even Jesus Christ: "Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David [Christ] a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that they shall no more say, The LORD liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; But, The LORD liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land" (Jeremiah 23:5–8, emphasis added). These verses are intimately related to the gathering of Israel and to ISAIAH 49. ¶ So also Ezekiel, who exquisitely warns against the false shepherds who feed themselves but not the flocks: "And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel, prophesy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD unto the shepherds; Woe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! should not the shepherds feed the flocks? Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fed: but ye feed not the flock. The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye sought that which was lost; but with force and with cruelty have ye ruled them” (Ezekiel 34:1–4). False pastors fed themselves on the fat of their sheep, but did little for the flock. What happened as a result? Ezekiel continues: “And they were scattered, because there is no shepherd: and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered. My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill: yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them” (Ezekiel 34:5–6, emphasis added). So we see that Israel was scattered in part because those who should have looked after the people did not. Continuing with Ezekiel, we have: “Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD; As I live, saith the Lord GOD, surely because my flock became a prey, and my flock became meat to every beast of the field, because there was no shepherd, neither did my shepherds search for my flock, but the shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock; Therefore, O ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD; Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against the shepherds; and I will require my flock at their hand, and cause them to cease from feeding the flock; neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more; for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them” (Ezekiel 34:7–10). The Lord makes it clear that the true flock will leave the false pastors for the true Shepherd: “For thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out. As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day. And I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country. I will feed them in a good pasture, and upon the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be: there shall they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel. I will feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord GOD. I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick ...” (Ezekiel 34:11–16a). Can it be more wonderful? For the Lord God will Himself seek out His scattered sheep and they will know His voice! He Himself will be their Shepherd. He Himself will bind their broken limbs and heal their sickness. I solemnly testify of these wondrous truths. The Savior is intimately involved in the gathering of Israel from the four corners of the earth. Ezekiel then speaks of the fat cattle [the nations of the world] and the lean cattle [Israel]. The last scattered by the former. Finally, in words of joyful triumph, we see that this Shepherd is none other than Christ Himself, even the Holy One of Israel: “And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd. And I the LORD will be their God, and my servant David a prince [Christ] among them; I the LORD have spoken it. And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land: and they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods. And I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessing. And the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land, and shall know that I am the LORD, when I have broken the bands of their yoke, and delivered them out of the hand of those that served themselves of them. And they shall no more be a prey to the heathen, neither shall the beast of the land devour them; but they shall dwell safely, and none shall make them afraid. And I will raise up for them a plant of renown, and they shall be no more consumed with hunger in the land, neither bear the shame of the heathen any more. Thus shall they know that I the LORD their God am with them, and that they, even the house of Israel, are my people, saith the Lord GOD. And ye my flock, the flock of my pasture, are men, and I am your God, saith the Lord GOD” (Ezekiel 34:23–31, emphasis added). So it is, then, that the broken off and driven of Israel will be gathered back by the Good Shepherd. Is this not a marvellous work and a wonder? The restoration of the Gospel people from far. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “my Word” rather than “unto me.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “HEARKEN to me, isles; and ye nations attend!” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “Give ear, ye islands, and hearken, ye people from afar.” ¶ Who are these people from afar? The very scattered flocks mentioned in ISAIAH 49:1a. Regarding ⲓⲙⲓⲛ, Calvin suggests: “he [the Prophet Isaiah through Divine Investiture] introduces Christ as speaking, and addresses not only the Jews but nations that were beyond the sea, and foreign nations who were at a great distance from Judea, to whom, as we have formerly remarked, he gives the name of ‘Islands.’” Terry B. Ball convincingly argues that the word isles—in Isaiah’s Servant Songs—is associated with “scattered covenant Israel” as shown in 1 Nephi 21:1.² ¶ The LORD hath called me from the womb; from the bowels of my mother hath he made mention of my name. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The Lord called me before I was; He hath made mention of my name from the bowels of my mother.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “(After a long time one will stand up saith the Lord.) From my mother’s womb he mentioned my name.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has been mindful instead of mention. ¶ Elizabeth bore witness of the Christ, while the unborn child was still in Mary’s womb. Mary went off to visit her cousin Elizabeth and the scriptures tell us: “And Mary arose in those days, and went into the hill country with haste, into a city of Juda; And entered into the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elisabeth. And it came to pass, that, when Elisabeth heard the salutation of Mary, the babe leaped in her womb; and Elisabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost: And she spake out with a loud voice, and said, Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb. And whence is this to me, that the mother³ of my Lord⁴ should come to me? For, lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy. And blessed is she⁵ that believed: for there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord” (Luke 1:39–45).

2 And he hath made my mouth like a sharp sword; in the shadow of his hand through a boy-Prophet, even Joseph Smith, and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon would play a huge role in the gathering of Israel back to the Lord as we see in Rain in Due Season.

² Terry B. Ball, Dean of Religious Education, 38th Annual Brigham Young University Sidney B. Sperry Symposium: The Gospel of Jesus Christ in the Old Testament, “Isaiah’s other servant songs.” BYU Broadcasting, 14 March 2010 (see notes on ISAIAH 42:4).

³ Mary.

⁴ Jesus Christ, Emmanuel.

⁵ Mary. Gill contrasts Mary’s belief with Zechariah’s (Elizabeth’s priestly husband) unbelief.

hath he hid me, and made me a polished shaft; in his quiver hath he hid me;

Christ is the speaker. He continues to declare the Father's commission to the Son, and does so through Divine Investiture. ¶ And he hath made my mouth like a sharp sword. The Targum (ⲧ) has, "And he hath put His words in my mouth like a sharp sword." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "And made my mouth like a sharp sword." ¶ These words are descriptive of our Savior. All those around Him were surprised by the strength of His oratory. And not just oratory, but that of one filled with the spirit of God to which He had a right, "And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine: For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes" (Matthew 7:28–29, emphasis added); "And they were astonished at his doctrine: for his word was with power" (Luke 4:32, emphasis added); "Never man spake like this man" (John 7:46b). And not just power to speak, but power to heal: "And they were all amazed, and spake among themselves, saying, What a word is this! for with authority and power he commandeth the unclean spirits, and they come out" (Luke 4:36). Also see ISAIAH 50:4, "The Lord GOD hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary: he wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned." ¶ Birks suggests: "The hiding of the polished shaft in the hand of God is a striking figure of the thirty years of humility and silence, before the Son of God began His prophetic ministry." Lowth well says, in applying these to Christ: "'He hath made my mouth a sharp sword,' 'to reprove the wicked, and to denounce unto them punishment,' says Jarchi [i.e., Rashi], understanding it of Isaiah; but how much better does it suit him, who is represented as having 'a sharp two-edged sword going out of his mouth' (Revelation 1:16), who is himself the Word of God? which 'Word is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart' (Hebrews 4:12)." Luther said: "He does not say simply an arrow but polished, to persuade us that the matter is true. For that reason he calls Him sword and arrow. This is a selected arrow, without any fault, that accomplishes its purpose ... It is an Hebraism." ¶ In the shadow of his hand hath he hid me, and made me a polished shaft; in his quiver hath he hid me. The Targum (ⲧ) has, "In the shadow of His power hath He protected me, and He hath made me like a choice arrow, which is hidden in the quiver (literally, 'the place of armor.'" The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "And hid me under the cover of his hand. He made me like a chosen shaft, and in his quiver kept me concealed." Instead of polished shaft, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has chosen arrow. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) also has chosen arrow, and has protected instead of hid me. ¶ The Lord's disciples can likewise become polished shafts. The Prophet Joseph Smith was an example of one of the greatest polished shafts, who became "a smooth and polished shaft in the quiver of the Almighty."⁶ Elder Orson Hyde taught: "It is true that God generally calls upon the illiterate or unlearned to bear his name and testimony to the world. In this, the policy of our Heavenly Father differs materially from that of the world. Under his policy, none can say that the important truths which the servant of God is required to declare are the result of his great or superior learning. But the question with me is, Must the servant of God always remain an unpolished shaft in the quiver of the Almighty? I answer, No. The Spirit of God directs improvement in everything that is good and useful. If any doubt this, consider what our leading men were when called, and then consider what they now are! The inspiration of God sometimes furnishes the words, but more generally the thoughts only. Then a flow of correct language is highly useful to convey those thoughts clearly and distinctly to others."⁷ ¶ President Brigham Young taught: "Continue to preach, study, and learn, by faith and prayer, until your minds and mouths are opened,⁸ and you understand most perfectly the love of Christ ... Preach the simple, unadorned truth; work out your salvation with diligence, and do that which will guarantee you a warranted deed, an undeniable title to eternal lives. If you feel prayer in you, pray; and if you feel the spirit of preaching in you, preach; call in your brethren, and read the Bible, the Book of Mormon, the Book of Covenants, and the other revelations of God to them; and talk over the things contained in those

⁶ History of the Church 5:401. Also see TPJS, Section Six 1843-1844.

⁷ Hyde, Elder Orson. English Grammar. Delivered before his Class at the Social Hall, Great Salt Lake City, JD 7:68b. 14 December 1858.

⁸ I remember one time around 2002 being at the home of my brother Nicolás and his wife María Inés. Several of her extended family members were there for lunch. The conversation turned to religion and whether priests should marry. For a while, I remained silent but eventually said something to the effect of, "I am a priest and I am married." All eyes turned to me and I suspect I must have embarrassed my dear brother. He proceeded to say that I was not a real priest. Then he asked how long I had studied for the ministry. My mother defended me in an effort to make peace and said something to the effect that I studied the scriptures. My brother continued to insist that I was not a real priest. The spirit bid me to be silent and hold my peace. This continued for a while. At one point Nicolás asked something to the effect: "Is it not true that in your Church any uneducated man can be baptized this week, and within a week or so receive the Priesthood?" I said that this was true, and then the moment had finally arrived for me to speak as a polished shaft, and I responded something along the lines of, "Where not Christ's disciples simple men, fishermen, none of which studied for the ministry?" I had spoken by the Spirit, which was greatly felt at that moment. Thus the scripture in D&C 100:5b was fulfilled in me that day: "... speak the thoughts that I shall put into your hearts, and you shall not be confounded before men." See D&C 100:1-8.

books, and deal them out to your brethren and neighbors; pray with them, and teach them how to control themselves; and let your teachings be sustained by your own example. Teach your families how to control themselves; teach them good and wholesome doctrine, and practice the same in your own lives. This is the place for you to become polished shafts in the quiver of the Almighty.”⁹

3 And said unto me: Thou [art] my servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified.

A disciple of Christ, personified by latter-day Israel, is speaking and quoting Christ as saying to the servant: “Thou art my servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified.” This is, then, the Son’s commission to the disciple. ¶ The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And said to me, ‘Thou Israel art my servant, and by thee I shall be glorified.’” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, for the last clause, “For in thee will I glory.” The AMP includes the elliptical expression: “And [the Lord] said to me ...” ¶ Keith H. Meservy, of Brigham Young University, writes: “As the seed of Abraham, Israel was called to bless, that is, to serve, the nations of the earth. Israel would perform this service by virtue of holding God’s priesthood (ministry) and receiving his revelation, that is, by extending God’s work throughout the world. (Genesis 12; Abraham 2:11.) Within the book of Isaiah, the Lord sees Israel in this light: ‘Thou art my servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified’ (ISAIAH 49:3; 48:20; 43:10).”¹⁰ It has elsewhere beautifully said that Israel was chosen, chosen to serve.

4 Then I said, I have laboured in vain, I have spent my strength for nought and in vain; [yet] surely my judgment [is] with the LORD, and my work with my God.

✓ or, my reward

The same disciple of Christ—mentioned in ISAIAH 49:3—continues speaking. He is feeling despondent although still faithful, for he says: “Surely my judgment is with the LORD, and my work with my God.” This disciple is responding to the Lord after being commissioned to help bring souls unto Christ. ¶ Then I said, I have laboured in vain, I have spent my strength for nought and in vain. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Whereupon I said, I have laboured in vain; for vanity and for nought I have spent my strength.” Instead of I said, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has I have not said. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, in vain instead of for nought. ¶ The words, “I have labored in vain” are a complaint, as well as, “I have spent my strength for nought and in vain.” The personification of latter-day Israel—especially of Ephraim and Manasseh—has him despondently speaking of the results of his efforts. Some have misguidedly thought it was Christ who is here complaining.¹¹ ¶ It is clearly a human tendency to so complain. Alma the younger exclaimed: “O that I were an angel, and could have the wish of mine heart, that I might go forth and speak with the trump of God, with a voice to shake the earth, and cry repentance unto every people!” (Alma 29:1). While most of us have thought of this desire as a virtue, it has been pointed out that Alma himself realized that he had sinned in this desire. Indeed, each one of us plays a small but important part in helping gather the children of Israel. It is easy to become discouraged because we do not see the bigger picture.^{12 13} ¶ Truly, it makes no sense to impute Christ

¹¹ Some exegetes incorrectly assign these words to the human side of the mortal Messiah. They offer scriptural examples in an attempt to prove their point. Cheyne points the לֵאמֹר אֵלֵי אֵלֵי לָמָּה עָזַבְתָּנִי of Psalm 22:1 and Matthew 27:46, “Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani (σάβαχθαυ)?” that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?” Rawlinson points to the: “O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!” (Matthew 23:37). I find the statements in Matthew 27:46 and Matthew 23:37 to be of an entirely different nature than that of ISAIAH 49:4. Both of the Matthew statements have seemed so natural to me. In the first instance we find the Savior in unspeakable pain and, so the scriptures could be fulfilled, He had to bear the weight of our sins, for a moment on the cross, when the Father had to remove His presence. It was a cry of anguish with perhaps a twinge of fright. Nothing could have prepared Him for the pain He was to experience. In the second example from Matthew we find a sadness born of love for us. With a tenderness comparable to motherly love the Savior speaks of gathering His Father’s children as a hen gathers her chicks, if only they would hearken. But in the ISAIAH 49:4 statements we come across something altogether different. It was a complaint that would receive a rebuke from the Lord. I spoke to my daughter-in-law, Terry Billikopf, and asked her to interpret each of these statements. When I came to the third, she gasped. “Did the Savior say that?” she asked in disbelief. “I feel I sort of know a little bit about Him and He would not have said such a thing.” I said, “It sounds a bit whiny whiney doesn’t it?” Indeed. It shows discouragement, lack of faith, and even a lack of understanding of the eternal nature of His work. (Notice that in ISAIAH 49:14 we again see complaining, this time from the mouth of Zion.) Ancient Israel as a nation, or Zion, knew that she would play a key role in the gathering of all of the tribes of Israel from under the heavens (ISAIAH 18). Christ never complained. He was always ready to do the will of the Father. The Savior never gave the Father reason for the smallest rebuke. His whole life, every step and every word, was an effort to please His Father.

¹² Terry Billikopf gave a Sacrament talk in 2015 in which she quoted Elder W. Christopher Waddell, of the Seventy, regarding a former

⁹ Young, President Brigham. JD 1:47b, Great Salt Lake City, 9 April 1852.

¹⁰ Meservy, Keith H. Chapter 10, ISAIAH 53: The Richest Prophecy in the Old Testament on Christ’s Atonement. In, A Witness of Jesus Christ: The 1989 Sperry Symposium on the Old Testament (Richard D. Draper, ed.), p.169.

with the words “I have laboured in vain, I have spent my strength for nought and in vain.” Our Redeemer knew that His expiatory sacrifice would have eternal reaches. ¶ Young well notices “The word תִּהְיֶה missionary who had become inactive, in part out of the discouragement of a “failed mission.” The Lord brought together this disheartened former missionary, who had been inactive for years, and an Elder Misiego from Madrid, Spain. After years of inactivity this former missionary was attending (invited by a friend) a fireside in Arizona, where he met Elder Misiego. He turned out to be the son of the only person he baptized during his mission. Elder Misiego’s father had married in the temple, his three boys had served missions as well as one of his daughters. All of his married children had been sealed in the temple. “Through his efforts, he now learned, scores of lives had been blessed, and the Lord had sent an elder from Madrid, Spain, all the way to a fireside in Arizona to let him know that he had not been a failure.” Waddell, Elder W. Christopher. The Opportunity of a Lifetime, October 2011 General Conference.

¹³ I remember one time years ago going out with the Sister Missionaries, and complaining about a particular family who I had tried to reach again and again to no avail. “Awww, President Billikopf” (at that time I was the Branch President), one of the Sisters said. “Do you want a sticker?” And she gave me one. I put that sticker in my car’s dashboard. Over the years it changed colors many times. It was a reminder of that moment, and of that family. One day, long after the family had moved out of the Branch boundaries and I was no longer the Branch President, I saw the father at the temple! His only daughter had served a mission for the Lord. And I had nothing to do with either of these things. In yet another case, a childhood friend in San Javier, Chile to whom I had given the Book of Mormon after I joined the Church, was baptized in 2014. He called to give me the good news. But he was quick to add, “You had nothing to do with it, it was the wonderful Sister Missionaries.” I chuckle a bit at this. I often wonder about the Elder who gave me the Book of Mormon in Santiago in 1970. I had approached the mission home in order to do a school-required report. Did this Elder think that he labored in vain? Or was he very successful? Either way, he has no idea—if he even remembers—that the teenager he gave the Book of Mormon and Liahonas to joined the Church. I wonder if he struggled with the decision to give me the Book of Mormon. It was not the magazines but the Book of Mormon that touched my heart. Things happen on the Lord’s timetable. Yes, it is human nature to complain. When we are in the service of the Lord and things seem difficult, He reminds us, “The Son of Man hath descended below them all [i.e., had to withstand an infinitesimally greater adversity]. Art thou greater than he?” (D&C 122:8). If we turn away from our complaining and work hard—we still are unprofitable servants—the Lord says, “fear not what man can do, for God shall be with you forever and ever” (D&C 122:9b). We truly do not know what impact we have, if any, about bringing others to drink of the living waters. I should end with a positive example. For over ten years I taught and testified and invited a woman to hear the word and join the Church. I remember, towards the end, weeping as I pleaded with her to pray to the Father about the Book of Mormon. This was a faithful virtuous woman, a member of another religion, but someone who was often willing to listen to my testimony. This time she agreed to pray. Her answer came. She was told to join the Church, but wait for her husband—who had shown little interest in the Church. I immediately knew by the Spirit that her answer had come from God, and I readily and gladly sustained her in that decision to wait. The change in her husband was prompt and miraculous. I had the great privilege of baptizing her and her two children, while a good friend baptized the husband. This good sister was soon serving as the Relief Society President of the Branch and her husband served as a Branch President. Yes, we must never be discouraged. We must never think we labor in vain. Finally, Many of the prophets had varying degrees of success during their lifetimes, yet their words live on and have fortified millions.

(desolation)¹⁴ is a favorite of Isaiah’s, and in this context simply points out that the toil of the servant was fruitless.” ¶ Surely my judgment is with the LORD, and my work with my God. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “But my cause is known to the Lord, and the reward of my work is before my God.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Therefore my cause is with the Lord; and my labour is before my God.” Once again, we know that the person who is discouraged is a disciple of Christ who is here given as a representative of Israel, for this individual has faith in God as he says: “Surely my judgment is with the LORD, and my work with my God.” NOTE: I have found very little support for my perspective among the Gentile exegetes. Namely, only in Cowles who suggests, almost timidly, that perhaps the first disciples of Christ may be here included in these words of discouragement. Ibn Ezra correctly attributes the “And said” in ISAIAH 49:3 to God; but ISAIAH 49:4 to the Prophet Isaiah¹⁵: “Then I said. Then I, the prophet, said ...” IN SUMMARY, the words of discouragement come, at times, from the Lord’s disciples who desire the work to move at a faster pace. Yet, the glorious principle of moral agency has to be respected in this work, permitting each person to make the decision to follow Christ without any compulsion. Let us always remember that Satan is the source of our discouragement and remember to move forward in faith and joy in this marvelous work.

5 And now, saith the LORD—that formed me from the womb that I should [tə be] his servant, to bring Jacob again to him—though Israel be not gathered, yet shall I^c be glorious in the eyes of the LORD, and my God shall be my strength.

✓ or, That Israel may be gathered to him, and I may, &c.

Christ is again speaking of His own commission from the Father to gather Israel and continues to speak through Divine Investiture. The Lord speaks again of being formed from the womb as He did in ISAIAH 49:1, code for His foreordination from the pre-existence. The words, “Though Israel be not gathered,” might include an elliptical lament, “Though Israel be not gathered in great numbers,” or “for such a long time,” or “at the meridian of time,” when the mortal Messiah walked upon the earth. Something seems amiss with the text here. ¶ The translators of the KJV offered an alternative as we see in the margin ¶ which is based on the Keri or Qere (קִרְיָה) of the Masoretic text (ⲙ), that which is to be read rather than what was written (the ketiv or כְּתִיב). The Masoretes were troubled by the many changes in the Hebrew text and wished to preserve the latest text as they had it but so they indicated the corrections to the text via these קרי notations. Most translations, including many of the ancient manuscripts in other languages, preserve the קרי. So also a large number of translations into English are also based on the קרי in this instance, or the marginal reading ||, “That Israel may be gathered to him, and I may, &c.” The ASV has: “... to bring Jacob again to him, and that Israel be gathered unto him.” Leeser likewise has: “...to bring Jacob again to him, that Israel may be gathered unto him.” Similar translations are also found in the AMP, BBE, HCSB, ISV, JPS, NASB, RV, LTV, CEV, CJB, ERV, ESV, GNB, GW, WEB, WEBA and Reina Valera 1960. ¶ Barnes explains this vital matter: “The reading in the text is לו' lo' ('not'); but instead of this the marginal reading ||, or the Keri [קרי] of the Masoretes is, לו' lô, ‘to him.’ ‘Five manuscripts (two ancient),’ says Lowth, ‘confirm the Keri’, or marginal construction of the Masoretes; and so read Aquila, and the Chaldee, Septuagint, and Arabic.’ Gesenius and Rosenmüller adopt this, and suppose that לו' lo' is only a different form of writing לו' lô. ... To me it seems that the parallelism demands that we should adopt the reading of the Keri [קרי], the Septuagint, the Chaldee, and the Syriac, and which has been adopted by Lowth.” ¶ And now, saith the LORD—that formed me from the womb that I should be his servant, to bring Jacob again to him. The Targum (ܬ) has, “And now, saith the Lord, that formed me from the womb (literally, ‘bowels’) to be a perfect (literally, ‘a servant, he served’ expressing a superlative degree)¹⁶ servant before Him, to make the house of Jacob to return to His service.” The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “And now thus saith the Lord who formed me from the womb. To be his servant to gather Jacob to him.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϟ) has, for the last clause, “That I may bring back Jacob unto him.” ¶ Once again, these words speak of Christ our Redeemer, who atoned for our sins, for without Him there would be no purpose in gathering Israel. His calling is from the pre-existence. ¶ So that Israel might be gathered to Him (For I am honored in the sight of the LORD. And My God is My strength) NASB (follows margin ||) . The Targum (ܬ) has, “And Israel shall be brought to fear Him and we shall be glorious before the Lord (the Royal Polyglot reads יִקְרֶינִי, ‘he shall glorify him’); and the Word of my God shall be my support.” The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “And Israel. I shall be gathered and glorified before the Lord. And my God will be my strength.” As in the margin ||, the Peshitta (ܫ) has Israel being gathered. The Douay-Rheims (Ϟ) has, “And Israel will not be gathered together: and I am glorified in the eyes of the Lord, and my God is made my strength.” The DSS 1QIsa^a (א) has my help, עֲזָרִי, while the Masoretic text (מ) has my strength, עֲזָרִי. ¶ Christ exults in the Father and knows of the glory that awaits Him. In Matthew 12:18 we have: “Behold my servant, whom I have chosen; my beloved, in whom my soul is well pleased: I will put my spirit upon him, and he shall shew judgment to the Gentiles.” Or better, AMP, “Behold, My Servant Whom I have chosen, My Beloved in and with Whom My soul is well pleased and has found its delight. I will put My Spirit upon Him, and He shall proclaim and show forth justice to the nations.”

¹⁴ Here, vain.

¹⁵ The Prophet Isaiah here well may stand for the Lord’s disciples in general. There are plenty of exegetes who attribute ISAIAH 49:4 to Isaiah, but who deny it to God for ISAIAH 49:1–3.

6 And he said: It is a light thing that thou shouldst[✓] be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved^{✓✓} of Israel. I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth.

✓ or, Art thou lighter than that thou shouldst, &c.

✓ ✓ or, desolations

These words are Christ’s loving rebuke to the servant’s complaint (voiced in ISAIAH 49:4). Just as the Father commissions the Son, so the Son commissions the disciple. The job of the disciple is to help gather Israel and bring the light of Christ to the nations. ¶ And he said: It is a light thing that thou shouldst be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel. The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “Moreover he said to me, Is it a great thing for thee to be called my servant to reestablish the tribes of Jacob and bring back the dispersion of Israel?” The Douay-Rheims (Ϟ) has, “And he said: It is a small thing that thou shouldst be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to convert the dregs of Israel.” ¶ The raison d’être of every disciple is to help gather Israel. We become the Lord’s helpers in this matter as we open our mouths to testify of Christ and also, as we shall see, work on our family history. We should each be content with our lot in the work. ¶ I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth. The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “Behold I have given thee for the covenant of a race—for the light of nations; that thou mayest be for salvation to the farthest part of the earth.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϟ) also has, “Farthest part of the earth.” ¶ Baltzer suggests: “‘Light’ (אֹר) is the quintessence of justice and righteousness, and means ‘deliverance, help, salvation’ (יְשׁוּעָה) for the nations too.” The heading of 1 Nephi 21 makes it clear that it is Messiah who is the Light to the Gentiles, or Light to the nations (לְאֹרֶךְ נְיִים) as I would prefer to translate it.

¹⁶ In Hebrew, a repetition of a word helps us understand its strength. This is why Pauli translates that this will be a perfect servant.

¶ Upon seeing the babe at the Temple of Jerusalem, Simeon exclaimed: “For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel” (Luke 2:30–32). Both in ISAIAH 42:6–7 and ISAIAH 49 so we see that this Light is intimately associated with the freeing of the prisoners—both from spirit prison in the spirit world as from the shackles of prison for those in mortality. Both require saviors (with lower case) on Mount Zion, preachers of the Gospel of Jesus Christ—who in turn are also a light to the nations, with a lower case. In D&C 86:8–11 we have, “Therefore, thus saith the Lord unto you, with whom the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers— For ye are lawful heirs, according to the flesh, and have been hid from the world with Christ in God—Therefore your life and the priesthood have remained, and must needs remain through you and your lineage until the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began. Therefore, blessed are ye if ye continue in my goodness, a light unto the Gentiles, and through this priesthood, a savior unto my people Israel. The Lord hath said it. Amen.” Again, note the How Beautiful are the Feet principle, wherein the Lord loves to share His titles with His servants. ¶ President Joseph F. Smith taught: “And as I wondered, my eyes were opened, and my understanding quickened, and I perceived that the Lord went not in person among the wicked and the disobedient who had rejected the truth, to teach them; But behold, from among the righteous, he organized his forces and appointed messengers, clothed with power and authority, and commissioned them to go forth and carry the light of the gospel to them that were in darkness, even to all the spirits of men; and thus was the gospel preached to the dead. And the chosen messengers went forth to declare the acceptable day of the Lord and proclaim liberty to the captives who were bound, even unto all who would repent of their sins and receive the gospel. Thus was the gospel preached to those who had died in their sins, without a knowledge of the truth, or in transgression, having rejected the prophets. These were taught faith in God, repentance from sin, vicarious baptism for the remission of sins, the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, And all other principles of the gospel that were necessary for them to know in order to qualify themselves that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit. And so it was made known among the dead, both small and great, the unrighteous as well as the faithful, that redemption had been wrought through the sacrifice of the Son of God upon the cross. Thus was it made known that our Redeemer spent his time during his sojourn in the world of spirits, instructing and preparing the faithful spirits of the prophets who had testified of him in the flesh; That they might carry the message of redemption unto all the dead, unto whom he could not go personally, because of their rebellion and transgression, that they through the ministration of his servants might also hear his words” (D&C 138:29–37). ¶ Just as the Lord delegated this work in the spirit world, so does He delegate it to servants in mortality. President Uchtdorf told a moving story about a statue representing the Christus that was damaged in World War II. The people decided not to have a sculptor re-build the missing hands, as a reminder of the awful days of war. Yet, the “people of the city added on the base of the statue of Jesus Christ a sign with these words: ‘You are my hands.’”¹⁷ ¶ In the Book of Mormon we read the words of Nephi, son of Lehi: “And now, I would prophesy somewhat more concerning the Jews and the Gentiles. For after the book of which I have spoken shall come forth [the Book of Mormon], and be written unto the Gentiles, and sealed up again unto the Lord, there shall be many which shall believe the words which are written; and they shall carry them forth unto the remnant of our seed. And then shall the remnant of our seed know concerning us, how that we came out from Jerusalem, and that they are descendants of the Jews. And the gospel of Jesus Christ shall be declared among them; wherefore, they shall be restored unto the knowledge of their fathers, and also to the knowledge of Jesus Christ, which was had among their fathers. And then shall they rejoice; for they shall know that it is a blessing unto them from the hand of God; and their scales of darkness shall begin to fall from their eyes; and many generations shall not pass away among them, save they shall be a pure and a delightsome people. And it shall come to pass that the Jews which are scattered also shall begin to believe in Christ; and they shall begin to gather in upon the face of the land; and as many as shall believe in Christ shall also become a delightsome people. And it shall come to pass that the Lord God shall commence his work among all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people, to bring about the restoration of his people upon the earth” (2 Nephi 30:3–8).

vv. 7–12. Christ is to be despised for a time. At the meridian of time He will offer salvation and also visit those in spirit prison. Israel shall be gathered from all the nations.

¹⁷ Uchtdorf, President Dieter F. “You Are My Hands” April 2010 General Conference.

7 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, the Redeemer of Israel, [and] his Holy One, to him whom man despiseth, [✓] to him whom the nations abhorreth, to a servant of rulers: Kings shall see and arise, princes also shall worship, because of the LORD that is faithful, [and] the Holy One of Israel, and ~~he shall choose thee.~~

✓ or, that is despised in soul

Thus saith the LORD, the Redeemer of Israel, his Holy One, to him whom man despiseth, to him whom the nations abhorreth, to servant of rulers: The Targum (Ⓢ) has, for the second half, “To them that are despised among the nations, to them that are scattered among the kingdoms, to them that are the servants to rulers.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Thus saith the Lord who delivered thee—the God of Israel, ‘Hallow him who despised his life, him who was abhorred by the nations, the slaves of the Archons.’” Instead of whom man despiseth, the Peshitta (Ⓟ) has, as in the margin ||, to him whose soul is despised. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “To the soul that is despised, to the nation that is abhorred, to the servant of rulers.” ¶ Kay says that Christ was “an object of contempt to the sensual mind ... subjecting Himself to the despotic will of ‘the rulers of this world’ (1 Corinthians 2:6), even to the extent of enduring the death of a slave.” Wordsworth has: “Literally, who is despised by the soul, Heb. nephesh [נֶפֶשׁ]; i.e., despised by the mere animal passion of man, which judges according to the outward appearance; and is therefore carnal, and not spiritual.” Jenour has: “Christ was, and still is, despised by the world at large.” Barnes writes: “The same idea is more fully expressed in ISAIAH 53:3–4, that the Messiah would be rejected and treated with abhorrence by the nation [of Israel] as such.” ¶ Many of the exegetes speak of the abhorrence that Jews have for Christ. In my lifetime I have seen a profound change in this area, where many Jews have nothing but positive things to say about Jesus. This change began more than a century ago, after the publication of the Book of Mormon. Elder Joseph Fielding Smith shared how this change had taken root: “Perhaps that is all I need to read in regard to this question, but I wish to say something now about the Jews and see if they are beginning to believe in Christ or not, and if they are now commencing to gather to their promised land in fulfillment of these predictions. One hundred years ago if the name of Jesus Christ had been favorably mentioned in a Jewish synagogue, the entire congregation would have been greatly offended. If you have the History of the Church, Volume 3, turn to page

356, and you will find a letter written by Rabbi Landau to his son who had become a Christian. It is a letter from a heart-broken father to a wayward son, and the father says that this is the hardest blow that he ever received and the punishment was almost more than he could bear. We have seen that the Book of Mormon states that in the last days the Jews will begin to believe in Christ. You know that some of the critics of the Book of Mormon declare that it is a stupid work written by Joseph Smith or by someone for him, but how could Nephi say that in the last days the Jews would be gathered again and they would begin to believe in Christ? How could Joseph Smith say it, even, one hundred years ago, when the Jews so bitterly rejected all things that were Christian? I have several statements here depicting the present day attitude of the Jews concerning Jesus Christ. Isaac K. Funk, of the publishing house of Funk & Wagnalls, got out an edition of George Croly’s work on the ‘Wandering Jew,’ in 1901. The first edition of this work was published in 1827. Dr. Funk gathered from leading Jews their opinions concerning Jesus and published them in this work, which he gave the title ‘Tarry Thou Until I Come.’ Some of these expressions I will read. Rabbi Henry Berkowitz of Philadelphia: ‘This Jew, Jesus, is the greatest, noblest rabbi of them all.’ Isadore Singer, Ph.D.: ‘I regard Jesus of Nazareth as a Jew of the Jews, one whom all Jewish people are learning to love. His teaching has been an immense service to the world in bringing Israel’s God to the knowledge of hundreds of millions of mankind. The great change in Jewish thought concerning Jesus of Nazareth, I cannot better illustrate than by this fact: ‘When I was a boy, had my father who was a very pious man, heard the name of Jesus uttered from the pulpit of our synagogue, he and every other man in the congregation would have left the building and the rabbi would have been dismissed at once. Now it is not strange in many synagogues, to hear sermons preached eulogistic of this Jesus, and nobody thinks of protesting—in fact, we are all glad to claim Jesus as one of our people.’ Morris Jastrow, Jr., Ph.D.: ‘From the historic point of view Jesus is to be regarded as a direct successor of the Hebrew prophets. His teachings are synonymous with the highest spiritual aspirations of the human race. Like the prophets, He lays the chief stress upon pure conduct and moral ideas, but He goes beyond the prophets in His absolute indifference to theological speculations and religious rites. It has been commonly said that the Jews rejected Jesus. They did so in the sense in which they rejected the teachings of the earlier prophets, but the question may be pertinently asked, Has Christianity accepted Jesus? ... The long hope-for reconciliation between Judaism and Christianity will come when once the teachings of Jesus shall have become the axiom of human conduct.’ Max Nordau, M.D.: Jesus is soul of our soul, as He is flesh of our flesh. Who, then, could think of excluding Him from the people of Israel? St. Peter will remain the only Jew who said of the son of David, 'I know not the man.' If the Jews up to the present time have not publicly rendered homage to the sublime moral beauty of the figure of Jesus, it is because their tormentors have always persecuted, tortured, assassinated them in His name. The Jews have drawn their conclusions from the disciples as to the Master, which was wrong; a wrong pardonable in the eternal victims of the implacable, cruel hatred of those who called themselves Christians. Every time a Jew mounted to the source and contemplated Christ alone without his pretended faithful, he cried with tenderness and admiration, putting aside the Messianic mission, 'This man is ours. He honors our race, and we claim Him as we claim the Gospels—flowers of Jewish literature, and only Jewish.' This shows the changed feelings of the Jews today, and we see that Nephi's prophecy is being fulfilled."¹⁸ ¶ Kings shall see and arise, princes also shall worship, because of the LORD that is faithful. The Targum (ⲧ) has, "Kings shall look at them; and princes shall rise and fall prostrate, because of the Lord that is faithful, and the Holy One of Israel, and He shall delight in thee." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "Kings shall see him and chiefs shall rise up and they shall worship him for the sake of the Lord; because the Holy One of Israel is faithful, therefore I have chosen thee." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "Kings shall see, and princes shall rise up, and adore for the Lord's sake, because he is faithful, and for the Holy One of Israel, who hath chosen thee." ¶ Keith says: "A contrast is drawn between the treatment which [Christ] would long experience, and the honour which would be paid him when in the end he would come to take unto himself the kingdom."

8 Thus saith the LORD: In an acceptable time have I heard thee, O isles of the sea, and in a day of salvation have I helped thee; and I will preserve thee, and give thee my servant for a covenant of the people, to establish the earth, ✓ to cause to inherit the desolate heritages;

✓ or, raise up

Thus saith the LORD: In an acceptable time have I heard thee, O isles of the sea, and in a day of salvation have I helped thee. The Targum (ⲧ) has, "Thus saith the Lord, at the time when ye do my will, I hear your prayer, and in the day of distress I uphold you with salvation and support." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "Thus saith the Lord, 'In an acceptable time I have hearkened to thee, and in a day of salvation helped thee.'" ¶ Redak points our attention to the Targum (see above), where there is a connection between our doing the will of God and He hearing our prayers. Elder Gene R. Cook likewise shared: "A repentant heart and good works are the very conditions required to have grace restored to us. When someone pleads fervently in prayer for an answer, the answer may be more conditioned on repentance of personal sins than on any other factor."¹⁹ ¶ Whitehouse says about an acceptable time, "The 'time of favour' means the time when God's compassion and deliverance of His people begins to dawn." As Wade mentions, Paul likened this to his own times: "(For he saith, I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of salvation have I succoured thee: behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation)" (2 Corinthians 6:2). The Savior's expiatory sacrifice took place in the meridian of time and after His death, the Savior visited spirit prison (see ISAIAH 49:9). The New Testament mentions baptism for the dead, but it would not be until after the restoration of the Gospel that such would be carried out at a grander scale. ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie suggests that an acceptable time is in relation to the coming of the Lord: "Isaiah spoke of the Messiah coming 'in an acceptable time' (ISAIAH 49:8), and Daniel named the very time, but he used imagery and figurative language that can only be understood by the spirit of revelation. He said that 'from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the Messiah the Prince shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks.' He said that after that period 'shall Messiah be cut off.'"²⁰ Cut off is an expression of the Hebrew Bible, meaning to die, especially used of a weaver being cut off or disconnected when finished. The Merriam-Webster's collegiate dictionary (11th ed.) has: "to bring to an untimely end." So we have in ISAIAH 38:12: "Mine age is departed, and is removed from me as a shepherd's tent: I have cut off like a weaver my life: he will cut me off with pining sickness: from day even to night wilt thou make an end of me." The Savior's life was cut off when He was still in His prime. It was at this point, when He was cut off, that the Savior went as a spirit to the Spirit World, as we see in ISAIAH 49:9. ¶ Once again, recall ISAIAH 49:1, about the isles of the sea representing "scattered covenant Israel."²¹ We have a ¹⁹ Cook, Elder Gene R. Receiving Divine Assistance through the Grace of the Lord. April 1993 General Conference.

²⁰ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. The Promised Messiah: The First Coming of Christ, p.459.

²¹ Terry B. Ball, Dean of Religious Education, 38th Annual Brigham Young University Sidney B. Sperry Symposium: The Gospel of Jesus similar idea represented in the Book of Mormon: “And these will I place in the nethermost part of my vineyard” (Jacob 5:13a). Then would come the restoration of the Gospel and the gathering of Israel.

¹⁸ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Signs of the Times. "Restoration of Israel and Judah." Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret News Press, 1952. Talk delivered 28 October 1942, Barratt Hall, pp. 58 ff.

¶ And I will preserve thee, and give thee my servant for a covenant of the people, to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages. The Targum (ܬ) has, “For I will maintain thee, and I will give thee for a covenant with the people, to raise up the righteous that lie in the dust, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages.” The LXX (Θ) reads, “And have formed thee and given thee for the covenant of nations that thou mayst reduce the earth to order and possess desolate heritages.” Instead of to establish the earth, the Peshitta (ܣ) has a light to the Gentiles (Lamsa) / a light to the nations (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And I have preserved thee, and given thee to be a covenant of the people, that thou mightest raise up the earth, and possess the inheritances that were destroyed.” The DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) has and I will preserve thee (וַאֲצִירְךָ, Gesenius, watch, keep) and give thee (בָּתֵּן, give),

וַאֲצִירְךָ וְאֶתְּנֶנְךָ, while the Masoretic text (M) has and I have preserved thee (וַאֲצִירְךָ, Gesenius, watch, keep) and given thee (בָּתֵּן, give), וַאֲצִירְךָ וְאֶתְּנֶנְךָ, as does, at least partially, the DSS 1QIsa^b (Q), וַאֲצִירְךָ וְאֶתְּנֶנְךָ.

¶ Regarding the desolate heritages, several exegetes speak of the land of Israel as it was found during the period of the Babylonian captivity. In the latter-days both Israel as well as Zion could well be included here. So also the spirit world could well be termed desolate heritages. ¶ Faussett suggests, regarding לְבְרִית עָם: “covenant of the people—(see on ISAIAH 42:6). ‘The people,’ in the singular, is always applied exclusively to Israel ... cause to inherit ... desolate heritages—image from the desolate state of Judea ... Literally, Judea lying desolate for ages shall be possessed again by Israel (compare ISAIAH 61:7), ‘in their land’).” Barnes says: “The ‘people’ (עָם) refers doubtless primarily to the Jews ... To them he was first sent, and his own personal work was with them ... To establish the earth. Marg. as in the Hebrew, ‘to raise up.’ The language is derived from restoring the ruins of a land that has been overrun by an enemy, when the cities have been demolished, and the country laid waste.” Kay makes two observations in this verse: “Obs. 1. Mr Cheyne, who follows Rückert in grouping together ISAIAH 49–52, gives as the title of the whole section; ‘VICARIOUS ATONEMENT.’ Obs. 2. In ISAIAH 58:5, the Day of Atonement is referred to as ‘the day of acceptance.’ Compare the same noun in ISAIAH 56:7, 10; 61:2; Exodus 28:38.” A remnant would be preserved and the Savior—the Father’s Servant—would be given for her redeemer.

9 That thou mayest say to the prisoners: Go forth; to them that [are] sit in darkness: Shew yourselves. They shall feed in the ways, and their pastures [shall be] in all high places.

That thou mayest say to the prisoners: Go forth; to them that sit in darkness: Shew yourselves. The Targum (ܬ) has, “Saying to them who are prisoners among the nations, Go forth to them who are kept back in darkness among the kingdoms; shew yourselves to the light.” The LXX (Θ) reads, “Saying to them who are in bonds, Go forth; and to them who are in darkness, ‘Come into light.’” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “That thou mightest say to them that are bound: Come forth: and to them that are in darkness: Shew yourselves.” ¶ Of the Gentile authors, a few seem surprisingly correct in their exegetical observations. Kay has: “to the prisoners] in the dungeon of spiritual darkness; in the prison-house of Hades (ISAIAH 24:22).” Cowles, and several others, point to the similarity with ISAIAH 42:7: “Figures accumulate to express the joyful change. The people are as prisoners coming forth from their prison-houses (see ISAIAH 42:7); as men long in darkness, now coming forth to the light of day.” The Geneva notes include: “To them who are in the prison of sin and death.” Rawlinson says: “‘The prisoners’ here are not the captives in Babylon, but the servants of sin throughout the world. Christ would say to them, ‘Go forth.’ He would summon them by his messengers to repent and be converted, and quit the service of sin, and ‘go forth’ from the kingdom of darkness, and ‘show themselves’ as lights of the world (Matthew 5:14; Philippians 2:15), walking as children of the light (Ephesians 5:8).” ¶ We would need the light of latter-day revelation to begin to understand these scriptures (including ISAIAH 24:22; 42:7). The Prophet Joseph Smith replaces an elliptical are for sit, so it should rather read, and to them that sit in darkness. The Hebrew word יָשָׁב, may be translated into English with such words as sit, remain, inhabit, dwelt (Gesenius, DBD, HALOT). Those who sit, remain or dwelt in darkness are those spirits in prison. ¶ Elder John Morgan explained: “During the three days that the body of Jesus lay in the tomb, then, where was the spirit that formerly inhabited the body? According to the testimony of Peter, as recorded in the 3rd Chapter of the first epistle of Peter, it was preaching to the spirits in prison (1 Peter 3:18–19) and Isaiah tells us that it was for this that Jesus was to come; it was to loose the bonds of the prisoners; it was to open the prison door.”²² Elder Charles W. Penrose likewise taught: “What is to become of the myriads that have passed into the spirit world without even having heard the name of Jesus Christ? What is to become of all the Jews—numbers of good men and good women amongst them—what is to become of the millions of Jews who have passed away into the spirit world from every land—and some of them in a great hurry too, driven by the hands of ‘Christians’—who have never obeyed any Gospel at all? ... The Prophet Joseph Smith, previous to his death, obtained from the Almighty a knowledge in regard to the condition of the dead ... the Prophet Joseph Smith saw that the Gospel of the Kingdom could be preached not only to people in the flesh, but to people out of the flesh; that when people depart this life they retain their identity; that they can be informed; that they can receive and reject; and he was also shown that the time must come when all shall hear the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, because by that they shall be judged ... Everyone must hear the Gospel and be judged by it ... This was a part of the mission of Christ. He was not only sent to preach good tidings to the meek, but it seems he had a mission to some that were in captivity ... In the 49th chapter of Isaiah, we find some remarks of the same kind: ‘That thou mayest say to the prisoners, Go forth; to them that are in darkness, Shew yourselves.’ I ask, were these predictions which it is generally admitted were uttered concerning Jesus Christ, fulfilled? ... Where did the ... spirit of Christ go to after it left the body? ... Says one, ‘it went to heaven, of course.’ Stay a moment. Three days after this we find this same Jesus, whose body was placed away in the tomb, walking in the garden ... Jesus, while walking in the garden, met Mary; and Mary, supposing him to be the gardener, asked where they had laid Jesus. Making himself known to her, she sprang towards him. Whereupon he said to her, ‘Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.’ Now, there were three days between the placing of Christ’s body in the tomb and the raising of it. Where was Jesus, the real Jesus, the living Jesus, while his body was lying in the tomb? ... We read in the third chapter of the first epistle of Peter, 18th to the 20th verses: ‘Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit: By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; Which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water.’ Where was he? Where did he go? ‘Put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit, he went and preached unto the spirits in prison.’ That is where Christ was between the time of his death and his resurrection, preaching deliverance to the captives, the opening of the prison to them who were bound ... Christ went and preached the Gospel to the dead ... So [also] we learn from the revelations of God, through the Prophet Joseph Smith, that when the servants of God depart from this stage of action they follow the footsteps of the illustrious captain of our salvation, they preach deliverance to the captives, they publish the Gospel of peace in the regions of the departed ... all people whoever dwelt on the earth will have the privilege of hearing the Gospel of Christ ... according to the revelations of this great Prophet, Joseph Smith—one of the greatest Prophets that ever breathed the breath of life ... those who receive the Gospel in the spirit world can have the necessary earthly ordinances attended to for them by proxy, that is, the living can be baptized for the dead ... Did you ever think of the principle of one dying for another? Did not Jesus suffer for all on the principle of a vicarious atonement? On this principle of proxy rests the whole scheme of human redemption. Without that principle of proxy, everyone must pay the penalty of blood and death, for the wages of sin is death.”²³ ¶ Darkness. Leaning on Elder Bruce R. McConkie, Robert L. Millet wrote: “With but few exceptions, outer darkness²⁴ refers to hell, the place of suffering and sadness and confrontation in the spirit world (see Alma 34:33; 40:13–14; 41:7; D&C 38:5; 138:22, 30, 57; ISAIAH 49:9).²⁵ ¶ They shall feed in the ways, and their pastures shall be in all high places. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They shall dwell in all the paths, and by all the rivers shall be the place of their dwelling.” The LXX (Ⲙ) reads, “In all the highways they shall be fed, and there shall be pasture for them in all the paths.” Instead of high places, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has highways (Lamsa) / paths (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the second clause, “And their pastures shall be in every plain.” ¶ And their pastures shall be in all high places. Barnes writes: “In the remainder of this verse, and in the following verses, the Messiah is represented under the image of a shepherd, who leads forth his flock to green fields, and who takes care that they shall be guarded from the heat of the sun, and shall not hunger nor thirst.” In ISAIAH 58:14b we have: “I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father: for the mouth of

Christ in the Old Testament, “Isaiah’s other servant songs.” BYU Broadcasting, 14 March 2010 (see notes on ISAIAH 42:4).

²² Morgan, Elder John. Salvation for the Dead. Discourse delivered in the Assembly Hall, Salt Lake City, 20 January 1884.

²³ Penrose, Elder Charles W., Divisions of Modern Christendom, delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 17 July 1881.

²⁴ The outer darkness in spirit prison of those who await the resurrection, in contrast to outer darkness as the abode of those who do no inherit a kingdom of glory.

²⁵ Millet, Robert L. The Power of the Word: Saving Doctrines from the Book of Mormon, p.168.

the LORD hath spoken it,” this speaks of spiritual blessings.

10 They shall not hunger nor thirst, neither shall the heat nor sun smite them; for he that hath mercy on them shall lead them, even by the springs of water shall he guide them.

They shall not hunger nor thirst, neither shall the heat nor sun smite them. The LXX (⚡) reads, “They shall not hunger nor shall they thirst, nor shall the burning wind nor the sun smite them.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has strike instead of smite. ¶ In this context, it seems we are speaking of spiritual hunger and thirst, as in Amos 8:11. Isaiah sees a time when those thirsty and hungry are fed and liberated—and thus gathered. Wordsworth has: “That all these promises are fulfilled in Christ, appears from the adoption of these words in the Apocalypse, and from the application of them to Him.” In the Book of Revelation we have: “After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands; And cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb. And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders and the four beasts, and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God, Saying, Amen: Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen. And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes” (Revelation 7:9–17). The Prophet Joseph Smith, after quoting some of these beautiful verses, and calling the 144 thousand “Saviors on Mount Zion,” associated these happenings with the winding up scenes and exhorted all to partake of these joys: “Oh! I beseech you to go forward, go forward and make your calling and election sure.”²⁶

²⁶ TPJS, p. 366, also see 347.

¶ Elder George Q. Cannon said: “There will be no time in the vast future when our cause for thanksgiving and for gratitude will cease; for the more we know and the more we comprehend the purposes of God, the more gratitude we will have. The angels who surround his throne indulge in thanksgiving and praise to God and the Lamb to a greater extent than we can do, because their causes for thanksgiving are greater; they have attained to a glorious exaltation, and they bask in the sunshine of the presence of the great Eternal. Although they are there, they still have cause to sing Hosannah to God and the Lamb; though they are in possession of such great blessings, dwelling as they do in a state of immortality, and freed from the power of Satan, sin, and death, they, nevertheless, see causes for thanksgiving to God our Father; and the nearer we approximate to them and to their perfection, the more we shall have of this feeling in our hearts, the more causes of thanksgiving we will perceive, and the more frequently we will express these feelings.”²⁷ This idea of the sun not hurting also reminds us of ISAIAH 33:14b. ¶ For he that hath mercy on them shall lead them, even by the springs of water shall he guide them. The LXX (⚡) reads, “But he who hath compassion on them will comfort them and lead them to bursting springs of water.” Instead of guide them, the Peshitta (⚡) has bring them (Lamsa) / take them (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “For he that is merciful to them, shall be their shepherd, and at the fountains of waters he shall give them drink.” ¶ The Talmud tradition (Seder Nezikin, Sanhedrin 92a) here has something close to the LDS belief that in the Spirit world righteous Priesthood holders will be given an assignment related to the Priesthood office and authority held in this life: “Rabbi Eleazar said: Every leader who leads the community with mildness will be privileged to lead them in the next world [too], as it is written, for he that hath mercy on them shall lead them; even by the springs of water shall he guide them” (Talmud, Soncino).

11 And I will make all my mountains a way, and my highways shall be exalted.

The Targum (⚡) has, “And I will make all the mountains trodden paths like a way before them, and the foot-paths shall be cast up.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “And I will make every mountain a highway, and every path a pasture for them.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has paths (sémitæ, Vulgate, ⚡) instead of highways. Cheyne notes: “My mountains] Not merely the mountains of Canaan (as ISAIAH 14:25), but those of the whole earth; it is an assertion of Jehovah’s universal lordship.”

²⁷ Cannon, Elder George Q. The Saints’ Causes of Gratitude. JD 11:70a. 1 January 1865.

Rawlinson explains: “I will make all my mountains a way. No obstacles shall prevent the return of the wanderers. Mountains shall be as roads, and as highways lifted up.” The Lord will prepare the paths for the remnant of Israel to gather back to Zion.

12 And then, O house of Israel, behold, these shall come from far; and, lo, these from the north and from the west; and these from the land of Sinim.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “South” rather than Sinim and other than that parallels the Masoretic (מ) text. The LXX (Θ) reads, “Behold they from afar shall come, some from the north and the west and others from the land of the Persians.” Instead of west, the Peshitta (ܣ) has islands of the sea (Lamsa) / sea (BPE); instead of land, the Peshitta (ܣ) has coast (Lamsa) / sea (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Behold these shall come from afar, and behold these from the north and from the sea, and these from the south country.” ¶ Rawlinson explains, regarding the north and the west,

מִצְפּוֹן וּמִיָּם, “literally, from the north and from the sea, which generally means ‘the west,’ but which, in one enumeration of the points of the compass (Psalm 107:3), is certainly ‘the south.’”²⁸ ¶ A number of interesting suggestions have been made by the scholars about Sinim, the most frequently being that of the land of China. The vital point is that the lost tribes are included in this description of the world, and that these would be gathered back into the fold.²⁹

vv. 13–17. Jerusalem will not be forsaken by the Lord. President Wilford Woodruff spoke about these verses of Isaiah, also applying them to the early Saints: “The Lord, in His mercy and wisdom, has led this people to these valleys of the mountains. It is ordained of God that Zion is to be established here. Here is the Tabernacle that the Prophet spoke of as a covering from the storm and the wind, etc. These temples are here in fulfillment of prophecy. We have four of them in this

²⁸ In Psalm 107:3 we have מִצְפּוֹן וּמִיָּם: “And gathered them out of the lands, from the east [i.e., from the rising of the sun], and from the west [i.e., from the setting of the sun], from the north, and from the south.” Some render it “from the east, and from the west, from the north, and from the sea” (Leeser, but also see ABP {LXX (Θ)}, AMP, CJB, YLT, ERV, ESV, FDB, GLB, JPS, RV1865, SRV, SSE, TLV). In order to make it south, in Psalm 107:3, the AMP Bible specifically means the Red Sea for the sea: “And gathered them out of the lands, from the east and from the west, from the north and from the [Red] Sea in the south.”

²⁹ I love the following from the Prophet scribe, President Joseph Fielding Smith: The Way to Perfection: Short Discourses on Gospel Themes. 9th ed. Salt Lake City: Genealogical Society of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1951, pp. 129–135.

State. President Young was honored of God in the establishment of these things. He lived long enough to dedicate the corner stone of this Temple on this block, into which the Latter-day Saints go and deliver their friends who are in the prison house, and attend to the ordinances of the house of God for them, in fulfillment of the ancient Prophets, who spake as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost, to the effect that saviors should be raised up on Mount Zion in the latter days while the kingdom is the Lord’s. Zion has got to arise”³⁰

13 ¶ Sing, O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; for the feet of those who are in the east shall be established; and break forth into singing, O mountains: for they shall be smitten no more; for the LORD hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted.

Sing, O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; for the feet of those who are in the east shall be established. The LXX (Θ) reads, “Rejoice heavens; and let the earth be glad.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Give praise, O ye heavens, and rejoice, O earth.” As LDS we often speak of Zion in the American Continent (and the gathering to the Rocky Mountains) as well as Zion in Jerusalem. For instance, Elder Wilford Woodruff beautifully testified, full of gratitude for what the Lord had done for the early Saints: “This is how I feel, this is my faith. I read the Bible, the Book of Mormon and the Book of Covenants, and I look for everything contained in them to be fulfilled. We are making history day by day, and we are fulfilling the events which they predicted would transpire in the latter days. Isaiah, when he saw in vision this people in the mountains, exclaims: ‘Sing, O heavens &c. [quotes ISAIAH 49:13–15]. In the own due time of the Lord all things spoken by the prophets will be literally fulfilled.”³¹ From the words of Elder Woodruff, it is clear that he is speaking—and giving these scriptures the context in likening them to the Saints—of the pioneers moving into Utah and surrounding territories. The very act of gathering Israel from the four corners of the earth is proof that God has not forgotten His people. The gathering of Israel begins with Ephraim but shall encompass the whole earth until Judah is also brought in. The Book of Mormon clarifies, however, that this particular verse deals with the east or those in the land of Israel, of the house of Judah. The ³⁰ President Wilford Woodruff, General Conference, April 1898, pp. 31–32.

³¹ Woodruff, Elder Wilford., Revelation, Prophesying, Predictions of the Servants of God, Etc., 1 August 1880.

Lord here is speaking about blessing the Jews, for the feet of those who are in the east shall be established. I rejoice in anticipation to this day. Joseph Fielding Smith declared: “The Jews have remained a distinct people from the beginning of their history. They have been spoken of as the great miracle, bearing evidence of the divinity of the scriptures. A great miracle they have been and are. Why have they remained intact and a distinct people while scattered among the nations? The fact that they have remained a distinct race, maintaining their customs and religious beliefs, while scattered over all the earth, is evidence of the truth of prophecy ... They are today a standing miracle in their scattered condition, silently testifying to the covenant to Israel and of the divinity of Jesus Christ, yet, themselves, not believing in him. A better day is dawning for the Jew and for the Lamanite. The time is now at hand spoken by ancient prophets when the Lord shall feel after them ... The purposes of the Father are being filled rapidly and in the near future great events shall take place in relation to the fulfillment of these promises made to Judah and Ephraim, in which the Lamanite on this Land shall also be considered.”³² ¶ And break forth into singing, O mountains: for they shall be smitten no more. The Targum (ⓧ) has, “And be glad, O mountains, with praise.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “Let the mountains resound with bursts of joy; for God hath compassionated his people.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “Ye mountains, give praise with jubilation.” ¶ Elder Wilford Woodruff said: “He has promised to sustain Zion, and when the Prophet saw this Zion of God in the mountains [seems to imply the Rocky Mountains—GB], his soul was filled with joy and he cried, ‘Sing, O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; and break forth into singing, O mountains: for the Lord hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted.’”³³ This part of the prophecy has been fulfilled. They will also come when the mountains of Judea shall shout for joy, too. ¶ For the LORD hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted. The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “And comforted those of his people who were afflicted.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has poor ones instead of afflicted. ¶ This is an allusion to ISAIAH 40:1–2a,

נִחְמוּ נִחְמוּ עַמִּי יֵאמֶר אֱלֹהֵיכֶם:
דִּבְרוּ עַל-לֵב יְרוּשָׁלַם

14 But, behold, Zion hath said: The LORD hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me--but he will show that he hath not.

But, behold, Zion hath said: The LORD hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me. The Targum (ⓧ) has, “But Zion said, The Lord hath taken His Shekinah from me, and the Lord hath cast me away.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “Hath Sion then said, ‘The Lord hath quite forsaken me,’ and, ‘Why hath the Lord forgotten me?’” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has the Lord instead of my Lord. ¶ Regarding צִיּוֹן, Henderson tenderly says, “To interpret Zion, as meaning the Christian church, would do violence to the remaining portion of the chapter. No language could more pathetically and tenderly describe the feelings of the Jewish church, or the love of God towards her, than that here employed.” The latter-day Gathering of Israel and Judah has begun, and the Lord has not forgotten her. Whitehouse has: “It is a characteristically Semitic conception that it is not the individuals who constitute the nation, but that the nation or town brings forth individuals. It is likewise an ancient idea that the exiles when withdrawn from the tribe are no longer regarded, properly speaking, as children of their original native country, but as the offspring of a foreign woman.” Barnes writes: “The object of the prophet is to furnish the assurance that, whatever might be the trials and the sufferings of his people, God had not forgotten them, and he neither could nor would forsake them.” ¶ Elder Wilford Woodruff testified: “Now this Zion of God has been before his face from before the foundation of the world, and it is no more going to fail in the latter days than any of the purposes of God are going to fail, hence I look upon this work as the work of God, and it makes no difference to the Lord Almighty, nor to his Saints, what the world may think or do about it, or what course they may pursue with regard to it; they cannot stop its progress, because it is the work of God ... for as the Lord God Almighty lives, so true will the work, the foundation of which has been laid in these latter days, increase and continue until its consummation is effected, and the great Zion of God is established in beauty, power and glory, and the dominion of the kingdom of our God extends over the whole earth. Joseph Smith laid the foundation of this work; he was chosen by the Lord for that purpose, and was ordained by prophets and inspired men who formerly held the keys of the kingdom of God upon the earth. They laid their hands upon his head and ordained him to the Priesthood, and gave him power to unlock the heavens and to administer the ordinances of the house of God upon the earth. This work he performed in the face of difficulty, persecution, opposition and oppression; but the hand of God sustained him. He knew what few men or people on the whole face of the earth know—that God lives, and he also knew that the work whose foundations he laid was the work of God.”³⁴ ¶ But he will show that he hath not. In the next verse, we see how intimately the Lord cares for Israel and will never forget her.

³² Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Way to Perfection: Short Discourses on Gospel Themes. 9th ed. Salt Lake City: Genealogical Society of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1951, pp. 129–135.

³³ Woodruff, Elder Wilford. Woodruff, delivered in the Salt Lake Assembly Hall, at the Semi-Annual Conference, of the Salt Lake Stake of Zion, Saturday Afternoon, 3 July 1880.

15 For can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion[✓] on the son of her womb? Yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee, O house of Israel.

✓ from having compassion

For can a woman forget³⁵ her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? The Targum (ⲧ) has, for the first half, “Is it possible that a mother can forget her child.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Can a woman forget her child? or not have compassion on the offspring of her womb?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “Can a woman forget her infant, so as not to have pity on the son of her womb?” ¶ Jennings poetically writes: “God has made one earthly relationship more irrefragable than any; for it is quite independent of any responsive affection. The mother holds to her breast her new-born babe, so dependent on her as it is for everything that shall sustain life, this affects every maternal emotion. With a tenderness no words can depict she yearns over that frail little creature, unconscious as it is of all her tendernesses. Can she actually forget it? Is it not a law of nature, for her at least, though none other care for her infant? It is hers, and she can think of little else. Nor does Jehovah here compare His thoughtful love to that of some callous debased woman of earth, who may forget, and indeed has all too frequently forgotten and forsaken her infant. No; that we altogether refuse. It would be little for His love to exceed such callousness. It is mother-love at its purest, its strongest, and its best.” ¶ Yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee, O house of Israel. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “The congregation of Israel answered and said: If there is no forgetfulness with Him, perhaps He will not forget that I have made a calf of gold? The prophet said to her, Yea, these things shall be forgotten. And she said to him, If there is forgetfulness with Him, perhaps it will be forgotten that I said in Sinai: We will do and obey? He answered and said to her: My Word shall not cast you off.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Grant that a woman may forget even these, but I will not forget thee, said the Lord.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “And if she should forget, yet will not I forget thee.” ¶ It is the house of Israel that the Lord will not forget, regardless of where in the world she had been scattered to. ¶ Elder George Q. Cannon had these interesting words about our own responsibility in the matter of redemption: “Zion will be redeemed. Many will fall by the wayside, many will lose their faith, many will be led away by false and seducing spirits; but there will be those who will be saved and exalted, and all of us who are here tonight have this privilege if we will accept of it; we can be saved each of us and crowned with glory in the presence of God and the Lamb.”³⁶

16 Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of [my] hands; thy walls [are] continually before me.

Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Behold, as upon the hands thou art engraven before me.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Behold I have engraven thy walls on my hands.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “Behold, I have graven thee in my hands.” ¶ Wordsworth beautifully has: “The names of the tribes of Israel were graven by God’s command on the precious stones of the breast-plate worn by the High Priest when he presented himself before the Lord; and they were engraven also on the two onyx stones which clasped the breast-plate to his shoulders. Christ, our great Universal and Everlasting High Priest, bears His people on His shoulders and at His heart, when He presents Himself before God (see Exodus 28:9, 17) ... This is fulfilled in a mysterious manner in the Blessed Hands of Christ Himself, pierced by the nails, the instruments of His death; and thus the evidence of His love is engraven for ever there. They are written on Him, Who is the Rock,—the Rock of Ages.” Keith finds an affinity between this verse and ISAIAH 54:10. ¶ Terry Billikopf shared this from Sister Linda S. Reeves, “Sisters, I do not know why we have the many trials that we have, but it is my personal feeling that the reward is so great, so eternal and everlasting, so joyful and beyond our understanding that in that day of reward, we may feel to say to our merciful, loving Father, ‘Was that all that was required?’ I believe that if we could daily remember and recognize the depth of that love our Heavenly Father and our Savior have for us, we would be willing to do anything to be back in Their presence again, surrounded by Their love eternally. What will it matter, dear sisters, what we suffered here if, in the end, those trials are the very things which qualify us for eternal life and exaltation in the kingdom of God with our Father and Savior?”³⁷

³⁴ Woodruff, Elder Wilford. “The Work of God, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 14, No. 6, May 6, 1870, pp. 31–37.

³⁵ President Spencer W. Kimball quoted this phrase in Isaiah to indicate that the Lord will also have compassion upon all who will repent with great sincerity. The Miracle of Forgiveness, p.339.

³⁶ Cannon, Elder George Q. Delivered in the 14th Ward Meetinghouse, Sunday Evening, 25 July 1880.

¶ Thy walls are continually before me. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And thou art continually before me.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Thy walls are always before my eyes.” ¶ Dr. Weir, as mentioned in Cheyne, compares Thy walls to Exodus 13:9, 16.” Cheyne himself observes: “With touching condescension, Jehovah inverts the usual order. A worshipper needs a consecrating mark to remind him at all times of his relation to his God. Zion’s God, though not in need of such a reminder, has condescended, as it were, to ‘grave Jerusalem on the palms of his hands.’”

17 Thy children shall make haste against thy destroyers; and they that made thee waste shall go forth of thee.

¶ Thy children shall make haste against thy destroyers. The BPE (Ⲯ) has, “Thy sons make haste; those who devastated and desolated thee march from thee. The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲯ) has, “Your sons who caused your destruction and those who laid you waste shall make haste to go forth from you.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Thy builders are come: they that destroy thee and make thee waste shall go out of thee.” The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Those that shall build thy desolate places shall make haste.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And thou shalt be speedily rebuilt by them who destroyed thee.” ¶ Kay observes regarding מְהֵרָה: “The word for ‘make haste’ is the one used in ISAIAH 8:1, 3. Then it was, ‘Plunder speedeth;’ now they who had been carried away are hastening homewards (cp. ISAIAH 51:14; 58:8).” ¶ And they that made thee waste shall go forth of thee. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thy destroyers and they that made thee waste, shall go forth of thee.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And they who laid thee waste shall become thine offspring.” ¶ The tables are turned so that those who were feared now attempt to escape and run with fear.

vv. 18–21. Wordsworth notes: “The following prophecy is repeated with further enlargements and amplifications in ISAIAH 60:4–14, which is to be compared with the present section.” Whitehouse suggests (as do McFadyen and Wade): “These verses (ISAIAH 49:20–21) are best understood by reverting to the custom whereby slave-girls—e.g. Hagar, Bilhah, and Zilpah—are employed by their mistresses when barren to raise up offspring.

³⁷ Reeves, Sister Linda S., Second Counselor in the Relief Society General Presidency, Worthy of Our Promised Blessings, October 2015 General Conference.

Compare with this passage Sarah’s ... remark in reference to Hagar, ‘Perhaps I shall be built up from her’ (Genesis 16:2; cf. 30:3). Zion is the unfruitful wife. The strange woman who has borne the children is the land of exile in which the Jewish exiles have grown up.” Wade says: “Zion’s exiles are to be brought back with tender care by the peoples amongst whom they have been scattered.”

18 ¶ Lift up thine eyes round about and behold; all these gather themselves together, [and] they shall come to thee. And [as] I live, saith the LORD, thou shalt surely clothe thee with them all, as with an ornament, and bind them [on thee] even as a bride [doeth].

Lift up thine eyes round about and behold; all these gather themselves together, [and] they shall come to thee. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Lift up thine eyes round about, O Jerusalem, and see; all the children of the people of thy captivity are gathered together and come unto thee.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Look up with thine eyes all around and view them all; behold they are gathered together and coming to thee.” ¶ Faussett has: “As Zion is often compared to a bride (ISAIAH 54:5), so the accession of converts is like bridal ornaments (‘jewels,’ ISAIAH 62:3; Malachi 3:17). Her literal children are, however, more immediately meant, as the context refers to their restoration; and only secondarily to her spiritual children by conversion to Christ. Israel shall be the means of the final complete conversion of the nations (Micah 5:7; Romans 11:12, 15).” ¶ And as I live, saith the LORD, thou shalt surely clothe thee with them all, as with an ornament, and bind them on even as a bride. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “As I live, saith the Lord, all these shall be unto thee as a vesture of glory, and their works in the midst of thee as the ornament of a bride.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “As I live saith the Lord, Thou shalt clothe thyself with them all, as with raiment, and wrap them about thee as a bride doth her dress.” Instead of bind them on, the Peshitta (Ⲯ) has adorned. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “I live, saith the Lord, thou shalt be clothed with all these as with an ornament, and as a bride thou shalt put them about thee.” ¶ Nägelsbach says regarding as I live, “But the LORD assures her of the important fact with an oath (אֲנִי־חַי, first, Numbers 14:21, 28; Deuteronomy 32:40; only here in ISAIAH; Jeremiah 22:24; 46:18; most frequent in Ezekiel 5:11; 14:16, etc. Compare ISAIAH 45:23).” ¶ Barnes explains: “The sentence here is manifestly incomplete. It means, as a bride binds on her ornaments.” The Book of Mormon also makes that ellipsis clear. Barnes continues: “The sentiment is, that the accession of the large number of converts under the Messiah to the true church of God, would be the real ornament of Zion and would greatly increase her beauty and loveliness.” Henderson explains: “The inhabitants of a city are its beauty; and, cities being regarded by the Hebrews as females, the metaphor of a bride is the more appropriate.”

19 For thy waste and thy desolate places, and the land of thy destruction, shall even now be too narrow by reason of the inhabitants; and they that swallowed thee up shall be far away.

For thy waste and thy desolate places, and the land of thy destruction, shall even now be too narrow by reason of the inhabitants. The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “Because thy waste and desolate and ruined places will now be too narrow for the inhabitants.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has deserts instead of waste. ¶ Nägelsbach says: “Zion, forsaken and repudiated by her husband, and thus supposing herself debarred from bearing children, is in a wonderful way suddenly surrounded by the most numerous fresh growth, the richest blessing of children and ornament of children ... And then what is a great multitude to do in a desert? In reply, the LORD persists in His assertion that Zion is to regard this crowd as her blessing of children ... that now thou shalt be too contracted to dwell in [i.e., thou shalt hardly fit in the land].” This theme continues in the next verse, where it is clear that the territory is not big enough for all the inhabitants. ¶ And they that swallowed thee up shall be far away. The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “And they who devoured thee shall be removed far from thee.” Instead of be far away, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has flee away (Lamsa) / flee (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “And they that swallowed thee up shall be chased far away.” ¶ The Lord’s people would be safe from her enemies.

20 The children ~~which~~ whom thou shalt have, after thou hast lost the ~~other~~ first, shall say again in thine ears say: The place [is] too strait for me; give place to me that I may dwell.

The children whom thou shalt have, after thou hast lost the first, shall again in thine ears say: The Targum (Ⲫ) has, “Henceforth shall each of the children of thy captivity in the midst of thee say.” The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “Therefore thy sons whom thou hast lost will say in thine ears.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “The children of thy barrenness shall still say in thy ears.” ¶ Jenour has: “There is no English word that exactly answers to the Hebrew שָׁכַל, which signifies the state of a woman who has lost all her children³⁸; (Latin, orbitas) we are obliged consequently to translate it by a periphrasis.” Barnes suggests: “HEB. ‘The sons of thy widowhood.’ That is, after thou hast lost those that have been killed in the wars, and those that have died in captivity in a distant land, there shall be again a great increase as if they were given to a widowed mother. And perhaps the general truth is taught here, that the persecution of the people of God will be attended ultimately with a vast increase; and that all the attempts to obliterate the church will only tend finally to enlarge and strengthen it.” ¶ The place is too strait for me; give place to me that I may dwell. The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “This place is too strait for me: make room for me, where I may dwell.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, for the second clause, “Make me room to dwell in.” ¶ Elder B. H. Roberts said: “In 1846, they drove our parents from a single city and its surroundings; they came to the wilderness, and founded a Territory which we possess; and we are spreading over into the surrounding States and Territories, and today the cry of Zion’s children is—‘Give us room that we may dwell!’ We have prevailed against every obstacle—the prophecy so far has been fulfilled; and if we will but hearken to the counsels of God, we shall never cease to triumph, until the kingdoms of this world are the kingdoms of our God and His Christ.”³⁹ So also Elder Orson Pratt, writing about 32 years after the Saints entered the Salt Lake basin: “We have stretched forth the gardens of our habitation (ISAIAH 54:2) several hundred miles in the south especially, and one or two hundred miles in the north, into the Territory of Idaho. Utah does not seem sufficient for us, hence we have built many large towns and villages in Idaho. We have spread forth our towns, our villages and our settlements to the south for some 300 or 400 miles, and even after doing this we find the place is too strait, and the saying is: ‘Give place to me that I may dwell.’ We would scarcely suppose that a work of this great and important magnitude would have been accomplished in so short a time as scarcely one-third of a century, when all this great basin—nearly all with the exception of one or two small portions of the country traversed by Fremont and a few of his followers—was explored and considered an unprofitable desert, considered unfit for the habitation of man, in consequence of the dryness and parched condition of its soil. But the Lord when He begins to fulfill and accomplish a work among His people does so by degrees. He did not convert this great American desert, several hundred miles in extent, into a fruitful garden in one day, nor in one year; but in a few years, comparatively speaking, He has accomplished this work and has done it too with an eye to the predictions that were uttered by His servant Isaiah, the Prophet, and His servant, David, the Psalmist.”⁴⁰ ¶ I particularly like these words from President Brigham Young: “These are the mysteries of the kingdom of God upon the earth, to know how to purify and sanctify our affections, the earth upon which we stand, the air we breathe, the water we drink, the houses in which we dwell, and the cities which we build, that when strangers come into our country they may feel a hallowed influence and acknowledge a power to which they are strangers, ‘For all is dedicated to the Lord and consecrated to him, and the Spirit and power of God reigns there and the power of the enemy can find no place.’ When the people of the Saints have attained to this happy state, then will they say, ‘Give us more room to dwell,’ and they will never be driven from such ground. All hell may then give up the chase, for they never can drive the Saints from a spot that is hallowed by the faith of the Saints, through the medium of Jesus Christ by the power of the Father, for that place is dedicated and sanctified to him. Let every man and woman sanctify themselves and their possessions, dedicating all unto the Lord ...”⁴¹ ¶ These prophecies are now taking place in the Holy Land, where the settlers there are crying for more room.

³⁸ Gesenius has: “שָׁכַל fut. שָׁכַל. TO BE BEREAVED of children, to be childless.”

³⁹ Roberts, Elder Brigham H. Delivered Under the Auspices of the Mutual Improvement Association, in the Fourteenth Ward Assembly Rooms, Salt Lake City, Monday Evening, 28 January 1884.

21 Then shalt thou say in thine heart: Who hath begotten me these, seeing I have lost my children, and am desolate, a captive, and removing to and fro? And who hath brought up these? Behold, I was left alone; these, where [hæd] have they [been]?

Then shalt thou say in thine heart: Who hath begotten me these, seeing I have lost my children, and am desolate, a captive, and removing to and fro? The LXX (6) reads, “Whereupon thou wilt say in thy heart, Who hath begotten these for me? I indeed was childless and a widow.” The Douay-Rheims (1) has, “And thou shalt say in thy heart: Who hath begotten these? I was barren and brought not forth, led away, and captive.” ¶ Alexander speaks “... of a childless mother finding herself suddenly surrounded by the clamour of a multitude of children, and asking in amazement whence they came and who they are ... She asks how it is that she was so long desolate and childless, when she sees so many children round her now.” Nägelsbach writes: “Since the children stand before her, not as new born, but as grown up, she asks further: Who hath brought them up for me?” ¶ Horsley correctly suggests: “Does not this 21st verse allude to a future unexpected restoration of the ten tribes?” And we might well add, the Lamanite nation. Govett, a Gentile, has: “All her scattered sons shall return to their land:—a promise which refers to the restoration of the ten tribes, as is evident from the surprise expressed by Jerusalem at their numbers, and from her ignorance of her locality. ‘These, where have they been?’ For wither the ten tribes have been removed, is a question which has baffled ancient tradition and modern research; though perhaps we may venture to affirm that some are in those countries to which they were led captive at the first, and Mr. Simons has rendered it probable that the American Indians constitute the majority of the lost tribes of Israel.” As LDS our views are a bit different but at the same time very close, as we do believe that the American Indians are of Israel, just not of the lost tribes. ¶ And who hath brought up these? Behold, I was left alone; these, where have they been? The LXX (6) reads, “Who then hath brought up these for me? I was abandoned and alone; whence then have I these?” The Douay-Rheims (1) has, “And who hath brought up these? I was destitute and alone: and these, where were they?” ¶ In the spirit world and in the resurrection, Judah would be amazed to find that God had indeed glorified His Name and greatly increased the nation of Israel (Revelation 7:9). No wonder Abraham was promised that all of the land would be given him: “Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward: For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever” (Genesis 13:14b–15).

vv. 22–26. Jacob, brother of Nephi, spoke about these verses: “And now, behold, I would speak unto you concerning things which are, and which are to come; wherefore, I will read you the words of Isaiah. And they are the words which my brother has desired that I should speak unto you. And I speak unto you for your sakes, that ye may learn and glorify the name of your God. And now, the words which I shall read are they which Isaiah spake concerning all the house of Israel; wherefore, they may be likened unto you, for ye are of the house of Israel. And there are many things which have been spoken by Isaiah which may be likened unto you, because ye are of the house of Israel” (2 Nephi 6:4–5). Notice here that Jacob does not claim that his interpretation of the words of Isaiah is the only one, but rather, that it is one of the interpretations as the words of Isaiah are likened unto the Book of Mormon peoples. We have also seen in how many of the words of Isaiah were likened unto the Saints by the early Brethren of the restored Church. (This is an important prophetic principle, where certain words of Isaiah are said to have been fulfilled in a specific historical context. This does not mean that the words could not refer to other contexts.) We also read of the gathering: “And behold, according to the words of the prophet, the Messiah will set himself again the second time to recover them; wherefore, he will manifest himself unto them in power and great glory, unto the destruction of their enemies, when that day cometh when they shall believe in him; and none will he destroy that believe in him. And they that believe not in him shall be destroyed, both by fire, and by tempest, and by earthquakes, and by bloodsheds, and by pestilence, and by famine. And they shall know that the Lord is God, the Holy One of Israel.” (2 Nephi 6:14–15, also see 6:8–13). ¶ Elder W. Woodruff in 1871 said, “... Christ would not come until the Jews had returned to their own land and had rebuilt the City of Jerusalem and the temple there; they would have known that all these and many other prophecies must have been fulfilled as a preparatory work for the coming of the Messiah.”⁴² These words were given almost 50 years before the Balfour Declaration, which was signed 2 November 1917. ¶ Elder Joseph Fielding Smith, in 1942, gave a very powerful talk of which I only partly quote: “The Lord said to Israel, when you repent, when you get ready to do My will, I will bring you back from your long dispersion ... ‘And it shall come to pass that they shall be gathered in from their long dispersion, from the isles of the sea, and from the four parts of the earth; and the nations of the Gentiles shall be great in the eyes of Me, saith God, in carrying them forth to the lands of their inheritance. Yea, the kings of the Gentiles shall be nursing fathers unto them, and their queens shall become nursing mothers, wherefore, the promises of the Lord are great unto the Gentiles, for He hath spoken it, and who can dispute?’ (2 Nephi 10:7–9) ... In December, 1917, General Allenby, the British general, took his forces into Palestine and captured it almost without opposition, and this land fell into the hands of the British where it has been ever since. I forgot to say something I intended to say earlier, but it fits better here. When I read the Book of Mormon and the Book of Isaiah and learn that the Lord predicted that the kings of the Gentiles would be nursing fathers to the House of Israel I am greatly impressed. Have they not been nursing fathers to scattered Israel? Have they not carried them in their ships both to this land and to Palestine? After England got possession of Palestine and after the armistice they received the mandate of Palestine, they sent a Jew down there to be governor of that land, Sir Herbert Samuel ... From the days of our Lord until Sir Herbert Samuel was sent to Palestine, there had never been a ruler in that land who was a Jew. This was a sign to us that the words of the Lord were about fulfilled, and the days of the Gentiles were coming to their close ... When England received the mandate of Palestine, Mr. Balfour, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, sent this written communication to Lord Rothschild: ‘I have much pleasure in conveying to you on behalf of His Majesty’s Government the following declaration of sympathy with Jewish Zionists aspirations, which has been submitted to and approved by the Cabinet: His Majesty’s Government views with favor the establishment in Palestine of a National Home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country.’ ... The American Congress ratified this act a short time later ... The land of Palestine was dedicated for the return of the Jews, October 24, 1841, by Orson Hyde, but the time had not come, then, for the return of the Jews. President George A. Smith again dedicated the land, in March, 1873. In 1878 an organization of Jews was formed called the Lovers of Zion, the purpose being to establish the Jews in Palestine. The Zionist Federation was commenced in 1896, and the first conference of this organization was held in Basel, Switzerland, in 1897, and the old nationalistic spirit was revived. To return to the saying that the Gentiles should be nursing fathers to the Jews, do you know that Great Britain has spent well, I do not know how much, but up until some ten years ago, that nation had spent upwards of 50,000,000 pounds ... The Jews are returning only partly believing in Jesus Christ. They are willing to accept Him as a great prophet among the prophets of Israel and Judah, but not as their Deliverer, or Messiah. When our Lord shall come to them in the calling of Deliverer, the whole land will be in siege. Jerusalem will be at the mercy of its enemies. There will be a great earthquake and the Mount of Olives will cleave in twain forming a great valley into which the oppressed people will flee from the city for safety. At that time the enemies of the people will be destroyed Christ will appear to the Jews and show them His hands and His feet and then they will accept Him as their Messiah. Then, as Zechariah has predicted, every family will mourn apart, and there will be weeping and wailing because they rejected their King. After those days there will come peace and Israel will come back into his own.”⁴³

⁴⁰ Elder Orson Pratt, “Exhortation from Isaiah, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 24, No. 4, 26 October 1879, pp. 20–32.

⁴¹ Young, President Brigham. Remarks made in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 24 May 1863.

⁴² Elder Wilford Woodruff, Journal of Discourses, Volume 14, January 1, 1871, p. 2.

⁴³ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Signs of the Times. “Restoration of Israel and Judah.” Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret News Press, 1952.

22 Thus saith the Lord GOD: Behold, I will lift up mine hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people; and they shall bring thy sons in [their] arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon [their] shoulders.

✓ bosom

The Targum (ܬ) has, beginning with the second clause, “Behold, I will reveal my power among the Gentiles, and unto the kingdoms I will raise my standard, and thy children shall come in palanquins (‘sedan-couch’), and thy daughters shall be carried upon the shoulders.” The LXX (6) reads, “Thus saith the Lord, Lord, Behold I will lift up my hand to the nations, and I will erect my standard for the isles. And they shall bring thy sons in their bosoms and carry thy daughters on their shoulders.” ¶ Regarding אֶל-נְּוִים יָדַי, Ibn Ezra has, “Behold, I will lift up My hand, etc. As a man lifts up his hand, that he may be seen.” Horsley (1733–1806), who was born before the Gospel was restored, explained: “These Gentiles and peoples who are to bring the sons of Zion in their bosoms, and carry her daughters on their shoulders, are certainly different persons from the sons and daughters of Zion, who are to be so borne. And yet they must bear good will to the sons and daughters of Zion, and therefore must be of the true religion: which is still more evident from this consideration, that it will be in obedience to the express command of God, upon his lifting up his hand, and raising his signal, that they will be thus zealous for the service of the sons and daughters of Zion. And again, these sons and daughters of Zion, in whose behalf God will thus interpose, by lifting up his hand to the nations, and raising his signal to the peoples, must also be of the true religion. Hence it is manifest that this prophecy cannot be expounded simply of the calling of the Gentiles, but it must be understood of the conversion and restoration of the Jews [and of the rest of the house of Israel—GB], and of the good offices that the converted Jews will receive from their brethren of the Gentiles.” Henderson, likewise, has: “These verses [ISAIAH 49:22–23] describe the readiness, zeal, and liberality, with which, in the providence of God, the nations and their rulers should promote the restoration of the Jews to their own land ... the bosom of a garment, or, that part of it which opens about the bosom. The metaphor is taken from the practice, still common in the East, of carrying young children in such aperture. That of carrying on the shoulders is also very common.”

Talk delivered 28 October 1942, Barratt Hall, pp. 58 ff. Emphasis added. The whole of this talk is highly recommended.

Wordsworth writes: “Rather, in their bosom,—the bosom of their dress. See Nell. V. 13. Palm 129:7, where the same word is used. Cp. below, ISAIAH 60:4; 66:12; and Numbers 11:12, where Moses says, ‘Have I begotten them, that thou shouldest say unto me. Carry them in thy bosom’ (Heb. בֶּטֶן, the lap of the robe), ‘as a nursing father beareth the sucking child’ ... — upon their shoulders] The young children of both sexes are usually carried by their mothers and nurses, not in the arms, but on the shoulder, seated astride, and sometimes, for a short distance, on the hip (Lane, Modern Egypt, p. 55).” Rashi in Rosenberg suggests that הִצֵּן refers to the armpit, and suggests Nehemiah 5:13, הִצֵּנִי, where we have my lap and where Rashi reads my armpit. Alexander has: “the word הִצֵּן, which seems most probably to signify either the bosom or the arm, when spoken of in reference to carrying, and especially the carrying of children. Strictly perhaps the word expresses an idea intermediate between arm and bosom, or including both, viz. the space enclosed by them in the act of grasping or embracing.” Nägelsbach has: “הִצֵּן is the sinus formed by the wide upper garment, in which one may even carry small children.” Barnes explains: “These children hold by the head of him who carries them, whether he be on horseback or on foot, and do not hinder him from walking or doing what he pleases.” This augments the import of the passage in Isaiah, who speaks of the Gentiles bringing children thus; so that distance is no objection to this mode of conveyance, since they may thus be brought on horseback from among the people, however remote.’ — Paxton. ‘Children of both sexes are carried on the shoulders. Thus may be seen the father carrying his son, the little fellow being astride on the shoulder, having, with his hands, hold of his father’s head. Girls, however, sit on the shoulder, as if on a chair, their legs hanging in front, while they also, with their hands, lay hold of the head. In going to, or returning from heathen festivals, thousands of parents and their children may be thus seen marching along with joy.’ — Roberts.” Rabbi Mezudath David (in Rosenberg) suggests this verse speaks “of the great honor the nations will confer on the Jews when they bring them back to the Holy Land.” ¶ In 1855 Orson Pratt declared: “Isaiah, in his 49th chapter has informed us that this work should commence, not among the Jews first, but among the Gentiles ... Here we perceive, that when the great day shall come for the house of Israel to be restored to their own lands, the very first work He accomplishes in relation to that restoration will be to lift up His hand to the Gentiles and set up a standard among them ... it is a work which the Lord Himself has to perform ... when He undertakes to gather them from the nations of the earth ... The Lord did not send these messengers

[missionaries] to declare His glory among Israel first, why? Because a certain work had to be done among the Gentiles first; they were to carry this sign, ensign, or standard, proclaiming the doctrines of Jesus Christ so as not to be misunderstood; they have to carry it to the isles afar off, and declare His glory first among the Gentiles ... [and after] these same missionaries ‘shall bring all your brethren (Israel) for an offering unto the Lord out of all nations [see ISAIAH 18].’⁴⁴

23 And kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and their queens thy nursing mothers; they shall bow down to thee with [their] face towards the earth, and lick up the dust of thy feet; and thou shalt know that I [am] the LORD: for they shall not be ashamed that wait for me.

✓ nourishers

✓ ✓ princesses

And kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and their queens thy nursing mothers. The LXX (6) reads, “And kings shall be thy foster fathers; and their queens thy nursing mothers.” Instead of nursing fathers, the Peshitta (5) has foster fathers (Lamsa) / tutors (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (2) has, “And kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and queens thy nurses.” ¶ Kay suggests regarding אֲמִנִּי [root אָמַן]⁴⁵: “thy nursing (or, foster fathers)— ... to take care of thy children. So in 2 Kings 10:1, Ahab’s ‘foster-fathers’ (s.w.) were those to whom he had entrusted his children.” ¶ Elders Heber C. Kimball, George Q. Cannon and Spencer W. Kimball teach that Church members must take upon themselves the role of nursing fathers and mothers. Elder Heber C. Kimball taught: “You Elders of Israel are the very men that will have to bring the sons and daughters of Israel from afar, and nurse them at your side; and you mothers will have to be those very queens that will have to take care of them when they are gathered, if you will honor your calling.”⁴⁶ ¶ I am simply not able to find the exact quote at this time (and almost 40 years have passed), but when President Spencer W. Kimball was asked about President Richard Nixon during some of the latter’s darker days, President Kimball said something to the effect that he supported President Nixon in all his righteous endeavors. One of Nixon’s righteous endeavors took place in relation to the Yom Kippur War. It is reported that Nixon ignored Secretary of State Henry Kissinger’s views and helped send arms to Israel at a very critical point. Golda Meir, the Israeli Prime Minister felt that without that, Israel would have lost that war. It is also reported that Nixon, at that critical moment, remembered what Hannah Milhous Nixon, his mother, had told him as a boy: “Richard, someday if you are in the position to help Israel, do it.” While the spiritual nurturing will come from the members of the Church, especially Ephraim and Manasseh, there will be much help from others—as in the example given of President Nixon. In the establishing of the Jewish nation, especial help came from Great Britain and the United States. ¶ Elder Cannon speaks especially of the Lamanite nation: “... we have an immense work to do in these mountains. This is the foundation of that which is to be. The Lamanites must be brought into the covenant; they must receive the Gospel from us. We must be their ‘nursing fathers and their nursing mothers.’ This, among other things, is a labor devolving upon us. We are here for this purpose; not to become rich ourselves, that when we shall pass away we may bequeath to our children large possessions for them to enjoy the good things of this world to spend upon their lusts and to gratify their carnal desires.”⁴⁷ ¶ So also Elder Spencer W. Kimball: “The brighter day has dawned. The scattering has been accomplished; the gathering is in process. May the Lord bless us all as we become nursing fathers and mothers unto our Lamanite brethren and hasten the fulfillment of the great promises made to them, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.”⁴⁸ ¶ Now, how are the Saints kings and queens?

⁴⁷ President Cannon, George Q. Delivered at Meadow Creek, Millard County, 31 October 1881.

⁴⁸ Kimball, Elder Spencer W. Conference Report, October 1965, pp. 65-72. Elder Spencer W. Kimball would give many a moving talk about the injustices the Lamanite people have had to endure and the importance of Church members doing their part: “How I wish you could go with me through the Indian reservations and particularly Navajo Land and see the poverty, want, and wretchedness, and realize again that these are sons and daughters of God; that their miserable state is the result, not only of their centuries of wars and sins and godlessness, but is also attributable to us, their conquerors, who placed them on reservations with such limited resources and facilities, to starve and die of malnutrition and unsanitary conditions, while we become fat in the prosperity from the assets we took from them. Think of these things, my people, and then weep for the Indian, and with your tears, pray; then work for him. Only through us, the ‘nursing fathers and mothers’ may they eventually enjoy a fulfillment of the many promises made to them. Assuming that we do our duty to them, the Indians and other sons of Lehi will yet rise in power and strength. The Lord will remember his covenant to them; his Church will be established among them; the Bible and other scriptures will be made available to them; they will enter into the holy temples for their endowments and do vicarious work; they will come to a knowledge of their fathers and to a perfect knowledge of their Redeemer Jesus Christ; they shall prosper in the land and will, with our help, build up

⁴⁴ Pratt, Elder Orson, “The Ancient Prophecies.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 2, No. 45, 7 January 1855, pp. 284–298. Also see, Pratt, Elder Orson, “The Restoration of the Jews, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 14, No. 9, May 26, 1871, pp. 58–70; Pratt, Elder Orson, Journal of Discourses. Orson Pratt, 15 June 1873, Delivered in the New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday afternoon. The rise of Zion in the last days, p. 85–86.

⁴⁵ Gesenius, “one who carries and cares for a child.”

⁴⁶ Kimball, President Heber C. Delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 7 April 1861.

Elder Heber C. Kimball answers that question: “Then who is to gather the people of God? You all say that we are to become a kingdom of kings and priests, of queens and priestesses; and the Bible supports this doctrine. Now, the truth is, you are the very kings and priests that have got to gather the Saints, and your wives have got to school them and nurse them.”⁴⁹ ¶ They shall bow down to thee with their face towards the earth, and lick up the dust of thy feet. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And on the face of the ground they shall pay thee homage, and lick the dust of thy feet.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has worship instead of bow down. ¶ The Prophet Jacob, brother of Nephi, explained this clause: “Wherefore, they that fight against Zion and the covenant people of the Lord shall lick up the dust of their feet” (2 Nephi 6:13a). Those who fight against Zion and the Saints of the Lord would be defeated and humiliated. ¶ Faussett explains as: “It is well known, that expressions of submission, homage, and reverence, always have been, and are still, carried to a great degree of extravagance in the eastern countries. When Joseph’s brethren were introduced to him, ‘they bowed down themselves before him with their faces to the earth’ (Genesis 42:6).” ¶ I love what Luther suggests in this place—the feet that shall be kissed are those of the Lord Jesus Christ for no disciple of our Savior would permit such reverence, as shown through example by Peter (Acts 10:26; 14:14): “... for this honour and worship belongs to Christ.” Indeed, until we can reverently fall at His feet and bathe them with tears of joy and gratitude (Luke 7:38), we can meanwhile worship the Father and the Son as we are obedient to the commandments. ¶ And thou shalt know that I am the LORD: for they shall not be ashamed that wait for me. The Targum (Ⲯ) adds, “the righteous” to the last clause. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, for the second half, “For they shall not be confounded that wait for him.” ¶ We continue with Jacob’s explanation: “... and the people of the Lord shall not be ashamed. For the people of the Lord are they who wait for him; for they still wait for the coming of the Messiah. And behold, according to the words of the prophet, the Messiah will set himself again the second time to recover them; wherefore, he will manifest himself unto them in power and great glory, unto the destruction of their enemies, when that day cometh when they shall believe in him; and none will he destroy that believe in him. And they that believe not in him shall be destroyed, both by fire, and by tempest, and by earthquakes, and by bloodsheds, and by pestilence, and by famine. And they shall know a holy city, even the New Jerusalem, unto their God.” Kimball, Elder Spencer W. “Weep O World, for the Indian,” Conference Report, April 1947, pp. 144–152.

⁴⁹ Kimball, Elder Heber C. “Gathering of the People of God, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 8, No. 85, 17 February 1861, pp. 348–351.

that the Lord is God, the Holy One of Israel.” (2 Nephi 6:13b–15).

vv. 24–26. Nägelsbach explains this as a simile in which “a strong man will not allow his plunder or captives to be taken from him.” Or rather, Satan will do everything in his power to avoid returning the captives, but at the end, the Lord will triumph.

24 ¶ For shall the prey be taken from the mighty, or the lawful captives delivered?

✓ captivity of the just

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the second clause, “And shall that which the just have taken captive be delivered?” A different Targum (Ⲯ) paraphrase (see C. W. H. Pauli on this verse) has, “Jerusalem says, Is it possible, that the prey shall be taken from Esau the wicked, which he took from me? concerning who it was said, By thy sword thou shalt live. Or the captive whom Ishmael led captive, concerning whom it has been said, That which belongeth to the righteous shall he deliver?” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Can anyone take spoils from a giant? And if any one captivate unjustly shall he be safe.” For the second clause, the BPE (Ⲯ) has, “Or the captives of the powerful liberated?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Shall the prey be taken from the strong? or can that which was taken by the mighty be delivered?” The Masoretic text (ⲙ) has and or [the] lawful captive, וְאִם-צַדִּיק, שְׁבִי, while the DSS 1QIsa^a (ⲙ) has or [the] captive [of the] tyrant, אִם שְׁבִי עֶרִיץ. The word עֶרִיץ is again used in ISAIAH 49:25, in both the ⲙ and the ⲙ, where עֶרִיץ is translated as the prey of the tyrant, mighty or of the terrible. ¶ So what does lawful mean in this context? HCSB renders the phrase: “Can the prey be taken from the mighty, or the captives of the righteous be delivered?” Several exegetes allude to the problem with the expression captives of the righteous. Young writes: “The first Qumran Scroll [1Q] has a reading that has long been proposed as a substitute for righteousness, namely despot.” So it is that ISV has: “Can they seize plunder from warriors, or can the captives of tyrants be rescued?” NASB renders it: “Can the prey be taken from the mighty man, Or the captives of a tyrant be rescued?” As does the Spanish LBLA and NBLH, “al cautivo del tirano.” LITV has, “righteous captive.” According to Alexander, “Symmachus, Jarchi, Ibn Ezra, and Hitzig, understand the phrase to mean the righteous captives ...” Geneva uses “iust captiuitie.” JPS instead, renders it “captives of the victorious.” BDB suggests that in this instance, the meaning is right or correct, thus lawful. The LDS RV2009 uses “los cautivos legítimos,” that is, the legitimate captives following closely the SRV (i.e., RV 1909). ¶ Barnes suggests: "... we should interpret it of those who were made captive by those who were indisposed to clemency, and who were severe and rigid in their treatment of their prisoners. The idea is, that it was difficult or almost impossible to rescue captives from such hands, and that therefore it was a matter of wonder and amazement that that could be accomplished which God here promises." Cowles suggests this refers to Satan and his hold on man. We might also ask, "Where is thy sting, oh death?"

25 But thus saith the LORD, Even the captives[✓] of the mighty shall be taken away, and the prey of the terrible shall be delivered; For the mighty God shall deliver his covenant people. For thus saith the Lord, I will contend with him* that contendeth with thee, and I will save thy children.

✓ captivity

* JST: Them, Book of Mormon and KJV, him.

But thus saith the LORD, Even the captives of the mighty shall be taken away, and the prey of the terrible shall be delivered. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "For thus saith the Lord, I will surely restore the captivity of the mighty, and I will deliver the prey of the terrible." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "For thus saith the Lord, When one captivateth a giant he shall take spoils. But can one take from a mighty man and be safe?" The Peshitta (ܣ) switches captives for prey and prey for captives. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, "For thus saith the Lord: Yea verily, even the captivity shall be taken away from the strong: and that which was taken by the mighty, shall be delivered." The Masoretic text (Ⲁ) has Even [the] captives of, וְגַם-שְׁבִי, while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲅ) has even [the] prey of, גַּם מִלְקָח. Next, the Masoretic text (Ⲁ) has and [the] prey of [the] terrible, וּמִלְקָחַ הַרְעָה, while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲅ) has and [the] captives of [the] terrible, וּשְׁבִי עֲרִיץ.

¶ Cowles writes: "When God undertakes, even the captives of the mighty conquerors are rescued from their grasp. Satan holds this world in his chains no longer. God enters the lists to give battle against those that war against Zion. He will save her children." Keith beautifully says: "The reply of the Lord to the doubting question [ISAIAH 49:24] is, that they would be delivered, for he would himself accomplish it" (emphasis added). Before I read the Book of Mormon I needed to be delivered from the despot's grips. The words from the Book of Mormon prophets—written centuries earlier—had so touched my heart, as predicted, as voices from the ground, so that my heart was changed during those four days into one that desired to become a disciple of the Lord. It was only then that the Lord Himself beckoned me with his open arms extended toward me to follow Him. I believe that the Lord has an intimate role in inviting each one of us to both come and see and to follow him (ISAIAH 46:4; 50:4). ¶ For the mighty God shall deliver his covenant people. For thus saith the Lord, I will contend with him that contendeth with thee, and I will save thy children. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Surely the captivity of the mighty I will restore, and the prey of the terrible I will deliver, and I will take vengeance for thee, and I will save thy children." An alternate Targum (Ⲯ) reading has (see Pauli again), "For thus saith the Lord: Yea, the prey, which the mighty Esau hath taken of thee, shall be taken from him, and the captivity, which the proud Ishmael led captive (concerning whom it has been said: He shall be a conqueror (the Royal Polyglot reads עָרִיד, 'Ishmael is a wild ass') among men) be delivered? and I will save thy children." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "But it is I who vindicateth thy cause, and I will deliver thy children." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, "But I will judge those that have judged thee, and thy children I will save." ¶ Kay explains: "For I Myself will contend before the tribunal of justice (ISAIAH 50:8), with him that contendeth with thee, maintaining thy cause against the accuser; and 'who will contend with Me' (ISAIAH 50:8)? 'It is God that justifieth; who is he that condemneth?' (Romans 8:32–33). Cp. John 12:31; 16:11; 2 Timothy 2:26." So also Birks: "The order of the prophecy points here to something nobler in itself, and later in time, than the Return from Babylon, when Israel had 'a little reviving in their bondage.' It announces the final deliverance of God's ancient people from sin and Satan, from death and the grave." The Savior rescues us, then, from the grips of Satan. ¶ Elder Russell M. Nelson reassured: "You faithful Saints do not have to fight life's battles alone. Think of that! The Lord declared, 'I will contend with him that contendeth with thee, and I will save thy children.' Later came this promise to His faithful people: 'I, the Lord, would fight their battles, and their children's battles, and their children's children, ... to the third and fourth generation.'"⁵⁰ Nephi, continues his exegetical review of ISAIAH 49: "And every nation which shall war against thee, O house of Israel, shall be turned one against another, and they shall fall into the pit which they digged to ensnare the people of the Lord. And all that fight against Zion shall be destroyed ..." (1 Nephi 22:14a). And then speaking of the Millennium, "For behold, saith the prophet, the time cometh speedily that Satan shall have no more power over the hearts of the children of men; for the day soon cometh that all the proud and they who do wickedly shall be as stubble; and the day cometh that they must be burned. For the time soon cometh that the fulness of the wrath of God shall be poured out upon all the children of men; for he will not suffer that the wicked shall destroy the righteous. Wherefore, he will preserve the righteous by his power, even if it so be that the fulness of his wrath must come, and the righteous be preserved, even unto the destruction of their enemies by fire. Wherefore, the righteous need not fear; for thus saith the prophet, they shall be saved, even if it so be as by fire. Behold, my brethren, I say unto you, that these things must shortly come; yea, even blood, and fire, and vapor of smoke must come; and it must needs be upon the face of this earth; and it cometh unto men according to the flesh if it so be that they will harden their hearts against the Holy One of Israel. For behold, the righteous shall not perish; for the time surely must come that all they who fight against Zion shall be cut off ... And because of the righteousness of his people, Satan has no power; wherefore, he cannot be loosed for the space of many years; for he hath no power over the hearts of the people, for they dwell in righteousness, and the Holy One of Israel reigneth” (1 Nephi 22:15–19, 26). We have a similar sentiment in the book of Numbers, through the words that the Lord spoke through Balaam, where we read about the people of Israel: “Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee” (Numbers 24:9b).

⁵⁰ Nelson, Elder Russell M. Face the Future with Faith. General Conference, 6 April 2011.

26 And I will feed them that oppress thee with their own flesh; ~~and~~ they shall be drunken with their own blood as with sweet[✓] wine; and all flesh shall know that I, the LORD [am] thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob.

✓ or, new

And I will feed them that oppress thee with their own flesh; they shall be drunken with their own blood as with sweet wine. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the second half, “For food to every fowl of the heavens, and as the drunken with new wine, so the beasts of the field shall be drunk with their blood.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And they who afflicted thee shall eat their own flesh, and drink like new wine their own blood and be made drunk.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “And I will feed thy enemies with their own flesh: and they shall be made drunk with their own blood, as with new wine.” ¶ New wine is sweeter than fully fermented wine, as not all of the sugars have been transformed into alcohol.

Baltzer has: “To ‘eat meat and drink wine’ is really a sign of good living (see ISAIAH 22:13; cf. Daniel 10:3; Nehemiah 5:18). The rich can afford this. But here [the prophet] does not use the word for ‘wine’ (ⲓⲛ), as we should expect. According to 55:1, wine is poured out without payment at the final feast. But here the rare word ⲓⲛⲥⲓ is used instead. It is generally translated as ‘sweet wine’ or ‘grape juice.’ In the context the root ⲓⲛⲥ is more important for an understanding of the text. It means ‘tread down’ (Malachi 3:21). Thus what they are drinking is what has been ‘pressed out.’” Redak suggests (in Rosenberg): “This may refer to grape wine or pomegranate wine, both extracted from the fruits by pressing. Compare Amos 9:13; Malachi 3:21.” ¶ Cowles writes: “The persistent foes of the church and of her Messiah must meet this fearful doom—to eat their own flesh and be drunken with their own blood as men who drink sweet wine.” ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie said: “Truly, in the last days men ‘shall be drunken with their own blood, as with sweet wine.’ All these things have begun; they are now underway, and they shall increase in intensity and in horror until that dreadful day when the God of battles himself shall descend from heaven with a shout and with the trump of the archangel.”⁵¹ This verse, then, seems to be a reversal of the cursing mentioned in Rain in Due Season, in Deuteronomy 30:7: “And the LORD thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee.” Nephi explains (1 Nephi 22:13, 14b): “And the blood of that great and abominable church, which is the whore of all the earth, shall turn upon their own heads; for they shall war among themselves, and the sword of their own hands shall fall upon their own heads, and they shall be drunken with their own blood ... and that great whore, who hath perverted the right ways of the Lord, yea, that great and abominable church, shall tumble to the dust and great shall be the fall of it.” ¶ And all flesh shall know that I, the LORD am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob. In the Targum (Ⲯ) notes, Pauli explains that the Royal Polyglot has, “ⲓⲛⲥⲓ ⲃⲣⲏⲥ,” that is, sons of flesh. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And all flesh shall know that it is I the Lord who delivered thee. And who uphold the strength of Israel.” Instead of redeemer, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has helper. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “And all flesh shall know, that I am the Lord that save thee, and thy Redeemer the Mighty One of Jacob.” ¶ All flesh shall know ... reminds us of ISAIAH 40:1–8. Finally, Nägelsbach has: “There occurs a repetition of ISAIAH 26b in ISAIAH

⁵¹ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. The Millennial Messiah: The Second Coming of the Son of Man, p.373-374.

60:16.” Nephi writes: “And the Lord will surely prepare a way for his people, unto the fulfilling of the words of Moses, which he spake, saying: A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass that all those who will not hear that prophet shall be cut off from among the people. And now I, Nephi, declare unto you, that this prophet of whom Moses spake was the Holy One of Israel; wherefore, he shall execute judgment in righteousness. And the righteous need not fear, for they are those who shall not be confounded. But it is the kingdom of the devil, which shall be built up among the children of men, which kingdom is established among them which are in the flesh—For the time speedily shall come that all churches which are built up to get gain, and all those who are built up to get power over the flesh, and those who are built up to become popular in the eyes of the world, and those who seek the lusts of the flesh and the things of the world, and to do all manner of iniquity; yea, in fine, all those who belong to the kingdom of the devil are they who need fear, and tremble, and quake; they are those who must be brought low in the dust; they are those who must be consumed as stubble; and this is according to the words of the prophet. And the time cometh speedily that the righteous must be led up as calves of the stall, and the Holy One of Israel must reign in dominion, and might, and power, and great glory. And he gathereth his children from the four quarters of the earth; and he numbereth his sheep, and they know him; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd; and he shall feed his sheep, and in him they shall find pasture. And now behold, I, Nephi, say unto you that all these things must come according to the flesh. But, behold, all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people shall dwell safely in the Holy One of Israel if it so be that they will repent” (1 Nephi 22:20–28).

FIRST POSTED: 25 December 2015

Isaiah 50

The Lord loves Israel despite her unfaithfulness. The Savior has not lost His power. Our Redeemer's special relationship with the Father is here alluded to. Messiah is resolute in His obedience to the Father and suffered much for us. We can choose to walk in the light of Christ or in the darkness, but this election is not without consequences.

vv. 1–3. The Lord has not put away Israel forever. Nor has He sold her. Israel has broken her covenants.

1 ¶ Yea, for thus saith the LORD, Have I put thee away, or have I cast thee off for ever? For thus saith the Lord, Where [is] the bill of your mother's divorcement? To whom I have I put thee away, or to which of my creditors [is it] to whom I have I sold you?; yea, to whom have I sold you? Behold, for your iniquities have ye sold yourselves, and for your transgressions is your mother put away;

Yea, for thus saith the LORD, Have I put thee away, or have I cast thee off for ever? The Targum (T) has, “Thus saith the Lord, Where is the bill of divorcement, which I gave your congregation, that she is cast off.” The LXX (G) reads, “Thus saith the Lord, Of what sort was the bill of your mother’s divorce.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Thus saith the Lord: What is this bill of the divorce of your mother, with which I have put her away?” ¶ The essence of this is the temporary nature of the separation between the Lord and His chosen people. Certainly there were enough reasons that Israel (speaking globally of the twelve tribes) merited a divorce, but the love of God is so immense: “For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved” (John 3:16–17). ¶ For thus saith the Lord, Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement? The LXX (G) reads, “With which I divorced her?” There are strong allusions to the law of divorce in the Mosaic Law. ¶ ESSENTIAL BACKGROUND. We read in Deuteronomy: “When a man hath taken a wife, and married her, and it come to pass that she find no favour in his eyes, because he hath found some uncleanness in her: then let him write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house. And when she is departed out of his house, she may go and be another man’s wife. And if the latter husband hate her, and write her a bill of divorcement, and giveth it in her hand, and sendeth her out of his house; or if the latter husband die, which took her to be his wife; Her former husband, which sent her away, may not take her again to be his wife, after that she is defiled; for that is abomination before the LORD: and thou shalt not cause the land to sin, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance” (Deuteronomy 24:1–4, emphasis added). To summarize, under the Law of Moses, there were some circumstances under which a man could divorce his wife, but this was not to be a game. Once divorced, when the wife married another, the first husband could not get her back. The process of divorce required a bill of divorcement or a written note to the effect. Barnes explains that this easy divorce was not to God’s liking: “It originated probably from the erroneous views which then prevailed of the nature of the marriage compact. It was extensively regarded as substantially like any other compact, in which the wife became a purchase from her father, and of course as she had been purchased; the husband claimed the right of dismissing her when he pleased.” The Savior, in Matthew 19:8b tells us: “Moses because of the hardness of your hearts suffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it was not so.” ¶ FIRST, let us consider what this passage in Isaiah tells us. Barnes says: “God here speaks of himself as the husband of his people ... denoting the tender affection which he had for his people.” Nägelsbach suggests: “[The LORD] does not deny that in a certain sense Zion is a divorced wife, her children sold into captivity. But He denies that Zion is definitively divorced by a writing of divorcement, and that the children are sold to a creditor as equivalent for a debt.” The Lord here challenges the children of Israel to produce the bill of divorcement that would justify Israel’s feelings of abandonment. There seems to be an allusion to: “But Zion said, The LORD hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me” (ISAIAH 49:14). I like what Whitehouse says: “The interrogative form of the sentence is often employed in Hebrew as a rhetorical mode of expressing a negative. This is the actual force of the interrogative here, ‘Where is ...?’ [Nowhere].” ¶ SECOND, let us consider Jeremiah. Elsewhere in the Scriptures we have another figure. In Jeremiah 3:8 we read that Ephraim (northern tribes) was divorced for her wicked conduct: “And I saw, when for all the causes whereby backsliding Israel committed adultery I had put her away, and given her a bill of divorce; yet her treacherous sister Judah feared not, but went and played the harlot also.” From this scripture and others it is clear that Judah (southern tribes) did not do much better than her sister Ephraim, although we do not have any supporting evidence that Judah was also divorced from the Lord. ¶ The Hosea Principle, we have said, is one where the Lord follows strong comments against His children with tender ones. And so we read in ISAIAH 54:6 ff., that the Lord is taking back the wife of His youth. Here are some renditions that put the point forward strongly: “You were like a young wife, brokenhearted and crying because her husband had divorced her. But the LORD your God says, ‘I am taking you back!’” (CEV); “For the LORD hath called thee as a wife forsaken and grieved in spirit; and a wife of youth, can she be rejected? saith thy God” (JPS); and “For as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit did the Lord call thee back, and as a wife of youth, that was rejected, saith thy God” (Leeser). Alexander, in ISAIAH 54, points out: “Reduced to a prosaic form and order, this verse seems to mean, that Jehovah had espoused her in her youth, then cast her off for her iniquities, and now at last recalled her from her solitude and grief to be his wife again.” And from the Jewish Study Bible we have: “God assures Zion that He has not divorced her (cf. ISAIAH 50:1–3). God’s anger was brief and brought about a temporary separation; the reconciliation will last forever.”¹ ¶ THIRD, one may properly ask, “Can the rejected—even divorced adulterous wife—be taken back by her husband?” For that is precisely what we see in ISAIAH 54:6 ff., as we shall see there. The answer is a resounding yes, The Lord may take her back because as unfaithful as she was, Israel (speaking globally of both Judah and Ephraim, i.e., the twelve tribes) never took upon herself another covenant husband.² As we underscored above, a husband could not take a wife back after that she is defiled (Deuteronomy 24:4). In this case, Israel did not take upon another covenant relationship with someone else. As a result, the Lord can take her back. ¶ To whom have I put thee away, or to which of my creditors have I sold you; yea, to whom have I sold you? The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Or who is the man, who has a debt against me, unto whom I sold you?” The LXX (Ⲙ) reads, “Or to what creditor have I sold you?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “Or who is my creditor, to whom I sold you.” ¶ Horsley explains that God has not divorced nor sold Israel: “God, therefore, still retains the right of a husband over their mother, whom He has turned out of doors for her perverseness; and the right of a father over the children, whom He has not sold, though they have offended. And inasmuch as He retains these rights, it is implied, that upon their submission He will take both the mother and the children home again.” Whitehouse once again reminds us: “which of my creditors is it to whom I have sold you?] again anticipates, like the preceding interrogative, a negative answer: ‘To none.’ The form of the question is based on ancient Oriental custom.” Lowth has: “And fathers, being oppressed with debt, often sold their children; which they might do, for a time, till the year of release: Exodus 21:7. That this was frequently practiced, appears from many passages of Scripture; and that the persons and the liberty of the children were answerable for the debts of the father. The widow, 2 Kings 4:1 complains, ‘that the creditor is come to take unto him her two sons to be bondmen.’ And in the parable, Matthew 18:25. ‘The lord, forasmuch as his servant had not to pay, commands him to be sold, and his wife and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.’” Numerous exegetes point out, however, that the Lord had no debts and no creditors, so that the creditor argument would not fly in court. ¶ Behold, for your iniquities have ye sold yourselves, and for your transgressions is your mother put away. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Behold, for your sins ye were sold, and for your rebellion your congregation was put away.” The LXX (Ⲙ) reads, “Behold you were sold for your transgressions; and for your iniquities I divorced your mother.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “for your iniquities (Lamsa) / sins (BPE) were you sold.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “Behold you are sold for your iniquities, and for your wicked deeds have I put your mother away.” ¶ The idea then is not that the Lord divorced His wife Israel, but rather, that the latter was unfaithful to Him and thus expelled from His presence. Kimhi (in Rosenberg) has: “You were sold because of your iniquities, and your ransom is repentance.” This repentance only is efficacious because of the atonement of Christ. ¶ “In the scriptures,” explains Elder Dallin H. Oaks regarding such estrangement from the presence of God, “this separation is called spiritual death.”³ Also Elder Russell M. Nelson: “But there is another type of separation known in scripture as spiritual death. It ‘is defined as a state of spiritual alienation from God’ (Joseph Fielding Smith, Doctrines of Salvation). Thus, one can be very much alive physically but dead spiritually.”

¹ Berlin, A., Brettler, M. Z., & Fishbane, M. (Eds.). (2004). The Jewish Study Bible (p. 893). New York: Oxford University Press. Emphasis added.

² Christian Attorney Douglas J. del Tondo wrote: “Since there was no remarriage, Israel is like an abandoned wife whom a husband may indeed reconcile with.” (<http://www.jesuswordsonly.com/books/351-israel-a-wife-divorced-question.html> URL accessed: 2 January 2016).

³ See, for instance, Helaman 14:16.

2 Wherefore, when I came [~~was there~~] ~~was~~ no man?; when I called [~~was there~~] ~~was~~ none to answer?. O house of Israel, is my hand shortened at all, that it cannot redeem?; or have I no power to deliver? Behold, at my rebuke I dry up the sea, I make ~~their~~ rivers a wilderness; and their fish to stinketh, because [~~there is~~] ~~no~~ the waters are dried up, and they dieth ~~for~~ because of thirst.

Wherefore, when I came there was no man; when I called there was none to answer. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Wherefore have I sent my prophets, and they have not repented. They prophesied, but they obeyed not.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Why, when I came, was there no man? And why, when I called, did none answer?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Because I came, and there was not a man: I called, and there was none that would hear.” ¶ Several translators use the same word order than the Prophet Joseph Smith for the ellipsis, “there was.” This includes ABP, Darby, DRB (Ⲯ), and Geneva (partially). Cowles suggests: “Wherefore did I come and there was no man? Yet the point of the question is not to ask why the Lord came, but why, when he came to his people, there was none to meet him, none to greet him? Why, when he came home as a husband to his household, was there no loving wife to greet his return? Why was it that when he spake, there was none to answer, and that not even his wife would reply a word to his call?” (different emphasis). Likewise Keith has: “The universal depravity of the nation is expressed by the assertion, that when God came to them he found none (waiting for him); when he called, none answered. That this is the import of these expressions, that they refer to the sin of the nation, appears from parallel texts. Thus, ‘Therefore will I number you to the sword; because when I called ye did not answer, when I spake ye did not hear, but did evil before mine eyes,’ (ISAIAH 65:12; 66:4). This state of things did not arise, it is said, from the inability or unwillingness of the Lord to save them. His hand was not shortened.” ¶ Nägelsbach suggests that Israel’s sin was best expressed by the piercing words found in John 1:11: “He came unto his own, and his own received him not.” The D&C has: “In that day when I came unto mine own, no man among you received me, and you were driven out.” (D&C 133:66, emphasis added). Unto my own is an allusion to Israel, “And I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people” (Leviticus 26:12). You were driven out speaks to the scattering of Israel. As a nation, she had failed to heed to the warnings in Rain in Due Season. ¶ O house of Israel, is my hand shortened at all, that it cannot redeem; or have I no power to deliver? Behold, at my rebuke I dry up the sea, I make their rivers a wilderness. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the first half, “Is my power altogether deficient, so that I cannot save?” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Is my hand unable to save? Or have I no power to rescue? Behold with my rebuke I can dry up the sea, and make the rivers a desert.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Is my hand shortened and become little, that I cannot redeem? or is there no strength in me to deliver? Behold at my rebuke I will make the sea a desert, I will turn the rivers into dry land.” ¶ The Masoretic text (ⲛ) has a vav before the interrogatory particle ⲁⲗ—the ⲁ acts as a marker of contrast (DBL) such as the word or. Brother Sidney B. Sperry writes: “[The Book of Mormon reading in 2 Nephi 7:2, their rivers]⁴ is really remarkable from the angle of textual criticism. The King James and Hebrew versions read: ‘Behold, at my rebuke I dry up the sea. I make the rivers a wilderness: their fish stinketh because there is no water, and dieth for thirst.’ The Book of Mormon reads ‘their rivers’ [ⲛⲓⲣⲏⲗⲏⲙ] as against ‘rivers’⁵ [ⲛⲓⲣⲏⲗⲏⲙ]. This is readily explained on the basis that the letter mem (‘their’) [regular mem ⲙ and final mem, ⲙ] which was attached originally to ‘rivers’ accidentally dropped out of the Hebrew text because the very next word (‘wilderness’ [ⲙⲓⲃⲣⲏⲗ]) begins with the same letter [would have been, ⲛⲓⲣⲏⲗⲏⲙ ⲙⲓⲃⲣⲏⲗ]. Such accidents are well-known to textual critics. Furthermore, in the next clause the reading is ‘their fish’ [ⲛⲓⲣⲏⲗⲏⲙ] which argues well for the correctness of ‘their rivers.’ The ancient Greek reads: ‘And their fish shall be dried up because there is no water, and shall die for thirst.’ It will be noted that the Hebrew omits dried up while the Greek on the other hand omits stinketh. The Book of Mormon retains both, indicating that the Hebrew and Greek each lack elements that were in the original text of Isaiah. On the basis of the Book of Mormon reading the textual critic can reconstruct what happened to the original text. By a most peculiar coincidence the words stinketh [ⲛⲓⲣⲏⲗⲏⲙ] and dried up [in Joshua 2:10 we have ⲛⲓⲣⲏⲗⲏⲙ from ⲛⲓⲣⲏⲗⲏⲙ] in this Hebrew context have nearly the same sound and look very much alike ... The accidental dropping of one of these verbs from the original text, or a misreading of either, would occasion considerable difficulty and cause scribes to reconstruct the text in different ways. The present Greek and Hebrew readings illustrate the processes of reconstruction.”⁷ ¶ Regarding the expression יָדוֹ קְצוּרָה, Faussett explains: “hand shortened” the Oriental emblem of weakness, as the long stretched-out hand is of power (ISAIAH 59:1).” Birks explains: “‘Wholly shortened.’ This is the true force of the question, to shew their aggravated sin. They received Him as if He had no power, not as if it were slightly diminished, but as if He were quite unequal to the task of redeeming them ... But His power, though veiled in the flesh, was not really diminished. He was still the same Lord, who rebuked the sea, and it was dry, and who led them through the deep as through a wilderness.” The Rabbis Slotki/Rosenberg suggest, as do several others, that at my rebuke I dry up the sea is a reference to the drying up of the Red Sea during the Exodus (Exodus 14:29). Kimhi (in Rosenberg) again suggests: “It is your fault that you are not yet redeemed, for you have not yet repented ... for God accepts the penitent whenever they call to Him wholeheartedly and sincerely. Then He is near to them and ready to accept them.” Cheyne suggests, “‘Rebuke’ is the term for the opposite of the creative word. Instead of calling into existence, it sends into non-existence, or at least confines within bounds” (emphasis added). ¶ And their fish to stinketh, because the waters are dried up, and they dieth because of thirst. The LXX (6) reads, “So that the fishes thereof shall shrivel for want of water, and die for thirst.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “The fishes shall rot for want of water, and shall die for thirst.” ¶ Faussett points us to the power shown by God associated with the exodus from Egypt: “fish stinketh] the very judgment inflicted on their Egyptian enemies at the first exodus (Exodus 7:18, 21).”

⁴ In D&C the Savior uses the Masoretic and KJV, “Behold, at my rebuke I dry up the sea. I make the rivers a wilderness; their fish stink, and die for thirst” (D&C 133:68).

⁵ Rivers, and not the rivers, because the word the is often added in English for ease in reading.

⁶ I could not reconstruct the exact Hebrew intended by Sperry from the transliteration offered in the article.

3 I clothe the heavens with blackness, and I make sackcloth their covering.

The LXX (6) reads, “I can clothe the heaven with darkness, and make its covering like sackcloth.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has darkness instead of blackness. ¶ Ibn Ezra suggests that this is much like “when the sky becomes obscure in the middle of the day, and appears as if covered with sackcloth, which is usually black.” When did the day turn this black in the middle of the day? Wade writes: “The expressions in this verse are probably metaphors for the darkening of the sky with storm clouds (cf. 1 Kings 18:45), though there may be a reference to the plague of darkness in Egypt (Exodus 10:21).” Theodoret (Θεοδώρητος Κύρρου) suggests this darkness of the time associated with the crucifixion: “He has done this and will do it. For he did it when he was crucified: ‘From the sixth hour to the ninth the shadows covered the whole earth’ (Matthew 27:45). And he will do it again at the time of the fulfillment [i.e., in the last days—GB], for it says, ‘The sun will be darkened, and the moon will not give off its light’ (Matthew 24:29).”⁸ From the Book of Mormon we see that the period of darkness associated with the Lord’s death would, in the New World, seem an eternal three days (see 3 Nephi 8–10). This truly was a time of mourning and sackcloth: “And it came to pass that there was thick darkness upon all the face of the land, insomuch that the inhabitants thereof who had not fallen could feel the vapor of darkness; And there could be no light, because of the darkness, neither candles, neither torches; neither could there be fire kindled with their fine and exceedingly dry wood, so that there could not be any light at all; And there was not any light seen, neither fire, nor glimmer, neither the sun, nor the moon, nor the stars, for so great were the mists of darkness which were upon the face of the land. And it came to pass that it did last for the space of three days that there was no light seen; and there was great mourning and howling and weeping among all the people continually; yea, great were the groanings of the people, because of the darkness and the great destruction which had come upon them” (3 Nephi 8:20–23). Brother Hoyt W. Brewster, Jr. points us to modern day revelation: “The Lord proclaimed that one sign of his second coming will be to ‘clothe the heavens with blackness’ and to ‘make sackcloth their covering’ (D&C 133:69; 2 Nephi 7:3).”⁹ Rawlinson beautifully says: “God means to assert his power of leaving all nature in absolute darkness, if he so choose—a power necessarily belonging to him who said, ‘Let there be light; and there was light’ (Genesis 1:3).” ¶ Regarding sackcloth, in Hastings we find: “(שַׂק) sak, σάκκος, saccus) was a coarse material woven from goats’ and camels’ hair, and hence of a dark colour, as we see from Revelation 6:12: ‘the sun became black as sackcloth of hair’ (σάκκος τρίχινος); cf., for the colour, ISAIAH 50:3, Sir 25:17 ‘her countenance darkeneth like sackcloth,’ reading σάκκος with B.”¹⁰ ¶ In Parry, Parry and Peterson we have: “Elder Bruce R. McConkie [Millennial Messiah, p. 39] gave another interpretation: “‘I clothe the heavens with blackness’ (ISAIAH 50:3), ⁸ Commentary on Isaiah 16.50.3. [SC 315:106.] ACCS.

⁹ Brewster, Hoyt W., Jr., Doctrine and Covenants Encyclopedia, p.483.

¹⁰ Kennedy, A. R. S. (1911–1912). SACKCLOTH. In J. Hastings, J. A. Selbie, A. B. Davidson, S. R. Driver, & H. B. Swete (Eds.), A Dictionary of the Bible: Dealing with Its Language, Literature, and Contents Including the Biblical Theology 4:327.

⁷ Sperry, Sidney B. The “Isaiah Problem” in the Book of Mormon. Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 4/1 (1995): p. 148–149.

and there is no more revelation ... Thus saith our God. Such is his promise, spoken prophetically of our day. And here, given in modern times, is his announcement that as he spake, so has it come to pass: ‘Verily, verily, I say unto you, darkness covereth the earth, and gross darkness the minds of the people, and all flesh has become corrupt before my face’ (D&C 112:23).”¹¹

vv. 4–9. The expression “Lord GOD” is repeated four times in these five verses, following the Jewish tradition. The more literal translation would render it Lord LORD, or Adonai Jehovah, אֲדֹנָי יְהוָה. ASV, LEB, LITV, Rotherham, WEB, WEBA and YLT have “Lord Jehovah [or Yahweh],” as do most of the Spanish versions. A few have Lord LORD (e.g., ABP+ and GLB, Der HERR HERR). At any rate, in each of these instances Christ is speaking, through Divine Investiture, the words of His Father. Messiah speaks of God’s gifts to him. Christ is in continual communication with, and obedient to, the Father. Some of the sufferings of Messiah are mentioned. Christ was resolute in His obedience and is justified by the Father. Christ is represented at the judgment bar. Those who oppose Him will fail.

4 ¶ The Lord GOD hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season unto thee, O house of Israel, when ye are to [him that is] weary. He wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned.

The Lord GOD hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season unto thee, O house of Israel, when ye are weary. The Targum (ܬ) has, “The Lord God hath given me a tongue to teach, to give knowledge, and to instruct the righteous with wisdom, who weary themselves with the words of the law.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “The Lord Lord¹² giveth me an instructed tongue, to know when it is proper to speak a word.” The Peshitta (ܫ) does not have the clause, in season. The Douay-Rheims (ܕ) has, “The Lord hath given me a learned tongue, that I should know how to uphold by word him that is weary.” ¶ Leeser has: “The Lord Eternal hath given me a tongue for teaching, that I should know how to strengthen the weary with the word.” Kimhi, in Slotki/Rosenberg explains that the learned are those “of cultivated and fluent speech.” Barnes explains: “HEB. the tongue of those who are instructed; i.e., of the eloquent.” Nägelsbach suggests: “The tongue of a disciple is a docile tongue, willing and capable of learning. The Prophet, therefore, sees in the Servant of God one who must learn, and who likes to learn.” ¶ This is not contradictory to what we read in Holy Writ: “And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man” (Luke 2:52). Wordsworth has: “Not only was Christ mighty in Divine power, and gracious in Divine love, as He showed himself to the Hebrew Nation at the Exodus, and at the return from Babylon, but, as Man, He stooped to their weaknesses, and became His Father’s disciple, in order to teach them Divine wisdom. As He Himself says, ‘As My Father hath taught Me, I speak’ (John 8:28).” ¶ A word in season: Barnes has: “The Hebrew here is, ‘that I might know how to strengthen with a word the weary;’ that is, that he might sustain, comfort, and refresh them by his promises and his counsels.” This the Messiah has done. And Christ also today reveals to us words through the Comforter, or the Holy Ghost. And we ought to speak by the same spirit when we are one with Him. “The ability to speak suitable words, timely, wise, and helpful, is God’s gift, and one of his best gifts, which we should covet earnestly. ‘A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in baskets of silver’ (Proverb 25:11). We are often pleasantly, and often sadly, reminded how words which we spoke years ago lie in the memories of those who heard, and have exerted continuous influence for weal or woe. And there are few of us who look back over life without regret that golden opportunities for speaking helpful words were missed” (R. Tuck in Isaiah Pulpit Commentary). I will never forget the day when, decades ago, I thanked a woman who helped me as I turned in my recycle cans (money which I used to purchase my theological library). She turned to me and said, “Those are the only kind words I have heard today.” And recently I was shocked when a Church member stopped me to say that some kind words spoken had made him want to continue to improve his skills as a teacher. And I believe that sometimes, even more than a word spoken is a word not spoken. It is the gift of listening with empathy to what others have to say.¹³ ¶ Regarding the word, Elder Gene R. Cook, formerly of the First Quorum of the Seventy, explained: “Since the scriptures come from the mind of Christ, they help us to have the Spirit, which brings us to a oneness of mind and heart with the Lord. Therefore, as you read and study and assimilate the words of the Lord through the scriptures, you are in the process of absorbing the mind of Christ. You begin to think as he thinks. You begin to feel as he feels. You begin to speak as he speaks. How can we know how well we are doing in our scripture reading? We can know we are doing well when we hear his voice (both in the scriptures directly and through revelation), when our hearts burn within us at hearing his word, when we receive the words of Christ into our bosoms, and when we receive them into our minds (and thus we learn how to feel as he feels and think as he thinks.)”¹⁴ ¶ Before we can offer a word in season to another we must be filled with the Spirit, “And the Spirit shall be given unto you by the prayer of faith; and if ye receive not the Spirit ye shall not teach” (D&C 42:14). ¶ He wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Each morning rising up early to send His prophets, that perhaps the ears of the sinners might be opened, and they might receive instruction.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “He gave it me in the morning; he gave me in addition an ear to hear.” Instead of the learned, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has the teaching (Lamsa) / the instruction (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “He wakeneth in the morning, in the morning he wakeneth my ear, that I may hear him as a master.” ¶ From the beginning of day, each day, in morning in morning [ⲡⲉⲛⲉⲣ ⲡⲉⲛⲉⲣ], i.e., continually, the Father spoke to His beloved Son—and He never ceased to communicate with Him. Alexander notes: “The present tense (he wakeneth)¹⁵ asserts a claim to constant inspiration.” ¶ This is why at that supreme moment in the cross, the absence of the Father was so very painful.¹⁶ “The Servant,” as Cheyne calls the Lord in this instance, was not limited to dreams or other forms of revelation, but rather, “the spirit of prophecy abides constantly upon him.” Cheyne also goes on to say that many of the words found in ISAIAH 50 “are only appropriate in the mouth of an individual.” That is, in contrast to those who would make Israel as a nation stand for the servant in this instance. The title of servant has been applied to many individuals (Cheyne of Jeremiah; Skinner to a martyr; Baltzer to Moses). These certainly may be types. Yet it is Jesus the Christ of whom Isaiah here testifies. ¶ Barnes has: “To awaken the ear is to prepare one to receive instruction. The expressions to open the ear, to uncover the ear, to awaken the ear, occur often in the Scriptures in the sense of preparing to receive instruction, or of disposing to receive divine communications. The sense here is plain. The Messiah would be taught of God, and would be inclined to receive all that he imparted.” Jennings writes: “For the ear has a strange faculty; sounds may be quite audible, but with the attention elsewhere, they are not really heard at all. Our very hearing, although all the delicate mechanism of the ear is in perfect order, depends still upon our will. In a room full of people, many of whom may be speaking at the same time, we have the power of directing our ear to one particular speaker, and be practically deaf to all the rest. Thus today, a hundred voices in this world are crying, but amid them all is One who says: ‘If any man hear My voice I will come in to him, and will sup with him and he with Me.’”

¹¹ Parry, Donald W.; Parry, Jay A., and Peterson, Tina M., Understanding Isaiah, p.439–441.

¹² See also, Septuaginta, SESB Apparatus Criticus, κυριος + κυριος B^{LC}

¹³ See Party-Directed Mediation, chapter 4, Empathic Listening.

5 The Lord GOD hath opened appointed mine ears, and I was not rebellious, neither turned away back.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The Lord God hath sent me to prophesy, and I did not refuse, neither turned away back.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And the instruction of the Lord, Lord¹⁷ (Brenton, ‘the Lord, even the Lord’) openeth mine ears and I am not rebellious, nor do I gainsay.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “The Lord God hath opened my ear, and I do not resist: I have not gone back.” The Masoretic text (ⲙ) has Adonai YHWH, אֲדֹנָי יְהוָה, while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲙ) has Adonai Elohim, אֲדֹנָי אֱלֹהִים. ¶ In Jeremiah 2:27b we have the opposite thought: “... for they have turned their back unto me, and not their face: but in the time of their trouble they will say, Arise, and save us.” Similarly, we have Zechariah 7:11–13: “But they refused to hearken, and pulled away the shoulder, and stopped their ears, that they should not hear. Yea, they made their hearts as an adamant stone, lest they should hear the law, and the words which the LORD of hosts hath sent in his spirit by the former prophets: therefore came a great wrath from the LORD of hosts. Therefore it is come to pass, that as he cried, and they would not hear; so they cried, and I would not hear, saith the LORD of hosts.” So also ISAIAH 59:1–2: “Behold, the LORD’s hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear: But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear.” In modern-day scripture we have: “They were slow to hearken unto the voice of the Lord their God; therefore, the Lord their God is slow to hearken unto their prayers, to answer them in the day of their trouble. In the day of their peace they esteemed lightly my counsel; but, in the day of their trouble, of necessity they feel after me” (D&C 101:7–8). ¶ The Savior always was obedient to His Father and so we read: “And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me.

¹⁴ Cook, Elder Gene R. Searching the Scriptures: Bringing Power to Your Personal and Family Study, p.122–123.

¹⁵ עֵר from root, עָרָה.

¹⁶ See Elder Jeffrey R. Holland’ April 2009 General Conference talk, “None Were with Him.”

¹⁷ See Septuaginta Apparatus Criticus, κυριου] + κυριου BS

And I knew that thou hearest me always” (John 11:41b–42a, emphasis added). So it is, that Christ, even in the darkest hour of Gethsemane was obedient to His Father. Jenour says: “He finished the work [the Father] had given him to do, and his cry in his deepest agony was; ‘Not my will but thine be done.’” Rawlinson notes: “... it is perhaps better to regard it as intended to mark a contrast between the true Servant and the professed servants, or children of Israel. They ‘did not hear; their ear was not opened; they were treacherous and rebellious from the womb’ (ISAIAH 48:8). His ear [in contrast] was opened to receive God’s word perpetually ...” The JST appointed my ears, speaks to the pre-mortal calling of the Savior. We also have “Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth: for the LORD hath spoken, I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me” (ISAIAH 1:2).

6 I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair. I hid not my face from shame and spitting, {for the Lord GOD will help me; therefore shall I not be confounded:}*

* KJV keeps this clause with the next verse. Verses 5–8a constitute only one verse in the JST.

I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair. The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “My back I have given to scourges, and my cheeks to be slapped with an open hand.” Instead of plucked off the hair, the Peshitta (ܣ) has slapped the face. The Douay-Rheims (Ϸ) has, “I have given my body to the strikers, and my cheeks to them that plucked them.” ¶ Kimhi, in Rosenberg, says that “Perhaps Isaiah suffered humiliation although we do not find any evidence of it in Scriptures” (emphasis added). See similar comments by Rashi also here under ISAIAH 50:6 (50:7 in the Hebrew scriptures). Cheyne, speaks of several Biblical personages as types of Christ: “So the type Jeremiah, ‘I have been in derision continually, everyone mocking me’ (Jeremiah 20:7). So the pious sufferer, also (to say the least) a type, in Psalm 22:7, ‘All they that see me laugh to scorn.’ So the typical righteous man in the Book of Job (30:10), ‘They abhor me, they flee far from me, and withhold not spittle from my face.’” Once again, these are types of Christ. ¶ Barnes says: “I submitted willingly to be scourged, or whipped. This is one of the parts of this chapter which can be applied to no other one but the Messiah.” Wordsworth has: “I gave my back to the smiters—spitting” As our Lord Himself declares (Luke 18:31): ‘Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things that are written by the Prophets concerning the Son of Man shall be accomplished. For He shall be delivered unto the Gentiles, and shall be mocked, and spitefully entreated, and spitted on: and they shall scourge Him, and put Him to death.’ Our Lord is there referring to this place of Isaiah, and is applying it to Himself (Hengstenberg).” ¶ Kay says: “Spitting was an expression of contemptuous abhorrence (Job 30:10).—As in other prophecies, so eminently in those of ISAIAH 50–53, many of even the lesser details (which might have seemed only pictorial imagery) had a literal fulfilment (see Matthew 26:67; 27:30; Luke 18:31–33).” Cowles notes: “Jesus submitted to insult and abuse. Scourging is specially named (Mark 15:15); smiting with the hand (Matthew 26:67; John 19:3); spitting in the face (Matthew 26:67 and 27:30). Plucking off the hair of the cheek [the beard] was, in the view of the Orientals, the grossest insult.” Regarding this last point, Poole says: “Plucked off the hair” which was a contumely or punishment inflicted upon malefactors, Nehemiah 13:25.”¹⁸ Alford, speaking of Matthew 5:39b [but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also], says, “our blessed Redeemer obeyed it; ‘He gave his back to the smiters, and his cheeks to them that plucked off the hair, and hid not his face from shame and spitting.’”¹⁹ Plumer has, “We can never have fiercer, more cruel, or more brutal enemies than had our blessed Lord, Stevenson: ‘Mockery accompanied the Saviour from the garden of Gethsemane till he expired on Calvary. Judas set the example with his insidious kiss. The men, that apprehended him, mocked him. The officers at the several courts mocked him. The chief priests, scribes and Pharisees mocked him. The high-priest, Caiaphas, mocked him. The servants of his house and others surrounded the Saviour, and mocked him. They smote him with their staves, and with the palms of their hands—they did spit in his face—they plucked off the hair—they blindfolded him; then they did buffet him with their fists, saying, “Prophecy unto us, thou Christ, who is he that smote thee?”’”²⁰ ¶ I hid not my face from shame and spitting, for the Lord GOD will help me; therefore shall I not be confounded: The Targum (ܬ) has, for the second half, “The Lord God is my helper (or, ‘support’), therefore shall I not be confounded.” The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “And I turned not my face from the shame of spittles. Indeed the Lord Lord²¹ was my helper; therefore I was not ashamed.” Instead of I hid ¹⁸ Poole, M. (1853). Annotations upon the Holy Bible (Vol. 2, p. 441). New York: Robert Carter and Brothers.

¹⁹ Alford, H. (1976). Alford’s Greek Testament: an exegetical and critical commentary (1:52). Grand Rapids, MI: Guardian Press.

²⁰ Plumer, W. S. (1872). Studies in the Book of Psalms: Being a Critical and Expository Commentary, with Doctrinal and Practical Remarks on the Entire Psalter (p. 304). Philadelphia; Edinburgh: J. B. Lippincott Company; A & C Black.

²¹ See Septuaginta Apparatus Criticus, κυριος AQS⁺ + κυριος BS*LC

not, the Peshitta (ܣ) has I turned not. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “I have not turned away my face from them that rebuked me, and spit upon me. The Lord God is my helper, therefore am I not confounded.” ¶ Rashi (in Rosenberg), as we alluded to earlier in this verse, suggests that no one stood up against Isaiah in this sort of way. Alexander well summarizes the exegetes: “Some have imagined that by spitting nothing more is meant than spitting on the ground in one’s presence, which, according to the oriental usages and feelings, is a strong expression of abhorrence and contempt. But, as Lowth well says, if spitting in a person’s presence was such an indignity, how much more spitting in his face; and the whole connection shews that the reference is not to any mitigated form of insult but to its extreme.”

7 For the Lord GOD will help me; therefore shall I not be confounded:* therefore have I set my face like a flint, and I know that I shall not be ashamed, {And the Lord [He is] near and he that justifieth me.}

* JST keeps this clause with the previous verse. In fact, verses 5–8a constitute only one verse in the JST.

 KJV keeps this clause with the next verse.

Therefore have I set my face like a flint, and I know that I shall not be ashamed. The Targum (ܬ) has, “Therefore have I set my face strong as a rock, and I know that I shall not be confounded.” The LXX (Θ) reads, “But kept my countenance firm as a rock. I knew indeed that I should not be confounded.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Therefore have I set my face as a most hard rock, and I know that I shall not be confounded.” ¶ To set the face like flint (CJB), פָּנַי כַּחֲלָמִישׁ, or a hard rock, is to be unmovable. In Ezekiel we likewise have a similar expression used: “Behold, I have made thy face strong against their faces, and thy forehead strong against their foreheads. As an adamant harder than flint (מַצֵּר)²² have I made thy forehead: fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house” (Ezekiel 3:8–9). DBL-Hebrew has: “hard quartz mineral, with a focus on the hardness of the material, and its resulting difficulty to crack.” Here, unmovable in regards to moving forward in truth and righteousness. Rabbi Metsudath David, in Slotki/Rosenberg, says “of unbreakable determination.” Rawlinson wisely suggests yet another possible meaning, “He sets his face like a flint; i.e. makes it hard, impassive, expressionless, and at the same time determined, fixed not to give way.” Was this not especially true of how our Redeemer faced his attackers and accusers right before being arrested and crucified? Keith observes: “There is allusion to this characteristic of the Redeemer [resolution and firmness] in his history, as where it is said, ‘He steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem.’ Not only did the Father strengthen him for his work, he also justified him, or vindicated his claim to being the Son of God and the Saviour of the world.” ¶ Elder George Q. Cannon admonished: “... I notice a difficulty in our own midst, and that is that we yield, to a great extent, to the tendencies of the age, to the influences which surround us on every hand. We must refrain from this, we must set our faces like flint against every species of corruption, against every kind of wrong, in whatever form it may approach us. We must seek with all the energy that we have, to build up in truth and righteousness that which God has committed unto us, and establish impregnable the system of reformation with which we are entrusted. There can be no better way for us to commence than by listening to the counsels that have been given unto us in the past, and which have been the means of producing the peace, happiness and prosperity which we witness among us.”²³ President Daniel H. Wells likewise taught: “It is given unto us to overcome every difficulty and continue on our way rejoicing, having our hearts fixed like a flint on the prize before us; yes, no matter what devil stands in our way to prevent our onward march, or to beckon us this way or that way, let us not be moved either by fear or temptation, but exclaim like one of old, ‘As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord!’”²⁴ ¶ Not be ashamed. Orelli has: “Despite all abuse and ignominy, he has the confident sense of being free from real dishonour and shame.” ¶ And the Lord is near and he justifieth me. The Targum (ܬ) has, “My righteousness is near.” The LXX (Θ) reads, “Because he who justified me is near at hand.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “He is near that justifieth me.” Cheyne explains: “He that justifieth me] ‘To justify’ in the O. T. almost always (see on ISAIAH 53:11) means to pronounce a man righteous, or to prove him so in act.” Justification means to have a seal of approval put upon a thought, word or action by the Holy Spirit (see my notes on justification and sanctification under ISAIAH 45:25). Cheyne notes: “... whereas Job, the type of a righteous man, shrinks in terror from the issue, the Servant, human and yet superhuman in nature, has no doubt as to a favourable result.”

²³ Cannon, Elder George Q. “Gathering—Its Spirit—Its Object—Duties of the Gathered Saints.” 42nd Semi-Annual Conference, Salt Lake City, October 8, 1872.

²⁴ Wells, President Daniel H. “Increase of the Stakes of Zion” Brigham City, 18 August 1877.

²² From a rock.

8 And the Lord is near and he justifieth me.* Who will contend with me? let us stand together: who [is] mine adversary? let him come near to me, and I will smite him with the strength of my mouth;

✓ the master of my cause?

* JST keeps this clause with the previous verse.

Who will contend with me? let us stand together: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Who is he that will contend with me? Let us stand forth together.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Who is he that contendeth with me? Let him stand up with me face to face.” ¶ Cowles writes: “The figure leads the thought here: Who will arraign me before the judge? He who vindicates my cause [God] is near me. Who then will dare contend with me in litigation? Let us stand before the court together [a challenge to join issue].” Kay has: “that justifieth me] Acquitting Him from the charge on which He had been condemned.—That charge was, that, in claiming to be the Son of God, He had committed blasphemy. The resurrection ‘justified’ Him (Romans 1:4; cp. 1 Timothy 3:16).—In Romans 8:33–34, all the faithful are empowered to use the challenge of this verse; for in Christ’s justification theirs is included (Romans 4:25). stand together] before God’s tribunal (Deuteronomy 19:17; Zechariah 3:1).” ¶ Who is mine adversary? let him come near to me, and I will smite him with the strength of my mouth. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Who is my adversary (literally, ‘who is the Lord of my cause’)? Let him come near me.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Yes, let my accuser, whoever he be, come near me.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) is missing the last clause, “And I will smite him &c.” ¶ Birks says: “The outward ‘adversary’ was the Jewish Sanhedrim; but in a deeper sense it is the Prince of this world,²⁵ who assailed our Lord in the hour of darkness, and found nothing in which he could prevail. Our Lord ‘endured the cross, despising the shame,’ in firm reliance on the love and wisdom of the Father.” Kay alludes to the legalistic character of these words: “is mine adversary] Or, ‘hath a claim against me’ (cp. the Hebrew in Exodus 24:14²⁶).” Wade has: “The ²⁵ That is, Satan (John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11).

²⁶ Both verses have נִשְׁמָר (from the root נִשְׁמַר), to come near or approach. LHI has approach in both instances, here and in Exodus 24:14. LITV and NASB have approach only Exodus. Here, it is clearly a legal term, such as approaching the bar, “Who has a case against Me? Let him draw near [נִשְׁמָר] to Me” (NASB). Ringgren, in TDOT explains: “Another meaning of נִשְׁמָר is ‘go to court.’ Exodus 24:14 stipulates that in Moses’ absence, whoever has a dispute may turn to Aaron and Hur. They are thus appointed as arbiters, and ‘come before them’ means to accept their judgment. We find נִשְׁמָר used expressions justify, contend, adversary (literally, master of a suit), and condemn are forensic²⁷.”

9 For Behold, the Lord GOD will help me; and all they which ~~who [is] he [that]~~ shall condemn me? lo, behold all they ~~all~~ shall wax old as a garment; and the moth shall eat them up.

For the Lord GOD will help me; and all they which shall condemn me ... The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Behold, the Lord God is my helper (or, ‘support’); who is he that shall condemn me?” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Behold the Lord, Lord²⁸ (Brenton, ‘the Lord, the Lord’) will be my advocate; who can do me any evil?” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Behold the Lord God is my helper: who is he that shall condemn me?” ¶ In terms of what we find in the Masoretic text (ⲙ), Whitehouse says, “Here again we note, as in ISAIAH 50:1, that the interrogative is a rhetorical form of expressing a negative, viz. ‘none shall condemn.’” Yet modern revelation suggests otherwise, that there would be those who would condemn the Lord, and as a result would follow the consequences we see next. Young well says that: “The verb condemn is the antithesis of justify.” We see the latter in ISAIAH 50:7. ¶ Behold all they shall wax old as a garment; and the moth shall eat them up. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Lo, they all shall be as a garment that waxeth old, yea, as when the moth eateth it.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Behold you shall all wax old like a mantle, and the moth shall consume you.” Instead of wax old, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has wear out. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Lo, they shall all be destroyed as a garment, the moth shall eat them up.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “Who will contend with me? (compare St. Paul’s words in Romans 8:33–34, ‘It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth?’).” And in likening the scriptures unto us, Luther similarly speaks of Romans 8:31b: “If God be for us, who can be against us?” Ibn Ezra has: “And all those that condemn me by their words, they will ‘wax old as a garment.’” Such statements remind us of ISAIAH 40, where we read of the frailty of grass and flowers. So also garments are usually frail and eaten up similarly in the fundamental precept of Deuteronomy 25:1: ‘If two men have a dispute and enter into litigation [Leeser has and they come nigh {וַיִּנְשָׁא}] unto a court of justice] and the judges decide between them, the one in the right is to be vindicated and the one in the wrong is to be condemned.’ Although this text has been interpolated into a law regulating flogging, it is a general description of correct legal procedure (cf. also Dt. 25:9, which deals with a particular case).” How can I not be filled with gratitude to Kay, and others like him, who have eyes to see these little details and lead us to them.

²⁷ One of the definitions of forensic is related to jurisprudence.

²⁸ See Septuaginta Apparatus Criticus, κυριος] + κυριος B^c

by moths or otherwise perish. Christ, in contrast, would endure for ever. Alexander observes: “By a perfectly natural and common transition, the writer passes from comparison to metaphor, and having first transformed them into garments, says directly that the moth shall devour them, not as men, in which light he no longer views them, but as old clothes. This is a favourite comparison in Scripture to express a gradual but sure decay (compare ISAIAH 51:8, and Hosea 5:12).” Barnes writes: “The idea is, that the Messiah would survive all ... attacks; his cause, his truth, and his reputation would live, while all the power, the influence, the reputation of his adversaries, would vanish as a garment that is worn out and then thrown away ... In eastern countries, where wealth consisted much in changes of raiment, the depredations of the moth would be particularly to be feared, and hence it is frequently referred to in the Bible.” This is particularly true of nations where wool was used for clothing—as contrasted also to the synthetics of today. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt said: “If we are faithful to our covenants, the fury of the oppressor will not harm us, and where will be the strong arm of man? It will be like the flax in the flame, like a moth-eaten garment, the wicked shall vanish away, and there will be no place found for them.”²⁹

vv. 10–11. A contrast is made between those who walk in the path of the Lord and those who walk in their own light.

10 ¶ Who [is] among you that feareth the LORD, that obeyeth the voice of his servant, that walketh [in] darkness, and hath no light? Let him trust in the name of the LORD, and stay upon his God.

Who is among you that feareth the LORD, that obeyeth the voice of his servant, that walketh in darkness, and hath no light? The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “The Prophet said: The Holy One, blessed be He, shall say to all the nations: Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyeth the voice of His servant the prophet, who keepeth the law, being in distress, as a man that walketh in darkness and has no light.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Who is there among you who feareth the Lord, let him hearken to the voice of his servant. Ye who walk in darkness and have no light.” The Peshitta (Ⓟ) reads something like, “Who among you reveres Yahweh? Give heed to the voice of his servant. He who walks in darkness and has no light.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has heareth instead of obeyeth. ¶ The word, when associated with God, means to reverence. Gesenius gives us the example, to reverence or fear Elohim, יָרָא אֶת־אֱלֹהִים. ¶ According to Kimhi (in Rosenberg), walking in darkness means “they were not enlightened” by scripture but instead followed “the path of evil and darkness.” Clarke well points out that there is a contradiction between those who suggest that we can still walk in darkness while following the Lord. Some translations offer alternative meanings: “Therefore who so feareth the Lorde among you, let hym heare the voyce of his seruaunt: Who so walketh in darknesse and no lyght shyneth vpon hym, let hym put his trust in the name of the Lorde, and holde hym by his God” (Bishops); and “Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that hearkeneth to the voice of his servant? though he have walked in darkness, and had no light: let him trust in the name of the Lord, and lean for support upon his God” (Leeser). Barnes explains that to walk in darkness points to the human condition, wherein we have to face adversity. When we face such, we can find relief by turning to the Lord and trusting in Him. ¶ In the Hebrew Bible, as I have mentioned repeatedly, some of my favorite scripture begin with the question word מִי, who. All those who would follow the Lord and be His disciples are then given an important directive, to leave the darkness and to trust in the Lord. ¶ Let him trust in the name of the LORD, and stay upon his God. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “he trusting in the name of the Lord, will stay upon the salvation of his God?” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Trust in the name of the Lord and stay yourselves on God.” The Peshitta (Ⓟ) reads something like, “Let him place his trust in the name of the Yahweh that he may be saved by his God.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “Let him hope in the name of the Lord, and lean upon his God.” ¶ In these last verses of ISAIAH 50, Baltzer sees an allusion to Rain in Due Season: “... as the choice between life and death” and cites Deuteronomy 30:15, “See, I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil.” This is certainly true of spiritual death as well of the second death. Certainly, we are admonished to trust in the Lord and stay or lean upon the Father that we might have Eternal Life.

11 Behold all ye that kindleth a fire, that compass [yourselves] about with sparks: walk in the light of your fire, and in the sparks [that] which ye have kindled; this shall ye have of mine hand, ye shall lie down in sorrow.

Behold all ye that kindleth fire, that compass yourselves about with sparks: walk in the light of your fire. The ²⁹ Pratt, Elder Orson. “The Kingdom of God.” discourse delivered in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 8 July 1855.

Targum (Ⓢ) has, “The nations answered and said to him: O our Lord! it is not possible for us to occupy ourselves with the law; because we continually wage war against each other, and when we gain the victory one over the other, we burn their houses with fire, and bring their children and their treasures into captivity, and in this manner (the Royal Polyglot reads נִיִּיָּךְ, ‘fate’ or ‘that which is decreed’) our days are spent; thus it is impossible for us to occupy ourselves with the law. The Holy One, blessed be He, answered and said unto them: Behold, all of you who stir up a fire, and lay hold on the sword; go ye, fall into the fire which ye have stirred up, and by the sword, which ye have laid hold on. This shall be unto you from my Word, ye shall turn to your destruction.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Behold you are all kindling a fire and increasing the flame; walk in the light of your fire.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, for the middle clause, “Encompassed with flames.” ¶ In ISAIAH 2:5 we read this invitation: “O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the LORD.” This is in contrast to the light of our own fire. So we read: “This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all. If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth: But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin” (1 John 1:5–7). Instead of compass about with sparks, Kimhi (in Rosenberg) suggests the expression refers to “those who create fires by rubbing stones or sticks together.” ¶ President Joseph F. Smith warned against the lazy and the proud: “Among the Latter-day Saints, the preaching of false doctrines disguised as truths of the gospel, may be expected from people of two classes, and practically from these only; they are: FIRST—The hopelessly ignorant, whose lack of intelligence is due to their indolence and sloth, who make but feeble effort, if indeed any at all, to better themselves by reading and study; those who are afflicted with a dread disease that may develop into an incurable malady—laziness. SECOND—The proud and self-vaunting ones, who read by the lamp of their own conceit; who interpret by rules of their own contriving; who have become a law unto themselves, and so pose as the sole judges of their own doings. More dangerously ignorant than the first.”³⁰ ¶ And in the sparks which ye have kindled; this shall ye have of mine hand, ye shall lie down in sorrow. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And by the flame which you have kindled. On my account these things have befallen you. You shall lie down in sorrow. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “And in the flames which you have kindled: this is done to you by my hand, you shall sleep in sorrows.”

¶ We have a choice of real, true enduring Light, or of furiously attempting to make our own fire—perhaps with a flint stone. Birks says: “Then the sparks they had kindled went out, their hopes expired in thick darkness; and they lay down in sorrow ... Hahn justly observes that the enlightening, not the consuming nature, of the fire and sparks is here chiefly intended. Instead of walking in the light of the heavenly Dayspring, they kindled an earthly light, transient and feeble. The true reference, then, is to Pharisaic righteousnesses and human traditions, or to vain, worldly philosophy, by which the unbelieving strive to light up the darkness of the soul. The humble may walk in darkness for a time, but heavenly light will soon dawn on them. The proud may comfort themselves, by false, self-righteous zeal or worldly wisdom, with a seeming light, but it will end in darkness and sorrow.” Horsley has: “Instead of walking by the light of God’s holy doctrine, ye endeavour to raise a light of your own; the light of false philosophy and human imaginations.” Kimhi (in Rosenberg) suggests that those who kindle their own fire will be burnt by the same. So also Rawlinson: “They are condemned to be scorched by the fire which they have themselves kindled, to be made wretched by the strife which they have themselves caused to spring up.” Lowth has: “The fire of their own kindling, by the light of which they walk with security and satisfaction, is an image designed to express, in general, human devices, and mere worldly policy, exclusive of faith and trust in God; which, though they flatter them for a while with pleasing expectations and some appearance of success, shall in the end turn to the confusion of the authors.” ¶ The Prophet Joseph Smith taught: “But in obedience there is joy and peace unspotted, unalloyed [all of this in contrast to cursings and vexations that will lead us to lie down in sorrow and wailings of everlasting regret]; and as God has designed our happiness—and the happiness of all His creatures, he never has—He never will institute an ordinance or give a commandment to His people that is not calculated in its nature to promote that happiness which He has designed, and which will not end in the greatest amount of good and glory to those who become the recipients of his law and ordinances.”³¹ ¶ What does it mean to lie down in sorrow? Ibn Ezra has: “Compare וַיִּשְׁכַּב דָּוִד ‘and David slept,’ that is, “and David died” (1 Kings 2:10); there are, besides, a great many instances of the use of the verb שָׁכַב in this sense. Literally, שָׁכַב means to lie down (Gesenius, TDOT, HAL, DCH). The word death has a number of meanings and ranges, including spiritual death. Those who oppose God do not live lives of joy, so when such die, they can be said to die in sorrow. There is a spiritual death that separates man from the presence of God, and there is certainly a strong allusion to such a death here. An allusion which is confirmed in D&C, where portions of ISAIAH 50 are included, “And this shall ye have of my hand—ye shall lie down in sorrow. Behold, and lo, there are none to deliver you; for ye obeyed not my voice when I called to you out of the heavens; ye believed not my servants, and when they were sent unto you ye received them not. Wherefore, they sealed up the testimony and bound up the law, and ye were delivered over unto darkness. These shall go away into outer darkness, where there is weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth. Behold the Lord your God hath spoken it. Amen” (D&C 133:70–74).

³⁰ Widtsoe, John A, and Smith, Joseph F. Gospel Doctrine.

³¹ TPJS 256–257.

FIRST POSTED: 11 January 2016

Isaiah 51

As so many of Isaiah's prophecies, this can be applied to multiple settings but most especially this chapter revolves around the latter-days and the gathering of Israel in preparation for the Messiah's Second Coming. We also find some allusions to the millennium. The Son at times speaks for the Father through the principle of Divine Investiture.

vv. 1–3. Ibn Ezra has: "The prophet speaks now to the good people, who believe in the words of the prophets. Look, etc. Be not surprised how Zion can again be filled with her children as before ..." Slotki/Rosenberg interpret Ibn Ezra as saying that despite the few faithful, they will receive the prophetic promises: "They have but to look to Abraham and Sarah to realize that a whole nation may arise from one small family." When The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was officially established, likewise, it was done by six individuals full of hope and a vision for a Church—as depicted in Daniel—that would be carved out of a mountain without hands. Calvin reminds us of Paul's words regarding Abraham: "Who against hope believed in hope, that he might become the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken, So shall thy seed be. And being not weak in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb: He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God; And being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform. And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness" (Romans 4:18–22). Nyman well has: "A careful analysis of the covenant made with Abraham and Sarah shows that it will be fulfilled in the last days. The Doctrine and Covenants reveals that Abraham's covenant is now being fulfilled (see D&C 103:17; 132:30). Isaiah's invitation for the righteous to look to Abraham and Sarah pertains to this same time period."¹

1 ¶ HEARKEN unto me, ye that follow after righteousness; ye that seek the LORD, look unto the rock from [whence] ye are were hewn, and to the hole of the pit from [whence] ye are digged.

HEARKEN unto me, ye that follow after righteousness. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Hearken to my Word, ye that follow after truth." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "Hearken to me ye who are in pursuit of righteousness." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, "Give ear to me, you that follow that which is just." ¶ Cowles reminds us that "the expression, 'follow after righteousness,' appears first in the writings of Moses (Deuteronomy 16)." There we have: "That which is altogether just shalt thou follow, that thou mayest live, and inherit the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee" (Deuteronomy 16:20). Cowles also points us to Proverbs 15:9b, "[the LORD] loveth him that followeth after righteousness." In the New Testament we similarly read: "But thou, O man of God ... follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness. Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses" (1 Timothy 6:11–12). ¶ Can there be any more beautiful words than to hear from the Savior, "Hearken unto me, ye that follow after righteousness?" "The way of the wicked is an abomination unto the LORD: but he loveth him that followeth after righteousness" (Proverbs 15:9). To follow after righteousness makes a person a woman or a man of God [אִישׁ-אֱלֹהִים]: "But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness" (1 Timothy 6:11). The Savior said, "And blessed are all they who do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled with the Holy Ghost" (3 Nephi 12:6, compare with Matthew 5:6). ¶ Ye that seek the LORD. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Who seek instruction from the Lord." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "And who are seeking the Lord." ¶ In Isaiah's frequent parallel structure,² he repeats the same sentiment, ye that follow after righteousness / ye that seek the Lord. The Lord promises that we shall not seek Him in vain, "I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me" (Proverbs 8:17). The Lord invites us to seek Him with faith, and not to follow half-heartedly: "But if from thence thou shalt seek the LORD thy God, thou shalt find [him], if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul" (Deuteronomy 4:29). ¶ Look unto the rock from whence ye were hewn. The ² It should be noted, however, that Isaiah sometimes hides ideas in such parallel structures so that each expression has a different meaning. This he probably did knowing full well that the words of Scripture would be tampered with.

¹ Nyman, Monte S., Great are the Words of Isaiah, p.194.

Targum (Ⓒ) has, “Consider that ye were cut out like a stone hewn from a rock.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Look at that hard rock which you have been hewing.” Instead of rock, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has mountain (Lamsa) / mount (BPE). ¶ This expression about the rock and the pit is sometimes given a negative and sometimes a positive turn. So also Alexander, who says: “In the same category may be safely placed the old dispute, whether Abraham is called a rock because he was strong in faith (Romans 4:20), or because he was as good as dead (Hebrews 11:12) when he received the promise.” It seems to me that it is the positive that is here intended.

We are first asked to look [נִבְטָ] unto the rock and then asked to look [נִבְטָ] unto Abraham and Sarah.

Regarding the figure of Abraham, Barnes writes: “To Abraham the founder of the nation. The figure is taken from the act of quarrying stone for the purposes of building; and the essential idea here is, that God had formed the nation from the beginning, as a mason constructs a building; that he had, so to speak, taken the materials rough and unhewn from the very quarry; that he had shaped, and fitted them, and moulded them into an edifice. The idea is not that their origin was dishonorable or obscure. It is not that Abraham was not an honored ancestor, or that they should be ashamed of the founder of their nation. But the idea is, that God had had the entire moulding of the nation; that he had taken Abraham and Sarah from a distant land, and had formed them into a great people and nation for his own purpose. The argument is, that he who had done this was able to raise them up from captivity, and make them again a great people.” Luther says: “He calls Abraham a rock because of his complete and vigorous faith. So the evangelist writes (Matthew 3:9): ‘God is able from these stones to raise up children to Abraham.’”

¶ Delitzsch writes: “Abraham and Sarah they are mentally to set before them, for they are types of the salvation to be anticipated now” (emphasis added). Kay shows us that the true rock is not Abraham, but the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob by pointing us to Deuteronomy 32:18: “‘the Rock that begat thee ... God that formed thee,’ where the word for ‘formed’ is the same that is used in ISAIAH 51:2 for Sarah.” In Deuteronomy we have: “For the LORD’s portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance ... he led him about, he instructed him, he kept him as the apple of his eye ... then [Israel as a nation] forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his salvation ... Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee” (Deuteronomy 32:9, 10b, 15b, 18, also see vv. 3–4 that leave no doubt that Christ is the Rock). ¶ Once again, the recurring principle: Beautiful Feet. Christ lends to His prophets and disciples some of His sacred titles and attributes. Here, they are lent to Abraham and to Sarah. ¶ President

Brigham Young contrasted the good, or God, with our weaknesses and forgetfulness: “This people ... are apt to forget their God, the pit from which they were dug, and the rock from which they were hewn, everyman turning to his own way. Seemingly the Lord is chastening us until we turn and do His will.”³ God is thus represented by the rock and the pit. Christ is often referred to as the Rock of our salvation. Abraham and Sara are mentioned in the next verse as types of this Rock. While this scripture reminds us of our honorable earthly heritage, Elder George F. Richards reminds us of our heavenly heritage: “So every man and every woman under the sound of my voice is either a son of God or a daughter of God. He is our eternal Father. And as things earthly are typical of things heavenly, when we think of Father we naturally think of Mother. We think of being born. So we have been born of our heavenly parents in the spirit, and in our spirit birth have inherited attributes and qualities of a God-like character. What a noble parentage! What a noble ancestry we are of! What manner of men and women ought we to be? In the language of the scripture we might say: Look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged.”⁴ ¶ And to the hole of the pit from whence ye are digged. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “That ye were cut out like a mass hewn out of a hollow cistern.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And into that deep pit which you have digged.” ¶ Barnes explains: “The word rendered ‘hole’ means such an excavation as men make who are taking stones from a quarry. It expresses substantially the same idea as the previous member of the verse. This language is sometimes addressed to Christians, with a view to produce humility by reminding them that they have been taken by God from a state of sin, and raised up, as it were, from a deep and dark pit of pollution. But this is not the sense of the passage, nor will it bear such an application. It may be used to denote that God has taken them, as stone is taken from the quarry; that he found them in their natural state as unhewn blocks of marble are; that he has moulded and formed them by his own agency, and fitted them into his spiritual temple; and that they owe all the beauty and grace of their Christian deportment to him; that this is an argument to prove that he who had done so much for them as to transform them, so to speak, from rough and unsightly blocks to polished stones, fitted for his spiritual temple on earth, is able to keep them still, and to fit them for his temple above.” In contrast to the pit mentioned in ISAIAH 51:14, Cowles well says: “The ‘rock’ and the ‘hole of the pit’ constitute but a single figure. It compares the Hebrew people to a stone cut from a quarry. Abraham was the old quarry from which all these stones were taken—the hole in the ground when they were taken out.”

³ Young, President Brigham. 31 July 1853. JD 1:162.

⁴ Elder George F. Richards, General Conference Report, LDS Church News, Deseret News. April 1941, p. 113.

2 Look unto Abraham your father, and unto Sarah [that] bare you: for I called him alone, and blessed him, and increased him.

Look unto Abraham your father, and unto Sarah that bare you: The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “Consider Abraham your father, and Sarah who conceived you.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Look to Abraham your father, and to Sarah who brought you forth.” ¶ Elder McConkie has: “Abraham alone is the father of us all, speaking after the manner of the flesh, and all who receive the blessings of the gospel are either natural or adopted sons in his everlasting family.”⁵ And further, “To Joseph Smith the Lord said: ‘Abraham received all things, whatsoever he received, by revelation and commandment, by my word, saith the Lord, and hath entered into his exaltation and sitteth upon his throne ... Go ye, therefore, and do the works of Abraham.’ (D&C 132:29, 32.)”⁶ And we are to look up not just to Abraham, but to his righteous wife, Sara, our mother. Elder Orson Hyde taught: “In the first place, then, we will look unto Abraham our father, and to Sarah who bore us, for if we are Christ’s, then we are Abraham’s seed, and heirs according to the promise ... I look then unto Abraham as my father, and unto Sarah as my mother who bore me. How was it, then, with Abraham? He is said to be the father of the faithful, and the great head of the Church in the days of the Patriarchs, and the head of those who have been adopted into the covenant of Jehovah through the blood of His only begotten; for if we are Christ’s then we are Abraham’s seed, and heirs according to the promise. If, by the virtue of the Savior’s blood, our sins are washed away, we are the children of Abraham; we hail him as our father, and Sarah as our mother; he is the father of the faithful, he is the father of many nations ... Jehovah promised that in him and in his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed, as a pattern of piety, and as the great head of the Church. Because of his faithfulness in keeping the commandments of Jehovah on earth, he drew from on high this great promise.”⁷ ¶ Through Patriarchal Blessings, we can learn how we are connected to Abraham: “The practice of giving patriarchal blessings is a constant reminder of the honor and glory of family:

... They prompt those who receive blessings to ‘look unto Abraham, your father,’ (2 Nephi 8:2) to ‘do the works of Abraham’ (D&C 132:32; cf. John 8:39), to be willing to be ‘chastened and tried even as Abraham’ (D&C 101:4), and to recognize that Abraham’s willingness in offering up his son was ‘a similitude of God and his Only Begotten Son’ (Jacob 4:5).”⁸ The Apostle Paul wrote: “Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham. And the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, [saying], In thee shall all nations be blessed. So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham” (Galatians 3:7–9). ¶ For I called him alone, and blessed him, and increased him. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “For Abraham was one alone in the world, and I brought him to my service, I also blessed him and multiplied him.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “For he was an individual when I called him; and I blessed him and loved him and multiplied him.” Instead of for I called him alone, the Peshitta (Ⓟ) makes emphasis on the fact that Abraham was just one person when he was called, before he blessed and multiplied. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has multiplied instead of increased. ¶ Alexander writes: “For I have called him one] which does not mean, I have declared him to be such, or so described him; but, I have called (i.e. chosen, designated) him, when he was only one, i.e. a solitary individual, although the destined father of a great nation (Genesis 12:2). This sense of the word one is clear from Ezekiel 33:24, where, with obvious allusion to this verse, it is put in opposition to many: Abraham was ONE, and he inherited the land; and we are MANY, (much more then) is the land given to us for an inheritance.” ¶ Regarding the second part of the clause, Cowles suggests: “The point of the promise turns largely on this future sense of the verbs, ‘I will bless’ and I will increase him. It is especially unfortunate that the received translation should have ignored this future sense and promise.” Barnes has: “For I called him alone] – HEBREW, ‘For one I called him;’ that is, he was alone; there was but one, and he increased to a mighty nation. The point of the declaration here is, that God had called one individual—Abraham—and that he had caused him to increase until a mighty nation had sprung from him.” ¶ Through the Abrahamic covenant all the nations of the world have been and will be blessed. “By myself have I sworn, saith the LORD, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only [son]: That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which [is] upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; And in thy seed

⁵ McConkie, Bruce R. The Millennial Messiah (The Messiah Series), Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1978–82, p. 245.

⁶ McConkie, Joseph Fielding. Gospel Symbolism. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1985, p. 154.

⁷ Orson Hyde, Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. London: Latter-day Saints' Book Depot, 1854–1886. April 6, 1853, Vol. 2, p. 79.

⁸ Patriarchal Blessings, Ludlow, Daniel H., ed. Encyclopedia of Mormonism. New York: Macmillan Publishing Company, 1992.

shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice” (Genesis 22:16b–18).

¶ How would the nations of the earth be blessed? President Joseph Fielding Smith explains: “Without doubt much of the promise of blessings to the nations has been lost through the transcribing and translating of the scriptures. In the Book of Abraham we find a more accurate account as follows: ‘My name is Jehovah, and I know the end from the beginning; therefore my hand shall be over thee. And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee above measure, and make thy name great among all nations, and thou shalt be a blessing unto thy seed after thee, that in their hands they shall bear this ministry and Priesthood unto all nations; And I will bless them through thy name; for as many as receive this Gospel shall be called after thy name, and shall be accounted thy seed, and shall rise up and bless thee, as their father; And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse them that curse thee; and in thee (that is, in thy Priesthood) and in thy seed (that is, thy Priesthood), for I give unto thee a promise that this right shall continue in thee, and in thy seed after thee (that is to say, the literal seed, or the seed of the body) shall all the families of the earth be blessed, even with the blessings of the Gospel, which are the blessings of salvation, even of life eternal’ (Abraham 2:8–11) ... We are preaching the gospel now in all parts of the world, and for what purpose? To gather out from the Gentile nations the lost sheep of the house of Israel. It is by this scattering that the Gentile nations have been blessed, and if they will truly repent they are entitled to all the blessings promised to Israel, ‘which are the blessings of salvation, even of life eternal’” (emphasis added).⁹

3 For the LORD shall comfort Zion: he will comfort all her waste places; and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the LORD; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of melody.

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, for the last two clauses, “They that offer thanksgiving, and the voice of them that praise.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And now Sion, I will comfort thee. I have indeed comforted all her desolations, and I will make her waste places like a garden; and those west of her like the garden of the Lord. In her shall be found joy and gladness, thanksgiving and the sound of praise.” Instead of the two comforts, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has build and in the second instance build (Lamsa) / rebuild (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓣ) has, “The Lord therefore will comfort Sion, and will comfort all the ruins thereof: and he will make her desert as a place of pleasure, and her wilderness as the garden of the Lord. Joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of praise.” At the end of this verse, the expression sorrow and mourning shall flee away (compare to Masoretic text (Ⓜ) in ISAIAH 51:11, נִסּוּ יָגוֹן וְאַנְחָה, appears only in the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⓞ), נִסּוּ יָגוֹן וְאַנְחָה, but not in the Masoretic text (Ⓜ).

¶ Abarbanel, in Slotki/Rosenberg, speaks of her waste places: “The prophet compares Zion to Abraham and Sarah, who were childless for many years. So will Zion be bereft of her children for many years, but will eventually become like Eden, the garden of the Lord, cf. Genesis 13:10.” Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg explains that this verse is written in the prophetic perfect, i.e., as something so sure that it has already been accomplished. So also Orelli, regarding comfort, נָחַם.

We shall consider two different applications of this verse. First, the establishment of Zion in the American Continent, and then Zion in Israel. ¶ ZION, AMERICAN CONTINENT. Elder Orson Pratt forcefully taught: “But God has said that he would make the wilderness a fruitful field, and streams in the desert, and he has fulfilled his promise. Pioneers, if any of you are here today, let me ask you a question—When you came down from the mouth of Emigration Canyon, where Camp Douglas is now situated, into this region of country, in July, 1847, what did the ground appear like? Did you dig down and make any experiments? ‘O yes, in many places.’ How far did you dig down? ‘Some of us dug many feet to see if there was any appearance of moisture.’ Did you find anything? What was the appearance of the soil? It looked as though there had been no rain for many generations. What do we find now? We find this same parched-up soil, for some five square miles, where Salt Lake City is located, converted into fruitful gardens, planted with apple, pear, peach, plum, and other kinds of fruit trees adapted to the climate, and in the spring season of the year, in the months of May and June, this locality is like one vast garden full of blossoms, so much so that strangers are astonished beyond measure to see such a large extent of country so much like a garden. Now let us see what Isaiah says about it, for he looked upon it as well as you, if he did live twenty-five hundred years ago. ‘The Lord shall comfort Zion, he will make her wilderness like Eden, her desert like the garden of the Lord. Joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving and the voice of melody.’ Indeed! Did you see it, Isaiah, as well as the people that live in our day? Did you see a people go into the desert and offer up thanksgiving and the voice of melody? Did you see that desert and wilderness redeemed from its sterile condition and become like the garden of Eden? ‘O yes,’ says Isaiah, ‘I saw it all, and I left it on record for the benefit of the generation that should live some two or three thousand years after my day.”¹⁰ Elder Woodruff said: “Are we not, as a whole people, witnesses unto God our Eternal Father and all men this day that this prophecy has been fulfilled under our eyes? It is peculiar that, although this is the chosen people of God, they have been called to settle the desert and barren spots of this earth? It is peculiar in one sense, and yet it is quite natural in another, when we take into consideration that through the conversion of the desert wastes into gardens and thus fulfilling the prophecies, the Lord has had a chance to prove His people, to develop a superior type of manhood and womanhood, and to bring out the best qualities of their natures.”¹¹ The Pioneers have turned, with God’s help, a wilderness into a most beautiful and productive place. When the Saints move to Jackson County, they are likely to do the same. ¶ ZION, ISRAEL. The land of Israel would be blessed as has long been predicted, and her blessing would begin to take place along with the restoration of the Gospel in the latter days. Orson Pratt explains: “David says, that after truth springs out of the earth,¹² the land of Israel ‘should yield its increase.’ Isaiah says, that in the day that the marvelous work and a wonder is accomplished, then ‘Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field’...”¹³ Today, Israel continues to become an agricultural powerhouse. ¶ MILLENNIUM. In the Millennium, “Christ will reign personally upon the earth; and, that the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisiacal glory” (Articles of Faith 10b). ¶ Like Eden [עֵדֶן]... like the Garden of the LORD, [גֶּן־יְהוָה]. Calvin has: “And will make her desert like a place of delights” The Prophet here alludes to a passage in the writings of Moses, in which he relates that man was at first placed in “the garden of Eden” [גֶּן־עֵדֶן] (Genesis 2:15), that is, in ‘a place of delights,’ from which he was driven out ...” Eden, עֵדֶן means, “delight, pleasure” (Gesenius).

⁹ Smith, Joseph Fielding. Answers to Gospel Questions. vols. 1–5. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1957–1966. Vol. II, p. 53.

vv. 4–8. Regarding verses 4–5, Henderson writes: “These verses are so obviously parallel to ISAIAH 42:1–4, 6, that they must be regarded as referring to the same subject—the establishment of the gospel dispensation.” Kay, regarding 4–6 has: “[Christ] here invites them to listen to Him (ISAIAH 51:1, 4, 7); not now as the suffering Son of Man, but as the Ruler and Saviour of the world (ISAIAH 51:4–6).” The Gospel will go forth and be written in the hearts of Christ’s disciples.

4 ¶ Hearken unto me, my people; and give ear unto me, O my nation: for a law shall proceed from me, and I will make my judgment to rest for a light of the people.

Hearken unto me, my people; and give ear unto me, O my nation: The Targum (ܬ) has, “Listen to my Word, O my people, and give ear, O my congregation, to my service.” The LXX (Ϯ) reads, “Hear me; hear me, my people, and ye kings; listen to me.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has tribes instead of nation. ¶ Sadly, every effort is made by the Gentile authors to wrest the blessings that await Israel in the last days, as they return to Christ, and give them to the Gentiles. So Lowth, who here has:

“For עַמִּי, my people, the Bodley MS, and another, read עַמִּים, ye peoples; and for לְאֻמִּי, my nation, the Bodley MS, and eight others (two of them ancient), read לְאֻמִּים ye nations; and so the Syriac in both words.

The difference is very material: for in this case the address is made, not to the Jews, but to the Gentiles, as in all reason it ought to be; for this and the two following verses express the call of the Gentiles, the islands, or the distant lands on the coasts of the Mediterranean and other seas.” Gladly, Henderson admits the presence of these readings but refutes the alternate reading and interpretation: “... but the evidence in its favour [that this refers to the Gentiles and not the Jews] is not to be weighed against that by which the reading of the Textus Receptus is supported, especially if we take the internal evidence into the account.” That the Lord calls Israel my people and my nation (עַמִּי and לְאֻמִּי), is very significant, as we have underscored in Rain in Due Season. The Gentile Nations have been called upon to help gather Israel in the last days, for which I am moved with the deepest gratitude. ¶ For a law shall proceed from me. The LXX (Ϯ) reads, “For from me shall proceed a law.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has, “For a law shall go forth from me.” ¶ According to Elder McConkie, this verse is related to the restoration,

¹⁰ Pratt, Elder Orson. “Fulfillment of Prophecy—The Desert Watered and the Wilderness Made Fruitful—Zion in the Valleys of the Mountains—Increase of Her families Like a Flock—Her Peace, Plenty, and Prosperity. Sunday afternoon, 30 August 1875. (JD 18:144, OP), p. 148.

¹¹ Woodruff, Elder A. O., General Conference Reports, LDS Church News, Deseret News. Excerpts 1970–1996. Salt Lake City: Deseret News Publishing Company. April 1902, p. 34. Also see Clawson, Elder Rudger, General Conference Reports, LDS Church News, Deseret News. Excerpts 1970–1996. Salt Lake City: Deseret News Publishing Company. April 1905, p. 35. President Charles W. Nibley also loved this verse. See e.g., General Conference Reports, LDS Church News, Deseret News. Excerpts 1970–1996. Salt Lake City: Deseret News Publishing Company. April 1930, p. 29.

¹² These words are an allusion to the First Vision and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. See Psalm 85:11.

¹³ Orson Pratt, Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, 1850–1851, Latter-day Tracts, p. 95. (Typos corrected from Infobase version)

when “The fulness of my everlasting gospel shall be restored, and it shall be as it was in days of old.”¹⁴

תּוֹרָה, means law and doctrine, but also instruction, either human or divine (see Gesenius). In TDOT Lindars has: “God does not give תּוֹרָה except through such functionaries as prophets and priests.” LDS would say that revelations and teachings for the Church come through the living Prophet, as well as instructions from the Brethren, both the living and the former, and through the Holy Scriptures (including the Bible, Book of Mormon and Pearl of Great Price). But also, instruction, on an individual basis will also come through the Holy Spirit. The law that will proceed is referred to earlier in Isaiah, and is most especially related to General Conference addresses: “And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem” (ISAIAH 2:3). And from the Lord directly, when He reins upon the earth during the Millennium. ¶ And I will make my judgment to rest for a light of the people. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And my judgment like a light; the nations which I led into captivity shall praise it.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And my judgment shall be for the light of nations.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓜ) has, “And my judgment shall rest to be a light of the nations.” ¶ Elder McConkie continues: “When the Lord said, ‘A law shall proceed from me, and I will make my judgment to rest for a light of the people’ (ISAIAH 51:4); when the call shall go forth, ‘Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee’ (ISAIAH 60:1); when the pronouncement was made, ‘The Lord God will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations’ (ISAIAH 61:11); when the divine word shall say, ‘Lift up a standard for the people,’ and the call shall go forth ‘unto the end of the world, Behold, thy salvation cometh’ (ISAIAH 62:10–11)—when all these and many like pronouncements were and shall be made, be it known that they all refer to the Lord’s great latter-day work of restoration. His purposes were known to his ancient friends.”¹⁵ ¶ “My judgment” or the judgment of God is perfect, it combines justice and mercy. It is righteous judgment. It seems to especially point to the day when the Lord will reign upon the earth. A day when the Lord will be our light, for there will be no need for the sun: “And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof” (Revelation 21:23). Until then, we are still guided through the light, by following the promptings of the Holy Ghost. It is through following such promptings and speaking as moved by the Spirit that we may have that light even here, in this imperfect time. We need both to teach and be taught by that Spirit: President Young taught: “When an individual, filled with the Spirit of God, declares the truth of heaven, the sheep hear that, the Spirit of the Lord pierces their inmost souls and sinks deep into their hearts; by the testimony of the Holy Ghost light springs up within them, and they see and understand for themselves. This is the way the Gospel should be preached by every Elder in Israel, and by this power every hearer should hear; and if we would know the voice of the Good Shepherd, we must live so that the Spirit of the Lord can find its way to our hearts.”¹⁶

5 My righteousness [is] near; my salvation is gone forth, and mine arms shall judge the people; the isles shall wait upon me, and on mine arm shall they trust.

My righteousness is near; my salvation is gone forth. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “My deliverance is approaching speedily.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓜ) has, “My just one is near at hand, my saviour (salvator meus, Vulgate, Ⓜ) is gone forth.” ¶ The first clause seems to be speaking of the expiatory sacrifice; the latter seems to be both a reference to the same and an invitation for all to come unto Christ through the restored Gospel. I find it interesting, that despite what Lowth just said in ISAIAH 51:4, here he has: “The word צִדִּיק, righteousness, is used in such a great latitude of signification, for justice, truth, faithfulness, goodness, mercy, deliverance, salvation, &c., that it is not easy sometimes to give the precise meaning of it without much circumlocution: it means here the faithful completion of God’s promises to deliver his people” (emphasis added). Young, regarding קָרוֹב says: “Stress falls upon the first word Near, for it brings out the most important point concerning the Lord’s righteousness. Balaam said of the Messiah, ‘I behold him, but not near’ (Numbers 24:17), by which he meant that the approach of the Messiah would not be for a long time to come ... Deliverance from Babylon captivity was only a forerunner or first taste of the promised salvation.” ¶ And mine arms shall judge the people. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And the nations shall be judged by the strength of the arm of my might.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And my salvation shall go forth as light; and on mine arm nations will rely.” The

¹⁴ McConkie, Bruce R. The Promised Messiah. The Messiah Series. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1978–82, p. 331.

¹⁵ McConkie, Bruce R. The Millennial Messiah. The Messiah Series. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1978–82, p. 107.

¹⁶ Young, Brigham. Discourses of Brigham Young. Compiled by John A. Widtsoe. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1978, p. 431.

Peshitta (ܣ) also renders people plural, as does the Masoretic text (אנשים, עַמִּי). ¶ Jenour suggests: “I shall only here observe, that as these are the words of Christ, and foretell the establishment of the Gospel dispensation.” The Lord Himself will personally judge the people: “O then, my beloved brethren, come unto the Lord, the Holy One. Remember that his paths are righteous. Behold, the way for man is narrow, but it lieth in a straight course before him, and the keeper of the gate is the Holy One of Israel; and he employeth no servant there; and there is none other way save it be by the gate; for he cannot be deceived, for the Lord God is his name” (2 Nephi 9:41). The arm is symbolic of power and strength. ¶ The isles shall wait upon me, and on mine arm shall they trust. The Targum (ܬ) has, “The isles shall hope for my Word, and they shall wait for the strength of the arm of my might.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “The islands will expect me and on mine arm they will rely.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “The islands shall look for me, and shall patiently wait for my arm.” ¶ Barnes says: “The isles shall wait upon me] The distant nations; the heathen lands. The idea is, that distant lands would become interested in the true religion, and acknowledge and worship the true God.” The isles includes the American continent and the islands of the sea, where there will be a special devotion to the Lord in the last days. I was able to witness that in person, as the LDS chapels in some of the Polynesian nations (2011 visit) are as close to each other as one finds in Salt Lake City. For this land is a special and promised land (although the promise is conditional, as conditional as that on the promised land of Israel). “And inasmuch as ye shall keep my commandments, ye shall prosper, and shall be led to a land of promise; yea, even a land which I have prepared for you; yea, a land which is choice above all other lands” (1 Nephi 2:20).

6 Lift up your eyes to the heavens, and look upon the earth beneath: for the heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old like a garment, and they that dwell therein shall die in like manner: but my salvation shall be for ever, and my righteousness shall not be abolished.

Lift up your eyes to the heavens, and look upon the earth beneath: For the heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old like a garment. The LXX (ϸ) reads, “Turn up your eyes to heaven; then look down on the earth below! for the heaven is like smoke condensed, and the earth shall grow old like a garment.” Instead of wax old, the Peshitta (ܣ) has wear out. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the first instance, heaven in singular; instead of wax old, it renders it worn away. ¶ These words, Lift up your eyes to the heavens, and look upon the earth beneath, also remind us of the allusion found to the Book of Mormon in Psalm 85:11, “Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven.” Certainly, the First Vision would come before the passing of the earth. ¶ In the matter of the passing of the earth, Horsley, leaning on Jerome, wrote: “From these words [in ISAIAH 51:6] St. Jerome draws an argument, that the heavens and the earth are not to be destroyed, but to undergo a change for the better” (emphasis added). So also Birks: “The waxing old of the earth, like a garment, plainly refers to the habitable surface, rather than to the solid globe. It implies no destruction of the planet, but a change affecting its whole condition as the home and dwelling-place of mankind.” ¶ These things have long been understood by the LDS. Elder Orson Pratt taught, “What! the earth and the heavens to die? Yes, the material heavens and earth must all undergo this change which we call death ...”¹⁷ President Joseph Fielding Smith, speaking of the death of the world as mentioned in ISAIAH 51:6, taught: “The Psalmist has added his testimony to this passing in these words: ‘Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of thy hands. They shall perish, but thou shalt endure: yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed: But thou art the same, and thy years shall have no end. The children of thy servants shall continue, and their seed shall be established before thee’ (Psalm 102:25–28) ... And then we have the testimony of our Lord: ‘Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away’ (Matthew 24:35).”¹⁸ President Joseph Fielding Smith also taught that in ISAIAH 51:6 “... we have predictions that the earth shall pass away, die, and all its inhabitants shall also die in like manner. This truth was not generally and correctly understood until the Lord made known in revelations to Joseph Smith that this should be the case. When Isaiah said the earth should ‘fall and not rise again,’ the interpretation is that it should not be restored to the same mortal or temporal condition. When the earth passes away and is dissolved it will pass through a similar condition which the human body does in death, but like the human body so shall the earth itself be restored in the resurrection and become a celestial body, through the mercy and mission of Jesus Christ. This reference to a new heaven and earth, spoken of in D&C 29: 22–23, and 77:1–2 [and in ISAIAH 51:6], is not the same [in contrast] as that spoken of by Isaiah in ISAIAH

¹⁷ Journal of Discourses 1:282, 25 July 1852.

¹⁸ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Restoration of All Things. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1973, pp. 295–296.

65:17. The ‘new heavens and new earth’ referred to in this scripture, and also in D&C 101:23–31, had reference to the change which shall come to the earth and all upon it, at the beginning of the Millennial reign, as we declare in the tenth article of the Articles of Faith. This is the renewed earth when it shall receive its paradisiacal glory, or be restored as it was before the fall of man. ‘The new heaven and new earth’ we are discussing in D&C 29, is the final change, or resurrection, of the earth, after the ‘little season’ which shall follow the Millennium.”¹⁹ In summary, President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “We discover from the word of the Lord that the earth, like mankind upon it, is passing through various stages of development, or change. It was created and pronounced good.²⁰ It partook of the decree of mortality coming through the fall. It is now passing through the telestial condition, in which telestial beings predominate and rule. It will then pass into the ‘renewed,’ or restored state, for a thousand years as a terrestrial earth and the abode of terrestrial inhabitants. Then comes the end. The earth like all creatures living on it must die. Then it will, like all creatures, receive its resurrection and be celestialized because it obeys its law.”²¹ ¶ And they that dwell therein shall die in like manner: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “So shall it wax old, and its inhabitants, also, they shall die.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And like those things the inhabitants shall perish.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “And the inhabitants thereof shall perish in like manner.” Cheyne and some others suggest that instead of perish in like manner, we should read like gnats: “Like the mosquitos of the Euphrates and the Nile (but the word is applicable to insects both with and without wings).” Birks has: “The righteous and salvation of Christ will outlast all the changes, however great, of the visible universe.” ¶ President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “When Adam transgressed in the Garden of Eden he died the spiritual death, as well as changing his nature and bringing upon himself mortality. Spiritual death is banishment from the presence of God, and Adam was shut out from the presence of the Lord. Angels were sent to him, however, to teach him the plan of salvation. The earth probation was prolonged that he might repent and accept the plan offered to him. Through his repentance, baptism and confirmation, he was brought back again into the presence of God through the Holy Ghost. This same spiritual death comes upon all unrepentant and unbaptized men, and the only way they can be brought from spiritual death to spiritual life is through obedience to the Gospel. By this means all men may be redeemed, as Adam was, from the spiritual fall, but all who will not receive the Gospel ‘cannot be redeemed from their spiritual fall, because they repent not’ (D&C 29:44). The ‘second death’ is like the first death, spiritual banishment ...”²² ¶ But my salvation shall be for ever, and my righteousness shall not be abolished. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the second clause, “And my righteousness shall not tarry (the Royal Polyglot reads לֹא יִשְׁכַּח, ‘shall not be broken’).” The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “But my salvation shall endure forever, and my saving mercy shall never fail.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But my salvation shall endure forever, and my saving mercy shall never fail.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, for the second half, “And my justice shall not fail.” In the Evening and Morning Star we read: “The righteous have nought to fear; the promise of deliverance to them is certain; though the heathen rage, though bigots cry delusion, yet they know that those who put their trust in the Lord, will never be confounded.”²³ Forever, or לְעוֹלָם.

7 Hearken unto me, ye that know righteousness, the people in whose heart [is] I have written my law; fear ye not the reproach of men, neither be ye afraid of their revilings.

Hearken unto me, ye that know righteousness. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Hearken unto my Word, ye that know the truth.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Hearken to me, ye who know judgment.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “Hearken to me, you that know what is just.” ¶ Birks writes, regarding ISAIAH 51:7–8: “The persecutors of the faithful will become like a moth-eaten garment, but these confessors shall ‘receive a crown of righteousness that fadeth not away.’” ¶ An important part of beautiful

¹⁹ Smith, Joseph Fielding. Church History and Modern Revelation. Salt Lake City, Utah: The Council of The Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, 1946, Volume I, pp. 132–133.

²⁰ Before the Fall, explains Elder McConkie, the condition of the earth was Terrestrial, as it will likewise be during the Millennial day. The waters of Noah represent a baptism by water while “when the Lord comes again, our earth will be baptized with fire.” Furthermore, “This earth, the very planet on which we live, is being prepared for eternal salvation. As with all things, it was created as a spirit sphere ... As with men, so with the earth; both shall die and both shall be resurrected.” After quoting D&C 43:30–32, Elder McConkie explains that “This is the second day of burning, the day when planet earth becomes a celestial sphere.” McConkie, Bruce R. The Millennial Messiah. The Messiah Series. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1978–82, p. 535–536.

²¹ Smith, Joseph Fielding. Church History and Modern Revelation. Salt Lake City, Utah: The Council of The Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, 1946, Volume II, p. 66.

²² Smith, Joseph Fielding. Church History and Modern Revelation. Salt Lake City, Utah: The Council of The Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, 1946, Volume I, p. 133.

²³ The Evening and Morning Star. 1832 – 1834, Independence [Zion], Missouri, and Kirtland, Ohio, Volume I, Number 11, April 1833, Independence, Mo., p. 86.

scripture is the repetition that gives force to it. This chapter started with the words: “Hearken to me, ye that follow after righteousness, ye that seek the LORD: look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged” (ISAIAH 51:1). Kay, with his superb insights notes: “ye that know] No longer only, ‘that seek’ (ISAIAH 51:1): for they have His ‘law in their heart’ (cp. Psalm 40:8).” ¶ The people in whose heart I have written my law. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “The people in whose heart is the instruction of my law.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Ye people, in whose heart is my law.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “My people who have my law in your heart.” ¶ Here we are once again speaking of תּוֹרָה as divine instruction (see Gesenius). In Jeremiah we read: “But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people” (Jeremiah 31:33). ¶ Fear ye not the reproach of men, neither be ye afraid of their revilings. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Be ye not afraid of the reproaches of the sons of men, neither be terrified on account of their grandeur.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Fear not the reproach of men, nor be overcome by their contempt.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has blasphemies instead of reviling. ¶ In other words, fear God more than man. Elder Lynn G. Robbins shared this beautiful anecdote about the question, Which way do you face?: “President Boyd K. Packer surprised me with this puzzling question while we were traveling together on my very first assignment as a new Seventy. Without an explanation to put the question in context, I was baffled. ‘A Seventy,’ he continued, ‘does not represent the people to the prophet but the prophet to the people. Never forget which way you face!’ It was a powerful lesson. Trying to please others before pleasing God is inverting the first and second great commandments. It is forgetting which way we face. And yet, we have all made that mistake because of the fear of men. In Isaiah the Lord warns us, ‘Fear ye not the reproach of men.’” ¶ The Prophet Joseph Smith likewise taught: “I have reason to think that the Church is being purged ... I want to stick to my text, to show that when men open their lips against these truths they do not injure me, but injure themselves. To the law and to the testimony, for these principles are poured out all over the Scriptures. When things that are of the greatest importance are passed over by the weak-minded men without even a thought, I want to see truth in all its bearings and hug it to my bosom. I believe all that God ever revealed, and I never hear of a man being damned for believing too much; but they are damned for unbelief.”²⁴ We can note that both of these Brethren are directing this warning particularly to Church members, lest after taking hold of the plow decide to look back (see Luke 9:62). See also notes on ISAIAH 26:4. We continue this thread in ISAIAH 51:12.

8 For the moth shall eat them up like a garment, and the worm shall eat them like wool: but my righteousness shall be for ever, and my salvation from generation to generation.

For the moth shall eat them up like a garment, and the worm shall eat them like wool: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “For they vanish like a garment, which the moth eateth, and like wool, which rottenness seizeth.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For they are like a garment which shall be worn out by time, and like woollens which shall be devoured by a moth.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has moth instead of worm. ¶ Whitehouse explains: “We have in the opening parallel clauses a pair of Hebrew synonyms for ‘moth,’ for which our language does not provide equivalents.” What in ISAIAH 40:6–8 was given as grass and flowers, here we have as a wool garment that is easily devoured by moths. The grass and the flower cannot withstand the heat of the sun, nor can the garment made of wool withstand the moth. Maimonides, according to Rabbi Rosenberg, felt this passage addressed the “nations of the world who oppressed Israel.” ¶ But my righteousness shall be for ever, and my salvation from generation to generation. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But my saving mercy shall endure forever, and my salvation to generations of generations.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “But my salvation shall be for ever, and my justice from generation to generation.” ¶ As mentioned already, this is a similar allusion than that made in ISAIAH 40:6–8: “The voice said, Cry. And he said, What shall I cry? All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field: The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: because the spirit of the LORD bloweth upon it: surely the people is grass. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: but the word of our God shall stand for ever.” Just like the Word there represents the Lord, so here my righteousness and my salvation also are the Lord’s. Generation to generation is another way of saying forever, לְעֹלָם. So it is that both the Lord’s righteousness and salvation are לְעֹלָם.

vv. 9–16. Rawlinson well says of the markers, Awake, awake, which begin this section, the next, and ISAIAH 52:1: “Here we have thrice over ‘Awake, awake’—not, however, an exact repetition in the Hebrew, but a near approach to it—each summons forming the commencement of a new paragraph or subsection.” The עֹרִי עֹרִי is identical to that in ISAIAH 52:1. All three, however, have the same root, עִנָּה. “A number of editors (Volz, Budde, Elliger, Muilenburger etc.)” says Claus Westermann, “take the view that ISAIAH 51:9–52:2 represent a single consciously designed unit. The start of each of the three parts of it (51:9, 17; 52:1) is very clearly marked.” The power manifested by the Lord in ancient times would be manifested once again to the joy of the Saints and the consternation of the adversary.

²⁴ TPJS 374.

9 ¶ Awake, awake, put on strength, O arm of the LORD; awake, as in the ancient days, in the generations of old. [Art] thou not it that hath cut Rahab, [and] wounded the dragon?

Awake, awake, put on strength, O arm of the LORD. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Reveal thyself, reveal thyself, put on the strength of might from the Lord.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Awake, awake, Jerusalem! and clothe thyself with the strength of thine arm.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has arise, arise instead of awake, awake. ¶ Skinner has, “Literally, ‘clothe thyself with strength,’ as Psalm 93:1 [... he is clothed with majesty; the LORD is clothed with strength ...] The arm of the LORD ... as a symbol of His might, possibly with a reference back to ISAIAH 51:5.” Cheyne suggests two possibilities: “it seems natural to regard it, with Gesenius, as an exhortation of Jehovah to himself (compare Judges 5:12, ‘Awake, awake, Deborah’), or, if we object to a rhetorical formula in so solemn a passage, as a fragment of deliberation within the plurality of the Godhead (compare Genesis 1:26; 11:7).” Following this last possibility and leaning on Birks, but changing the direction, Cheyne says that “God the son ... corresponds to the Arm (as also the Name and to the Face).” ¶ Awake, as in the ancient days, in the generations of old. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Reveal thyself as in the days of old, in the generations which were at the beginning: was it not for thy sake O congregation of Israel.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Awake as at the beginning of day.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “Arise as in the days of old, in the ancient generations.” ¶ Barnes suggests: “Awake, as in the ancient days] That is, in the time when the Jews were delivered from their bondage in the land of Egypt.” ¶ [Art] thou not it that hath cut Rahab, [and] wounded the dragon? The Targum (ⲧ) has, “That I broke the mighty, that I destroyed Pharaoh and his host, who were strong as a dragon?” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has something like, “Thou didst decree a harsh sentence that didst slay the dragon.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, for the first clause, “Hast not thou struck the proud one.” ¶ Rashi, in Slotki/Rosenberg, suggests that Rahab is “a poetical name for Egypt meaning ‘the proud.’²⁵ Pride is the greatest instrument of evil and is often associated with Satan, with Babylon and with Egypt. Cheyne brilliantly has: “That hewed Rahab in pieces ...] Compare Psalm 89:10, ‘Thou hast broken Rahab in pieces as one that is slain; thou hast scattered thine enemies with thy strong arm.’ In both these passages, the exegetical tradition from the Targum onwards has taken Rahab (with which the ‘dragon’ of the parallel line is clearly synonymous) as a symbolic expression for Egypt ... The great enemy of Jehovah on earth was described in expressions coined originally for the constantly recurring ‘war in heaven’ between the powers of light and darkness. In confirmation of this, see chap. 15 of the Egyptian Book of the Dead (Birch’s transl. in Bunsen’s Egypt, vol. vi.), where the sun-god Ra is addressed thus: ‘Hail! thou who hast cut in pieces the Scornor and strangled the Apophis’ (i.e., the evil serpent). This suggests the possibility that in the passage before us the prophet alludes not only to the fate of the earthly but to that of the heavenly Rahab. The strife between light and darkness ...” Birks has: “The dragon alludes to the crocodile, as an emblem of Pharaoh. The earlier wonders of the Exodus are made the pledge of a still greater deliverance.” Cowles also, “Egypt’s king, slain in the Red Sea, is compared to the dragons or crocodiles of the Nile.”

10 [Art] thou not it which hath dried the sea, the waters of the great deep; that hath made the depths of the sea a way for the ransomed to pass over?

[Art] thou not it which hath dried the sea, the waters of the great deep. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Was it not for thy sake, O congregation of Israel that I dried up the sea, the water of the great deep.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Art thou not as the generation of old, which dried up the sea—the swelling water of the deep?” Just as in the previous verse, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) makes this an affirmative statement rather than a question. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “Hast not thou dried up the sea, the water of the mighty deep.” ¶ Barnes has: “Art thou not it] Art thou not still the same? The ground of the appeal is, that the same arm that dried up the sea, and made a path for the Jewish people [during the Exodus], was still able to interpose and rescue them.” ¶ That hath made the depths of the sea a way for the ransomed to pass over? The Targum (ⲧ) has, “I made the depth of the sea a way for the ransomed to pass over?” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Which made the depths of the sea a road for the delivered and redeemed to pass?” Instead of ransomed, the Peshitta (S) has redeemed. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Who madest the depth of the sea a way, that the delivered might pass over?” ¶ Skinner suggests: “The reference to the Exodus is here unmistakable.” Barnes has: “This is the common illustration to which the Hebrew prophets and poets appeal when they wish to refer to the interposition of God in favour of their nation.” This allusion to the saving of Israel from Egyptian captivity, now, is turned towards a future time, when redemption from mystic Babylon would take place. Similar allusions to God’s former power and His present day ability to redeem are found in the verses surrounding D&C 133:68 (see D&C 133:57 ff.). ¶ Skinner, once again, has: “... every exhibition of Jehovah’s power over the sea was regarded as a repetition on a smaller scale of the original miracle of creation. Both alike are illustrations of what the ‘arm of the Lord’ can do, and of the great miracle of redemption to which the prophet looks forward.” If we substitute mystic Babylon, or the world, this passage from Barnes is perfect: “The word rendered ransomed is that which is commonly rendered redeemed. The argument in this verse is, that he who had overcome all the obstacles in the way of their deliverance from Egypt was able also to overcome all the obstacles in the way of their deliverance from Babylon; and that he who had thus interposed might be expected again to manifest his mercy and save them again from oppression. The principle involved in the argument is as applicable now as it was then. All God’s past interpositions—and especially the great and wonderful interposition when he gave his Son ... constitute an argument that he will still continue to regard the interests of his people, and will interpose in their behalf and save them.” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt taught: “What do we want with an highway in the desert? We have already read about the highway through the Red Sea, and through the seven streams of the river of Egypt that is to be cast up like it was in ancient days; but what need have we for a highway in the desert? It is for the ransomed of the Lord to pass over. What ransomed of the Lord? Those who are ransomed from among the nations, by the proclamation of the everlasting Gospel, those who listen to the angelic message that comes from heaven; they who have toiled with ox teams, mule teams and handcarts and wheelbarrows to get themselves here, to lay a foundation of the work of God in the midst of this desert. They need a highway here, that the balance who are to come hereafter, and they will come by hundreds of thousands, may come swiftly, and more speedily than by handcart conveyances.”²⁶

²⁵ עִנָּה means proud, arrogant, plus also fierce and insolent (Gesenius, HAL).

²⁶ Pratt, Elder Orson, “The Restoration of the Jews and the Rebuilding of Jerusalem—The Latter-Day Kingdom of God—

Israel is now being gathered from the four quarters of the earth.

11 Therefore the redeemed of the LORD shall return, and come with singing unto Zion; and everlasting joy and holiness [shall be] upon their heads; they shall obtain gladness and joy; [and] sorrow and mourning shall flee away.

Therefore the redeemed of the LORD shall return, and come with singing unto Zion. The Targum (T) has, “Thus the redeemed of the Lord shall be gathered together (the Royal Polyglot reads תִּבְּרִי, ‘they shall return’) out of their captivity, and come to Zion with singing.” The LXX (G) reads, “For under the guidance of the Lord they shall be brought back, and shall come to Sion with joy and everlasting gladness.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “And now they that are redeemed by the Lord, shall return, and shall come into Sion singing praises.” ¶ Elder Mark E. Petersen quoted this verse and ISAIAH 51:3 as associated with the gathering of Israel.²⁷ Elder LeGrand Richards with his beautiful testimony said in 1980: “[Isaiah] saw the redeemed of the Lord come up and sing in the heights of Zion. And where do you find anything in the world to fulfill that like the singing of the Tabernacle Choir for over fifty years without a break?”²⁸ Elder Orson Pratt testified: “Therefore, Latter-day Saints, when you return to build up the waste places of Zion, and when you build up the New Jerusalem upon the place that he has appointed, whatever materials shall be used, by the blessing of the Priesthood, which God has ordained, these materials will endure forever: they will continue during the thousand years, without waste, and when they shall be caught up to heaven, when the earth flees away, they will still endure in all their perfection and beauty. When these cities shall descend again upon the new earth, in its immortal and eternal state, they will still be as endurable as the earth itself, no more to be subject to the curse, and therefore, will no more waste; death is gone—everything that is corruptible in its nature has ceased, so far as this habitable globe is concerned, and all sorrow and mourning are done away. May God bless the Latter-day Saints, and may our minds be kept steadfast upon the nature and glory of the promises to the righteous, and the great events that must be fulfilled, looking for the coming of the Church of the Firstborn, looking for the day of peace, the day of rest, when Jesus Gathering of Israel” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 14, No. 9, 26 May 1871, pp. 58–70.

²⁷ Petersen, Elder Mark E., Isaiah for Today, p.134.

²⁸ Richards, Elder LeGrand. October 1980 General Conference.

shall reign king of kings as he now reigns in heaven. May the Lord stir up the minds of his people that they may seek for those things in the future, and may we put away from our minds everything calculated in its nature to shut out the spirit of the living God from our hearts.”²⁹ ¶ The Prophet Joseph Smith admonished: “... be very prayerful, very humble, and very charitable; working diligently, spiritually and temporally for the redemption of Zion, that the pure in heart may return with songs of everlasting joy to build up her waste places, and meet the Lord when He comes in His glory. Brethren, in the name of Jesus Christ, we entreat you to live worthy of the blessings that shall follow, after much tribulation, to satiate the souls of them that hold out faithful to the end.”³⁰ Jennings speaks to the restoration of the Jews in the Latter-days: “Nothing but unpardonable violence to Romans 11, as well as to a great part of the Old Testament can account for the denial of the restoration of the Jews to their land, and eventually to the favor of their Jehovah ... [and later in the same chapter beautifully adds] Have we no sympathy for Israel in the sorrows that she must still pass through? Have we never been stupefied by the chastening strokes of our God? ... If there should be one who reads these lines, who has recently wept under affliction, Awake, awake, my beloved brother or sister. Be not so stupefied as to forget that chastening is not the end, but only the way to peace and most tender comforting.” ¶ And everlasting joy and holiness shall be upon their heads; they shall obtain gladness and joy; and sorrow and mourning shall flee away. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And everlasting joy shall be theirs, which shall not cease: and a cloud of glory shall shadow over their heads; they shall find joy and gladness, and there shall be an end of sorrow and sighing for the house of Israel.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “For praise shall crown their head and joy shall overtake them. Grief and sorrow and sighing are fled.” Instead of mourning, the Peshitta (Ⓟ) has sighing (Lamsa) / moaning (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, for the first clause, “And joy everlasting shall be upon their heads.” ¶ Elder McConkie taught: “Joy is a gift of the Spirit. It comes from the Holy Ghost, is granted to those who gain a remission of their sins (Mosiah 4:3, 20; Alma 22:15) ... In the latter-days Israel ‘shall come to Zion, singing with songs of everlasting joy’ (D&C 45:71; 66:11; 101:18; 109:39; 133:33; Isa. 51:11).”³¹ Elder Jedediah M. Grant testified: “I say, that man knows the Most who enjoys the greatest portion of the Holy Spirit ... To impress the knowledge that he possesses upon the minds of others, he must have the Holy Ghost. I wish to enquire whether the channel is open between you and the heavens, and do you draw daily from that source? If so, then you are in the narrow path, and rejoicing in the truth. I mention this that you may come to the school prepared to receive the impression that may be given [and] have your minds prepared to be instructed in doctrine, and in the love of God, and pray that you may receive a proper impression upon what may be advanced; for you must receive item after item, principle after principle, here a little and there a little (ISAIAH 28:10), until you get a fountain of wisdom. I want you to follow the impression that would lead you to serve God, and the still small voice of God will direct you in all your ways, and you will be wrapped up and live in revelation, and it will be your food by day and by night, and it will cause the mind to expand and the heart to leap with joy. I tell you, that if you have the Holy Ghost you can understand, and you can be impressed with truth, and that truth will make you free, and you will not forget those things which you receive under the impressions of the Holy Spirit.”³² Elder Marion G. Romney shared: “Somebody recently asked how one could know when he is converted. The answer is simple. He may be assured of it when by the power of the Holy Spirit his soul is healed. When this occurs, he will recognize it by the way he feels, for he will feel as the people of Benjamin felt when they received remission of sins. The record says, ... the Spirit of the Lord came upon them, and they were filled with joy, having received a remission of their sins, and having peace of conscience.”³³

12 I am he, [even] yea, I [am] he that comforteth you; behold, who [art] thou, that thou shouldest be afraid of a man [that] shall die, and of the son of man [which] shall be made [as] grass;

I am he, yea, I am he that comforteth you. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I THE I AM am he who comforteth thee.” Certainly the Ⓛ seems to have some relation to the LDS version, here. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “I, I myself will comfort you.” ¶ As in ISAIAH 48:12, and as before

²⁹ Pratt, Elder Orson. JD 18:335.

³⁰ TPJS 78

³¹ McConkie, Elder Bruce R., Mormon Doctrine, 2nd ed., p.397.

³² Grant, Elder Jedediah M. Journal of Discourses 3:11. Elder Grant also said in this talk: “Again, whenever I have had anything that was great or important to accomplish, I have been impressed with my own weakness and inability to perform the task imposed upon me, and that of myself I was as nothing, only as I trusted in God, and under these circumstances I was certain to speak by the power and influence of the Holy Ghost. When I have trusted in books, or in my own acquirements ... I was sure to be foiled in my attempt, for all would leave me. But whenever I have trusted in the Lord, and relied upon Him for strength, it has come out right” (JD 3:10).

³³ Romney, Elder Marion G., Conference Report, October 1963, pp. 23–26.

the woman at Jacob's Well (John 4:26), Jehovah here says, אֲנִי־הוּא, I am He. These are among the most lovely words in all the Scriptures. Jehovah then expands on these words by adding, אֲנִי הוּא מְנַחֵם, I am He that comforteth you. ¶ President Gordon B. Hinckley, speaking to the family of President Howard W. Hunter after his death said: "May they be comforted, sustained, and blessed by Him who declared, 'I, even I, am he that comforteth you.'" ³⁴ Barnes has: "The word 'I' is repeated here to give emphasis to the passage, and to impress deeply upon them the fact that their consolation came alone from God." Jennings says: "Jehovah places a strong emphasis on its being Himself who will intervene. The law may be given by the disposition of angels, but He will depute no one to redeem—it is Himself from beginning to end. Thus He cries here, 'I, even I, and no other; no archangel, principality, or power of heaven will I permit to comfort Zion.'" This comfort is intimately connected to that offered by the Lord to Israel in ISAIAH 40:1–2a, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem." ¶ Behold, who art thou, that thou shouldest be afraid of a man that shall die. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Of whom are ye afraid? of a mortal man (literally, 'a man that dieth')." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "Recollect what thou wast when terrified at a mortal man." The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, "Who art thou, that thou shouldst be afraid of a mortal man." ¶ Nägelsbach has: "Forgetting Jehovah (ISAIAH 51:13 is really the cause both of fearing men and of the continual trembling." Calvin says: "It is exceedingly base to tremble at the threatenings of men to such a degree as to care nothing about God's assistance; for he displays his power for this purpose, that he may at least fortify us against every attack. Accordingly, by an excessive fear of men we betray contempt of God. Hence it is evident how sinful it is to be agitated by the terrors of men, when God calls us to repose. And indeed it is amazing ingratitude in men, who, when they hear that God is on their side, derive no hope from his magnificent promises, so as to venture boldly to exclaim, 'If God be for us, who can be against us?' (Romans 8:31) ... for God is treated with the highest dishonor when we doubt his truth, that is, when we are so completely overcome by human terrors that we cannot rest on his promises." ¶ And of the son of man which shall be made as grass. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Or of a son of man, who is counted like grass?" The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "And at a son of man who are withered like grass." Instead of made as grass, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has that dries up like grass (Lamsa) / that dries as an herb (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, "And of the son of man, who shall wither away like grass?" ¶ Again, in ISAIAH 40:6—building in crescendo to ISAIAH 40:8—we see man's mortality compared to grass. In contrast, our Savior, "the Word of our God shall stand for ever [לְעוֹלָם]." Keith notes: "The period to which allusion is made in these verses seems to be to the time when the Lord shall gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle, previous to the time of national judgment, when it shall be said to Israel, 'Fear not, thou worm Jacob; I will help thee, saith the Lord,' (see ISAIAH 41:14). That such is the bearing of this verse is corroborated by parallel texts. Thus, in a passage which refers clearly to the final restoration of Israel—for it is the time when all flesh shall see the glory of the Lord—there is the same allusion to the comfort which she will then receive, to the overthrow of the nations gathered together against her, and to the immutability of the word of the Lord: 'Comfort ye my people cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished ... (ISAIAH 40:1 ff.)'" Gill considers the possibility that it is not man in general to whom these words refer, but rather: "Or it may be, the man of sin, the son of perdition, antichrist, is here referred to, who in his time has made all to tremble at him (Revelation 13:3–4), but must die, and his power too, and will be destroyed with the breath of Christ's mouth, and the brightness of his coming; and therefore his church and people have no reason to be afraid of him" (see also ISAIAH 51:18–20).

13 And forgettest the LORD thy maker, that hath stretched forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth; and hast feared continually every day because of the fury of the oppressor, as if he were ready[✓] to destroy? and where [is] the fury of the oppressor?

✓ or, made himself ready

And forgettest the LORD thy maker, that hath stretched forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "And that thou shouldest forget the worship of the Lord thy maker, who has suspended the heavens and founded the earth." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "And forgettest the God who made thee—him who made the heaven and founded the earth." The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, "And thou hast forgotten the Lord thy maker, who stretched out the heavens, and founded the earth." ¶ Barnes says: "These verses are designed to rebuke that state of the mind—alas, too common even among the people of God—where they are intimidated by the number and strength of their foes, and forget their dependence on God, and his promises of aid. In such circumstances God reproves them for their want of confidence in him, and calls on them to remember that he has made the heavens, and has all power to save them.” ¶ And hast feared continually every day because of the fury of the oppressor, as if he were ready to destroy? and where [is] the fury of the oppressor? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And shouldest fear continually all the day because of the fury of the oppressor, as if he were ready to destroy; and where is now the fury of the oppressor?” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And wast every day in continual dread of the furious countenance of thine oppressor.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “And thou hast been afraid continually all the day at the presence of his fury who afflicted thee, and had prepared himself to destroy thee: where is now the fury of the oppressor?” ¶ If we do not follow Christ, then indeed we will have much to fear: “And upon them that are left alive of you I will send a faintness into their hearts in the lands of their enemies; and the sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them; and they shall flee, as fleeing from a sword; and they shall fall when none pursueth” (Leviticus 26:36, Rain in Due Season). Whitehouse has: “where is the fury] Again a rhetorical interrogative, to which the negative answer ‘nowhere’ is expected.” Cowles suggests that this fear shows a lack of confidence in God: “The Hebrew idiom, ‘Who art thou, and thou wast afraid’ (the form of the original) means simply, Why then hast thou been afraid? It is not strictly, Why shouldest thou be afraid? although this is implied; but the question expresses an actual and culpable distrust of God.” The oppressor is none other than Satan, “How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! how art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations!” (ISAIAH 14:12). Wordsworth has: “where is the fury of the oppressor?] Where is the fury of Pharaoh’s host? At the bottom of the Red Sea; and Israel is delivered. And where is the fury of Babylon? It also is fallen in the hour of its idolatrous revelry, and Israel is free. Where is the fury of Satan? He has been vanquished by Christ on the Cross, and the World is redeemed.” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt testified: “If we are faithful to our covenants, the fury of the oppressor will not harm us, and where will be the strong arm of man? It will be like the flax in the flame, like a moth-eaten garment, the wicked shall vanish away, and there will be no place found for them. Then hearken to the counsel that proceeds from the First Presidency, and hold up your heads, and do not let them droop, and in this way, we shall prosper, and obtain a holy dwelling place in the presence of our God forever”³⁵ (emphasis added).

³⁴ Hinckley, President Gordon B. April 1995 General Conference.

14 The captive exile hasteneth that he may be loosed, and that he should not die in the pit, nor that his bread should fail.

³⁵ Pratt, Elder Orson. JD 3:70.

The captive exile hasteneth that he may be loosed. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Vengeance hasteneth to be revealed.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For how did he consult to carry thee away!” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) has, “The oppressor hastened to destroy the mighty ones.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “He shall quickly come that is going to open unto you.” ¶ Cheyne (see AMP, BBE, Darby, ESV, FDB, FLS, Henderson, JPS, LITV and TLV) translates as צָעָה as stooped, “He that was bent down] i.e., by the weight of his fetters, or by confinement in the stocks (Jeremiah 20:2; 29:26).” The complete clause is translated by Cheyne as: “He that was bent down is quickly released.” Henderson suggests: “Speedily shall the bending prisoner be released” and explains that a: “five-holed wooden machine, which held the body in a bent posture, the head as well as the hands and feet being fixed in it. A more distressing posture cannot well be imagined ... [and regarding the pit] שְׁחַת³⁶ here as in בּוֹר, Jeremiah 38:6, Zechariah 9:11, means a cistern without water, converted into a dungeon.” Regarding צָעָה, Ibn Ezra has: “צָעָה The captive exile. Comp. צוּעִים ‘oppressors.’ וְצָעוּהוּ ‘and they shall oppress them’ (Jeremiah 48:2). The literal meaning of the word, though a participle active, is ‘bound;’ he who is oppressed, and is in distress, is, as it were, bound. This meaning of the word is proved by the words which follow: ‘that he may be loosed.’” Barnes has: “The word here used and rendered ‘captive exile,’ צָעָה from צָעָה means properly that which is turned on one side, or inclined, as e.g. a vessel for pouring (Jeremiah 48:12). Then it means that which is inclined, bent, or bowed down as a captive in bonds.” ¶ And that he should not die in the pit. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And the righteous shall not die in the pit.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But where now is the fury of thine oppressor?” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) has, “But they shall not die or be destroyed.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “And he shall not kill unto utter destruction.” ¶ Alexander suggests: “... whether the phrase in question mean for hell, or for the grave, or in the pit, or to destruction, the general sense is still that the captive shall not perish in captivity. This general promise is then rendered more specific by the assurance that he shall not starve to death, which seems to be the only sense that can be put upon the last clause.” Faussett has: “The scene is primarily Babylon, and the time near the close of the captivity. Secondly, and antitypically, the mystical Babylon, the last enemy of Israel and the Church, in which they have long suffered, but from which they are to be gloriously delivered.” Satan will not have power over the dispersed children of Israel for the Gospel would be preached in the Spirit World as well as throughout the earth. ¶ Nor that his bread should fail. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Nor be in want of their food.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “For when thou art saved he shall not stand; nor long continue.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “Neither shall his bread fail. ¶ This seems an allusion to Rain in Due Season curses and blessings about hunger; perhaps related to spiritual hunger that will be satisfied by the Lord, who comes upon the scene in our next verse.

³⁶ Gesenius has: שְׁחַת f. with suff. שְׁחַתָּה Ezek. 19:4, 8 (from the root שָׁחַת, like נִהַת, from the root נָחַת, a pit.”

15 But I [am] the LORD thy God, that divided the sea, whose waves roared: The LORD of hosts [is] his name.

The Targum (Ⓣ) has the first half as, “For I am the Lord thy God, who rebuketh the sea, though its waves roar.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Because thy God am he who tempesteth the sea and causeth the billows thereof to roar; the Lord of Hosts is my name.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) renders it something like, “I am the Lord thy God who rebukes the sea and calm the waves.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “But I am the Lord thy God, who trouble the sea, and the waves thereof swell: the Lord of hosts is my name.” ¶ יהוה זבאות שמו, LORD of hosts his name, reminds us that the Lord’s role here is that of a warrior. Cheyne says: “Israel’s God has at his command all the forces, the potencies, the ‘hosts’ of heaven and earth.” Rawlinson—as well as a number of exegetes—point this verse as an allusion to the power of the Lord as He saved Israel from their Egyptian captivity: “But I am the Lord thy God, that divided the sea; rather, for I, the Lord thy God, am he that divided the sea (compare ISAIAH 51:10). The reference is once more to the great miracle wrought at the Exodus, when the Red Sea was ‘divided’ before the host of Israelites (Exodus 14:21; Psalms 74:13). Whose waves roared (see Exodus 14:27; 15:10).”

16 And I have put my words in thy mouth, and I have covered thee in the shadow of mine hand, that I may plant the heavens, and lay the foundations of the earth, and say unto Zion, Behold, thou [art] my people.

And I have put my words in thy mouth. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “I have put the words of my prophecy in thy mouth (the Royal Polyglot reads בפני נביא, ‘into the mouth of the prophets’).” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I will put my words in thy mouth.” ¶ I believe that these are the words the Father put in the mouth of His beloved, even Christ. Our Savior spoke only the words of the Father. Cheyne has: “‘I put my words in thy mouth’ is precisely parallel to the speech of the Servant, ‘he made my mouth as a sharp sword’ ... and the next clause, ‘in the shadow of my hand I covered thee,’ is even verbally almost identical with the Servant’s declaration, ‘in the shadow of his hand he hid me’ (ISAIAH 49:2).” Kay, also, with additional proof has: “I have put my words in thy mouth] Who, then, can the Person here addressed be, but the Great One of whom God said to Moses, ‘I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee; and will put My words in His mouth’ (Deuteronomy 18:18, s.w.; cp. John 3:34)? The same terms are employed in ISAIAH 59:21.” Alexander also has: “... the Messiah is the object of address, and that his work or mission is here described.” ¶ And I have covered thee in the shadow of mine hand. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And with the shadow of my power have I protected thee.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And cover thee under the shelter of my hand.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has protected instead of covered. ¶ Barnes has: “It refers to the restoration of the Jews to their own land; to the re-establishment of religion there; to the introduction of the new economy under the Messiah, and to all the great changes which would be consequent on that.” The religion to be founded would begin with the angel spoken in the Book of Revelation 14:6, Angel Moroni: “And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people.” Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg, makes a connection to the words being in both “your mouth and in your heart” to Deuteronomy 30:14 (Rain in Due Season): “But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it.” Also see Deuteronomy 30:6–16. ¶ That I may plant the heavens, and lay the foundations of the earth. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “To raise up the nation, concerning which it hath been promised that they shall be as many as the stars of heaven, and to establish the congregation it has been promised concerning them, that they shall multiply like the dust of the earth.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “With which I made the heaven and founded the earth.” Instead of plant, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has stretched forth (Lamsa) / extended (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “That thou mightest plant the heavens, and found the earth.” ¶ Skinner has: “The conception of a new moral universe about to be created is partly anticipated [see especially ISAIAH 51:6] ... This verse, however, adds the further idea that the new creation is the ultimate goal of God’s dealings with Israel ...” Cheyne suggests: “For the use of the verb ‘to plant,’ comp. Daniel 11:45. The figure is that of a tent with its stakes set firmly in the ground (comp. ISAIAH 40:22).”

So also Henderson, regarding לְנִטֵּעַ (to plant): “לְנִטֵּעַ ... is the proper term by which to denote the fixing or establishment of the heavens, conceived of as a tent,—a metaphor not unusual with the sacred writers. It signifies to plant, in the sense of fixing or driving into the ground, the pins or pegs to which the cords of a tent are fastened.” As LDS, the Lord has revealed the same use of this expression for our Stakes in Zion (D&C 82:14; ISAIAH 54:2). ¶ And say unto Zion, Behold, thou art my people. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And to say to the inhabitants of Zion, ye are my people.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And say to Sion, Thou art my people.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “And mightest say to Sion: Thou art my people.” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt has: “... this latter-day gathering was to be a people called ‘the redeemed of the Lord;’ they were to go into a wilderness country. They were called, in many parts of the Scripture writings, ‘the people of Zion,’ and ‘the Zion of the latter days.’ ... It seems that the people of Zion are to be gathered out from all lands, from every nation under heaven, from the four points of the compass ...”³⁷ Skinner has: “and say unto Zion, etc.” לְאֵמֹר usually ... introduces the direct speech: and the following words are certainly those of Jehovah.” Indeed, Jehovah is the speaker throughout. And what does He say? Hear oh Israel: “Thou art my people!” (see Leviticus 26:12, Rain in Due Season). Horsley has: “In this verse the transition is made ... to that of the final conversion and restoration of the Jews. For the Jewish people is the Zion here meant.” Although Horsley says Jewish people, all of Israel is intended, including Judah.

vv. 17–23. As in the last section, the double repetition of awake marks a new thought. The repeated word in Hebrew is הִתְעוֹרְרִי הִתְעוֹרְרִי. Skinner does well in saying that in these verses, at least in part, “The prophet, [is] returning to the thought [of] ISAIAH 40:2, [and] announces that the period of Jerusalem’s degradation has expired.” There is yet much that will be painful to Judah before that cup of trembling is to be completely removed. Jerusalem, in the last days, will be surrounded by her enemies. There will be little consolation to her. The Lord will give Jerusalem two special servants as spoken in the book of Revelation.

17 ¶ Awake, awake, stand up, O Jerusalem, which hast drunk at the hand of the LORD the cup of his fury; thou hast drunken the dregs of the cup of trembling, [and] wrung [them] out.

Awake, awake, stand up, O Jerusalem, which hast drunk at the hand of the LORD the cup of his fury. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Magnify thyself, magnify thyself; arise, O Jerusalem! who hast received from the Lord the cup of His wrath.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Awake, awake, stand up, Jerusalem who hast drunk from the hand of the Lord the cup of his indignation.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has arise, arise instead of awake, awake and wrath instead of fury. ¶ Regarding the repetition of awake [rouse oneself—Orelli], הִתְעוֹרְרִי הִתְעוֹרְרִי, Keith says: “The same exciting language as is used here — ‘Awake, awake,’ is addressed to her in the beginning of the following chapter. It implies the suddenness as well as the magnitude of the change which she will then experience.” Slotki/Rosenberg have: “the cup of His fury] A common metaphor of the prophets to describe Divine retribution (cf. Jeremiah 25:15 ff., Ezekiel 23:32 ff.).” Nägelsbach has: “[Jerusalem] has received from the hand of its Lord the cup of His fury, which by its intoxicating contents, is also a cup of reeling, and has drunk it to the dregs, even sipped it empty.” ¶ Thou hast drunken the dregs of the cup of trembling, [and] wrung [them] out. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The vial of the cup of cursing thou hast drunk, and thou hast removed it.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “For thou hast drunk the cup of horror—the great cup of his wrath; and drained it.” The Peshitta (Ⲯ) has drunk to the last drop (BPE) / drained it (Lamsa). Instead of the dregs of the cup of trembling, the Peshitta (Ⲯ) has “the dregs of the cup of trembling, and drained it” (Lamsa) / “drunk to the last drop of the cup of terror” (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Thou hast drunk even to the bottom of the cup of dead sleep, and thou hast drunk even to the dregs.” ¶ In Deuteronomy 28:65, Rain in Due Season, we read: “And among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest: but the LORD shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind.” Here we reproduce Jeremiah 25:15–18–38, alluded to earlier, beginning with Jerusalem but then expanding the punishment throughout the world—for those who would not repent (compare with 3 Nephi 9–12): “For thus saith the LORD God of Israel unto me; Take the wine cup of this fury at my hand, and cause all the nations, to whom I send thee, to drink it. And they shall drink, and be moved, and be mad, because of the sword that I will send among them. Then took I the cup at the LORD’s hand, and made all the nations to drink, unto whom the LORD had sent me: To wit, Jerusalem, and the cities of Judah, and the kings thereof, and the princes thereof, to make them a desolation, an astonishment, an hissing, and a curse; as it is this day; [then numerous nations are mentioned] Therefore thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Drink ye, and be drunken, and spue, and fall, and rise no more, because of the sword which I will send among you. And it shall be, if they refuse to take the cup at thine hand to drink, then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Ye shall certainly drink. For, lo, I begin to bring evil on the city which is called by my name, and should ye be utterly unpunished? Ye shall not be unpunished: for I will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth, saith the LORD of hosts. Therefore prophesy thou against them all these words, and say unto them, The LORD shall roar from on high, and utter his voice from his holy habitation; he shall mightily roar upon his habitation; he shall give a shout, as they that tread the grapes, against all the inhabitants of the earth. A noise shall come even to the ends of the earth; for the LORD hath a controversy with the nations, he will plead with all flesh; he will give them that are wicked to the sword, saith the LORD. Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth. And the slain of the LORD shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth: they shall not be lamented, neither gathered, nor buried; they shall be dung upon the ground. Howl, ye shepherds, and cry; and wallow yourselves in the ashes, ye principal of the flock: for the days of your slaughter and of your dispersions are accomplished; and ye shall fall like a pleasant vessel. And the shepherds shall have no way to flee, nor the principal of the flock to escape. A voice of the cry of the shepherds, and an howling of the principal of the flock, shall be heard: for the LORD hath spoiled their pasture. And the peaceable habitations are cut down because of the fierce anger of the LORD. He hath forsaken his covert, as the lion: for their land is desolate because of the fierceness of the oppressor, and because of his fierce anger.” ¶ This cup of trembling is given that we might repent (see 3 Nephi 9:13). Barnes points us to Revelation 14:10: “The same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb.” Birks writes: “Thou hast drunk deep] The word rendered ‘dregs,’ A. V., means rather the bowl or the lowest part of the cup (Alexander, Hahn, Stier, Delitzsch). Thus it implies either the large size of the cup, or the thoroughness with which it has been drunk to the very bottom.” Cowles suggests: “The word rendered ‘dregs’ is now generally held to mean a cup or bowl, and compounded with the other word for cup as we might say, a ‘goblet-cup.’—‘Trembling’ is reeling as if with intoxication. ‘Wrung out,’ is rather sucked out, drained to its last drop.” Whitehouse prefers: “Who hast drunk from Yahweh’s hand—the cup of His wrath, Yea the bowl of reeling—hast drunken, hast drained,” and further reminds us that “the metaphor of a cup” was used by Christ in Mark 14:36: “And he said, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt.”

³⁷ Pratt, Elder Orson. JD 21:272.

18 And [there is] none to guide her among all the sons [whom] she hath brought forth; neither [is there any] that taketh her by the hand of all the sons [that] she hath brought up.

And there is none to guide her among all the sons whom she hath brought forth. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “comfort” for guide. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And of all thy children which thou didst bring forth there was not one who comforted thee.” Instead of guide, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has comfort. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “There is none that can uphold her among all the children that she hath brought forth.” ¶ Cowles writes in contrast: “The verbs rendered ‘guide,’ and ‘take by the hand,’ are precisely those which are used pertinently to express what Christ does for his people, guiding them as a shepherd, his flock; grasping their hand strongly to impart strength and powerfully sustain ... But Zion has none among all her sons (other than the Messiah) to sustain and to lead her thus.” ¶ Neither is there any that taketh her by the hand of all the sons that she hath brought up. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Nor was there one who took hold of thy hand: no, not of all the sons whom thou didst raise.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has children instead of sons. ¶ It has been suggested by some LDS scholars the Jerusalem is lacking the Priesthood, among her sons.

19 These two [things] sons are come[✓] unto thee; ~~who~~ they shall be sorry for thee[✓], thy desolation, and destruction,[✓] and the famine, and the sword; and by whom shall I comfort thee?

✓ happened ✓ ✓ breaking

These two sons are come unto thee. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Two tribulations have come upon thee, O Jerusalem.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Because these things have befallen thee.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “There are two things that have happened to thee.” ¶ Most exegetes find that this verse is very difficult to understand as it stands. Almost without exception the exegetes are confused by the two [שְׁתֵּי דָבָרִים] things and like Wade say something like: “These two things. Strictly, two pairs of things, (1) the desolation of the land and destruction of the city; (2) the starvation and the slaughter of the population.” ¶ Gladly, we know that such an approach is not necessary, as from modern revelation we know that it is two sons rather than two things. Elder John Taylor taught: “The Spirit of light and truth will be opposed by the spirit of darkness and error. They are two antagonistic powers which will strive for the mastery until error is vanquished and overcome. John speaks of two Prophets that will prophesy in Jerusalem, and that will have power to cause that it rain not in the days of their prophecy, to turn the waters into blood, and to smite the earth with plagues as often as they will. The nations of the earth will be gathered against them, and they will be overcome by their enemies; and hence it is said their dead bodies shall lie in the streets of Jerusalem for three days and three nights. The wicked will so rejoice in their success and gloat over the destruction of those Prophets that they will indulge in feasting and sending gifts one to another, because of the destruction of those men of God. But by-and-by, we read the spirit of life sent from the Great God shall again enter their tabernacles, and they shall be received up into heaven in the sight of their enemies, who shall then experience the fury of the Almighty. The Prophet Zechariah gives an interesting account of what shall take place in Jerusalem about the time of the appearance of these two great Prophets.”³⁸ Jackson explains: “The book of Revelation further associates these two witnesses with the symbolism of two olive trees and two candlesticks mentioned in Zechariah 4:11–14, Revelation 11:4. In the Doctrine and Covenants the Lord identified these two witnesses as ‘two prophets that are to be raised up to the Jewish nation in the last days, at the time of the restoration, and to prophesy to the Jews after they are gathered and have built the city of Jerusalem in the land of their fathers’ (D&C 77:15).”³⁹ In D&C 77:15 we have: “Q. What is to be understood by the two witnesses, in the eleventh chapter of Revelation? A. They are two prophets that are to be raised up to the Jewish nation in the last days, at the time of the restoration, and to prophesy to the Jews after they are gathered and have built the city of Jerusalem in the land of their fathers.” Nyman says, “Because the people of Judah have no sons with the priesthood among them, two other sons (who have the priesthood) are to be sent to them.”⁴⁰ ¶ They shall be sorry for thee, thy desolation, and destruction, and the famine, and the sword. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Thou art not able to arise; when four shall come upon thee, spoiling and destruction, and famine, and the sword.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Who will condole with thee? Desolation and destruction, famine and the sword.” Instead of desolation, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has plunder. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has who instead of they. ¶ Elder Parley P. Pratt, leaning on Josephus, applies part of this desolation to the destruction of Jerusalem as happened seventy years after the birth of Christ. He quotes the warning in Rain in Due Season (Deuteronomy 28:56) about such extreme famine that women [as would men, see Deuteronomy 28:54] would eat their own children.⁴¹ ¶ Who shall be sorry for Jerusalem? Christ will be sorry of Jerusalem and send these two servants spoken off in the book of Revelation, who will be full of the pure love of Christ. ¶ And by whom shall I comfort thee? The Targum (ⲧ) has, “There shall be none to comfort thee beside me.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Who will comfort thee?” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Who shall comfort thee?” ¶ This clause seems to be a reference to the two prophets, who like fiery bulls, will protect Jerusalem from her enemies. We are able to be filled with comfort and joy as we invite the Holy Ghost to abide with us.

20 Thy sons have fainted save these two, they lie at the head of all the streets, as a wild bull in a net; they are full of the fury of the LORD, the rebuke of thy God.

Thy sons have fainted save these two. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Thy children shall be torn in pieces.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Thy sons? Some are astounded.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Thy children are cast forth.” ¶ The sons who have fainted refers to the inhabitants of Jerusalem at a time when they are persecuted and hated from every side. Thy sons, is a reference to God’s people. Similarly to the time when Goliath provoked Israel and most were scared of the giant, so too, in the last days there will be a continuing hatred towards Israel. Instead of David as the champion of Judah, there will be two prophets raised to be champions for Jerusalem. ¶ They lie at the head of all the streets, as a wild bull in a net. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “They shall be cast at the head of all the streets as broken vials.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Some asleep at the head of every way, like a parboiled beet.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has something like: they lie at every street corner, as wilted beet. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “They have slept at the head of all the ways, as the wild ox that is snared.”

³⁸ Taylor, Elder John. Safety of the Saints at Home—Contrast of Their Position With that of the United States. Discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 28 April 1861. (See Zechariah 12–14.)

³⁹ Jackson, Kent P., ed., Studies in Scripture, Vol. 4:1 Kings to Malachi, p.147–148.

⁴⁰ Nyman, Monte S., Great are the Words of Isaiah. See further comments in ISAIAH 51:20.

⁴¹ Journal of Discourses, Vol. III, Parley P. Pratt, 7 October 1855, pp. 132–137.

¶ Henderson—and numerous exegetes—suggests: “The oryx⁴² is an animal of the antelope species, which, in the East, is still caught in a net.” ¶ They are full of the fury of the LORD, the rebuke of thy God. The LXX (Ⓜ) reads, “Some are full of the indignation of the Lord, enervated by the Lord God.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “Full of the indignation of the Lord, of the rebuke of thy God.” ¶ This verse is in relation to the two witnesses or servants who will die and be resurrected in Jerusalem. “[Sometime] After the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled,” explains Elder Orson Pratt, “... the nations that live in the regions round about Jerusalem will gather up like a cloud, and cover all that land round about Jerusalem. They will come into the Valley of Jehoshaphat, east of Jerusalem, and they will lay siege to the city. What then? The Lord will raise up two great Prophets, they are called witnesses, in the Revelation of St. John. Will they have much power? Yes, during the days of their prophesying they will have power to smite those who undertake to destroy them, and until their testimonies are fulfilled they will be able to keep at bay all those nations besieging Jerusalem, so that they will not have power to take that city. How long will that be? Three and a half years, so says John the Revelator. If any man hurt them, they shall have power to bring upon that man, nation or army, the various plagues that are there written. They will have power to smite the earth with plague and famine, and to turn the rivers of water into blood. And when they have fulfilled their prophecy, then the nations that have been lying before Jerusalem so long, waiting for an opportunity to destroy the city, will succeed in killing these two Prophets, and their bodies, says John’s Revelation, will lie in the streets of Jerusalem three days and a half after they are killed. What rejoicing there will be over the death of these men! Those who have been waiting so long and anxiously for this to take place, will no doubt send gifts one to another, and if the telegraph wires are not destroyed, they will telegraph to the uttermost parts of the earth that they have succeeded in killing the two men who had so long tormented them with plagues, turning the waters onto blood, etc. But by and by, right in the midst of their rejoicing, when they think the Jews will now certainly fall a prey to them, behold there is a great earthquake, and in the midst of it these two Prophets rise from the dead, and they hear a voice up in the heavens saying—‘Come up hither;’ and they immediately ascend in the sight of their enemies. What next? Notwithstanding all this, those nations will be so infatuated, and so determined to persecute the people of God—as much so as Pharaoh and his army in ancient days that they will say—‘Come, now is the time to pitch into the Jews and destroy them.’ And they will commence their work of destruction, and they will succeed so far as to take one half the city, and while they are in the very act of destroying Jerusalem, behold the heavens are rent, and the Son of God with all the heavenly hosts appears, and he descends and rests upon the summit of the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east. And so great will be the power of God that will then be made manifest, that the mountain will divide asunder, half going towards the south, and half towards the north, producing a great valley going east and west, from the walls of Jerusalem eastward. What next? The Jews that are not taken captive by these nations, will flee to the valleys of the mountains, says the Prophet Zechariah; and when they get into that great valley, where these personages are who have descended, they expect to find the Deliverer which their Prophets have spoken of so long ... The personage they have been looking for some eighteen hundred years is the true Messiah, and now, say they—‘He has come to deliver us.’ But how great will be their astonishment when, while looking at their Deliverer, they see that his hands are marred considerably! Say they, one to another—‘There are large scars in his hands; and there is another large scar in his side, and behold his feet, they are scarred also!’ And, as the Prophet Zechariah has said, they will begin to enquire of him—‘What are these wounds with which thou art wounded?’ And he replies—‘These are the wounds with which I was wounded in the house of my friends.’ What then? Then they begin to believe ... [and those who are] convinced they begin to mourn, and they mourn every family apart, and their wives apart. The family of the house of Levi apart and their wives apart; the family of the house of David and their wives apart, and all their families that remain will mourn, they and their wives apart, and there will be such mourning in Jerusalem as that city never experienced before. What is the matter? What are they mourning about? They have looked upon him whom their fathers pierced, they behold the wounds, they are now convinced that they and their fathers have been in error [for centuries], and they repent in dust and ashes. The next step for them will be baptism for the remission of their sins. They look upon him whom their fathers pierced and they mourn for him as one who mourns for his only son, and, as Zechariah says, they are in bitterness for him. But repentance alone would not be sufficient, they must obey the ordinances of the Gospel; hence there will be a fountain opened at that time on purpose for baptism. Where will it be opened? On the east side of the Temple. A stream will break out from under the threshold of the Temple, says the Prophet, and it will run eastward, and will probably pass directly through the deep valley made by the parting of the Mount of Olives. It will run eastward, and as you go down from the Temple a few thousand cubits it increases so rapidly that it becomes a great river that cannot be forded. This is the fountain that Zechariah says is open to the inhabitants of Jerusalem and to the house of David for sin and uncleanness. ‘How is it that’ says one? ... Why yes, baptism for the remission of sins. [And this water which breaks out from the threshold of the Temple, will not only run eastward but westward also, and there will be a great change in the land there, certain portions rising up, others lowered, rough places made smooth and mountains cast down; and half the waters of this spring which will burst forth, will go towards the former sea and half to the other sea; in other words half towards the Dead Sea and half toward the Mediterranean.] Then the Jews will receive the Gospel and they will be cleansed from all their sins by being baptized in water for their remission. Then will be fulfilled the words of the Prophet Isaiah, when speaking of Jerusalem—‘For henceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised and the unclean.’ But the name of the city from that day will be—‘The Lord is there;’ that is, the Lord will be personally there, there with his Apostles and with all his ancient Saints, for Zechariah says that when he comes and stands his feet on the Mount of Olives, all his Saints will come with him ... From that day forward there shall be written upon the bells of the horses and upon the vessels of the house of the Lord—‘Holiness to the Lord’

⁴² Oryx is the name used in the Vulgate (Ⓟ).

[קִדְשׁ לַיהוָה] ...”⁴³

21 Therefore hear now this, thou afflicted, and drunken, but not with wine:

The LXX (6) reads, “Therefore hear, thou, who hast been humbled, and who art drunk, but not with wine.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Therefore hear this, thou poor little one, and thou that art drunk but not with wine.” ¶ Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg, suggests there is an ellipsis meant when we read drunk, and adds the words “drunk from troubles.” Ibn Ezra similarly suggests an ellipsis: “And drunken with” Supply חמה ‘anger,’ אף ‘wrath,’ or רעות ‘evils.’” Alexander well has: “Not with wine, but with the wrath of God, which had already been described as a cup of reeling or intoxication ... The Targum supplies from distress. Kimhi inserts the wrath of God.” These words are followed with comforting ones.

22 Thus saith thy Lord the LORD, and thy God [that] pleadeth the cause of his people, Behold, I have taken out of thine hand the cup of trembling, [even] the dregs of the cup of my fury; thou shalt no more drink it again:

Thus saith thy Lord the LORD. The LXX (6) reads, “Thus saith the Lord, the God” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Thus saith thy Sovereign the Lord.” As Wade has, “Better, thy Lord Jehovah,” which is more literal:

אֲדֹנָיִךְ יְהוָה. ¶ And thy God [that] pleadeth the cause of his people. The Targum (7) has, “Even thy God will take vengeance of judgment for His people.” The LXX (6) reads, “who judgeth his people.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “And thy God, who will fight for his people.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “The Lord... that pleadeth the cause of his people (comp. Jeremiah 50:34, which contains an allusion to this passage). As his people have a relentless adversary, who accuses them continually, and pleads against them, (Revelation 12:10) so it is needful that they should have an untiring advocate. God himself is this Advocate.” ¶ Behold, I have taken out of thine hand the cup of trembling, [even] the dregs of the cup of my fury; thou shalt no more drink it again: The Targum (7) has, “Behold, I have taken away the cup of cursing, the vial of the cup of my fury; thou shalt no more drink it again.” The LXX (6) reads, “Behold I have taken out of thy hand the cup of horror—the great cup of mine indignation; and thou shalt no more drink it again.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Behold I have taken out of thy hand the cup of dead sleep, the dregs of the cup of my indignation, thou shalt not drink it again any more.” ¶ Lowth, in part, says: “The bold image of the cup of God’s wrath, often employed by the sacred writers, is nowhere handled with greater force and sublimity than in this passage of Isaiah.” Faussett says: “This cannot apply to Israel after the return from Babylon, but only to them after their final restoration.” Young has: “The cup of reeling (i.e., the cup that causes reeling) is conceived as yet in Zion’s hand, and from this goblet-cup Zion is no more to drink. The original is forceful: thou shalt not add to drink it again.” One of the reasons for all of this mercy is that Christ has also drunk of the bitter cup, on our behalf. ¶ Elder Orson Hyde assured that those who turn to God will no longer have to drink this cup: “I have no enmity towards anyone, but my general feeling is, Heaven bless the Saints and may Heaven destroy every influence that is arraigned against Zion. And the Lord will do this; and I will prophesy in the name of the Lord God of Hosts that if we continue to walk in the light of truth, to labor to build up Zion, that cup of trembling spoken of by the Prophet Isaiah shall never return to your lips nor to our habitations, but we will float along increasing in power and strength from day to day, continually rejoicing in the truths of our holy religion.”⁴⁴

⁴³ Pratt, Elder Orson. Return of the Jews to Jerusalem. Discourse delivered in the New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday Afternoon, 25 July 1875.

⁴⁴ Hyde, Elder Orson. JD 10:112.

23 But I will put it into the hand of them that afflict thee; which have said to thy soul, Bow down, that we may go over: and thou hast laid thy body as the ground, and as the street, to them that went over.

But I will put it into the hand of them that afflict thee.

The 1QIsa^a (¶) adds וְיִמְעִיךְ, and oppressed (DSSB, of those who afflicted and oppressed you, also see Young). The LXX (⚡) reads, “And I will put it into the hands of them, who have injured thee and oppressed thee.” The Douay-Rheims (¶) has, “And I will put it in the hand of them that have oppressed thee.”

¶ Regarding מוֹנִיךְ [afflict, root יָנָה] Young says: “Isaiah uses a root also found in Lamentations 1:12⁴⁵, and the reading is confirmed by the Qumran Scroll.” The cup of the wrath of God will be taken from Israel and from Judah, and placed upon those who persecute her. So also in Rain in Due Season: “And the LORD thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee. And thou shalt return and obey the voice of the LORD, and do all his commandments which I command thee this day. And the LORD thy God will make thee plenteous in every work of thine hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy land, for good: for the LORD will again rejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers: If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which are written in this book of the law, and if thou turn unto the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul” (Deuteronomy 30:7–10). Cowles has: “This verse answers to our Lord’s warning (Matthew 21:44–26). Judgment has lighted heavily on the Jews, who stumbled at the stumbling-stone; but the judgment on those Gentile persecutors, who have despised or perverted the Gospel, will be heavier still. The Christian nation, which renounces Christ, builds its house on the sand; and when the floods arise, and the winds blow fiercely, it must fall, and great will be the fall of it.” Interestingly, we read that the Angel Moroni taught the Prophet Joseph Smith that the day of the Gentile was at hand and furthermore, “[Moroni] quoted also the third chapter of Acts, twenty-second and twenty-third⁴⁶ verses, precisely as they stand in our New Testament.

⁴⁵ מוֹנִיךְ, root יָנָה.

⁴⁶ “For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people” (Acts 3:22–23).

He said that that prophet was Christ; but the day had not yet come when ‘they who would not hear his voice should be cut off from among the people,’ but soon would come” (JS–History 1:40b). Elder Orson Hyde taught that those who hurt the Saints will have to drink the bitter cup: “Now concerning the times and seasons in which we live. The Lord says by the mouth of Isaiah, ‘Thus saith thy Lord the Lord, and thy God that pleadeth the cause of his people, Behold, I have taken out of thine hand the cup of trembling, even the dregs of the cup of my fury; thou shalt no more drink it again: But I will put it into the hand of them that afflict thee; which have said to thy soul, Bow down, that we may go over: and thou hast laid thy body as the ground, and as the street, to them that went over.’ What are you going to do with this text, my friends? I will put it into the hands of them that have afflicted thee. What was that army up here for? They were sent as agents of the Almighty to take away this cup of trembling, which had afflicted us for so many years, and they carried it away with them down yonder, and they then began to drink of it and have been drinking of it ever since. Do you know that there was a kind of tremor with some of us at that time? But I tell you what it is, the nerves have become settled, and those who sought to make us drink the dregs are drinking them now, and they will continue to do so until the dregs are all drunk out. I have no feeling against anyone, and I regret exceedingly that these of whom I speak should have brought upon themselves these terrible calamities which now afflict our once happy country.”⁴⁷ ¶ Which have said to thy soul, Bow down, that we may go over: The LXX (⚡) reads, “Who have said to thy soul, Crouch down that we may walk over thee.” The Douay-Rheims (¶) has, “And have said to thy soul: Bow down, that we may go over.” ¶ Barnes shows that in Biblical times similar procedures took place elsewhere: “Thus in Joshua 10:24, ‘Joshua called for all the men of Israel, and said unto the captains of the men of war that went with them, come near, put your feet upon the necks of these kings.’ So David says, ‘Thou hast given me the necks of mine enemies’ (Psalm 18:40). ¶ And thou hast laid thy body as the ground, and as the street, to them that went over. The Targum (⚡) has, “And thou hast humbled thy glory as the ground, and thou becamest like the street to them that passed by.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “When thou hadst bent thy body down level with the earth in the street, to them passing along.” The Peshitta (⚡) has, “And thou hast made your people like the ground and like the street to them that passed by.” The Douay-Rheims (¶) has way instead of street. ¶ Skinner explains: “Bow down, that we may go over] The figure is taken from the Eastern custom of treading or even riding on the backs of conquered enemies. Compare Lane’s account of the

⁴⁷ Hyde, Elder Orson.JD 10:70.

Mohammedan ceremony of the Dooseh or ‘Treading,’ as he witnessed it at Cairo in 1834; when the Sheikh of the Saadiyeh dervishes,⁴⁸ mounted on horseback, rode over the prostrate bodies of a large number of dervishes (see Manners and Customs of the Modern Egyptians, pp. 417 f., 432 f. [Ed. 1890].) and thou hast laid (Sr’c.] so that thou madest thy back as the earth.” Barnes, also leaning on the same author, has: “Mr. Lane (Modern Egyptians, vol. i. p. 199) describes an annual ceremony which may serve to illustrate this passage: ‘A considerable number of Durweeshes [i.e., dervishes], says he (I am sure there were not less than sixty, but I could not count their number), laid themselves down upon the ground, side by side, as close as possible to each other, having their backs upward, having their legs extended, and their arms placed together beneath their foreheads. When the Sheikh approached, his horse hesitated several minutes to step upon the back of the first prostrate man; but being pulled and urged on behind, he at length stepped upon them: and then without apparent fear, ambled with a high pace over them all, led by two persons, who ran over the prostrate men, one sometimes treading on the feet, and the other on the heads. Not one of the men thus trampled on by the horse seemed to be hurt; but each the moment that the animal had passed over him, jumped up and followed the Sheikh. Each of them received two treads from the horse, one from one of his fore-legs, and a second from a hind-leg.’ It seems probable that this is a relic of an ancient usage alluded to in the Bible, in which captives were made to lie down on the ground, and the conqueror rode insultingly over them.” ¶ Elder Erastus Snow has: “... if his Spirit is poured out upon the people so generally, it will be because their hearts are prepared to receive it, because their ears have been opened to the word of God, and faith has been begotten in them. They have listened to the call of the Almighty, and have received the message of salvation sent unto them. But shall all people be thus converted unto the Lord? Shall the king upon the throne, the judges who have judged for reward, the Prophets who have divined for money, the priests who have taught for hire, the murderer, the idolater, the abominable, those who have oppressed and ruled mankind with a rod of iron, who have said to the souls of men, ‘Bow down, that we may walk over you?’ Shall all these be converted unto the Lord of hosts and receive of these blessings? ... the Prophets have not so predicted.”⁴⁹

FIRST POSTED: 12 March 2016

⁴⁸ Dervish, according to Webster’s 11th Edition: “a member of a Muslim religious order noted for devotional exercises (as bodily movements leading to a trance).”

⁴⁹ Snow, Elder Erastus. Ancient Prophecy, Relating to the Time of the Restitution of All Things, to Be Fulfilled. JD 16:200. Discourse delivered in the New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday Afternoon, 14 September 1873.

Isaiah 52

The resurrected, exalted Christ explained this chapter when He made His appearance in the American Continent. Of special interest are 3 Nephi 16:1–20; and 20:13–46. Between these two Book of Mormon chapters, our Redeemer quotes or alludes to all but two verses (ISAIAH 52:4–5) of ISAIAH 52—which is pronounced in the context of the Day of the Gentile Nations. In essence, the Lord tells us how the Gentiles—for Gentiles read Gentile nations (see 3 Nephi 20:20)—will be receptive to the fullness of the Gospel while Israel will at first reject it. The Gentiles will be greatly blessed with the Holy Ghost and play a vital role in gathering Israel from the four quarters of the earth. The unbelieving Gentiles will help further scatter Israel. The Gentile nations will become prideful and many shall reject the fullness of the Gospel. The Lord will recall His covenant with Israel. The inheritance of the Lamanites would be within the American Continent. The Lord will greatly strengthen the gathered of Israel and be in their midst, fulfilling the Abrahamic covenant. To Judah, the Father will give the land of Jerusalem and in due time the Gospel will be preached to them, also. The day will come in which the Jews will pray unto the Father in the name of Messiah, even Jesus Christ. As a descendant of Judah from my paternal heritage, my most valued treasure is the unshakable testimony of the Divinity of Jesus the Messiah, Son of God. When the Jews as a nation turn unto Christ, then ISAIAH 52:8–10 shall be fulfilled (3 Nephi 16, 20), and Jerusalem (put for not only Jerusalem but for all of Israel) shall lift up her voice in rejoicing song. The people of Judah shall be redeemed, as the arm of the Father is made manifest before the nations through Christ and His servants. Then the Lord recaps ISAIAH 52 from the first verse: when all these things happen Jerusalem will be inhabited by the righteous; she will again put on the garments of the holy Priesthood and will no longer be a captive. She will be redeemed, not with money but through the atonement and will truly know the Holy One of Israel, Jesus Christ. Jerusalem will rejoice over the beautiful feet of the Savior; her priesthood will be unpolluted; the Lord will protect her and be her rearward; shall be lifted very high; will understand the atonement and the sacrifice of the Holy One; and Israel shall be gathered and the covenant fulfilled. For this chapter we have very important additional study aids from the Book of Mormon (e.g., Mosiah 12:21–24), D&C (e.g., D&C 113:7–10; 45:18–30) and the words of the Brethren. Among the Gentile authors, there are those who have a good understanding of the general setting. For instance, Birks explains: “The fulness of the promise, and the order in the vision, confirm the application to a time still future, when Jerusalem will cease to be ‘trodden down of the Gentiles,’ and to a deliverance of which the Return from Babylon was a pledge and partial earnest only.” Of the last three verses and flowing into ISAIAH 53, Skinner beautifully has: “The tragedy of which they have been spectators [the Servant’s contemporaries] makes an impression far more profound and convincing than any direct teaching could have done, compelling them to recognize the mission of the Servant, and at the same time producing penitence and confession of their own sin. The whole conception here given of the Servant of the Lord makes the prophecy the most remarkable anticipation in the Old Testament of the ‘sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow.’” Urwick writes: “The more accurately and closely the passage is studied, the clearer does its Messianic import appear ... No interpretation of this chapter at all comes up to its tone and befits its language, save that which recognizes here the invitations, the blessings, the triumphs of the gospel of Christ ... Our English version of this famous passage is in the main as correct as it is beautiful. Compared with any newly attempted and competing translations, it far transcends them in sublime simplicity and in pathos.”

vv. 1–6. The restored Priesthood will be a matter of great power as the Church is restored, as it is exercised in righteousness and Holy Temples are built. The scattered remnant shall be gathered as the Book of Mormon goes forth and The Church of Jesus Christ is restored. The Lord’s name is blasphemed but the time will come when it shall be honored.

1 ¶ AWAKE, awake; put on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city: for henceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised and the unclean.

AWAKE, awake; put on thy strength, O Zion. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Reveal thyself, reveal thyself, put on thy strength, O Zion.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Awake, awake, Sion! clothe thyself, Sion, with thy strength.” The Peshitta (Ⓟ) lacks the clause, put on thy strength. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has arise, arise instead of awake, awake. ¶ Rabbi Ibn Ezra has: “All agree that this prophecy has reference to the time yet to come ... How could this prophecy be referred to the deliverance and return of the captives in Babylon, when it is said, ‘the uncircumcised and unclean shall no more come unto thee.” Wordsworth has: “This is an alarm which ... is a call to Zion to awake, and to arouse the world from the slumber and prison of sin and Satan by the trumpet of evangelical preaching to all Nations.” ¶ This verse and much of this chapter is intimately associated with the Priesthood. Also see the repetition of the words holy, beauty, garments and glory [especially in ᖃ] in these passages. Wordsworth finishes his observations with these thoughts, that it is Christ who “imparts His own beauty and glory to her¹ [i.e., to His Church, to Zion].” From D&C 113 we read, “Questions by Elias Higbee: What is meant by the command in ISAIAH, 52d chapter, 1st verse, which saith: Put on thy strength, O Zion—and what people had Isaiah reference to? [Answer:] He had reference to those whom God should call in the last days, who should hold the power of priesthood to bring again Zion, and the redemption of Israel; and to put on her strength is to put on the authority of the priesthood, which she, Zion, has a right to by lineage; also to return to that power which she had lost” (D&C 113:7–8).

¶ Elder Franklin D. Richards taught about the priesthood and about service: “Behold! as I look abroad this afternoon in this house, I contemplate the great mass of this congregation that are partakers of the Holy Priesthood. It is not a few that are partakers of the holy calling, the authority to administer in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is the echo of that saying that is written in the Scriptures where the Lord has said that He would take of Israel and make of them a nation of kings and priests unto Himself ... Here is Israel gathering together, being taught of the Lord, to learn of His ways and walk in His paths, that they may receive the blessing and be clothed upon with power, as the Prophet said: ‘Awake, awake; put, on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem.’ What are these beautiful garments? These beautiful garments are [to be clothed] upon with the authority and power of the Holy Priesthood. It is that which makes people beautiful; it is that which makes people useful; it is that which causes the Saints to sing: ‘How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!’ It is that excellence of the knowledge of God that makes men and women beautiful, and makes their acts delightful when they are performed in righteousness in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ ... As Apostles, as Bishops, as High Priests, as Elders, as well as fathers and mothers, we need to get more of the spirit of this great work in all its different branches, and keep it with us; always have a blessing to dispense; everywhere a word of comfort and consolation to bestow.”² President Russel M. Nelson explained: “We need to pray from our hearts ... Are you willing to pray to know how to pray for more that brings enduring power. Are you willing to pray to know how to pray for more power? The Lord will teach you. Are you willing to search the scriptures and feast on the words of Christ—to study earnestly in order to have more power? If you want to see your wife’s heart melt, let her find you on the Internet studying the doctrine of Christ or reading your scriptures!” ¶ Put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city: Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the city of holiness.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Put on thy glory. O Jerusalem, thou holy city!” The Douay-Rheims (ᖃ) has, “Put on the garments of thy glory, O Jerusalem, the city of the Holy One.” ¶ Gill, who died shortly before the Gospel was restored, says: “Put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city; another name for the Gospel church (see Hebrews 12:22), and which is called ‘the holy city’; referring to the times in the latter day, when holiness shall more appear and prevail ... when saints shall be built up in their holy faith, and more closely attend to holy ordinances, and walk in an holy conversation and godliness; and especially the New Jerusalem church state will answer to this name, and so it is called (Revelation 21:2,10), and when the saints will ‘put on’ their ‘beautiful garments’ ... the witnesses will no more prophesy in sackcloth; the marriage of the Lamb will come; the bride made ready, being clothed with fine linen, clean and white, the righteousness of the saints, the garments of Christ’s salvation, and the robe of his righteousness; which are the beautiful garments here meant ...”

Wordsworth, another Gentile author, for בְּגָדֵי תִפְאָרֶת has: “beautiful garments” Literally, garments of glory and beauty, such as were worn by Aaron the High Priest. See Exodus 28:2, 40, where the same words are used; cp. 2 Chronicles 3:6; and below, ISAIAH 60:7; 64:11, where the word here rendered beautiful is applied to the Temple. The Priesthood and the Temple of Zion receive new beauty and glory in the Church of Christ, Who fulfils all that was pre-signified by them, and imparts His own beauty and glory to her.” Here we quote the Exodus and Isaiah references: “And thou shalt make holy garments [בְּגָדֵי קֹדֶשׁ] for Aaron thy brother for glory and for beauty [לְכָבוֹד וְלִתְפָּאֶרֶת]” (Exodus 28:2); “And for Aaron’s sons thou shalt make coats, and thou shalt make for them girdles, and bonnets shalt thou make for them, for glory and for beauty [לְכָבוֹד וְלִתְפָּאֶרֶת]”

¹ How beautiful are the feet principle.

² Richards, Elder Franklin D., “Our Labors are Interesting and Peculiar, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 26, No. 11, 18 January 1885, pp. 98 ff.

(Exodus 28:40); “Our holy and our beautiful house [בֵּית קֹדֶשׁנוּ וְהַפְּאֵרָהֵנוּ] (ISAIAH 64:11a). Kay also, “Put on thy garments of beauty” s.w.a. Exodus 28:2 (of Aaron’s priestly robes).” ¶ Elder Wilford Woodruff spoke frequently on the topic of the beautiful garments. He made it clear that Zion had not yet fully been clothed with them, but was rather in the process of putting them on: “... this Zion so often spoken of in holy writ, has got to arise and put on her beautiful garments; these mountain vales have got to be filled with the saints of God and temples reared to his holy name, preparatory to the time when ‘the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising.’ And [the] time will come when the nations are fully warned by the preaching of the servant of God, and his judgments commence to be poured out upon the world, in fulfillment of the revelations of St. John.”³ This quote from 1878 is particularly interesting not only because it makes an allusion to the day of the Gentile Nations, but also because it prophesies of a time when the Wasatch front would be filled with temples as it is today. Elder Woodruff also said: “I thank God I live in this day and age of the world. I thank God that I heard the Gospel. I thank the Lord I have been made partaker of the holy priesthood in connection with the Gospel ... I realize and understand, as well as I know anything, that this kingdom is ordained to stand. It will grow and increase. Zion will arise and put on her beautiful garments ... We are surrounded with temptations which have a tendency to lead us away. We have got to guard against them; we have got to increase our faith and live nearer and nearer to the Lord.”⁴ ¶ For henceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised and the unclean. Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For the uncircumcised and the polluted shall pass no more through thee.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “No more shall the uncircumcised and the unclean pass through thee.” The Douay–Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “For henceforth the uncircumcised, and unclean shall no more pass through thee.” ¶ The ellipsis that is missing here is uncircumcised of heart which goes well with the unclean. In its most complete sense, the fulfillment of this prophecy will have to wait to the Millennium. So also Elder McConkie, who speaks of uncircumcised of heart and further, states that: “In the day of which we speak there will be none who are unclean in the telestial sense of the word, for the wicked will be destroyed by the brightness of His coming. And there will be none who are uncircumcised, as it were, for all who seek the blessings of the Holy City will be in harmony with the plans and purposes of Him whose city it is.”⁵ Keith says: “The description can apply only to the time yet to come, when God, having turned his hand upon her, shall purge away her dross ...”

2 Shake thyself from the dust; arise, [and] sit down, O Jerusalem: loose thyself from the bands of thy neck, O captive daughter of Zion.

Shake thyself from the dust; arise, [and] sit down, O Jerusalem: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “sit upon the throne of glory” instead of sit down. Leaning on the Targum (Ⲯ) Wordsworth has: “Arise, and sit down] As a queen on a throne.” Rashi (in Rabbi Rosenberg) follows the Ⲯ and has: “sit down—on a throne.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Shake off the dust, and stand up: assume thy seat, O Jerusalem!” ¶ This figure is taken from captives who sit on the ground or dirt. Zion is commanded to arise, shake off the dirt, and sit down in her throne. Lowth notes that this scripture also alludes to ISAIAH 51:23 where the children of Israel were depicted as prostrate. ¶ Elder Wilford Woodruff testified: “When he, who has the authority, preaches the Gospel, he promises, in the name of Jesus Christ, to all that believe and obey, that the Holy Ghost will be given them. By virtue of this promise, all such can know for themselves, whether it is of God, or whether it is of man ... Our boys [and now our girls, also—GB] are often called from the plow and the workshop, to go abroad to the nations to disseminate the principles of the everlasting Gospel. By what power are our young men sustained, who go forth, inexperienced, without much education, presenting in meekness, to a learned and intelligent world, the Gospel of Christ? God, through his angels, attends them; he strengthens their feeble knees, and gives them utterance ... The Lord chose poor, illiterate fishermen, and sent them forth to combat, and even to confound the wisdom of the wise. His Gospel is represented today, by the weak things of the earth ... And what is the result of our preaching? Let facts speak for themselves ... Why have we been so successful, thus far, in accomplishing so great a work? Simply, because God has confirmed our preaching, and the testimonies we have borne, by conferring the Holy Ghost, with signs following the believers.”⁶ ¶ Loose thyself from the bands of thy neck, O captive daughter of Zion. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The chains of thy neck are broken, O captive congregation of Zion.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Loose the chain from

³ Woodruff, Elder Wilford. “Faith, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 19, No. 50, 30 June 1878, p. 359.

⁴ Woodruff, Elder Wilford. “Duties and Responsibilities, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 21, No. 22, Jul. 3, 1880, p. 196.

⁵ McConkie, Bruce R. The Millennial Messiah: The Second Coming of the Son of Man – Restoring the Kingdom to Israel. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company.

⁶ Woodruff, Elder Wilford. “Simplicity of the Gospel, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 18, No. 27, Aug. 13, 1876, p. 219.

thy neck, O captive daughter of Sion!” Instead of loose thyself from the bands, the Peshitta (S) has loose the bands. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, for the first clause, “Loose the bonds from off thy neck.” ¶ This has reference to the idea of rising from the dust, or from captivity and symbolically sitting in a chair, leaving the shackles of slavery behind. Skinner has: “The description is influenced by the contrast (evidently intentional) to the taunt-song on the ‘daughter of Babylon’ (ISAIAH 47:1 ff.).” Part of the process of getting off the ground would include dusting off the dirt of the apparel. Barnes explains: “She is now called on to cast off these chains from her neck, and to be again at liberty. In captivity, chains or bands were attached to various parts of the body. They were usually affixed to the wrists or ankles, but it would seem also that sometimes collars were affixed to the neck.” In ISAIAH 1:8 we said that daughter of Zion, בַּת־צִיּוֹן, stood for Jerusalem. But it well stands, also, for all of the remains of scattered Israel. ¶ “[Questions by Elias Higbee:] What are we to understand by Zion loosing herself from the bands of her neck; 2d verse? [Answer:] We are to understand that the scattered remnants are exhorted to return to the Lord from whence they have fallen; which if they do, the promise of the Lord is that he will speak to them, or give them revelation. See the 6th, 7th, and 8th verses. The bands of her neck are the curses of God upon her, or the remnants of Israel in their scattered condition among the Gentiles” (D&C 113:9–10). The curses are an allusion to those found in the Rain in Due Season. After the “blessing and the curse” (Deuteronomy 30:1b) it is Jehovah Himself who will gather Israel (Ezekiel 37:21) wherein the bands of her neck will be removed.

3 For thus saith the LORD, Ye have sold yourselves for nought; and ye shall be redeemed without money.

For thus saith the LORD, Ye have sold yourselves for nought. The LXX (G) reads, “For thus saith the Lord, You were sold for nought.” The Peshitta (S) has, for the second clause, “You were sold for nought.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, for the second clause, “You were sold gratis,” or Gratis venundati estis (D). The Spanish LDS RV2009, leaning on RV 1960, reads: “Ye were sold for nought” (de balde fuisteis vendidos) rather than “Ye have sold yourselves for nought” (KJV). ¶ Indeed, almost all of the translations and the exegetes render the clause as does the Spanish Reina Valera, rather than what we have in the AV. The idea, they argue, is that no money was paid for them when the children of Israel were taken away captive, and thus no money is needed to redeem them. While there is much to be said for this argument, I prefer the rendering offered in the AV. Birks suggests: “Not with silver] The received version gives the main thought, and is simpler in style, but obscures an important allusion (see 1 Peter 1:18–19).” There we have: “Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot” (1 Peter 1:18–19). ¶ In ISAIAH 50:1 we saw: “Thus saith the LORD, Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement, whom I have put away? or which of my creditors is it to whom I have sold you? Behold, for your iniquities have ye sold yourselves, and for your transgressions is your mother put away.” From a historical perspective we know that the children of Israel sold themselves—nay, even more, in the Biblical language we see that they prostituted themselves. Except while a normal prostitute gets paid for her services, Jerusalem (standing for Israel as a nation) paid her lovers, instead: “They give gifts to all whores: but thou givest thy gifts to all thy lovers, and hirest them, that they may come unto thee on every side for thy whoredom. And the contrary is in thee from other women in thy whoredoms, whereas none followeth thee to commit whoredoms: and in that thou givest a reward, and no reward is given unto thee, therefore thou art contrary” (Ezekiel 16:33–34). Both Samaria and Judah (standing for the north and the south) were also compared to prostitutes, the older and younger sister, Ahalah and Aholibah (Ezekiel 23:4b , אֶהְיֶה הַגְּדוֹלָה וְאֶהְיֶה הַקְּטָנָה). ¶ And ye shall be redeemed without money. The LXX (G) reads, “And you shall be ransomed, not with money.” Henderson translates the verse similarly to the AV: “For thus saith Jehovah: As ye sold yourselves for nought. So ye shall be redeemed without money” (emphasis added). Alexander writes: “The reflexive meaning given to נִמְכַּרְתֶּם in the English version (ye have sold yourselves), is not sustained by usage, nor required by the context, either here or in Leviticus 25:39, 47” yet Alexander admits that Gesenius finds the reflexive appropriate in the latter (נִמְכַּר). There we read in the AV “and be sold unto thee” and “sell himself unto the stranger,” respectively. The following are some of the Bible translations that suggest that the Israelite sells himself rather than is sold by another in the context of Leviticus 25:47: ASV, BBE, Bishops, CEV, CJB, Darby, DRB, ERV, ESV, Geneva, GNB, GW, HCSB, ISV, JPS, JUB, KJV, LBLA, LITV, NASB, NBLH, Leeser, Rotherham, RV, Reina Valera, SRV, SSE, and Webster. ¶ In ISAIAH 50:1, interestingly, we have the Lord saying that He had sold Israel, and then, in the very same verse, explains that indeed Israel had sold herself. After saying: “... or which of my creditors is it to whom I have sold you (מִכַּרְתִּי)?” the Lord seems to say, wait a second! and corrects the statement, “Behold, for your iniquities have ye sold yourselves (מִכַּרְתֶּם).” The prophet Joseph Smith made substantial changes to ISAIAH 50:1, but left the idea that Israel had sold herself intact. Being sold for naught means that Israel gained nothing by abandoning the Lord. She was redeemed without money, but with the blood of our Savior who in anguish bled from every pore.

4 For thus saith the Lord GOD, My people went down aforetime into Egypt to sojourn there; and the Assyrian oppressed them without cause.

For thus saith the Lord GOD, My people went down aforetime into Egypt to sojourn there. The LXX (6) reads, “Thus saith the Lord, My people went down to Egypt at first to sojourn there.” The Douay-Rheims (1) has, “For thus saith the Lord God: My people went down into Egypt at the beginning to sojourn there.” ¶ Here we have mention of two sources of oppression, the first from Egypt; the second from Assyria (with an ellipsis we might also include Babylon). Birks says: “The word, Egypt, comes first in the original, and shows that the main thought is the enumeration of the past trials of Israel, as a ground for their deliverance at last.” ¶ Faussett explains: “Went down—Judea was an elevated country compared with Egypt.” In the writings of the Jews, also, anytime people went to Jerusalem they went up, regardless of where they went there from. And the opposite, they went down, when they left Jerusalem. Delitzsch writes: “Israel went down to Egypt, the country of the Nile valley, with the innocent intention of sojourning, i.e., living as a guest there in a foreign land; and yet (as we may supply from the next clause, according to the law of a self-completing parallelism) there it fell into the bondage of the Pharaohs, who, whilst they did not fear Jehovah, but rather despised Him, were merely the blind instruments of His will.” ¶ And the Assyrian oppressed them without cause. The LXX (6) reads, “And to the Assyrians they were carried by force.” The Peshitta (5) has “And the Assyrian carried them away with violence (BPE) / took them captive by force (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (1) has, “And the Assyrian hath oppressed them without any cause at all.” Wordsworth, leaning on Vitranga and Delitzsch, agrees that in the type of Asshur, Babylon is also included: “The comprehensive word Asshur is used to signify the oppression of Israel by Assyria, as well as that of Judah by Babylon.” Delitzsch has: “Asshur then oppressed it ... as אַשּׁוּר is the synonym of בָּבֶל in ISAIAH 40:17; 41:2) ‘for nothing,’ i.e., without having acquired any right to it, but rather serving in its unrighteousness simply as the blind instrument of the righteousness of Jehovah, who through the instrumentality of Asshur put an end first of all to the kingdom of Israel, and then to the kingdom of Judah.”

5 Now therefore, what have I here, saith the LORD, that my people is taken away for nought? they that rule over them make them to howl, saith the LORD; and my name continually every day [is] blasphemed.

Now therefore, what have I here, saith the LORD, that my people is taken away for nought? The Targum (7) has, “Therefore now I am ready to redeem them, saith the Lord; for my people was sold for naught.” The LXX (6) reads, “Now therefore why are you here? Thus saith the Lord, Because my people were taken away for nought.” The Douay-Rheims (1) has, “And now what have I here, saith the Lord: for my people is taken away gratis.” ¶ Keith observes: “... the Lord is represented as struck with astonishment or indignation at the condition to which he sees his people Israel reduced—removed unjustly from their own land—treated cruelly by their oppressors—and in the dishonour of Israel the God of Israel dishonoured. This view of their condition appears, from what follows, to be a general one, embracing their state up to the period of their deliverance. The expression ‘what have I here,’ is literally, ‘what to me here’ ... For the state of things described here, the people of God oppressed, and the name of God despised, a remedy must be found, and one is promised. They would be made to know the Lord by the deliverance which they would experience when restored finally to their own land. In the doings of that day they will see what will vindicate the honour of the Almighty, and put an end to all blasphemy of his name.” Jenour has: “For, as in former times when they had gone down into Egypt to sojourn, the Egyptians had oppressed them and Jehovah delivered them, not they themselves; so would it be now; he would not quietly look on, and suffer them to be oppressed without measure, and finally destroyed; but would interpose on their behalf. This is what seems to be implied in the expression, Now, what do I here? by which Jehovah intimates that he would not remain an idle spectator of his people’s sufferings.” There is something akin to the Hosea Principle here. An allusion is made to Israel selling herself for nothing—or without cause—but in the very next verse, the Lord, full of tenderness, makes it clear He will not tolerate the abuse to which Israel has been submitted to. ¶ They that rule over them make them to howl, saith the LORD. The Targum (ⲉ) has, for the first clause, “The nations that ruled over them boasted.” The LXX (ⲗ) reads, “(express your amaze; and raise the mournful cry!) Thus saith the Lord.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, “They that rule over them treat them unjustly, saith the Lord.” ¶ They that rule over them. Rabbi Rosenberg points to the Targum (ⲉ), that suggests that this is of the nations where Israel was exiled to. ¶ Lowth suggests boast for howl: “make their boast of it] For יהלילו, ‘make them to howl,’ five MSS (two ancient) have יהללו, ‘make their boast;’ which is confirmed by the Chaldee paraphrast, who renders it מִשְׁתַּנְחִין. Leeser likewise offers: “... its rulers vaunt aloud.” ¶ And my name continually every day [is] blasphemed. The Targum (ⲉ) has, “And they continually, all the day, provoke them to anger, because of the worship of my name.” The LXX (ⲗ) reads, “On your account my name is continually reviled among the nations.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, “And my name is continually blasphemed all the day long.” ¶ Skinner suggests that rather than blasphemed, נִאָץ literally means despised. Gesenius has “to deride, to despise, to reject with contempt and derision.” TDOT has abuse, slander, contemptible, despise, abhor. HALOT gives disdain, dishonour, spurn, discard. ¶ Wordsworth explains: “My Name is blasphemed by the heathen, who imagine that in conquering My People they have conquered Me.”

6 Therefore, my people shall know my name; yea, therefore [they shall know] in that day they shall know that I [am] he that doth speak; behold, [it is] I.

We have some connected ideas: for no reason (connects verses 4–5); and my name (connects verses 5–6). The Targum (ⲉ) has, “Therefore my name shall be magnified among the nations: therefore at that time ye shall know, that I am He that hath spoken: and my Word shall abide (the Royal Polyglot inserts לְעֹלָמָא, ‘for ever’). The LXX (ⲗ) reads, “Therefore in that day my people shall know my name. Because I THE I AM, the same who am speaking, am at hand.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, “Therefore my people shall know my name in that day: for I myself that spoke, behold I am here.” ¶ Horsley has: “in that day] The day, which is yet to come, when Jesus Christ will reveal himself to the Jewish nation, in sensible and notable proofs of his presence, his power, and majesty.” We see that in contrast to having His name blasphemed or despised; now His name will be known and revered. There is indeed much significance to the name of the LORD,

יהוה, associated with I AM that I AM,

אֶהְיֶה אֲשֶׁר אֶהְיֶה.⁷ John Wesley Etheridge, referring to the various Targumim (ⲉ), explains the translation in the Aramaic paraphrase: “Onkelos leaves the Hebrew untranslated; but the Palestinian Targum attempts a paraphrase: ‘He who spake, and the world was; who spake, and all things were. And He said, This shalt thou say to the sons of Israel, I am He who Is, and who Will Be,⁸ hath sent me unto you.’ The Jerusalem Targum has, ‘And the Word of the Lord said to Moshe, He who spake to the world, Be, and it was; and who will speak to it, Be, and it will be. And He said, Thus shalt thou speak to the sons of Israel, Eheyeh hath sent me unto you.’”⁹ CJB, based on the Masoretic text has: “God said to Moshe, ‘Ehyeh Asher Ehyeh [I am/will be what I am/will be],’ and added, ‘Here is what to say to the people of Isra’el: ‘Ehyeh [I Am or I Will Be] has sent me to you.’” Although also based on the Masoretic text, AMP incorporates the idea of the Targum (ⲉ): “And God said to Moses, I AM WHO I AM and WHAT I AM, and I WILL BE WHAT I WILL BE; and He said, You shall say this to the Israelites: I AM has sent me to you!” Rabbi Isaac, according to Gill, has: “the holy blessed God said to Moses, Say unto them, I am he that was, and I am he that now is, and I am he that is to come, wherefore is written three times (Shemot Rabba, sect. 3. fol. 73. 2.).” The Targum Onkelos (ⲉ) for Deuteronomy 32:39, as translated by Etheridge, has: “I am He who Am, and Was, and Will Be, and there is no other God beside Me.”^{10 11} These are almost indistinguishable in essence to what we find in the Doctrine and Covenants, as we see below. During the 13 March 2016 all-Chile

⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים אֶל-מֹשֶׁה אֶהְיֶה אֲשֶׁר אֶהְיֶה, And [he] Elohim said unto Moshe, I AM that I AM.

⁸ אֲנִי הוּא דְהוּיָא וְעֵתִיד לְמִיכּוּי (Comprehensive Aramaic Lexicon. (2005). Targum Pseudo-Jonathan to the Pentateuch (Ex 3:14). Hebrew Union College.)

⁹ Etheridge, John Wesley (1865), The Targums of Onkelos and Jonathan ben Uzziel on the Pentateuch; with the fragments of the Jerusalem Targum: from the Chaldee, 2:12.

¹⁰ Etheridge, John Wesley (1865), The Targums of Onkelos and Jonathan ben Uzziel on the Pentateuch; with the fragments of the Jerusalem Targum: from the Chaldee, 2:669.

¹¹ “When the Memra of the Lord shall reveal itself to redeem his people, he will say to all the nations: “See, now, that I am the one who is, [and—GB] was, and I am the one who shall be in the future, and there is no other god besides me ...” (Cathcart, K., Maher, M., & McNamara, M. (Eds.). (1998). The Aramaic Bible: Targum Pseudo-Jonathan: Deuteronomy. (E. G. Clarke & S. Magder, Trans.) (Vol. 5, Dt 32:39). Collegeville, MN: The Liturgical Press. And for those interested in the Aramaic, כִּד יִתְגַּלִּי מִימְרָא דִּינִי לְמַפְרֹק יֵת, עֵמִיָּה יִימַר לְכָל עַמְמִיָּא חֲמוֹן כְּדוֹן אַרְוִם אֲנִי הוּא דְהוּיָא וְעֵתִיד לְמִיכּוּי וְלִית אֱלֹקָא חוּרִין בְּרִי מִינִי (Comprehensive Aramaic Lexicon. (2005). Targum Pseudo-Jonathan to the Pentateuch (Dt 32:39). Hebrew Union College).

conference (President Russel M. Nelson presided), I was electrified as one of the Sisters quoted: “Wherefore, be of good cheer, and do not fear, for I the Lord am with you, and will stand by you; and ye shall bear record of me, even Jesus Christ, that I am the Son of the living God, that I was, that I am, and that I am to come” (D&C 68:6, emphasis added). The whole idea of the name of the Lord, is to testify of His being and of His coming to this earth and be born of an immortal Father and a mortal mother. From the perspective of the passage in Exodus, it was looking forward. Now, in D&C 68:6, the Lord testifies of these same truths again, but in part looking backwards—and also forward. He was, He is, and He is to yet come again. The Lord who was has reference to His mortal ministry as well as to His pre-mortal existence. The Lord who is has reference to the resurrected Lord. The Lord who will be has reference to eternity, but also to His Second Coming. ¶ Skinner points us to Ezekiel 20: “And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall bring you into the land of Israel, into the country for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to your fathers. And there shall ye remember your ways, and all your doings, wherein ye have been defiled; and ye shall lothe yourselves in your own sight for all your evils that ye have committed. And ye shall know that I am the LORD when I have wrought with you for my name’s sake, not according to your wicked ways, nor according to your corrupt doings, O ye house of Israel, saith the Lord GOD” (Ezekiel 20:42–44). And furthermore, Skinner points us to Ezekiel 5:13b, regarding he that doeth speak: “... and they shall know that I the LORD have spoken it ...” In the Doctrine and Covenants we likewise have: “For, behold, it is I that speak; behold, I am the light which shineth in darkness, and by my power I give these words unto thee” (D&C 11:11, emphasis added). ¶ In that day. Young says: “The phrase in that day tells when the people will know, namely, in the day when God manifests His power.” ¶ Speaking of יהוה, as associated with my name, Lowth has: “For I am He that promised” For יהוה, the Bodley MS, and another, have יהוה; “for I am JEHOVAH that promised:” and another ancient MS adds יהוה after יהוה.”

vv. 7–12. The beautiful feet of Jesus Christ and of those who proclaim His gospel. ISAIAH 8–10 was explained by the Savior Himself in the Book of Mormon in the following context: During Christ’s visit to the American Continent He speaks (1) of His other sheep that were not from Jerusalem or the other areas He ministered in, (2) how the Gentiles will be receptive to the fullness of the Gospel while Israel will at first reject it, (3) the vital role the Gentile Nations will play in gathering Israel to the Gospel from Jerusalem and the four quarters of the earth, (4) how the unbelieving Gentiles will further help scatter and harm Israel, (5) how Israel will be humbled by the Gentiles, (6) how many, among the Gentile Nations, will become prideful and reject the fullness of the Gospel, and (7) how the Lord will take the fullness of the Gospel from the prideful Gentiles—but not from the Gentiles who repent, “... then will I remember my covenant which I have made unto my people, O house of Israel, and I will bring my gospel unto them. And I will show unto thee, O house of Israel, that the Gentiles shall not have power over you; but I will remember my covenant unto you, O house of Israel, and ye shall come unto the knowledge of the fulness of my gospel. But if the Gentiles will repent and return unto me, saith the Father, behold they shall be numbered among my people, O house of Israel ... Verily, verily, I say unto you, thus hath the Father commanded me—that I should give unto this people this land for their inheritance. And then the words of the prophet Isaiah shall be fulfilled, which say: Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing, for they shall see eye to eye when the Lord shall bring again Zion. Break forth into joy, sing together, ye waste places of Jerusalem; for the Lord hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem. The Lord hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of God” (3 Nephi 16:11–13, 16–20). Of verses 7–10, Westermann writes: “The words radiate exultation, an exultation which can only be very imperfectly conveyed in translation and commentary, for the force of the original is lost. They are to be thought of as sung.”

7 ¶ And then shall they say, How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings unto them, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings unto them of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!

The Targum (ܬ) adds, “of the land of Israel” after mountains, and also, after salvation, has “Saying to the congregation of Zion, The kingdom of thy God is revealed.” The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “Like beauty on the mountains—like the feet of one proclaiming peace, like one proclaiming glad tidings. Because I will cause thy salvation to be proclaimed, Saying, Sion, thy God will reign.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϸ) has, “How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, and that preacheth peace: of him that sheweth forth good, that preacheth salvation, that saith to Sion: Thy God shall reign!” Westermann observes: “North comments laconically, ‘but feet are hardly beautiful.’ But this fails to see that ‘the beautiful’ means something different in Hebrew thought than it does for us. The beautiful is something that comes about ... The messenger’s feet are not objectively beautiful. Their beauty consists in their intimation of the beauty of the coming of the tidings; and this is beautiful because it awakens jubilation.” ¶ Ibn Ezra says: “Thy God reigneth] This is the explanation of הִנְנִי ‘behold, it is I.’” Please note the final word in ISAIAH 52:6 is הִנְנִי, that is, behold, [it is] I. Or, it is I, JEHOVAH. So it is the feet of the LORD God who are the beautiful feet. There is much confusion among the Gentile authors as to whose beautiful feet these are. Jenour gladly understands it of Messiah: “These are the words of the ministers of religion; who, in the character of watchmen placed upon the walls of Jerusalem, behold a messenger of good tidings swiftly approaching over the tops of the distant hills, and immediately communicate the glad intelligence to those within the city, that is, the church, by breaking forth into a song of gratulation¹² and praise. But who is this messenger? He is no other than the Messiah himself ...” Gill, a Gentile, beautifully writes: “... of John the Baptist, the forerunner of our Lord; best of Christ himself, the messenger of the covenant, who was anointed to preach glad tidings to the meek, and by whom grace, peace, life, and salvation came; and also of the apostles of Christ, for to Gospel times are these words applied ... It may be applied to all other ministers of the Gospel in later ages, who are bringers of the same good tidings to the children of men, to whom their very feet are beautiful, and even at a distance, upon the high mountains ... [and then speaking of Moroni—GB] The words may with the greatest propriety, and in agreement with the context, be understood of that angel, or set of Gospel ministers in the latter day, represented as flying in the midst of the heavens, having the everlasting Gospel to preach to all nations, which will precede the fall of Babylon (Revelation 14:6,8).” ¶ The feet can walk and the feet can run. Luther says: “To run means to serve in the office of preacher, as Paul says (Philippians 2:16): ‘I did not run in vain.’ Thus the foot is the instrument of this running. For when the Gospel runs, it proclaims all good things ...” ¶ Cowles well says: “Bearing tidings so joyful, who would not say of these gospel heralds [in the sense of those who bring good news, as in 2 Samuel 18:19–32] that their very feet were beautiful?” Keith has: “It is also applied, by adaptation, by Paul, to ministers of the gospel (Romans 10:15). A very similar passage, and referring also to the reign of Christ over Israel at last, is that in ISAIAH 40:9 (margin||). The appearance of the messenger on the mountains around Jerusalem is followed by the rejoicing of the watchmen on the walls of the city at the good tidings.” ¶ I feel I have much to say about the How beautiful¹³ upon the mountains [מִהַר-נָאוֹו עַל-הָהָרִים] principle. Whose feet [רַגְלָי] are the beautiful feet? They are the feet of the Savior, of Messiah, our Lord and our Redeemer. They announce peace [שָׁלוֹם], good [טוֹב] and *salvation*¹⁴ [יְשׁוּעָה]. The message, further, may be translated not only as thy God reigneth, but also, Dein Gott ist König! (GLB), that is, Thy God is King! (see GNB, GW, LEB, Rotherham). Baltzer has: “מֶלֶךְ אֱלֹהֶיךָ.”¹⁵ This can be rendered: ‘your God has proved himself king’ or ‘as king reigns your God.’ There is no doubt that in the context this sentence is connected with the formula יְהוָה מֶלֶךְ.¹⁶ Indeed, Jehovah never ceased to be Israel’s King, but we forsook Him for an earthly king. The good news is that He again is seen to be our King, our Redeemer, our All. In Ezekiel 37:22b we read this promise in connection to the preaching of the Book of Mormon: “...and one king shall be king to them all.” That the Savior is willing to share this glory with all those who help—be they angels or men—bring glad tidings of the restored gospel unto others, it is true, but first and foremost, these words are about the beautiful feet of Jesus Christ, the Holy One of Israel. And what are the mountains? It is the temple of our God, and also symbolical of the expiatory sacrifice of our Lord. And once again, the Lord is willing to share this with all who will help by doing family history and temple work, “And saviours shall come up on mount Zion ...” (Obadiah 1:21). When we also consider ISAIAH 2:2–3, it becomes even clearer that the mountains represent the temple. What we have then, is a massive effort of missionary and ordinance work directed to both the living and the dead. Why are the feet mentioned? Consider John 13:1–10a. How beautiful are the feet which have been cleansed by the atoning sacrifice of the Savior and now go forth to preach the Gospel! Paul speaks of the preaching of the Gospel: “For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!” (Romans 10:13–15). The importance of missionary work is plainly seen in the scriptures and particularly upon

¹³ Nauvoo, נָאוֹו.

¹⁴ Salvation, יְשׁוּעָה, also Yeshua, that is, Jesus the Christ.

¹⁵ מֶלֶךְ, reigneth, but with different Masoretic points, מֶלֶךְ, King.

¹⁶ Jehovah is King.

¹² Happiness, satisfaction, joy (see Wiktionary).

reading the whole of Mosiah 15.¹⁷ ¶ Elder William W. Phelps spoke of this verse in relation to the gospel being ¹⁷ What is the setting of Mosiah 15, where these verses are so clearly explained? In verses 1–7 we see that Yahweh would himself come upon the earth and suffer for our sins, and this makes the subject of the chapter clear, it is about the atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ: “AND now Abinadi said unto them: I would that ye should understand that God himself shall come down among the children of men, and shall redeem his people. And because he dwelleth in flesh he shall be called the Son of God, and having subjected the flesh to the will of the Father, being the Father and the Son—The Father, because he was conceived by the power of God; and the Son, because of the flesh; thus becoming the Father and Son—And they are one God, yea, the very Eternal Father of heaven and of earth. And thus the flesh becoming subject to the Spirit, or the Son to the Father, being one God, suffereth temptation, and yieldeth not to the temptation, but suffereth himself to be mocked, and scourged, and cast out, and disowned by his people. And after all this, after working many mighty miracles among the children of men, he shall be led, yea, even as Isaiah said, as a sheep before the shearer is dumb, so he opened not his mouth. Yea, even so he shall be led, crucified, and slain, the flesh becoming subject even unto death, the will of the Son being swallowed up in the will of the Father” (Mosiah 15:1–7). Next we read about the glorious resurrection of Messiah, for the grave would not be able to hold Him in captivity. Abinadi continues: “And thus God breaketh the bands of death, having gained the victory over death; giving the Son power to make intercession for the children of men—Having ascended into heaven, having the bowels of mercy; being filled with compassion towards the children of men; standing betwixt them and justice; having broken the bands of death, taken upon himself their iniquity and their transgressions, having redeemed them, and satisfied the demands of justice. And now I say unto you, who shall declare his generation? Behold, I say unto you, that when his soul has been made an offering for sin he shall see his seed. And now what say ye? And who shall be his seed?” (Mosiah 15:8–10).

And who ¹⁸ shall be His seed? This is indeed a wonderful question, a glorious question. Abinadi continues and gives us the answer: “Behold I say unto you, that whosoever has heard the words of the prophets, yea, all the holy prophets who have prophesied concerning the coming of the Lord—I say unto you, that all those who have hearkened unto their words, and believed that the Lord would redeem his people, and have looked forward to that day for a remission of their sins, I say unto you, that these are his seed, or they are the heirs of the kingdom of God. For these are they whose sins he has borne; these are they for whom he has died, to redeem them from their transgressions. And now, are they not his seed? Yea, and are not the prophets, every one that has opened his mouth to prophesy, that has not fallen into transgression, I mean all the holy prophets ever since the world began? I say unto you that they are his seed” (Mosiah 15:11–13). The answer, then, is that all those who throughout the ages are willing to hear and walk in the steps of the Savior are redeemed of Him. And are we to be content that perhaps we might be counted among such? God forbid. We must be willing to share this knowledge with everyone we meet and work in the temple for our departed ancestors. We must testify of the divinity of Christ and of the restored Gospel. We must help to bring the good tidings. Abinadi continues and explains that the feet of all those who help in this process will become beautiful: “And these are they who have published peace, who have brought good tidings of good, who have published salvation; and said unto Zion: Thy God reigneth! And O how beautiful upon the mountains were their feet! And again, how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of those that are still publishing peace! And again, how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of those who shall hereafter publish peace, yea, from this time henceforth and forever!” (Mosiah 15:14–17). Yes, the Beautiful Feet are those of Yahweh, Redeemer of Israel, Holy One of Israel, He who trampled the grapes alone: “And behold, I say unto you, this is not all.

taken to the Lamanites and lifting their condition: “No man that possesses a spark of love for his fellow-beings—a mite of righteousness, or a grain of faith as large as a mustard seed, but will rejoice to see Israel’s latter day at hand; yea, who can refrain from joy, when, phoenix-like, he beholds the [Lamanites] begin to raise out of their fourteen hundred years of darkness and error, to prepare for glory—for robes of righteousness—for the coming of the Savior, when they can shine on this choice land, in the kingdom of God, like the stars of heaven, and bud and blossom as the rose; yea, become the joy of the whole earth? ... No wonder the pure in heart will return to Zion, singing songs of everlasting joy—no wonder there is joy in

For O how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that is the founder of peace, yea, even the Lord, who has redeemed his people; yea, him who has granted salvation unto his people; For were it not for the redemption which he hath made for his people, which was prepared from the foundation of the world, I say unto you, were it not for this, all mankind must have perished. But behold, the bands of death shall be broken, and the Son reigneth, and hath power over the dead; therefore, he bringeth to pass the resurrection of the dead” (Mosiah 15:18–20). The happiness that awaits those who have walked in the way of truth, is beyond description, for these shall come forth in the first resurrection: “And there cometh a resurrection, even a first resurrection; yea, even a resurrection of those that have been, and who are, and who shall be, even until the resurrection of Christ—for so shall he be called. And now, the resurrection of all the prophets, and all those that have believed in their words, or all those that have kept the commandments of God, shall come forth in the first resurrection; therefore, they are the first resurrection. They are raised to dwell with God who has redeemed them; thus they have eternal life through Christ, who has broken the bands of death. And these are those who have part in the first resurrection; and these are they that have died before Christ came, in their ignorance, not having salvation declared unto them. And thus the Lord bringeth about the restoration of these; and they have a part in the first resurrection, or have eternal life, being redeemed by the Lord. And little children also have eternal life” (Mosiah 15:21–25). And in contrast, what of those who will not listen? Should we not tremble if we do not share with them that which we know to be true? “But behold, and fear, and tremble before God, for ye ought to tremble; for the Lord redeemeth none such that rebel against him and die in their sins; yea, even all those that have perished in their sins ever since the world began, that have wilfully rebelled against God, that have known the commandments of God, and would not keep them; these are they that have no part in the first resurrection. Therefore ought ye not to tremble? For salvation cometh to none such; for the Lord hath redeemed none such; yea, neither can the Lord redeem such; for he cannot deny himself; for he cannot deny justice when it has its claim” (Mosiah 15:26–27). The chapter ends up with the wonderful news that the Gospel would be preached to all people: “And now I say unto you that the time shall come that the salvation of the Lord shall be declared to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people. Yea, Lord, thy watchmen shall lift up their voice; with the voice together shall they sing; for they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion. Break forth into joy, sing together, ye waste places of Jerusalem; for the Lord hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem. The Lord hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God” (Mosiah 15:28–31). So, then, what is the how beautiful upon the mountains principle? It is that the Saviour of mankind is willing to share with us His glory, and wishes for us to be one with Him through the at-one-ment or atonement, as he is one with the Father.

heaven over repenting sinners, and no wonder the prophet exclaimed: —‘How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!’—ISAIAH 52:7.”¹⁸ Elder Carlos E. Asay also spoke much on the topic. I share this powerful testimony: “Everyone who proclaims the gospel of Christ and who seeks to become a savior of men shall be a messenger with beautiful feet, whether standing upon the mountains or upon the plains. ‘What position,’ asks Wilford Woodruff, ‘can any man occupy on the face of the earth, that is more noble, God-like, high and glorious than to be a messenger of salvation unto the human family?’ (In Journal of Discourses 13:319) ... I close with my personal testimony of the divinity of missionary service, its sanctifying nature, and this stirring declaration: ‘Now, what do we hear in the gospel which we have received? A voice of gladness! A voice of mercy from heaven; and a voice of truth out of the earth; glad tidings for the dead; a voice of gladness for the living and the dead; glad tidings of great joy. How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of those that bring glad tidings of good things, and that say unto Zion: Behold, thy God reigneth! As the dews of Carmel, so shall the knowledge of God descend upon them!’ (D&C 128:19).”¹⁹

8 Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing: for they shall see eye to eye, when the LORD shall bring again Zion.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The voice of thy rulers! They are lifting up their voice, together they offer praise; because with their eyes they see the mighty works which the Lord shall do, when He shall return His Shekinah to Zion.” The LXX (Ⲙ) reads, “Because the voice of thy watchmen is lifted up; with the voice therefore let all at the same time express joy. Because eyes will look to eyes when the Lord compassionateth Zion.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “The voice of thy watchmen: they have lifted up their voice, they shall praise together: for they shall see eye to eye when the Lord shall convert Zion.” ¶ Keith has: “There are repeated other allusions to those who are called the watchmen of Israel. One of the clearest of them is the following: ‘I have set watchmen upon thy walls, Jerusalem, which shall never hold their peace day nor night: ye that make mention of the Lord keep not silence’ [ISAIAH 62:6]. Here the watchmen are explained to be those who make mention of the Lord, those who seek Israel’s recovery—all who come under the character of praying for the peace of Jerusalem. These, so soon as her restoration is effected, are described as exchanging their supplications for thanksgivings.” Skinner, although he does not subscribe to the idea himself, says that “the prophets are often called ‘watchmen’ (ISAIAH 56:10; Habakkuk 2:1; Jeremiah 6:17; Ezekiel 33:2 ff.).” Gill explains: “... the evangelists and apostles of Christ; best of all Gospel ministers in the latter day, so called in allusion to watch men on the walls of cities looking out, and giving notice of approaching danger.” Barnes notes: “The Hebrew here is more abrupt and emphatic than our common translation would make it. It is literally, ‘The voice of thy watchmen! They lift up the voice together; they sing’—as if the prophet suddenly heard a shout.”

¶ יְהוָה צִיּוֹן, when the Lord shall bring again Zion, or shall return her to Himself, where bring again is given as בְּשׁוּב. Alexander writes: “... the reconciliation between God and his people is represented as a return after a long absence.” Cowles, continuing with the figure of the runner mentioned in the previous verse, has: “Zion’s watchmen are the first to see on the distant mountains the feet of those gospel heralds. This conception is thoroughly oriental (see the case of those heralds who brought tidings to David: ‘The watchman went up to the roof over the gate unto the wall and looked, etc.’²⁰) ... The far-seeing vision of the prophet gave him first the coming heralds seen crossing the distant mountain tops, rushing on with their burden of glad tidings. Next, lo! a shout of the watchmen! All as one they lift up their voice in joyous outcries; at one and the same moment, they all catch the sight of the coming heralds. They seem intuitively to seize the joyous import of their tidings and pour forth their soul and voice in triumphant song! Is not the scene inspiring?” Yes, Cowles, I can see what you are painting. The news of the birth of the Christ-child; of His glorious resurrection; of a young man who has gone to the Sacred Grove and seen two glorious personages; an angel flying with the everlasting Gospel; the publication of the Book of Mormon, carried to every corner of the earth by missionaries; and the final and triumphant Second Coming of our Redeemer! These things fill my soul with joy untold. ¶ The expression, ¹⁸ Cowdery, Oliver, et al., eds. Messenger and Advocate: The Latter Day Saints’ Messenger and Advocate. 3 vols. Kirtland, Ohio: F. G. Williams & Co., et al., October 1834 to August 1837. Electronic text prepared by the Department of Church History and Doctrine, Brigham Young University, 1991.

¹⁹ Asay, Carlos E. The Seven M’s of Missionary Service. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1996.

²⁰ 2Samuel 18:24. Clarke explains that “There appear to have been two sorts of messengers among the Jews: one sort always employed to bring evil tidings; the other to bring good ... [so that] at a distance they could tell, from seeing the messenger, what sort of tidings he was bringing (2 Samuel 18:19–27).”

see eye to eye (literally, eye in eye), עֵין בְּעֵין, seems to refer to a unity of understanding and clarity about Gospel truths. For instance, President Brigham Young powerfully taught about the required unity in Church councils: “Every man in the Kingdom of God would give the same counsel upon each subject, if he would wait until he had the mind of Christ upon it. Then all would have one word and mind, and all men would see eye to eye.”²¹ On another occasion President Young declared: “You ask almost any person in the world a question, and he thinks it a disgrace to be unable to answer it. He feels chagrined, his mind flags, when he finds that he is not quite as knowing as his neighbors think him to be; and, to avoid this, he will often venture an answer without knowing the facts in the case, or the effects of his answer. If you would always pause and say, I have no counsel for you, I have no answer for you on this subject, because I have no manifestation of the Spirit, and be willing to let everybody in the world know that you are ignorant when you are, you would become wise a great deal quicker than to give counsel on your own judgment, without the Spirit of revelation. If the Elders of Israel would observe this rule, never to give counsel unless they give it by the testimony of the truth, by the Spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ, and, if they cannot give counsel in that manner, not to give any, there would be no conflicting counsel in the kingdom. All would be one; counsel would be one: we would soon come to understanding and be of one heart and mind, and our blessings would be increased upon us faster than in taking any other course.”²² ¶ Elder Charles W. Penrose spoke about divisions within Christendom and said: “There is to be a time, according to the Scriptures, when the people who believe in God, will all be brought into such a condition that they will ‘see eye to eye.’ There is to be a time when all people living upon the earth ‘shall know God, from the least even to the greatest,’ and there will be no need to contend about doctrine or principle, but all will understand alike, for ‘the earth shall be full of the knowledge of God, as the waters fill the great deep.’”²³

²¹ Widtsoe, John A. & Young, Brigham. Discourses of Brigham Young. Also, one of my favorite books on the topic of unity within Church councils is Counseling with Counsels, by M. Russell Ballard. Elder Ballard speaks about individuals coming to a council with different opinions, but having a complete unity of thought and heart before coming to a final decision. I believe that we need to speak with inspiration as taught by President Young, and also to speak softly, gently, tentatively and briefly, permitting others to express their points of view. And when others have spoken, to make every attempt to understand the honorable unmet needs they are expressing.

²² Young, President Brigham, “Joseph Smith’s Family, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 5, No. 21, 2 August 1857, p. 100.

²³ Penrose, Elder Charles W. Penrose, “Divisions of Modern Christendom, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 22, No. 20, 17 July 1881, p. 155.

¶ It is instructive to see how the term watchmen has been used by the Brethren. President George Q. Cannon and Elder Wilford Woodruff have used the word as a synonym for Priesthood leaders or servants of God who have been called to guide the people.²⁴ ²⁵ Elder Charles W. Penrose explains that Church members will be of one heart with their leaders for: “God will speak by his Spirit direct to their hearts; and when he reveals anything through his appointed servants, every word will find an echo in the hearts of those who have received this Spirit, and the people will see eye to eye, for they will become united as one, as a band of brethren and sisters, to roll forth the purposes of God, to prepare the way for the feet of the Lord Jesus.”²⁶ ¶ The Jewish view is particularly interesting to the LDS. Redak (in Rosenberg) explains that revelation—which ceased with “Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi”—would once again be established with strength before the advent of the Messiah. Indeed this was true before the coming of Christ in the meridian of times, and now again as the Church has been restored before the Second Coming. There is a direct relationship between the restoration of prophecy and revelation on the one hand and seeing eye to eye on the other. Of the Gentile authors, Keith notes: “The expression ‘they shall see eye to eye,’ is equivalent to a more common Scriptural phrase, ‘they shall see face to face,’ and denotes, to see distinctly. Under the government of the Messiah, when he shall restore Zion—that knowledge being recovered which man has lost, and which revelation has in part restored—the righteous shall know, not as now in part, which even the learned and gifted Paul acknowledged was his case, but even as they are known; then they shall see no longer through a glass” (emphasis added). ¶ Seeing eye to eye can also be a Hebrew expression for seeing something (or someone) closely and clearly. Kay has: “Eye to eye no longer seen in prophetic vision, but personally present.” Gill says: “and as their light and discerning will be most clear, like the light of seven days, so it will be alike in them; their sentiments and doctrines will exactly agree; there will be no difference nor dissension among them.” It seems that when people see closely and clearly the truth of the Gospel, as mentioned by Kay and Gill, then in essence it is the same as the expression of seeing eye to eye in terms of unity of thought. Exegetes often use Numbers 14:14b as proof, where עֵין בְּעֵין is translated by most versions as: “face to face,” although the literal translation would once again be eye to eye (LEB, LITV, MKJV, NASB, Rotherham, RV1865, RVG, SRV, SSE, TLV, YLT). The context of the Scripture in Numbers is that the Lord was present in the midst of the people where He could be beheld by all. We have other Scriptures where we have a literal face to face as in Genesis 32:30 (also see Exodus 33:11, Deuteronomy 5:4, Judges 6:22, Ezekiel 20:35), פָּנִים אֶל-פָּנִים. ¶ In summary, we may well say, then, that this seeing eye to eye is part of the restored Gospel of Jesus Christ—or Zion. As I speak to my friends and acquaintances from other faiths I often remind them that in their religious beliefs there is little harmony. The more honest of them immediately agree with me. ¶ When the Lord shall bring again Zion. This means when the Lord shall restore Zion, bring it back to earth, as part of the restoration of all things in the last days. Gill, born before the re-establishment of the Lord's Church, clearly looked to the restoration of the Gospel when he said: "... return his church and people to their former state, from whence they were declined; restore them as at the beginning; revive his work among them; cause his Gospel and ordinances to be professed and observed in their purity; call in his ancient people the Jews, and bring in the fulness of the Gentiles; pour out his spirit in a plentiful manner on them, and grant his gracious presence to them ..."

²⁴ Cannon, President George Q. “Traveling through the Settlements, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 24, No. 44, 2 September 1883, pp. 368–369.

²⁵ Woodruff, Elder Wilford. “Responsibilities of the Priesthood, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 21, No. 31, 4 July 1880, p. 283.

²⁶ Penrose, Elder Charles W. “Definite Ideas Concerning God, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 20, No. 27, 25 May 1879, p. 219.

9 Break forth into joy, sing together, ye waste places of Jerusalem: for the LORD hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem.

Break forth into joy, sing together, ye waste places of Jerusalem: The LXX (6) reads, "Let the ruins of Jerusalem break out together with bursts of joy." The Douay-Rheims (1) has, "Rejoice, and give praise together, O ye deserts of Jerusalem." ISAIAH 52:9–10 seem to be a psalm of thanksgiving. There are some applications to the meridian of times as well as the last days, when Jerusalem is surrounded on every side and the Lord comes in to save the day. Speaking of the mortal Messiah, Whitehouse has: "Break forth, utter a ringing cry together—ruins of Jerusalem]. Even the very ruins are to join the exultant acclaim. Perhaps the reply of Jesus, on the occasion of His triumphal entry into Jerusalem, in response to the protests of the Pharisees: 'If these shall be silent, the stones will cry out' (Luke 19:40) was based on a reminiscence of this passage where the triumphal entry of Yahweh into His own ruined and desolated city is the theme." Cowles has: "Let the Simeons and the Annas who, to their hoary age have wept and fasted and prayed for this salvation, now lift up their heads with joy and their tremulous voices in exultant song!" ¶ Elder George Q. Morris suggested that the fulfillment of ISAIAH 52:9–10 would take place at "the time when the Lord Jesus Christ is to stand on the Mount of Olives."²⁷ ¶ For the LORD hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem. The LXX (6) reads, "Because the Lord hath compassionated her and delivered Jerusalem." ¶ Rawlinson explains: "Hath comforted... hath redeemed]. Perfects of prophetic certitude" (see ISAIAH 42:16). Elder Orson Pratt gloriously said: "So we see there is a day of power coming, and a day of wonders and a day of mighty deeds, when the power of the Lord, in great judgment, will be upon the nations of the wicked; and also when his glory shall be upon his covenant people who shall be restored to their own lands. The message with which we are now entrusted is a part of the great and last warning message to the nations of the earth, first to the Gentiles, and last to the house of Israel. And when we get through warning the Gentiles, the proclamation which the Lord has given us, shall be delivered to Israel in the islands of the sea and among the various nations; and they shall gather home to the land of their inheritance. Then Jerusalem shall be redeemed and a temple established upon its former foundation in the holy land."²⁸

10 The LORD hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God.

The LORD hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations. The LXX (6) reads, "Let the Lord therefore make bare his holy arm in the sight of all the nations!" The Douay-Rheims (1) has, "The Lord hath prepared his holy arm in the sight of all the Gentiles." ¶ Cowles writes: "To make bare the arm is to gird the loins, leaving the arm uncovered and unencumbered for the most vigorous activities." Skinner writes: "...throwing back the sleeveless upper garment from the right shoulder, in readiness for action." Cheyne likewise: "viz., for action (comp. Ezekiel 4:7, Psalm 74:11); alluding to the sleeveless Eastern dress." Whitehouse suggests: "The metaphor is martial. Yahweh shall perform His doughty deed of deliverance in the presence of all the nations of the world (cf. Ezekiel 38:23; 39:21)." Barnes has: "The metaphor is derived from the manner in which the Orientals dressed. The following extract from Jowett's Christian Researches will explain the language: 'The loose sleeve of the Arab shirt, as well as that of the outer garment, ²⁷ Morris, Elder George Q. "The Return of the Jews." Conference Report, April 1960, pp. 100–102.

²⁸ Pratt, Elder Orson. "Discourse by Elder O. Pratt." Journal of Discourses, Vol. 20, No. 18, Mar. 9, 1879, p. 148.

leaves the arm so completely free, that in an instant the left hand passing up the right arm makes it bare; and this is done when a person, a soldier, for example, about to strike with the sword, intends to give the arm full play.” Keith further explains: “The phrase, to make bare the arm, is explained in the same way as the similar one, to gird up the loins; it refers to the loose sleeve of the East, which required to be tucked up before engaging in work.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “The nations... the ends of the earth] It may well add to the general joy that the work wrought for Israel is not ‘a thing done in a corner,’ but one on which the eyes of the ‘nations’ have been turned and to which the attention of ‘the ends of the earth’ has been called.” Barnes suggests: “The meaning here is, that the deliverance of his people referred to would be so remarkable as to be conspicuous to all the world. The most distant nations would see it, and would be constrained to recognize his hand.” This clause is intimately connected with the next and refers to the restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ upon the earth after the long period of apostasy. It reminds us of ISAIAH 2:2. ¶ And all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God. The LXX (6) reads, “And let all the ends of the earth see the salvation come from our God.” Cowles writes about the importance of “earnest work—its great command being, ‘Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature.’ This done, all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of God.” In Luke 3, these thoughts are put in the context of the upheavals that will take place in association to the last days: “Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways shall be made smooth; And all flesh shall see the salvation of God” (Luke 3:5–6). The Gospel preached to every corner of the earth. So also “Be it known therefore unto you, that the salvation of God is sent unto the Gentiles, and that they will hear it” (Acts 28:28). ¶ In the latter days the same expression is used in conjunction to the preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ: “And also it is an imperative duty that we owe to all the rising generation, and to all the pure in heart—For there are many yet on the earth among all sects, parties, and denominations, who are blinded by the subtle craftiness of men, whereby they lie in wait to deceive, and who are only kept from the truth because they know not where to find it—Therefore, that we should waste and wear out our lives in bringing to light all the hidden things of darkness, wherein we know them; and they are truly manifest from heaven— These should then be attended to with great earnestness ... Therefore, dearly beloved brethren, let us cheerfully do all things that lie in our power; and then may we stand still, with the utmost assurance, to see the salvation of God, and for his arm to be revealed” (D&C 123:11–14, 17). ¶ The Lord’s arm is revealed in at least two ways: through the power of the Holy Ghost revealing the truth to this earth’s inhabitants when they come in contact with the Book of Mormon and the testimony of the missionaries; and the arm of the Lord will also be revealed in the Second Coming, where all will see His power and might.

11 Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence, touch no unclean [thing]; go ye out of the midst of her; be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the LORD.

Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence, touch no unclean [thing]. The Targum (7) has, “Separate yourselves, separate yourselves, go ye out from thence, do not come near the unclean.” The LXX (6) reads, “Depart, depart; come out thence, and touch no polluted thing.” ¶ Speaking of former times, Delitzsch explains: “... those who bear the vessels of Jehovah, i.e., the vessels of the temple, are not only not to defile themselves, but are to purify themselves. This is an indirect prophecy, and was fulfilled in the fact that Cyrus directed the golden and silver vessels, which Nebuchadnezzar had brought to Babylon, to be restored to the returning exiles as their rightful property (Ezra 1:7–11).” ¶ These commanding words were not only applicable to the former days but are just as much in force today. Regarding the double depart ye, סורו סורו, it is a forceful command to mystic Babylon behind and come unto Zion with full purpose of heart. So also Ibn Ezra: “I think that these words are addressed to those that are still in exile among the nations. The repetition of ‘Depart ye’ is to indicate that it is to be done immediately.” Govett points out the connection of this verse with the testimony of Paul: “... for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you. And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty” (2 Corinthians 6:16b–18, emphasis added). Wade writes: “The passage is imitated in Revelation 18:2, 4: “And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird ... And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.” ¶ Birks thinks of this verse as associated with the events before the first coming of Christ: “The restoration of the temple-service is the main feature in the sacred narratives of the Return from Captivity.” As LDS we love the word restoration, and also anything that pertains to the proper order of the priesthood. We know that in the last days there will yet again be a temple built in Jerusalem, preparatory to the Second Coming. Keith has: “That language employed in describing the separation of the people of God from the mystic Babylon previous to its destruction, connects it with the nations gathered against Jerusalem. Of that Babylon it is also said, that it shall ‘gather the kings of the earth and of the whole world to the battle of the great day of God Almighty’ (Revelation 16:14). The manner of the separation of Israel is also foretold. Unlike her removal from Egypt, when she fled from her pursuers, she will not go with haste.” Interestingly, Gill believed the unclean thing to be the false doctrine of the apostate Christian church in the latter-day, all of which had retained many impurities to this day. Also of interest, is that Gill refers to Revelation 14:4–5, regarding those who would not be defiled—it is interesting as the very next verse speaks of Angel Moroni appearing with the everlasting Gospel (Revelation 4:6). Our beloved Prophet Joseph said: “Judah must return, Jerusalem must be rebuilt, and the temple, and water come out from under the temple, and the waters of the Dead Sea be healed ... and all this must be done before the Son of Man will make His appearance.”²⁹ ¶ Go ye out of the midst of her; be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the LORD. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Come forth from the midst of her: those that carry the vessels of the house of the sanctuary of the Lord have been chosen.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Come out from the midst of her; be clean, ye who carry the vessels of the Lord.” Instead of be ye clean, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has purge (Lamsa) / purify (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the last clause, “you that carry the vessels of the Lord.” ¶ In ISAIAH 33:15 we said: “The Talmud tradition (Seder Nezikin, Baba Bathra 57b, also see Makkoth 24a) has a beautiful and poetic injunction against looking at women to lust after them (see notes there). ¶ Gill explains that cleanliness can “... be understood of the ministers of the Gospel, and of the treasure of the Gospel which they have in their earthen vessels; or the name of the Lord, which they are chosen vessels to bear and carry in the world; who ought to be pure from false doctrine, superstitious worship, and an evil conversation ...” (emphasis added). And related to ISAIAH 18:7³⁰, “In Zohar³¹ [in Exod. fol. 87. 4], these vessels are interpreted of the righteous, brought as a gift to the King Messiah.” ¶ President David O. McKay said, “It is a beautiful, impressive things to have our boys administer [the sacrament]. They are the servants; they are waiting upon us and waiting upon the Lord; and have come there because they are worthy to officiate if the bishop has spoken to them properly. ‘... be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the Lord’ (ISAIAH 52:11).”³² President John Taylor admonished: “Therefore let us do right. Do right by everybody. Bear with the infirmities of men and the follies of men. Treat all men kindly, no matter who they may be—whether they are insiders or outsiders, or apostates, or anybody else—treat everybody kindly. But do not be partakers of the practices of the wicked. Do not mix up with the corrupt and evil. If they are hungry, feed them; if they are naked clothe them; if they are sick, administer to them; but do not associate with them in their abominations and their corruptions. Come out from the world and be ye separate, ye that bear the vessels of the Lord, and let ‘Holiness to the Lord’ be written in every heart; and let us all feel that we are for Zion and for God and His Kingdom, and for those principles that will elevate us in time and throughout the eternities that are to come.”³³ ¶ נִשְׂאֵי כֵלֵי יְהוָה, that bear the vessels of the LORD. In the 2 April 2016 Priesthood session of General Conference, President Russell M. Nelson taught about bearing the Priesthood—and his words also made me think of bearing the vessels of the LORD. Speaking of “worthily [bearing] the Priesthood after the holiest order of God. To bear means to support the weight of that which is held. It is a sacred trust to bear the Priesthood, which is the mighty power and authority of God.”³⁴

12 For ye shall not go out with haste, nor go by flight: for the LORD will go before you; and the God of Israel [will be] your rereward. ✓

✓ or, gather you up

For ye shall not go out with haste, nor go by flight: The Targum (Ⲯ) adds, “from among the nations,” after haste and for the second clause, “nor be carried in flight to your land.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For you shall not come out in haste, nor by flight march along.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “For you shall not go out in a tumult, neither shall you make haste by flight.” ¶ Ibn

²⁹ Smith, Joseph. History of the Church 5:337.

³⁰ “In that time shall the present be brought unto the LORD of hosts of a people scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled, to the place of the name of the LORD of hosts, the mount Zion” (ISAIAH 18:7).

³¹ The Zohar [זוהר] is a pseudepigraphical mystical work and a commentary of the Torah. See The Jewish Encyclopedia 12:689.

³² President David O. McKay, April 1946 General Conference.

³³ Taylor, President John. “The Gathering, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 26, No. 8, 30 November 1884, p. 76.

³⁴ Nelson, President Russel M. “The Price of Priesthood Power.” April General Conference, Priesthood Session.

Ezra has: “Not with haste, as was the case at the departure from Egypt. For the Lord, that is, the Glory of the Lord, is going before you.” Once again, we recall Keith’s note that: “Unlike her removal from Egypt, when she fled from her pursuers, she will not go with haste.” Whitehouse suggests: “The word for haste [in or with haste, בְּחֵפָז] seems here to be expressly chosen in the original in reference to and contrast with Deuteronomy 16:3, which refers to the haste [in haste, בְּחֵפָז] in which the passover was eaten on the night of the exodus which the annual celebration of the festival ever recalls (cf. Exodus 12:39).” A number of the Jewish exegetes, such as Rabbi Lipmann of Muhlhausen, speak of the gathering of Israel in this verse (see Driver & Neubauer). ¶ For the LORD will go before you; and the God of Israel [will be] your reward. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For your guide is the Lord, and He that shall gather your captivity is the God of Israel.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For the Lord will march before you in front; and the God of Israel will bring up your rear.” Instead of rearguard, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) and the Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) have, gather you together. ¶ Keith has: “Your reward, from רָכַב, to gather, assemble. Hence to bring up the rear, that is, to collect the last stragglers of an army. Its use here implies very significantly how universal the gathering of the dispersed of Judah at last will be.” Faussett likewise has: “reward”—literally, ‘gather up,’ that is, to bring up the rear of your host.” Why is the reward or rearward so important? Gill explains: “... he also will bring up the rear, so that they shall be in no fear of the enemy attacking them behind, and where generally the weaker and more feeble part are; but the Lord will be gathering them up, or closing them, as the word [ⲙⲁⲥⲥⲁⲃ] signifies.” Calvin, following the margin ||, says: “And the God of Israel will assemble you” The word ‘assemble’ will confirm the interpretation now given; for there will be no scattering such as usually takes place when men are under the influence of terror, nor will they wander about here and there, but will march, as under banners, in a regular and ordinary manner.” Both ideas are pretty much the same, with the people being protected or gathered by the Lord.

vv. 13–15. Carefully note the ancient Targum of Jonathan (Ⲯ), which makes it clear that these verses are of the Christ. Wordsworth has: “That this is a prophecy of the sufferings and exaltation of the Messiah, is confessed by many of the Hebrew Rabbis, as in Targum of Jonathan here, H. Simeon, and R. Moshe, R. Alschech.” Cowles also notes: “Jewish opinion show that they applied it to the Messiah; e.g., the Targum of Jonathan paraphrases it, ‘My servant, the Messiah.’ This is supposed to bear date before the Christian era.

That this opinion was held by the oldest school of Jewish interpreters is freely admitted by the Jewish doctors of the middle ages who themselves discarded the Messianic interpretation because they discarded the Christian Messiah; e.g., Ibn-Ezra, Jarchi, and Abarbanel.—In the Christian church, the Messianic interpretation was held almost universally until the close of the eighteenth century. It was then abandoned by various German critics who had previously discarded the doctrine of atonement and of divine inspiration. Their denial of its reference to the Messiah may very properly prompt us to a more vigilant examination of the subject and to a more thorough canvassing of its significance and weighing of its proofs; but need shake no man’s faith, for the passage rejoices in the most searching scrutiny and triumphs only the more, by how much the more severe is the ordeal of criticism through which skeptical minds may cause it to pass.” Wordsworth has: “The ancient Jews always connected these three verses with what follows in the fifty-third chapter, and applied them to the same Person—the MESSIAH.” Also Horsley, along with numerous other exegetes, believes this passage ought to have been coupled with ISAIAH 53: “This chapter should end with the 12th verse, and the three following verses should make the beginning of the fifty-third chapter; in which the immediate subject is the humiliation and sufferings of the Messiah, his accomplishment of the general redemption, and his progress through suffering to glory.” ¶ Instead, I would suggest that just as Isaiah has done with other subjects throughout, he is giving us a foretaste of things to come, in this case, of the Messiah’s sufferings on earth, more fully expanded in ISAIAH 53. So also Rawlinson: “It is generally allowed by modern commentators that this passage is more closely connected with what follows it than with what precedes. Some would detach it altogether from ISAIAH 52 and attach it to ISAIAH 53. But this is not necessary. The passage has a completeness in itself [and serves as a prelude or introduction to the same].” Govett well says that there is a contrast, in these last verses, between the mortal Messiah and the glorified Messiah: “Then follows a prediction of Jesus, and a comparison is instituted between his first and second coming. As many were astonished at his marred countenance when he came in humility, so ‘when he shall be exalted, and lifted very high.’” Indeed, there is a sort of chiasmus here. ISAIAH 52:14 is the center of the poem, focusing on the mortal Messiah, and the verses on each side (ISAIAH 52:13, 15) speak of the glorified Lord. Keith suggests: “These verses ... describe the glory of Christ, which will be manifested when he shall gather Israel, a glory which shall be in proportion to his former shame.” Cheyne writes: “The importance of this chapter justifies a somewhat fuller commentary than usual. The ideas are well fitted to arrest the attention, especially that of Vicarious Atonement, which some have laboured hard to expel from the prophecy, but which still forces itself on the unbiassed reader.” Faussett writes: “The correspondence with the life and death of Jesus Christ is so minute, that it could not have resulted from conjecture or accident. An impostor could not have shaped the course of events so as to have made his character and life appear to be a fulfilment of it. The writing is, moreover, declaredly prophetic.” Delitzsch writes quoting the Jewish perspective: “‘Christian scholars’ says Abravanel, ‘interpret this prophecy as referring to that man who was crucified in Jerusalem about the end of the second temple, and who, according to their view, was the Son of God, who became man in the womb of the Virgin. But Jonathan ben Uziel explains it as relating to the Messiah who has yet to come; and this is the opinion of the ancients in many of their Midrashim.’ So that even the synagogue could not help acknowledging that the passage of the Messiah through death to glory is predicted here.” As in other occasions, Isaiah gives a hint of what is to come in more detail later. Driver & Neubauer, who write about the Jewish perspective, quote Yepheth Ben ‘Ali, a Karaite,³⁵ who after refuting the idea that these three verses could apply to the prophets in general or to Jeremiah in particular, boldly states: “As to myself, I am inclined, with Benjamin of Nehawend, to regard it as alluding to the Messiah ...”

13 ¶ Behold, my servant shall deal prudently, ✓ he shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high.

✓ or, prosper

Behold, my servant shall deal prudently. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “Behold, my servant the Messiah shall prosper. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Behold my servant will mind.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has understand instead of deal prudently. ¶ Once again, note the reference to the Messiah. The Hebrew יִשְׁכַּל, from the root שָׁכַל, has been variously interpreted. Gesenius uses prudently, as the AV. Cowles prefers wisely. TDOT prefers to have insight. DCH has wise, prudent, successful. HAL, to have success. AKOT, as does Schiller-Szinessy, has to prosper. Cheyne has: “The same verb [יִשְׁכַּל] from the root שָׁכַל, wisely, prudently, to be a success, see Gesenius also] is applied to the ‘righteous Branch’ (i.e., probably, the Messiah) in Jeremiah 23:5³⁶.” Not probably but surely of the Messiah. The Jewish Midrash Tanhuma, explains Henderson (also see Schiller-Szinessy, Urwick), “... taking each of the verses separately, explains the passage thus: ‘This is the King Messiah,—who shall be higher than Abraham, more elevated than Moses, and exalted above the ministering angels.’” Urwick further has: “Rabbi Alschech (in his commentary on this chapter, AD 1601) says: ‘Upon the testimony of tradition, our old Rabbins have unanimously admitted that King Messiah is here the subject of discourse.’” Alexander defends the idea of the Messiah being here meant by my servant, עֶבְדִּי: “The objection, that the title servant is not applied elsewhere to Messiah, would have little force if true, because the title in itself is a general one, and may be applied to any chosen instrument; it is not true, however, as the single case of Zechariah 3:8 will suffice to shew, without appealing to the fact, that the same application of the title, either partial or exclusive, has been found admissible above in ISAIAH 42:1, 49:3, and 50:10.” Zechariah 3:8 reads: “Hear now, O Joshua the high priest, thou, and thy fellows that sit before thee: for they are men wondered at: for, behold, I will bring forth my servant the BRANCH,” אֶת-עֶבְדִּי צִמָּה. Urwick, in defending the Messianic view, explains: “The word עֶבְדִּי occurs twice only in the passage [speaking of ISAIAH 52:13–15 through ISAIAH 53:12]; in the beginning, 52:13: ‘Behold my Servant’ and near the close, 53:11: ‘My righteous Servant’; but the recurrence of the personal pronoun throughout, the emphatic and repeated הוּא, points obviously to Him, as distinct from the אֲנַחְנוּ, we. There is a contrast very marked throughout between the Servant on the one hand, and the people collectively on the other. If our English version is deficient in any way, it is in not giving sufficient emphasis to these pronouns, הוּא, He, Himself, on the one hand; and אֲנַחְנוּ, we on our part, on the other. That emphatic pronoun occurs five times in the passage, which in other places our translators have rendered by the words: He Himself, e.g. Psalm 1:6: ‘God is Judge Himself;’ Psalm 37:5: ‘The Prophet Himself;’ ISAIAH 7:14: ‘Jehovah Himself shall give you a sign.’” ¶ He shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, for the last clause, “And He shall be very strong.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And be exalted and highly glorified.” This is a beautiful expression indeed, : יָרֹם וְנִשָּׂא וְנִבְהָ מְאֹד. Schiller-Szinessy makes a comment of special interest to the LDS: “נִבְהָ” means in itself simply and shall be high, and becomes relatively the superlative, only by the addition of another word ... ‘For one higher than a high one regardeth, and there are higher ones than they.’ Here the other qualifying word is מְאֹד” (emphasis added). In Abraham we read: “And the Lord said unto me: These two facts do exist, that there are two spirits, one being more intelligent than the other; there shall be another more intelligent than they; I am the Lord thy God, I am more intelligent than they all” (Abraham 3:19, emphasis added). Cowles has: “‘Extolled’ is here ... [to mean] elevated, raised to supreme dignity and glory. All these terms concur in this one idea, which is put in its strongest possible form by the accumulation of all the words of the language which express it, heightened by the intensive, very, exceedingly, at the end.” These words are intimately associated with יָרֹם וְנִשָּׂא in ISAIAH 6:1, when Isaiah saw the Lord [אֵת-אֲדֹנָי] “sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up.” It is this lifted up, exalted, portion that has always particularly touched my heart. In that place we explained that most exegetes think it was the throne that was lifted up, but Kay and I believe it was the Lord who was exalted. Furthermore, there is no doubt that here in ISAIAH 52:13, we are speaking of the Messiah as being exalted and glorified. Yes, indeed our Redeemer atoned for our sin and triumphed over the grave, completing His expiatory work so that He could well say: “And now, O Father, glorify [see LXX (6) here in ISAIAH 52:13] thou me with thine own self with the glory [see LXX (6) here in ISAIAH 52:13] which I had with thee before the world was” (John 17:5). All those who are true disciples of our Lord Jesus Christ “shall be lifted up at the last day” (Alma 38:5b, also see Alma 37:37). Jenour has: “St. Paul furnishes the best commentary that can be given upon these words; ‘Wherefore God hath highly exalted him (Jesus), and given him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow’ (Philippians 2:9).” The Jewish view is also that the Messiah will be the most exalted. Driver & Neubauer quote Yalqut, as we saw earlier: “Who art thou, great mountain? (Zechariah 4:7.) This refers to the King Messiah. And why does he call him ‘the great mountain?’ because he is greater than the patriarchs, as it is said, ‘My servant shall be high, and lifted up, and lofty exceedingly’—he will be higher than Abraham, who says, ‘I raise high my hands unto the Lord’ (Genesis 14:22); lifted up above Moses, to whom it is said, ‘Lift it up into thy bosom’ (Numbers 11:12); loftier than the ministering angels, of whom it is written, ‘Their wheels were lofty and terrible’ (Ezekiel 1:18). And out of whom does he come forth? Out of David (Yalqut 2:571).”

³⁵ The Karaites are a Jewish group who reject rabbinical traditions and lean heavily on the Hebrew Scriptures, that is, the Old Testament. For more information see The Jewish Encyclopedia (1901–1906), 7:438, New York; London: Funk & Wagnalls.

³⁶ “Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper [יִשְׁכַּל, root שָׁכַל], and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth” (Jeremiah 23:5). ASV has: “Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and he shall reign as king and deal wisely, and shall execute justice and righteousness in the land.”

14 As many were astonished at thee; his visage was so marred more than any man, and his form more than the sons of men:

As many were astonished at thee; his visage was so marred more than any man. The Targum (T) has, “As the house of Israel anxiously hoped for Him many days.” The LXX (6) reads, “In the same manner as many will be astonished at thee; (so devoid of glory for men will be thine appearance.” Instead of at thee (second person), the Peshitta (S) has at him (third person). The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “As many have been astonished at thee, so shall his visage be inglorious among men.” ¶ Isaiah is about to speak of the mortal Messiah. Birks has: “The appearance and character of Messiah would be a marvel and cause of astonishment to the Jewish people. He would wholly disappoint the expectation of carnal minds, who looked for all outward signs of royalty and worldly greatness. The rest of the verse explains the source of their astonishment, the appearance of a sorrowful and suffering Messiah.” Cowles, leaning on Alexander says: “The many individuals were amazed at his marred visage and saw only things toward which they felt contempt and aversion.” Skinner writes: “The word ‘astonied’ expresses the blank amazement, mingled with horror, excited in the minds of beholders by the spectacle of the Servant’s unparalleled sufferings (cf. 1 Kings 9:8; Jeremiah 2:12; 18:16).” Keith has: “In regard to his humiliation it is said, that the effects of his sufferings were so traceable in his appearance as to excite the astonishment of the spectator. Judging from the effects of suffering in others, in the shrunken features and shattered frame of the sufferer, no doubt, although it is not expressed in his history, that of Christ told visibly upon the frame of him who was flesh of our flesh. And as his sufferings were greater than others can endure, so, doubtless, his visage and form were more marred than those of others ... Visage, from מִרְאָה, signifying a looking, then the object seen, then appearance, as in Exodus 24:17. This is the meaning here, not the face only, but the general appearance.” Jenour explains: “The humiliation and after glory of our adorable Redeemer are clearly predicted here, and in the following chapter. When his countenance was disfigured with tears and blood; and his body with stripes and wounds, and he hung in expiring agony upon the cross, to which he had been fastened by the hands of wicked men, then they who beheld him, looked upon him with scorn, and mocked and despised him.” There seems little doubt, at any rate, that Isaiah saw our Redeemer in the Garden of Gethsemane as well as on the cross. ¶ Quoting Dr. Kalisch, Urwick explains that the whole point of the Mosaic law according to the Jewish perspective pointed to the role the Messiah would play: “So the Kabbalists held, that after the advent of the true Messiah no animal sacrifice would be required, since he would himself effect all that can be hoped for by sacrifices; ‘the Messiah will deliver up his soul and pour it out unto death, and his blood will atone the people of the Lord.’”³⁷ While as LDS we understand that animal sacrifice will once again, for a period, be carried out in the temple that will follow Ezekiel’s vision of the last days, the essence of this Kabbalistic statement is true. ¶ Elder Neal A. Maxwell spoke about the process of being marred, “Because living prophets are so precious a presence on the human scene, adversarial efforts to diminish and to mar them—past and present—should not be surprising. These men are thus called upon to endure efforts to ‘mar’ them. The word mar, as used in certain scriptures, suggests to ‘spoil to a certain extent or to render less attractive,’ as if one were to mar furniture by scratching its surface but not harming its substance. Isaiah speaks of the Lord’s servant whose ‘visage’ (or appearance) is marred (ISAIAH 52:14). The resurrected Jesus speaks of a ‘great and marvelous work’ which will not be believed by many, ‘although a man shall declare it unto them.’ This latter-day servant who was to bring Christ’s word forth ‘shall be marred ... Yet ... I will show unto them that my wisdom is greater than the cunning of the devil’ (3 Nephi 21:9–10). The Doctrine and Covenants (10:43) uses those same last words (about the wisdom of the Lord proving greater than the cunning of the devil) in reference to Joseph Smith and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. Joseph Smith, Sr., gave a father’s blessing to the Prophet Joseph on 9 December 1834. In part of that blessing Father Smith quoted from ancient Joseph, who wondered how his latter-day posterity would receive the word of God. Then ancient Joseph’s eyes beheld Joseph Smith, Jr., to be raised up in the last days. Ancient Joseph’s soul was satisfied and he wept. Ancient Joseph was quoted by Father Smith as saying that the choice seer to arise ‘shall meditate great wisdom, [and his] intelligence shall circumscribe and comprehend the deep things of God, ... though the wicked mar him for a little season.’ Church members should not be surprised, therefore, if enemies seek to ‘mar’ prophets and the Presidents of the Church, or the Church itself, by seeming to render it, or us as members, less attractive and influential, thus causing some to turn away from or to discount the Lord’s work and His servants. One of the early Twelve, Elder Orson Hyde, observed that the ‘shafts’ intended for the Church ‘are always aimed at the head first.’ Being marred can be part of the experience of discipleship: ‘Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake’ (Matthew 5:11). If we as members are likewise ‘marred’ while doing the Lord’s work, it will prove to be yet another dimension of sharing the fellowship of Christ’s sufferings (see Philippians 3:10).”³⁸ The Savior was marred (see Elder McConkie, The Mortal Messiah) through His suffering and is also now being marred through evil speech. The Savior, in His visit to the American Continent, quoted ISAIAH 52:14 (see 3 Nephi 21:10) and spoke of a servant who would yet be marred, through the How Beautiful Feet Principle in the future. The Prophet Joseph Smith was also frequently punished physically and hated by many: “He [the angel] called me by name, and said unto me that he was a messenger sent from the presence of God to me, and that his name was Moroni; that God had a work for me to do; and that my name should be had for good and evil among all nations, kindreds, and tongues, or that it should be both good and evil spoken of among all people” (JS—History 1:33). ¶ The Jewish scholars and Rabbis have ironically spoken much about the suffering Messiah, of Isaiah ben Joseph, or more specifically, Isaiah ben Ephraim (see Driver & Neubauer, pp. 16, 32, 162, 300–303, 321, 390, 394). Some Christian exegetes have felt that this has been an effort to deny suffering to Messiah ben Judah or Messiah ben David. ¶ And his form more than the sons of men: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “(Which was poor among the nations; their appearance and their brightness being worse than that of sons of men).” The LXX (Ⲙ) reads, “And thy glory for the sons of men).” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “And his form among the sons of men.” ¶ The Savior’s suffering was indeed more profound than that of any man and He bled from every pore for us.

15 So shall he sprinkle [Book of Mormon] gather [Inspired Version] many nations; the kings shall shut their mouths at him; for [that] which had not been told them shall they see; and [that] which they had not heard shall they consider.

So shall he sprinkle / gather many nations. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thus shall he scatter many nations.” The LXX ³⁷ Kalisch, M. M. A Historical and Critical Commentary on the Old Testament with a new translation. Leviticus, Part I. English or Abridged Edition. 1867. Urwick uses a different edition, p. 59. The 1867 edition has the quote in p. 46. Kalisch also points us to ISAIAH 53:12.

³⁸ Maxwell, Neal A. If Thou Endure It Well. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1996, pp. 71–72.

(6) reads, “So many nations will express admiration at him.” Instead of sprinkle, the Peshitta (S) has purify. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “He shall sprinkle many nations.” ¶ Horsley accepts the word sprinkle but mentions that יִזְרֹק is a difficult word and many have looked for emendations of it. We shall look both at the KJV and Book of Mormon sprinkle as well as the inspired version gather. ¶ SPRINKLE, יִזְרֹק. Birks exquisitely says—and all of my soul rejoices to contemplate it—and the Spirit testifies of the truthfulness of the atonement: “When the first covenant was confirmed at Sinai, Moses sprinkled the people with the blood of sacrifice, Exodus 24:8.³⁹ But this Prophet, like unto Moses, will sprinkle not one, but many nations, with the blood, not of oxen or rams, but of His own perfect sacrifice, and thus will bring them within the pale of a new and better covenant. Their kings shall shut their mouths at Him in mute wonder and reverence.” Wordsworth has: “It [i.e., sprinkle] is specially applied both to describe the sprinkling with the blood of atonement, on the great day of atonement, and with the water of purification⁴⁰ (see Leviticus 4:6; 14:7; 16:14, 18, 19; Numbers 19:19).” ¶ GATHER. Some exegetes have suggested various possibilities including scattered have been offered—the very opposite of gather. Cheyne writes: “*So shall he many nations] A most difficult passage.” So much so that Cheyne puts an asterisk to replace the word. Lowth writes: “I retain the common rendering, though I am by no means satisfied with it.” The inspired version uses gather. Neubauer & Driver quote the Older Nizzahon: “If the prophet had meant to say that he would gather many nations to his religion, he should have written יִקְרֶב (will bring near or attract⁴¹), rather than יִזְרֹק (will sprinkle or scatter).” I find it interesting, however, that the Older Nizzahon even brings up the subject of gathering. But Schiller-Szinessy⁴² has, which coincide exactly with the ³⁹ See also the numerous references to the sprinkling of blood in the Day of Atonement, or Yom Kippur, and temple services in anticipation to the atonement by the Son of Man.

⁴⁰ Not a few Christian commentators mention that sprinkling meant baptism, so I was pleased to find Schiller-Szinessy’s comments here that the earliest form of baptism was through immersion, not by sprinkling.

⁴¹ Gesenius has “to draw near.”

⁴² The author of this dissertation says of himself: “I am now 61 years of age, and I so loved the Hebrew Bible in my youth that I knew the whole of it by heart before I was ten years old. But, although the whole Bible has ever been dear to me, my favourite prophet has always been Isaiah. Him I studied under Jews, Rabbanites and Quaraites; him I studied under Christian, Roman Catholics and Protestants. He has ever been my thought by day, my dream in the night; my comfort in trouble, my exultation in happiness” (pp.6–7). An Exposition of ISAIAH 52:13–15; and 53; Delivered before the Council of the Senate in the Law School on Friday, April 28, 1882, Cambridge.

Inspired Version: “The fact is, יִזְרֹק here comes from the root יִזְרֹק to accumulate, to gather, to attract.” I have been working hard for a few weeks trying to find additional information on the Hebrew יִזְרֹק. Gladly, a Logos Bible Software colleague directed me to the Gesenius reference which I had missed: “יִזְרֹק an unused root. Arab. وَزَى to gather selves together,” as well as the Emphasized Bible, which under ISAIAH 52:15 has: “gather to himself” and more importantly, gives Fuerst’s Hebrew Lexicon (Williams & Norgate, 1871) as a reference. In the 1867 version of the Fürst Lexicon (see pp. 917–918) we find additional information of great interest: “יִזְרֹק II. (Kal not used), intr. same as יִזְרֹק (which see) to go together. Deriv. the proper name יִזְרֵיאל.⁴³ Hif. (future יִזְרֹק) to collect, ISAIAH 52:14–15, like as many were amazed at him—and therefore fled from him—will he now gather to himself many nations. The versions have thought sometimes of expiating, purifying, sometimes of causing to exult; but the explanation now given is the most suitable.”⁴⁴ ¶ After speaking of the mortal Messiah in the meridian of times Isaiah returns to speak of the latter day, when the good news or the Gospel would be preached through the Book of Mormon and the Bible and help gather Israel from all the nations of the earth. This is what I believe the word gather means in the context of ISAIAH 52:15, but I also like the concept of attracting people to Christ, because else, why would they gather in the first place? ¶ The kings shall shut their mouths at him. The Targum (T) has, “Before Him kings shall keep silence: they shall put their hands upon their mouths.” The LXX (6) reads, “And kings will shut their mouths.” ¶ Rabbi Metsudath David, in Slotki/Rosenberg, has: “In amazement at the exaltation of the despised servant.” Keith has: “The expression ‘kings shall shut their mouths,’ denotes silence and subjection. Instead of taking counsel together any more against him, ‘all kings shall fall down before him, all nations shall serve him’ (Psalm 72:11).” Wade explains: “Shall shut their mouths at him] Better, shall shut their mouths because of him, i.e. shall be awed into silence at the wonderful change in his condition (cf. Job 29:9; 40:4; Micah 7:16).” Nägelsbach writes: “in the same degree that one was horrified at Him, He will also provoke joyful wonder and reverence.” Similarly Alexander: “His exaltation shall bear due proportion to his humiliation; the contempt of men shall be exchanged for wonder and respect.” Kay says: “As His degradation was most surprising, exceeding any in human history; so shall His exaltation be. Many had looked wonderingly on Him as a wretched criminal ...” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt has tied this verse to the preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ after the restoration: “Now Moses has told us of that time, and it is repeated again in the 3rd chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, that the Lord would raise up a Prophet, and it should come to pass that every soul that would not hear that Prophet should be cut off from among the people. We are told that that Prophet was Jesus, and we believe it. Jesus Christ was that Prophet, and the day is to come, as sure as the Lord lives in yonder heavens, when every soul that will not repent, and receive his work, will be literally cut off from among the people, just as Moses has predicted.⁴⁵ And it shall come to pass that ‘kings shall shut their mouths: for that which had not been told them shall they see; and that which they have not heard shall they behold,’ a marvelous work and a wonder, a work that the Lord would perform in the latter days. A strange work, a strange act, so-called by Isaiah the Prophet.”⁴⁶ ¶ Of some of these same verses in 3 Nephi 21, the Savior seems to liken some of these Scriptures to the latter-day restoration of the Gospel and even to Joseph Smith. For instance, the Savior said, “And when these things come to pass [such as the going forth of the Book of Mormon] that thy seed shall begin to know these things [speaking of the Lamanites]—it shall be a sign unto them, that they may know that the work of the Father hath already commenced unto the fulfilling of the covenant which he hath made unto the people who are of the house of Israel. And when that day shall come, it shall come to pass that kings shall shut their mouths; for that which had not been told them shall they see; and that which they had not heard shall they consider. For in that day, for my sake shall the Father work a work, which shall be a great and a marvelous work among them; and there shall be among them those who will not believe it, although a man shall declare it unto them” (3 Nephi 21:7–9). ¶ For that which had not been told them shall they see. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Because they, to whom no publication was made concerning him, shall see.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “For they to whom it was not told of him, have seen.” ¶ As we read in ISAIAH 40:5: “And the glory of the LORD shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it.” So it is that all shall see Him so that it will not be necessary for anyone to tell them about it. In Habakkuk 2:14 we read: “For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea.” And finally, in Jeremiah 31:34a we read: “And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD.” ¶ And that which they had not heard shall they consider. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And they, who had not heard, will understand.” Instead of consider, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has understand. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “And they that heard not, have beheld.” ¶ Skinner writes: “for that which had not been told them” The meaning is either that the exaltation of the Servant is an event of which they had received no announcement beforehand, or that it is one the like of which had never been known.”

⁴³ Pronounced something like Yiziyah, and in modern English it is sometimes written Izayah, both of which sound like the Hebrew pronunciation of Isaiah.

⁴⁴ Fuerst [Fürst], Dr. Julius, A Hebrew & Chaldee Lexicon to the Old Testament, Professor at the University of Leipzig. Translated from the German by Samuel Davidson, D.D. of the University of Halle. London, Williams & Norgate. 1867 (3rd edition). First German Edition was published in 1857.

FIRST POSTED: 12 May 2016

⁴⁵ “I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren [Jesus Christ], like unto thee [Moses], and will put my words in his mouth [see ISAIAH 51:16]; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him [shall be cut off or suffer the consequences for such disobedience]” (Deuteronomy 18:18–19).

⁴⁶ Pratt, Elder Orson. “Gathering of Israel, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 18, No. 4, 11 April 1875, pp. 28–29.

Isaiah 53

Urwick wrote: “Whether or not the contemporaries of the prophet or the exiles in Babylon understood the prophet’s words in this fifty-third chapter as prophetic-Messianic, we cannot positively say. We know, however, that the Jews in Christ’s time did thus understand them. There are indications in the New Testament that the Baptist (John 1: 29) and Simeon (Luke 2:3435) thus regarded them. And the use our Saviour made of them in His discourses proves not only that He thus understood them, but that He expected His hearers as Jews thus to understand them; according to His own words: ‘Search the Scriptures; they are they which testify of ME.’” We quote extensively from the Jewish writings of former ages to show that these scriptures, as well as the last three verses of ISAIAH 52, point to the Messiah. Many of these quotes come from Neubauer and Driver’s book, The Fifty-third Chapter of Isaiah according to Jewish Interpreters, Volume II, printed at Oxford in 1877. The purpose of this book was to show the lack of proof for its Messianic signification, and there are plenty of quotes and allusions to show such a way of thinking, but the reader who is filled with the Holy Spirit will be pricked in the heart to know that the full measure of the fulfillment of these scriptures is as it refers to the Messiah, even Jesus the Christ. The number of references to the Messiah quoted from the Talmud and other Jewish writings are extensive. One can clearly see a transition between a belief in the Messiah, to a belief in two Messiahs—one who suffered and one who did not—to a number of other beliefs, including making Jeremiah, Hezekiah or Josiah or the nation of Israel the subject of these verses. There are some excellent books which summarize these perspectives and defend Christ as the subject of these chapters. Cowles, regarding the vicarious nature of Christ’s sacrifice writes: “We cannot be too grateful for these amplified, varied, and yet marvelously coincident and unanimous declarations to the effect of vicarious atonement—Christ suffering for his people ... and here it cannot be said too emphatically that these numerous, various, yet equivalent forms of expression are all borrowed from the Hebrew sacrificial system, and therefore must be interpreted in the light of that system ... that suffering must first be borne by some innocent being for the guilty before he can be forgiven ... Hence in this great illustrative sacrificial system, the Lord selected those animals which best personify innocence, gentleness, meekness, e.g., lambs, goats, heifers, bullocks, doves; and made them symbols of the suffering, atoning ‘Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world.’” Kay notes: “There are no fewer than eleven expressions in ISAIAH 53 which clearly describe the VICARIOUS character of the sufferings endured by the Lord’s Servant: (1) ‘He bore our griefs;’ (2) ‘He carried our sorrows;’ (3) ‘He was wounded for our transgressions;’ (4) ‘Bruised for our iniquities;’ (5) ‘The chastisement of our peace was upon Him;’ (6) ‘By His stripes we are healed;’ (7) ‘The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all;’ (8) ‘For the transgression of My people was He stricken;’ (9) ‘When Thou shalt make His soul an offering for sin;’ (10) ‘He shall bear (or, carry) their iniquities;’ (11) ‘He bare the sins of many. In [the 9th item in this list] the sacrificial nature of these sufferings is directly stated ... The terms ‘iniquities,’ ‘transgressions,’ and ‘sins,’ which all occur here, gather in like manner around the work of the high priest on the ‘Day of Atonement’ (Leviticus 16:16, 21, 22, 30, 34). The expressions in vv. 11–12, ‘carry their iniquities,’ and ‘bare the sin of many,’ are parallel to the one used in Leviticus 16:22; where it is prescribed that the scape-goat (over whose head Aaron had confessed ‘all the iniquities of the children of Israel and all their transgressions in all their sins,’ v. 21) should bear upon him all their iniquities into a land not inhabited.” Finally, McDonogh and Manton write that ISAIAH 53: “is so full and clear, that it rather needs meditation than comment—faith more than learning to conceive it, to admire it, and to learn from it.”

vv. 1–3. The vital question is asked: “Who will believe that Christ is indeed the Son of God and that He suffered for us so that if we turn to Him and walk in His ways, we can be saved?” Our Savior in mortality would not be recognized from His outer appearance.

1 ¶ WHO hath believed our report? ~ and to whom is the arm of the LORD revealed?

✓ or, doctrine? HEB. hearing?

WHO hath believed our report? The LXX (6) reads, “Oh. Lord, who hath believed this report of ours.” Paul makes reference to these scriptures: “For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things! But they have not all obeyed the gospel. For Esaias saith, Lord, who hath believed our report?” (Romans 10:13–16). ¶ Elder McConkie taught: “Will you join with me in considering these questions: If you had lived in Jerusalem in the days of Jesus, would you have accepted him as the Son of God as did Peter and the Apostles? Or would you have said he had a devil and wrought miracles by the power of Beelzebub, as Annas and Caiaphas claimed? ... If you believe the words of Joseph Smith, you would have believed what Jesus and the ancients said. If you reject Joseph Smith and his message, you would have rejected Peter and Paul and their message.”¹ ¶ And to whom is the arm of the LORD revealed? The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And to whom hath the arm of the Lord been made manifest?” ¶ Jenour has: “The arm of Jehovah” i.e., the salvation of Jehovah, the power of Jehovah to save man exhibited in the gospel, which is called by the apostle, ‘the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth’ (Romans 1:16; 1 Corinthians 1:24).” Wordsworth writes: “The Prophet asks, Who hath recognized God’s glorious working in Christ, delivering the World from a worse bondage and exile than that of Babylon? The Prophet takes up the word of ISAIAH 51:9: ‘Awake, awake! put on strength, O arm of the Lord,’ and of ISAIAH 52:10: ‘The Lord hath made bare His holy arm in the eyes of all Nations.’” Govett has: “It is adduced, most justly, by St. John, among his closing observations on the public ministry of our blessed Lord, and its results, as regarded his nation. ‘But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him; that the saying of Esaias might be fulfilled, which he spake, Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed?’”² This prophecy, therefore, was fulfilled by the general unbelief of the Jews, and the fewness of those who believed the Saviour’s miracles and doctrines.” Jenour notes: “And so it is now; the doctrine of salvation through a crucified Saviour has no more attractions in the eyes of the self-righteous, nominal Christian, than it had in the eyes of the Jews.” Keith explains that the time will come, as we see in the previous chapter, when many shall accept the Gospel: “... he shall make bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations, and all the ends of the earth shall see his salvation” (ISAIAH 52:10). Henderson explains that just as the hand, the arm “denotes power [to] act.”

2 For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground; he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, [there is] no beauty that we should desire him.

For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground. Cheyne suggests that this is in the perfect prophetic certitude (see notes on ISAIAH 30:7; 42:16; also see Mosiah 16:6). Leeson translates as: “Yea, he³ grew up [יָצָא] like a small shoot before him, and as a root out of a dry land: he had no form nor comeliness, so that we should look at him; and no countenance, so that we should desire him.” Others who also use the prophetic perfect include AMP, ASV, BBE, Bishops, CEV, CJV, ERV, ESV, GW, HCSB, ISV, JPS, LBP, LBLA, LEB, LHI, NASB, NBLH, Rotherham, RV, TLV, WEB and WEBB. The Targum (Ⓙ) has, “The righteous shall be great before Him, behold, like branches that bud; and like a tree which sends forth its roots by the streams of water, thus shall the generation of the just multiply in the land, which hath need of Him.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “We have made proclamation as a child before him: as a root in a thirsty soil.” Instead of tender plant, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has infant. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has thirsty instead of dry. ¶ Driver & Neubauer quote Yepheth Ben ‘Ali as saying that this verse is of the Messiah, as rather the whole of the chapter. Urwick writes: “... the figure [of a tender plant] is not intended to describe a feeling or estimate, but a fact—the lowly birth and youth of the Servant.” Christ Himself says: “I Jesus ... I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star” (Revelation 22:16, also see ISAIAH 11). Wordsworth suggests: “Christ, Who has been described as the Arm of the Lord, revealed from heaven by reason of His Godhead, is now represented as a Shoot growing out of the earth by reason of His Manhood ... Then He, Who is ‘the Branch,’ sprouted forth from it [i.e., from the trunk that had been cut down.]” Birks explains these expressions as: “The figures of the tender plant or sucker, and the root or shoot, are resumed from ISAIAH 11:1, and express the low estate of the house of David when He appeared. The dry ground is expounded by the question of Nathanael, ‘Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?’” Govett suggests: “... also to the lowly and degraded state of the family of David, whence the Lord was to spring.” Jenour has: “The low condition of the parents of Christ, the obscurity of his birth, and the meanness⁴ of his education, are principally intended. In propagating and establishing his doctrines he was wholly unsupported by human power; indeed both the Jewish and Gentile authorities were opposed to him; and thus with his little band of followers he might well

³ The common ‘verb construction [יָצָא] normally has us look at the person who is spoken off regarding the verb, but can also stand for the person. For instance, in Genesis 2:18 we have וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים. And-(marker that indicates we should look for the person after the verb)-said-LORD Elohim, which means: “And the LORD Elohim said.”

⁴ Meanness here signifies insignificant. Of course we know the Savior had no mean education, but rather, was taught from on high. So also the Prophet Joseph Smith, who was taught from on High by the Savior.

¹ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. “Who Hath Believed Our Report?” General Conference, October 1981.

² See John 12:37–38, there is also an allusion to ISAIAH 6:8–11.

be likened to a tender plant, exposed to the rude blasts of the north⁵ wind.” ¶ President Brigham Young observed: “Christendom now acknowledge that Jesus was the Son of God; they look upon him as God manifested in the flesh according to the New Testament; yet the generation in which He lived did not see these tokens of divinity which this generation recognize. To them he was ‘a root out of dry ground’—‘a stumbling block,’ ‘a rock of offense.’”⁶ Elder Bruce D. Porter said: “In the premortal realm, he had been the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the Creator of the earth, the great I AM. From these exalted heights, he descended, coming to earth in the most humble of circumstances ... Instead of worldly station, he chose to be born in a lowly stable and live the simple life of a carpenter. He grew up in an obscure village in a despised precinct of Palestine. He made himself of no reputation, and was ‘a root out of a dry ground,’ having ‘no beauty that we should desire him.’”⁷ ¶ He hath no form [לֹא תֵאֲרָה] nor comeliness. Targum (ט)⁸ has, “His visage shall not be the visage of a common person, neither His fear the fear of a plebeian (literally, טִיִּיל, ⁹ ‘and idiot,’ expressing a person of low birth).” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “He hath no appearance nor glory.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϲ) has, “There is no beauty in him, nor comeliness.” ¶ Alexander writes: “Form is here put for beautiful or handsome form, as in 1 Samuel 16:18 [where] David is called a man of form [שֵׂמֶךְ תֵּאֲרָה], i.e. a comely person.” President Joseph Fielding Smith explained: “There was nothing about [Christ] to cause people to single him out. In appearance he was like men; and so it is expressed here by the prophet that he had no form or comeliness, that is, he was not so distinctive, so different from others that people would recognize him as the Son of God. He appeared as a mortal man.”¹⁰ ¶ THE ASCENSION OF ISAIAH. In the pseudographical book, The Ascension of Isaiah, we come to understand what is meant by both he hath no form nor comeliness as well as no beauty that we should desire him. The Prophet is guided by an angel successively up to the seventh heaven, with each of the higher heavens being more glorious and full of light than the former. The majesty, light, and glory of one of the personages Isaiah meets in the second heaven are so overwhelming that the Prophet Isaiah begins to prostrate himself. His angelic guide, however, restrains the Prophet from making the mistake of adoring a fellow-servant. Isaiah’s own countenance is changed in ever increasing glory as he ascends the heavens one by one. In the process of time, the Prophet arrives in the seventh heaven where he beholds the glory surrounding the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost and Isaiah is able to worship God. The main purpose of the trip embarked upon by the Prophet is to witness the condescension of the Son of Man. Isaiah arrives as the Messiah is making final preparations to depart from the presence of the Father, leaving behind “the glory which [He] had with [the Father] before the world was” (John 17:5b). So it is that Isaiah is able to behold the Savior as He leaves the seventh heaven and descends one heaven at a time. An exquisitely painful and humbling panorama is placed before us. As Christ descends further, beginning with the fifth heaven, He is not even recognized by the people as the Son of Man for He transforms Himself to match the glory of the lowest of those present. There is nothing external in Him that sets Him apart. The Savior of mankind is ignored completely and expected to give the required passwords “before the angels who stand as sentinels”¹¹ (Brigham Young, Journal of Discourses 2:31) previous to entering each of the heavens. His beauty and glory are not perceived by those who inhabit those kingdoms. “And the angel who conducted me said unto me: ‘Understand, Isaiah, and see how the transformation and descent of the Lord will appear [or, ‘in order that thou mayest see the transformation of the Lord’] ... And I saw when He descended into the fifth heaven He made Himself like unto the form of the angels there, and they did not praise Him (nor worship Him); for His form was like unto theirs.”¹² The Holy One of Israel continues

⁵ In the Holy Land, better, east wind or sirocco (see ISAIAH 27:8).

⁶ Young, President, Brigham. “The True Church of Christ, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 12:206b.

⁷ Porter, Elder Bruce D. “Redeemer of Israel.” October 1995 General Conference.

⁸ Pauli gives this as verse 3. Beginning here, the Targum (ט) is one verse off from the KJV.

⁹ Pronounced jedyot, where the j stands for a Spanish j or a German ch.

¹⁰ Smith, President Joseph Fielding. Doctrines of Salvation 1:23. Compiled by McConkie, Bruce R.

¹¹ “Your endowment is, to receive all those ordinances in the House of the Lord, which are necessary for you, after you have departed this life, to enable you to walk back to the presence of the Father, passing the angels who stand as sentinels, being enabled to give them the key words, the signs and tokens, pertaining to the Holy Priesthood, and gain your eternal exaltation in spite of earth and hell” (Journal of Discourses, 2:31).

¹² Charles, Robert Henry (Editor). Ascension of Isaiah, 10:18, 20. Translated from the Ethiopic Version, which, together with the new Greek fragment, the Latin versions and the Latin translation of the Slavonic, is here published in full. London: Adam and Black, 1900, 72. While we do not consider the Ascension of Isaiah Scripture, Latter-day Saints have multiple reasons to be interested in this manuscript. There are important similarities to the Vision of Joseph F. Smith (see D&C 138), where the great disciples of Christ of ancient days were present, such as Adam and Enoch in the spirit world; as well as to things we learn in sacred places. The Ascension of Isaiah, shows that at least some early Christians believed that God the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost were three distinct beings, but one in purpose. It is not known if this book was written by Isaiah, or at a

this process of transformation until Isaiah is permitted to see “a woman of the family of David the prophet, named Mary, a Virgin, and she was espoused to a man named Joseph, a carpenter ...” (Ascension of Isaiah, 11:2b). There were many things that Isaiah saw in this vision, but none more important than the condescension of Christ. Note how Nephi was likewise privileged to watch the condescension of the Son of Man. The young Book of Mormon prophet was explicitly told that he was there to be a witness of Christ: “and him shall ye witness; and after ye have witnessed him ye shall bear record that it is the Son of God” (1 Nephi 11:7, emphasis added, also see 1 Nephi 11:8 ff.). In ISAIAH 53:2, Isaiah is making it clear that the Son of Man did not come in His glory and that He—עִמָּנוּ אֵל, God with us, Immanuel—could only be recognized with the discernment of the Spirit. The purpose of Nephi’s vision, then, was not only to understand the individual elements of his father’s vision, but to be present—again, at the exact moment—when the Son of Man left behind His glory by the side of the Father to come down to earth to die for us that we might turn to Christ and live. ¶ John the Baptist bears witness of Him when he says: “Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world” (John 1:29b). The Baptist is telling us to open our eyes, to behold, to look upon the Holy One of Israel with the witness of the Holy Spirit and know that He is the Son of God. Recall that after the resurrection the Savior appeared to His disciples on the road to Emmaus: “But their eyes were holden that they should not know him” (Luke 24:16). Although they could not recognize Him with their eyes, there was something that witnessed peace to them: “And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them. And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he vanished out of their sight. And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?” (Luke 24:30–32, emphasis added). We can likewise have our eyes opened by hearing the word at General Conference and at other Church meetings, by immersing ourselves in Holy Scripture, by being open to the whisperings of the Spirit—and by walking in discipleship to Christ. ¶ In the Bread of Life Discourse in John 6, we see multiple allusions to the condescension of Christ. The Savior proclaims: “For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me” (John 6:38). Many of those who surrounded Him did not recognize Him for He had no external form or comeliness: “The Jews then murmured at him, because he said, I am the bread which came down from heaven. And they said, Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? how is it then that he saith, I came down from heaven? (John 6:41–42). The Savior then teaches that He is the manna that came down from heaven: “Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life. I am that bread of life. Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die. I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world” (John 6:47–51). Even His own disciples were troubled by the Savior’s teachings about His condescension, to which He responded: “Many therefore of his disciples, when they had heard this, said, This is an hard saying; who can hear it? When Jesus knew in himself that his disciples murmured at it, he said unto them, Doth this offend you? What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?” (John 6:60–62, emphasis added). Except the Holy Ghost bear witness, we could not see the Divinity and Sonship of the Holy One of Israel. ¶ And when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him. Targum (ⲧ) has, “but a holy brightness shall be His brightness, that everyone who seeth Him shall contemplate Him (or, ‘consider’ or ‘meditate upon him’).” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “We have seen him; and he hath neither appearance nor beauty.” Instead of that we should desire him, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has we denied him (i.e., when man would see the Savior was as other men in appearance, they would deny Him). The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “And we have seen him, and there was no sightliness, that we should be desirous of him.” ¶ Birks has: “Few will be found who have believed the prophet’s report; for, when the people look upon Messiah, He has no beauty in their eyes.” After I joined the Church I heard a lovely story about two men who had died and crossed the veil and were being interviewed. The first man shares his knowledge about the Savior and the restoration of the Gospel with the interviewer. When he is finished, he leaves the room and the second enters for his interview. As the second person enters the room and walks toward the interviewer “... he fell upon his knees and cried, ‘My Lord, my God.’”¹³ ¶ Then Elder Thomas S. Monson said: “As a boy, Jesus was found in the temple, ‘sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions. And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers.’ And when Joseph and His mother saw Him, ‘they were later date. It is suggested that the original book may well have existed before the time of Christ but may have been amended by early Christians. At any rate, what we have has not been preserved in its purity.

¹³ LDS Young Women Manual 3, (1994), 6–8. Lesson 2: “Coming to Know the Savior.”

amazed.” (See Luke 2:46–48.) To the learned doctors in the temple, the boy’s outward label may have conveyed brightness of intellect but certainly not ‘Son of God and future Redeemer of all mankind.’”

3 He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; and we hid as it were [our] faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not.

✓ or, he hid as it were his face from us, HEB. as an hiding of faces from him, or, us.

Targum (T) has, “Although He shall be in contempt; yet He shall cut off the glory of the wicked (the Royal Polyglot reads מְלִכִּימָּה, ‘kingdoms’). They shall be weak and wretched. Lo, we are in contempt and not esteemed, as a man of pain and appointed to sickness, and as if He had removed the face of His Shekinah from us.” The LXX (G) reads, “But his appearance is mean and defective beyond the sons of men. Being a man in affliction and acquainted with grief, because his countenance was dejected, he was despised and disesteemed.” Instead of rejected, the Peshitta (S) has humbled. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Despised, and the most abject of men, a man of sorrows, and acquainted with infirmity: and his look was as it were hidden and despised, whereupon we esteemed him not.” ¶ Turning their faces from Him. Birks writes, “Their hosannas [from the triumphal entry into Jerusalem a few days earlier] turned to the cry, Crucify him! crucify him!” President Monson testified: “Who was this ‘man of sorrows, ... acquainted with grief’? ‘Who is this King of glory, this Lord of lords? He is our Master. He is our Savior. He is the Son of God. He is the Author of Our Salvation. He beckons, ‘Follow me.’”¹⁴ ¶ Some follow the margin ¶ and suggest that it was Christ who hid His face from us. Urwick well argues the fallacy of such a view by quoting ISAIAH 50:6b: “I hid not my face from shame and spitting.” Urwick reasons: “... the whole passage is describing not so much the Divine Servant’s conduct towards the people, as the people’s estimation of Him.” ¶ Sister Carole M. Stephens shared: “Elder Richard G. Scott explained that ‘we were taught in the premortal world that our purpose in coming here is to be tested, tried, and stretched.’ That stretching comes in as many forms as there are individuals experiencing it. I’ve never had to live through divorce, the pain and insecurity that comes from abandonment, or the responsibility associated with being a single mother. I haven’t experienced the death of a child, infertility, or same-gender attraction. I haven’t had to endure abuse, chronic illness, or addiction. These have not been my stretching opportunities. So right now some of you are thinking, ‘Well then, Sister Stephens, you just don’t understand!’ And I answer that you may be right. I don’t completely understand your challenges. But through my personal tests and trials—the ones that have brought me to my knees—I have become well acquainted with the One who does understand, He who was ‘acquainted with grief,’ who experienced all and understands all. And in addition, I have experienced all of the mortal tests that I just mentioned through the lens of a daughter, mother, grandmother, sister, aunt, and friend.”¹⁵ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland taught: “... it is not without a recognition of life’s tempests but fully and directly because of them that I testify of God’s love and the Savior’s power to calm the storm. Always remember in that biblical story that He was out there on the water also, that He faced the worst of it right along with the newest and youngest and most fearful. Only one who has fought against those ominous waves is justified in telling us—as well as the sea—to ‘be still.’ Only one who has taken the full brunt of such adversity could ever be justified in telling us in such times to ‘be of good cheer.’ Such counsel is not a jaunty pep talk about the power of positive thinking, though positive thinking is much needed in the world. No, Christ knows better than all others that the trials of life can be very deep and we are not shallow people if we struggle with them. But even as the Lord avoids sugary rhetoric, He rebukes faithlessness and He deplores pessimism. He expects us to believe! No one’s eyes were more penetrating than His, and much of what He saw pierced His heart. Surely His ears heard every cry of distress, every sound of want and despair. To a degree far more than we will ever understand, He was ‘a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief.’”¹⁶

vv. 4–9. Christ would be weighed down by our sins and griefs, and yet people would assume He was paying the consequences for His own iniquities. Our sins were born by our Savior. Christ endured the required suffering, even to death. Elder Neal A. Maxwell testified: “The cumulative weight of all mortal sins—past, present, and future—pressed upon that perfect, sinless, and sensitive Soul! All our infirmities and sicknesses were somehow, too, a part of the awful arithmetic of the Atonement.”¹⁷ He was crucified by

¹⁴ Monson, President Thomas S., “The Divine Gift of Gratitude.” October 1987 General Conference.

¹⁵ Stephens, Sister Carole M. “The Family Is of God,” April 2015 General Conference.

¹⁶ Holland, Elder Jeffrey R., “An High Priest of Good Things to Come.” October 1999 General Conference.

¹⁷ Maxwell, Elder Neal A. “Willing to Submit,” Ensign (CR), May 1985, p.70.

thieves but buried in the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, a wealthy man.

4 ¶ Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.

Whitehouse renders this verse emphatically:

“Yet our diseases ‘twas he who bore,
And our sufferings, he bore their load;
While we, we thought him plague-struck,
Smitten of God and humiliated.”

Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Therefore He shall pray for our sins, and our iniquities for His sake shall be forgiven us.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “This man beareth away our sins; and for us he is in sorrow.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has infirmities instead of griefs. ¶ Driver & Neubauer quote the Talmud: “The Messiah—what is his name? ... The Rabbis ... [say, The sick one], as it is said, ‘Surely he hath borne our sicknesses, etc.’ (Sanhedrin 98b).” Young explains that נָשָׂא here in essence has the meaning of “lifting up and carrying” (see more on נָשָׂא below, in ISAIAH 53:12). Urwick explains: “The idea clearly is that one bearing as a burden the consequences of the sins of others, see ISAIAH 53:11. The griefs and sorrows which He bore were our due, and belonged to us as the fruit and punishment of our sin.” Urwick also reminds us that the surely [אַיִן] in this verse has the same type of certitude as the one we saw in ISAIAH 40:7 where it is said that surely the people is grass [אַיִן הָעָם הַצֵּיִר]. Remember that in ISAIAH 40:7 the people were put in contrast to the Word of God, Christ. ¶ Elder Merrill J. Bateman has: “The prophet Abinadi further states that ‘when his soul has been made an offering for sin he shall see his seed.’ Abinadi then identifies the Savior’s seed as the prophets and those who follow them. For many years I thought of the Savior’s experience in the garden and on the cross as places where a large mass of sin was heaped upon Him. Through the words of Alma, Abinadi, Isaiah, and other prophets, however, my view has changed. Instead of an impersonal mass of sin, there was a long line of people, as Jesus felt ‘our infirmities’ ‘[bore] our griefs ... carried our sorrows ... [and] was bruised for our iniquities.’ The Atonement was an intimate, personal experience in which Jesus came to know how to help each of us.”¹⁸ Elder Erastus Snow taught: “The various pains and sorrows to be endured in life are all necessary in their time and place; the trials as we term them, are all necessary ... they are all a part of the scheme of education or training to prepare us for the future. One of the sacred writers, in speaking of Jesus, said: ‘For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin’ (Hebrews 4:15). And again: ‘For God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him’ (John 3:34). It is measured out to you and me in the providence of the Lord; but for him there was a storehouse to draw upon, as it were, without measure. He could continue to heal the sick and raise the dead and perform great and marvelous things ... he took upon himself our infirmities and bore our sickness, as had been predicted by Isaiah the prophet. He truly did heal the sick wherever he went.”¹⁹ ¶ Henderson, leaning on the Rabbinical Pesikta says: “When the blessed Creator made his world, he stretched out his hand under the throne of glory, and brought out the soul of the Messiah. He then said to him: Wilt thou heal and redeem my sons after six thousand years? He replied: Yes. Then God said to him: Wilt thou bear the inflictions in order to purge their iniquity, as it is written: But it was our diseases he bore? He said to him: I will bear them joyfully.”²⁰ Govett wrote: “The Evangelist Matthew quotes [this] verse in the following connection: ‘When the even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils: and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses.’”²¹ From which we learn, that our blessed Lord’s curing of diseases was the fulfilment of this verse.” ¶ Cowles underscores: “The word for ‘griefs’ means primarily, sicknesses, yet is put here for all ailments and evils.” And this makes sense, for we know that the Savior died not only for our sins, but also for our sorrows and pains: spiritual, physical and emotional. ¶ Yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For we are considered crushed, smitten of the Lord and afflicted.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And we considered him as being in trouble and under a stroke and in affliction.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “And we have thought him as it were a leper, and as one struck by God and afflicted.” The Rabbis consider this regarding Messiah (Seder Nezikin, Sanhedrin 98b). ¶ Driver & Neubauer quote Yepheth Ben ‘Ali: “By the words ‘surely he hath carried our sicknesses,’ they mean that the pains and sickness which he fell into were merited by them [i.e., by Israel], but that he bore them instead ... And here I

¹⁹ Snow, Elder Erastus, “Rest Signifies Change, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 21:25b. October 1879.

²⁰ See also Driver & Neubauer’s quote of P’siqtha (P’siqtha, Theologia Judaica, According to Sulsius, p. 328).

²¹ See Matthew 8:16–17.

¹⁸ Bateman, Elder Merrill J., “A Pattern for All.” October 2005 General Conference.

think it necessary to pause for a few moments, in order to explain why God caused these sicknesses to attach themselves to the Messiah for the sake of Israel.” Birks wrote: “We, for whom He suffered, mistook the cause of His griefs, and reckoned Him as one who lay, for His own sake, under the just displeasure of God.”

Rawlinson notes: “They who saw Christ suffer, instead of understanding that he was bearing the sins of others in a mediatorial capacity, imagined that he was suffering at God’s hands for his own sins. Hence they scoffed at him and reviled him, even in his greatest agonies (Matthew 27:39–44). To one only, and him not one of God’s people, was it given to see the contrary, and to declare aloud, at the moment of the death, ‘Certainly this was a righteous Man’ (Luke 23:47).”

5 But he [was] wounded ✓ for our transgressions, [he was] bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace [was] upon him; and with his stripes ✓ we are healed.

✓ or, tormented

✓ ✓ bruise

But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “He shall build the house of the sanctuary (the Royal Polyglot reads ‘our sanctuary’), which has been profaned on account of our sins.” The LXX (Ⓢ) reads, “But he was wounded for our sins, and afflicted for our iniquities.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⓢ) has, “But he was slain for our sins, he was afflicted for our iniquities.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓢ) for transgressions and iniquities instead has iniquities and sins. ¶ Driver & Neubauer quote Midrash Rabbah: “Another explanation (of Ruth 2:14):—He is speaking of the king Messiah: ‘Come hither,’ draw near to the throne; ‘and eat of the bread,’ that is, the bread of the kingdom; ‘and dip thy morsel in the vinegar,’ this refers to the chastisements, as it is said, ‘But he was wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities’ (Ruth 4).” From Yalqut, Driver & Neubauer quote “The chastisements are divided into three parts: one for David and the fathers, one for our own generation, and one for [the King Messiah; and this is that which is written, ‘He was wounded for our transgressions,’ etc. (Yalqut 2:620). Urwick has: “The לָנוּ is again emphatic, and contrasts with the הָיָא which begins the verse. Nothing can be stronger than the antithesis running through this verse, both between the pronouns he, him, his, on the one hand, and our, us, on the other; and that between the wounding, bruising, chastisement, stripes, on the one hand, and the peace and healing on the other.” ¶ I had always thought that the Place of the Skull, or Golgotha, was a hill—one of my favorite hymns is “There is a green hill far away” (Hymns, 194). When Linda & I traveled to Israel, we had the opportunity to visit Gethsemane as well as the Garden Tomb. Near the tomb, there is a rock formation that looks like a skull, but sadly, some of this had been defaced with some construction. Even so, the skull is clearly apparent. It has been suggested that Christ was crucified by a public thoroughfare—and not elevated much from the ground—so that those who passed by could spit, mock and insult Him in other ways. ¶ Elder James E. Talmage spoke of our Savior’s anguish on the cross: “The spikes so cruelly driven through hands and feet penetrated and crushed sensitive nerves and quivering tendons, yet inflicted no mortal wound. The welcome relief of death came through the exhaustion caused by intense and unremitting pain, through localized inflammation and congestion of organs incident to the strained and unnatural posture of the body.”²² ¶ Frederick C. Grant tells us: “[At Golgotha] they stripped the three victims and nailed them to their crosses.”²³ Alfred Edersheim, after explaining the anguish that the Savior would experience by having the nails driven through His hands and feet, speaks about the anguish of crucifixion: “... the crucified hang for hours, even days, in the unutterable anguish, till consciousness at last failed. It was a merciful Jewish practice to give to those led to execution a draught of strong wine mixed with myrrh so as to deaden consciousness ... That draught was offered to Jesus ... but having tasted it, and ascertained its character and object, He would not drink it ... He would meet Death ... by submitting to the full.”²⁴ Cunningham Geikie speaks of the “hands and feet pierced by the nails ... driven through parts where many sensitive nerves and sinews come together ... Inflammation of the wounds in both hands and feet speedily set in ... Intolerable thirst and ever-increasing pain resulted ... The weight of the body itself, resting on the wooden pin of the upright beam ... made each moment more terrible than the preceding. The numbness and stiffness of the more distant muscles brought on painful convulsions ...”²⁵ Frederic Farrar reminds us that: “The feet were but a little raised above the earth. The victim was in full reach of every hand that might choose to strike, in close proximity to every gesture of insult and hatred. He might hang for hours to be abused, insulted, even tortured by the ever-moving multitude who, with that

²² Talmage, Elder James E. (1981). Jesus the Christ, p. 655.

²³ Grant, Frederick C. (1921). The Life and Times of Jesus, p. 212.

²⁴ Edersheim, Alfred (1886, 3rd New American Edition). The Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah, 2:589–590.

²⁵ Geikie, Cunningham (1896, Revised Edition). The Life and Words of Christ, 2:533.

desire to see what is horrible which always characterizes the coarsest hearts, had thronged to gaze upon a sight which should rather have made them weep ... For indeed a death by crucifixion seems to include all that pain ... all intensified just up to the point at which they can be endured at all, but all stopping just short of the point which would give the sufferer the relief of unconsciousness. The unnatural position made every moment painful ...”²⁶ ¶ The chastisement of our peace was upon him. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “He was delivered over on account of our iniquities, and through His doctrine peace shall be multiplied upon us.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “The chastisement of our peace was upon him.” ¶ Kimhi, in Neubauer & Driver has: “Others explain שלומנו in its ordinary meaning: ‘the chastisements which ought to have come upon us for our sins while we were at peace have fallen on him.’” ¶ And with his stripes we are healed. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And through the teaching of His words our sins shall be forgiven us.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “By his bruises we are healed.” Instead of stripes, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has wounds. The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has bruises instead of stripes. ¶ Govett has: “The vicarious nature of the Redeemer’s suffering is next opened to our view. The prophet teaches the atoning nature of Christ’s death. His afflictions were not for any sin of his own, but for our transgressions, because he bare the penalty of them, that by his ‘stripes we might be healed.’ Because ‘we like sheep have gone astray, the Lord hath made to light on him the iniquities of us all:’ in which words the extent of his atonements is made equal to the extent of man’s sinfulness: or as the New Testament Scriptures phrase the same truth, ‘He is the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world.’” Rawlinson has: “Besides the blows inflicted on him with the hand (Matthew 26:27) and with the reed (Matthew 27:30), our Lord was judicially scourged (Matthew 27:26). Such scourging would leave the ‘stripe-marks’ which are here spoken of.” ¶ President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “In my judgment the sacrament meeting is the most sacred, the most holy, of all the meetings of the Church. When I reflect upon the gathering of the Savior and his apostles on that memorable night when he introduced the sacrament, when I think of that solemn occasion, my heart is filled with wonderment and my feelings are touched. I consider that gathering one of the most solemn and wonderful since the beginning of time. There the Savior taught them of his coming sacrifice, which in their bewilderment they could not understand. He plainly told them of his death and that his blood should be shed, and this was said in the very hour of his agony for the sins of the world. It was a very solemn occasion; there the sacrament was instituted, and the disciples were commanded to meet together often and commemorate the death and sufferings ... He was about to take upon him the responsibility of paying the debt brought upon the world through the fall, that men might be redeemed from death and from hell. He had taught the people that he was to be lifted up that he might draw all men unto him, and that all who would repent and believe in him, keeping his commandments, should not suffer for he would take upon himself their sins ... For this purpose we are called together once each week to partake of these emblems, witnessing that we do remember our Lord, that we are willing to take upon us his name, and that we will keep his commandments. This covenant we are called upon to renew each week, and we cannot retain the Spirit of the Lord if we do not consistently comply with this commandment. If we love the Lord, we will be present at these meetings in the spirit of worship and prayer, remembering the Lord and the covenant we are to renew each week through this sacrament as he has required it of us.”²⁷ On the sacrament, also see ISAIAH 6:1–7.

6 All we, like sheep, have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the LORD hath laid on him the iniquities of us all. ✓

✓ made the iniquity of us all to meet on him

All we, like sheep, have gone astray. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “All we like sheep have been scattered.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “We all like sheep had strayed.” ¶ Alexander explains: “The original expression is like the sheep (or collectively the flock) i.e. not sheep in general, but the sheep that wander, or that have no shepherd.—The idea of a shepherd, although not expressed, appears to have been present to the writer’s mind, not only in the first clause but the last, where the image meant to be presented is no doubt that of a shepherd laying down his life for the sheep. This may be fairly inferred not merely from the want of connection which would otherwise exist between the clauses, and which can only be supplied in this way, nor even from the striking analogy of Zechariah 13:7, where the figure is again used, but chiefly from the application of the metaphor, with obvious, though tacit, reference to this part of Isaiah, in the New Testament to Christ’s laying down his life for his people (see John 10:11–18, and 1 Peter 2:24–25) ... The figure of wandering, or lost sheep is common in Scripture to denote alienation from God and the misery which is its necessary consequence (see Ezekiel 34:5; Matthew 9:36) ... a comparison with scattered sheep, whose running off in different directions [springs] from confusion, ignorance, and incapacity to choose the right path ... [Theodoret] understands it to denote the vast variety of false religions ...” ¶ We have turned every one to his own way. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Every one of us has turned to his own way.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “Every one hath turned aside into his own way.” ¶ Elder Charles W. Penrose taught regarding these words in Isaiah: “That is what is the matter with the Christian world. They are not walking in the Lord’s way. They are walking in the ways that men have invented. Any student of the Scriptures who is willing to receive truth when it is presented before him, can see by perusing the sacred books of the Old and the New Testaments, that the condition of the world at the present time was anticipated by the ancient prophets and apostles. They all saw that the time would come when the people would turn away from the truth; when they would walk in their own ways; when they would build up churches to themselves; when they would hire men to preach to them things which were wise and good in their own eyes; they would not be very anxious to find out the will of God, or that He might declare it to them, but would have preachers to teach them doctrines which seemed good to their ‘itching ears.’”²⁸ President Brigham Young shared: “Before I heard the gospel I searched diligently to know and understand whatever could be learned among the sectarians respecting God and the plan of salvation. It was so with the majority of the Latter-day Saints. But very little can be learned among Christian professors; they are ignorant about God and His kingdom, and the design He had in view in the formation of the earth and peopling it with His creatures. The Christian world are deficient in these matters; and many among them who believed the Bible was true have felt this, and Martin Luther, John Calvin, John Wesley, and other great Reformers and revivalists have felt this, and have had the spirit of conviction upon them that God was going to reveal something or other to His creatures. My brother Joseph [i.e., Joseph Young who also joined the Church] once said to me (and we were both Methodists at the time), ‘Brother Brigham, there is not a Bible Christian in the world; what will become of the people?’ For many years no person saw a smile on his countenance, in consequence of the burden of the Lord being upon him, and realizing that the inhabitants of the earth had all gone out of the way and had turned every man to his own views. I am ... speaking now of ... their ignorance of the gospel of the Son of God and of the way to be saved in the celestial kingdom of our Father.”²⁹ Elder Derek A. Cuthbert explained: “Anciently Isaiah lamented, ‘We have turned every one to his own way.’”³⁰ ¶ And the LORD hath laid on him the iniquities of us all. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “It pleased the Lord (literally, ‘it shall be the pleasure of the Lord’) to forgive the sins of all of us for His sake.” Instead of iniquity, the Peshitta (Ⲥ) has sins. ¶ The principle of Divine Investiture is found here, again (see introductory chapter). Even some of the Gentile authors, such as Birks, recognize this: “The question. Who speaks in this chapter? has received various answers ... The view which alone explains the whole, without requiring any abrupt change of person, is that it is ‘the Spirit of Christ, which was in’ the prophet, who here speaks by his lips.” ¶ Keith has: “The marginal || and literal meaning of the last clause, ‘The Lord caused the iniquity of us all to meet on him,’ is more expressive. It appears to refer to the act of the elders of Israel laying their hands on the head of the sacrifice, which was symbolical of the transference to it of the guilt of the people. It all met on the head of the victim.” Wordsworth has: “As the Apostle says, ‘He made Him to be sin for us. Who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him’ (2 Corinthians 5:21). And again, ‘Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us’ (Galatians 3:13); ‘He was once offered to bear the sins of many’ (Hebrews 9:28).”

²⁶ Farrar, Frederic W. (1874). The Life of Christ, 2:402–403.

²⁷ President Joseph Fielding Smith, Doctrines of Salvation 2:340–341.

7 He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “He shall pray and He shall be answered, yea, before He shall open His mouth, He shall be heard.”³¹ For He was oppressed, the Peshitta (Ⲥ) has He drew near (Lamsa) / He offered himself (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “He was offered because it was his own will, and he opened not his mouth.” We have, for instance, associated with our Savior’s conviction: “And when he was accused of the chief priests and elders, he answered nothing. Then said Pilate unto him, Hearst thou not how many things they witness against thee? And he answered him to never a word; insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly” (Matthew 27:12–14). Jenour, of these verses, has: “Can anything correspond more exactly than the history and the prophecy in this case?” Schiller-Szinessy, leaning on the Targum (ⲧ) explain that all Christ could have

²⁸ Penrose, Elder Charles W., Sincerity Alone Not Sufficient, Etc. Journal of Discourses 25:44b, 20 May 1883.

²⁹ Young, President Brigham. “Condition of Apostates, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 12:95.

³⁰ Cuthbert, Elder Derek A. The Spirituality of Service, Ensign (CR), May 1990, p.12.

³¹ Allusion to ISAIAH 65:24.

opened His mouth and asked to be rescued and it would have been immediately done: “Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels?” (Matthew 26:53). Then, all would have been lost. ¶ Elder Erastus Snow taught: “[Christ] waged war constantly, and was well prepared for this work, having an inexhaustible source of strength to draw from, the Spirit having been given to him without measure. But at length the time came when the Father said, You must succumb, you must be made the offering. And at this dark hour the power of the Father withdrew itself measurably from him, and he was left to be taken by his enemies, and, like a lamb, was led to the slaughter, but he opened not his mouth because his hour had come. And when he was led to exclaim in his last agony upon the cross, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? [t]he Father did not deign to answer; the time had not yet come to explain it and tell him. But after a little, when he passed the ordeal, made the sacrifice, and by the power of God was raised from the dead, then all was clear, all was explained and comprehended fully. It was necessary that the Father should thus measurably forsake his Son ...”³² On this topic, see Elder Jeffrey R. Holland’s talk, None were with Him (April 2009 General Conference). ¶ He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “He shall deliver over the mighty of the nations as a lamb to the slaughter.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “He was led as a sheep to be slaughtered.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “He shall be led as a sheep to the slaughter.” ¶ Birks has: “Messiah was the Lamb, whom God provided for a spotless offering (Genesis 22:8).” Govett points us to “The place of the scripture which he read was this, He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened he not his mouth: In his humiliation his judgment was taken away: and who shall declare his generation? for his life is taken from the earth. And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man? Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus” (Acts 8:32–35). Govett testifies: “It is therefore evidently implied in the strongest manner that Jesus is the subject of this passage.” Urwick suggests: “The prophet’s comparison is to the sacrifice of the paschal lamb, and he says: ‘As the lamb to the slaughter He is brought’” (emphasis added on paschal lamb). Urwick reminds us that the word for sheep or ewe is also used for Jacob’s wife, Rachel, רָחֵל. ¶ And as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And like a sheep before her shearers is dumb, none shall in His presence open His mouth, or speak a word.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And as a lamb before its shearer is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “And shall be dumb as a lamb before his shearer, and he shall not open his mouth.” ¶ Govett also quotes Christ’s comment: “Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels?” (Matthew 26:53), as well as His refusal to answer the accusations of the High Priest (see Matthew 27:12; Mark 15:3) and of Pilate: “Then said Pilate unto him, Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee? And he answered him to never a word; insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly” (Matthew 27:13–14).

8 He was taken from prison and from judgment; and who shall declare his generation? For he was cut off out of the land of the living; for the transgression of my people was he stricken.

He was taken from prison and from judgment. Schiller-Szinessy explains that Christ was taken “without rule and without justice [וּמִלֵּצָר וּמִשְׁפָּט].” The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “He shall gather our captives (literally, ‘captivity’) from affliction and pain.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “In this humiliation his legal trial was taken away.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “He was taken away from distress, and from judgment.” ¶ The prophet Abinadi, in the Book of Mormon, taught: “I would that ye should understand that God himself shall come down among the children of men, and shall redeem his people ... And thus the flesh becoming subject to the Spirit, or the Son to the Father, being one God, suffereth temptation, and yieldeth not to the temptation, but suffereth himself to be mocked, and scourged, and cast out, and disowned by his people. And after all this, after working many mighty miracles among the children of men, he shall be led, yea, even as Isaiah said, as a sheep before the shearer is dumb, so he opened not his mouth. Yea, even so he shall be led, crucified, and slain, the flesh becoming subject even unto death, the will of the Son being swallowed up in the will of the Father. And thus God breaketh the bands of death, having gained the victory over death; giving the Son power to make intercession for the children of men—Having ascended into heaven, having the bowels of mercy; being filled with compassion towards the children of men; standing betwixt them and justice; having broken the bands of death, taken upon himself their iniquity and their transgressions, having redeemed them, and satisfied the demands of justice” (Mosiah 15:1a, 5–9). ¶ McFadyen, leaning on Marti, suggests the Servant, “debarred from justice was taken away to death.” Cheyne has: “He was taken away] i.e., by a violent death.” ¶ And who shall declare his generation? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And who shall be able to narrate the wonderful works which shall be done for us in His days?” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Who will declare his manner of life.” ¶ Alexander notes: “Kimhi and Hengstenberg explain it to mean, who can declare his posterity or spiritual seed?” See also Abinadi in Mosiah 15:10–14 and 15 ff., so that the declaring of this generation is intimately related to both the seed of Christ as well as the preaching of the Gospel. ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie instead taught: “Who shall declare his generation?] This means, ‘Who will give his genesis? Who will reveal his genealogy? Who will give the source from whence he sprang? Who will announce the divinity of the mortal Messiah?’”³³ ¶ For he was cut off out of the land of the living. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “He shall remove the rule of the nations from the land of Israel.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Because his life is taken from the earth.” ¶ Keith has: “By the expression ‘cut off,’ is implied the violence of his death.” In ISAIAH 38:12 we spoke of the idea, “I have cut off like a weaver my life.” While the Hebrew here is different, the idea is the same. It was the ultimate sacrifice. Cheyne says: “He drank his cup to the dregs.” ¶ For the transgression of my people was he stricken. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The sins which my people have committed (literally, ‘have sinned’) have come upon them.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For the transgressions of my people he is led to death.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has “And the wicked of my people offered him up” (BPE) / “and some of the evil men of my people struck him” (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “For the wickedness of my people have I struck him.”

³² Snow, Elder Erastus, “Rest Signifies Change, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 21:26a. October 1879.

¶ Whitehouse complaints about the use of עַם, my people, here. Multiple exegetes wish to replace my people with peoples. While Cheyne thinks the change is possible he well notes: “Four places, it is true, are mentioned in the Massora in which the proposed substitution is possible, but this passage is not one of them.” Although Christ died for both Jew and Gentile, we read a special pathos into the scene, as in Zechariah 12:10: “And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplications: and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn.” So also: “And one shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends [i.e., my people]” (Zechariah 13:6). ¶ Returning back to the LXX (Ⲅ), see above, Lowth suggests that in the Hebrew we are missing to death לָמוּת, based on an interesting conversation between Origen and the Jewish scholars of his time, according to a note by Kennicott (see Lowth for the details).

9 And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; because he had done no violence evil, neither [was any] deceit in his mouth.

And he made his grave with the wicked. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And He shall deliver the wicked into hell.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Therefore for his funeral I will give up the wicked.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And he shall give the ungodly for his burial.” That is, the two thieves who were crucified with Him. ¶ And with the rich in his death. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And the riches of treasures which they got by violence unto the death of Abbadon (literally, ‘destruction’).” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And the rich for his death.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And the rich for his death.” ¶ Birks has: “Our Lord was buried among malefactors, a class, but with the rich man [Joseph of Arimathea³⁴], a single person, by the appointment of the judges who condemned Him, in minute agreement with the prophecy.” Alexander further comments: “Malefactors were either left unburied, or disgraced by a promiscuous³⁵ interment in an unclean place; a usage explicitly asserted by Josephus and Maimonides. As the Messiah was to die like a criminal, he might have expected to be buried like one; and his exemption from this posthumous dishonour was occasioned by a special providential interference.” ¶ When I visited Jerusalem I was sure I would weep at the Western Wall. Instead, I was surprised because I almost felt as if the Spirit of the Lord was saying: “I am no longer here. I have moved my Presence from what used to be the site of the Holy Temple.” On a different day, about a week later, we visited what is called the Garden Tomb. It was there that I was overcome by the Spirit, which seemed to proclaim: “Why seek ye the living among the dead?” (Luke 24:5) for “I am risen” (Matthew 26:32b). That day, in my Scripture journal I wrote: “I read John 20:1–18 here, today Friday, 7 September 2012, to Linda, just a few meters from the tomb of Christ, at the Garden Tomb site. Indeed, ‘He is risen.’ I was overcome by the Spirit. —7 Sep 2012.” ¶ Because he had done no evil. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “That they who commit sin shall not remain.” Instead of violence, the LXX (Ⲅ), Peshitta (Ⲫ) and Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) use a synonym to evil (as in the Book of Mormon), iniquity. Delitzsch also follows close to the Book of Mormon: "... because He had done no wrong." Indeed, one of the acceptations for the Hebrew חָמָס is wrong (Gesenius). TDOT has "It is already apparent here that all חָמָס is ultimately directed against Yahweh." Urwick explains: "It [חָמָס] signifies active violation of the law. TDOT further has, "In Ezekiel 28:16, "be filled with חָמָס" is synonymous with "sin." In other words, our Redeemer was free from any sort of iniquity, wrong or sin—thus permitting Him to expiate for ours. ¶ Neither was any deceit in his mouth. The Targum (ܬ) has, "And that they should not speak folly (other copies read ܢܚܠܝܢ, 'guile') with their mouth." The LXX (Θ) reads, "Nor practised guile with his mouth." The Savior spoke only that which His Father had Him say.

³³ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. “Who Shall Declare His Generation?” BYU Studies, vol. 16 (1975–1976), Number 4 – Summer 1976, p.554.

³⁴ Matthew 27:57–60.

³⁵ Here, indiscriminate as to the class of people.

vv. 10–12. Christ made the sacrifice willingly. All who become disciples of our Savior become His children, spiritually speaking. Christ will conquer Satan and death. He is the Lamb of God.

10 ¶ Yet it pleased the LORD to bruise him; he hath put [him] to grief; when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin he shall see [his] seed, he shall prolong [his] days, and the pleasure of the LORD shall prosper in his hand.

Yet it pleased the LORD to bruise him. The Targum (ܬ) has, "And it was the pleasure of the Lord to refine and to purify the remnant of His people." The LXX (Θ) reads, "And the Lord determined to purify him from this stroke." Instead of bruise, the Peshitta (ܣ) has afflict (Lamsa) / humiliate (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ϐ) has, "And the Lord was pleased to bruise him in infirmity." ¶ Cheyne well says: "It was no mere accident, but the deliberate will of God that the Servant should suffer innocently ... [and then alluding to those who wish to take these scriptures away from the Messiah] The Servant is a person, not a personification of the pious kernel of Israel. His sufferings are vicarious and voluntary. Hence he who offers the Servant's 'soul,' or 'life,' as a sacrifice, must be the Servant himself ... may it not be one object of the prophet to show that in the death of the Servant various forms of sacrifice find their highest fulfilment?" Kay explains: "In the old sacrifices He had no pleasure, except so far as they foreshadowed this one all-perfect offering." ¶ Cheyne notes that the word pleasure is frequent in Isaiah and also means purpose. So, for instance, in this verse חָפַץ appears twice (חָפַץ! חָפַץ). BDAG, when speaking of the translation of חָפַץ into the LXX (Θ), i.e., βούλεται, defines its meaning as: "to plan on a course of action, intend, plan, will." TDOT has, "especially when God is the subject of חָפַץ [t]his translation stresses above all the absolute certainty, sovereign self-assurance, and efficacy of the act; it refers to a deliberate and efficacious act of will (Cf. Schrenk, 47)." Was not the coming of Messiah to atone for our sins the central, most wonderful and vital part of the plan of salvation? ¶ Then Elder Russell M. Nelson shared: "While visiting the British Museum in London one day, I read a most unusual book. It is not scripture. It is an English translation of an ancient Egyptian manuscript. From it, I quote a dialogue between the Father and the Son. Referring to His Father, Jehovah—the premortal Lord—says: 'He took the clay from the hand of the angel, and made Adam according to Our image and likeness, and He left him lying for forty days and forty nights without putting breath into him. And He heaved sighs over him daily, saying, "If I put breath into this [man], he must suffer many pains." And I said into My Father, "Put breath into him; I will be an advocate for him." And My Father said unto Me, "If I put breath into him, My beloved Son, Thou will be obliged to go down into the world, and to suffer many pains for him before Thou shalt have redeemed him, and made him to come back to his primal state." And I said unto My Father, "Put breath into him; I will be his advocate, and I will go down into the world, and will fulfil Thy command.'" ('Discourse on Abbaton by Timothy, Archbishop of Alexandria,' in Coptic Martyrdoms etc. in Dialect of Upper Egypt, ed. and translated E. A. Wallis Budge (1914), 482. Timothy, archbishop of Alexandria, died in A.D. 385. Brackets are included in Budge's English translation)."³⁶ ¶ He hath put him to grief. When thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin [עֹשֶׂה] he shall see his seed. The Targum (ܬ) has, "In order to cleanse their souls from sin, that they might see the kingdom of their Messiah, that their sons and daughters might multiply." The LXX (Θ) reads, "When his soul shall be given up for a sin offering; of you he shall see a seed." The Douay-Rheims (ϐ) has, "If he shall lay down his life for sin, he shall see a long-lived seed." ¶ Wordsworth underscores the words of the Targum (ܬ): "The Chaldee Targum has here the remarkable words, 'They shall see the Kingdoms of their Messiah.'" ¶ Urwick has, regarding עֹשֶׂה: "a guilt-offering, from עָשָׂה, to be guilty (Leviticus 4:13, 22, 27; 5:2–4, 17, 19); the noun occasionally signifies simply guilt, Genesis 26:10;

³⁶ Nelson, Elder Russell M., "The Creation," Ensign, May 2000, p. 84.

Psalms 68:22; Proverbs 14:9, but usually guilt-offering. It occurs twenty-six times in Leviticus ... The זָבִיחַ was a sacrifice for individual sin ... As in ISAIAH 53:5 the Divine Servant is represented as a sin-offering. His death being an expiation, so here He is described as a guilt offering ... His soul, not simply for the pronoun, but with special reference to the nature of the זָבִיחַ, which was the guilt-offering in the case of individual sin (Leviticus 5:17; Numbers 5:6). Compare to Matthew 20:28.” ¶ Abinadi, much like Isaiah, testified of Christ expiatory sacrifice and the seed of Christ: “And now I say unto you, who shall declare his generation? Behold, I say unto you, that when his soul has been made an offering for sin he shall see his seed. And now what say ye? And who shall be his seed? Behold I say unto you, that whosoever has heard the words of the prophets, yea, all the holy prophets who have prophesied concerning the coming of the Lord—I say unto you, that all those who have hearkened unto their words, and believed that the Lord would redeem his people, and have looked forward to that day for a remission of their sins, I say unto you, that these are his seed, or they are the heirs of the kingdom of God. For these are they whose sins he has borne; these are they for whom he has died, to redeem them from their transgressions. And now, are they not his seed? Yea, and are not the prophets, every one that has opened his mouth to prophesy, that has not fallen into transgression, I mean all the holy prophets ever since the world began? I say unto you that they are his seed. And these are they who have published peace, who have brought good tidings of good, who have published salvation; and said unto Zion: Thy God reigneth!” (Mosiah 15:10–14). Right after this, Abinadi speaks of the beautiful feet of those who share the Gospel of Jesus Christ). In Mosiah 5 we likewise have: “And now, because of the covenant which ye have made ye shall be called the children of Christ, his sons, and his daughters; for behold, this day he hath spiritually begotten you; for ye say that your hearts are changed through faith on his name; therefore, ye are born of him and have become his sons and his daughters. And under this head ye are made free, and there is no other head whereby ye can be made free. There is no other name given whereby salvation cometh; therefore, I would that ye should take upon you the name of Christ, all you that have entered into the covenant with God that ye should be obedient unto the end of your lives. And it shall come to pass that whosoever doeth this shall be found at the right hand of God, for he shall know the name by which he is called; for he shall be called by the name of Christ” (Mosiah 5:7–9). ¶ He shall prolong his days. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And prolong their days.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Which shall prolong their days.” ¶ Cheyne, speaking of the Servant, explains that, “death hath no more dominion over him.”³⁷ Urwick writes: “Though the Divine Servant die, yet shall He live.” Jenour has: “He shall prolong his days] The subject of this prophecy was to be cut off from the land of the living, to make his soul, or life, an offering for sin, and to be laid in the receptacle of the dead; yet here it is declared, he shall prolong his days: what can this mean, but that he shall rise from the grave and live again forever? (See Revelation 1:18).” So also Rawlinson, “A seeming contradiction to the statement (ISAIAH 53:8) that he should be ‘cut off’ out of the land of the living; and the more surprising because his death is made the condition of this long life: ‘When thou shalt make his soul an offering [or, “sacrifice”] for sin,’ then ‘he shall prolong his days.’ But the resurrection of Christ, and his entrance upon an immortal life, (Romans 6:9) after offering himself as a Sacrifice upon the cross, exactly meets the difficulty and solves the riddle (comp. Revelation 1:18).” ¶ And the pleasure of the LORD shall prosper in his hand. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And those that keep (literally, ‘to do’) the law of the Lord shall prosper through His pleasure.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Moreover it is the determination of the Lord.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “And the will of the Lord shall be prosperous in his hand.” The Lord has power—for He will be the judge—to exalt and justify.

11 He shall see of the travail of his soul, [and] shall be satisfied; by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities.

He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “He shall deliver their souls from the servitude of the nations, they shall see the vengeance upon their enemies; the shall be satisfied with the spoil of their kings.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “To remove him from the trouble of his soul.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Because his soul hath laboured, he shall see and be filled.” ¶ Urwick has: “The prophet’s strain from this point becomes triumphant—after the sufferings, glory.” ¶ By his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “By His wisdom He shall justify the righteous, in order to make many to keep (literally, ‘to do’) the law.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “To shew him light and fashion him for knowledge—to justify the Righteous One who is serving many well.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has just instead of righteous. ¶ Urwick notes: “Here those justified are not righteous; they are sinners, as is clear from the words which immediately follow, where their iniquities are named. But though sinners, the righteous

³⁷ Romans 6:9, “Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him.”

Servant justifies them, and is righteous in doing so, because He bears their iniquities.” (See notes on ISAIAH 44:22 regarding justification and sanctification.) Elder Jeffrey R. Holland provided some comfort on the topic of our imperfection: “First of all, if in the days ahead you not only see limitations in those around you but also find elements in your own life that don’t yet measure up to the messages you have heard this weekend, please don’t be cast down in spirit and don’t give up ... With the gift of the Atonement of Jesus Christ and the strength of heaven to help us, we can improve, and the great thing about the gospel is we get credit for trying, even if we don’t always succeed.”³⁸

¶ For he shall bear their iniquities. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And He shall pray for their sins.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “When he shall bear away their sins.” Instead of iniquities, likewise, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has sins. ¶ Urwick explains: “Now, according to the ceremonial law, the sin-stricken Israelite came bearing his own iniquity to the altar, and leading thereto an innocent victim, a bullock or a lamb, whose life he offers as a substitute for his own; thus confessing that the wages of his sin is death; that his own conscience, as well as divine and holy love, demanded an expiation; and that the common basis and fellowship of life involved the possibility of substitution. When within the precincts of the sanctuary, he was to put his hand, or rather to press (ⲡⲓⲛⲓ)³⁹ his hand, heavily (Psalm 88:7) upon the head of the animal (Leviticus 1:4; 4:24). This act was to be performed by the offerer himself; it could not be entrusted to anyone else; never to a priest, except when the sacrifice was presented for the priesthood collectively (Exodus 29:10, 15, 19); for the nation collectively, the elders were to do it, and on the day of atonement the high priest. This act was designed to indicate the personal and intimate relation between the sinner and the victim. We read (Leviticus 1:4): ‘It shall he accepted for him, to make atonement for him.’ The sinner had then with his own hands to perform the act of immolation, that the offering might be clearly marked as his own. The receiving of the blood as it streamed from the fatal wound, and the sprinkling of it, were the exclusive work of the priests. This ritual must be kept in view in the explanation of the words: ‘Upon Him was laid the iniquity of us all; He shall bear their iniquities.’ It finds its fulfilment in the atoning death of the Divine Servant, and the truths it embodied are fully met and satisfied thereby.”

12 Therefore will I divide him [a portion] with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he hath poured out his soul unto death: and he was numbered with the transgressors; and he bare the sins of many, and made intercession for the transgressors.

Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Therefore, I will divide to Him the spoil of many people, and the treasures of strong fortifications.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Therefore he shall inherit many.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “Therefore will I distribute to him very many.” ¶ Barnes suggests: “The words here used are taken from the custom of distributing the spoils of victory after a battle, and the idea is, that as a conqueror takes valuable spoils, so the Messiah would go forth to the spiritual conquest of the world, and subdue it to himself ... the spoils of his conquests would be among the mighty or the many; that is, that his victories would not be confined to a few in number, or to the feeble, but the triumphs of his conquests would extend afar, and be found among the potentates and mighty people of the earth.” I wonder if this verse is related to: “And he that receiveth my Father receiveth my Father’s kingdom; therefore all that my Father hath shall be given unto him” (D&C 84:38); “He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son” (Revelation 21:7); and “That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me” (John 17:21). Without the atonement, none of this would have been possible. ¶ And he shall divide the spoil with the strong. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “He shall divide the spoil.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And divide the spoils of the strong.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “And he shall divide the spoils of the strong.” ¶ Gill writes: “... he shall spoil principalities and powers, destroy Satan and his angels, and make an entire conquest of all his mighty and powerful enemies.” Barnes explains: “It was from language such as this that the Jews obtained the notion that the Messiah would be a distinguished conqueror, and hence, they looked forward to one who as a warrior would carry the standard of victory around the world. But it is evident that it may be applied with much higher beauty to the spiritual victories of the Redeemer, and that it expresses the great and glorious truth that the conquests of the true religion will yet extend over the most formidable obstacles on the earth.” Delitzsch explains: “... the great ones of the earth will be brought to do homage to Him, or at all events to submit to Him.” And once again, the idea of becoming one with the Father and His Beloved and the Holy Ghost comes to mind. ¶ Because he hath poured out his soul unto death: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Because He has delivered His life unto death.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Because his soul was delivered up to death.” Instead of soul, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has life. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has delivered instead of poured out. ¶ Cheyne has: “Poured out his soul” The prophet again emphasizes the voluntary nature of the Servant’s sufferings.” We especially saw this in Abraham’s willingness to sacrifice and Isaac’s disposition to be sacrificed, as a type of Messiah’s expiatory sacrifice. Gill explains: “Because he hath poured out his soul unto death; as water is poured out (Psalm 22:14), or rather as the wine was poured out in the libations or drink offerings; for Christ’s soul was made an offering for sin, as before; and it may be said with respect to his blood, in which is the life, that was shed or poured out for the remission of sin; of which he was emptied.” Delitzsch has: “The blood of the typical sacrifice, which has been hitherto dumb, begins to speak. Faith, which penetrates to the true meaning of the prophecy, hopes on not only for the Lion of the tribe of Judah, but also for the Lamb of God, which beareth the sin of the world.” ¶ Elder Bruce D. Porter testified: “There is yet another dimension of a broken heart—namely; our deep gratitude for Christ’s suffering on our behalf. In Gethsemane, the Savior ‘descended below all things’ as He bore the burden of sin for every human being. At Golgotha, He ‘poured out his soul unto death’ and His great heart literally broke with an all-encompassing love for the children of God. When we remember the Savior and His suffering, our hearts too will break in gratitude for the Anointed One.”⁴⁰ ¶ And he was numbered with the transgressors. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And He shall make the rebellious to keep (literally, ‘to do’) the law.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And he was numbered among transgressors.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has, “And was reputed with the wicked.” ¶ Barnes has: “... he suffered himself to be numbered with the transgressors, or to be put to death with malefactors.” ¶ And he bare the sins of many. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “He shall pray for the sins of many.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And bore away the sins of many.” ¶ Driver & Neubauer quote Yepheth Ben ‘Ali, speaking of the Messiah: “The prophet next says, ‘When his soul makes a trespass-offering,’ indicating thereby that his soul was compelled to take Israel’s guilt upon itself, as it is said below, ‘And he bare the sin of many.’ Another commentator however understands the phrase as meaning that ‘his soul gave itself in place of a trespass-offering,’ i.e., he gave himself up freely to be slain.”

³⁸ Holland, Elder Jeffrey R. Tomorrow the Lord Will Do Wonders among You. April 2016 General Conference.

³⁹ This word not only includes the idea of placing or leaning but also that of the laying on of hands (TDOT). This last concept has numerous significations, including that of transference: “By means of this gesture, Moses transfers his authority to his successor, the priest transfers sins to the scapegoat, and the offerer transfers them to the sacrificial animal (Jewish tradition)” (TDOT).

⁴⁰ Porter, Elder Bruce D., “A Broken Heart and a Contrite Spirit,” October 2007 General Conference.

Urwick explains: “It is true that the verb נשא also expresses the idea of bearing away, and this with reference to sin; because the Israelite, bearing his sin with his sacrifice to the sanctuary, there to offer the victim, had his sin thus cancelled and his guilt removed. The ceremonial of the Day of Atonement [יום כפר] confirmed this, because the scapegoat was ‘to bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land not inhabited’ (Leviticus 16:22 [וְנָשָׂא הַשָּׂעִיר עָלָיו] —And the goat shall bear upon him)); but even here the words נשא עָלָיו convey the idea of a burden borne. The word, however, thus came to mean not only the means of forgiveness, but forgiveness itself; and thus we find it used in Psalm 32:1: אֲשֶׁר־נְשִׂי-פָשַׁע [Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven] and Psalm 32:5: וְנָשָׂאתָ עֲוֹן חַטָּאתִי [forgavest the iniquity of my sin].” ¶ And made intercession for the transgressors. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And as for the transgressors, each shall be pardoned for His sake.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And on account of their iniquities was delivered up.” The BPE (Ⲫ) has, “And he was found among the transgressors,” while Lamsa repeats the idea that He died the death of transgressors. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has, “And hath prayed for the transgressors.” See also ISAIAH 59:16. ¶ Gill has: “... as he did upon the cross, even for those that were the instruments of his death, (Luke 23:34) and as he now does, in heaven, for all those sinners for whom he died; not merely in a petitionary way, but by presenting himself, blood, righteousness, and sacrifice; pleading the merits of these, and calling for, in a way of justice and legal demand, all those blessings which were stipulated in an everlasting covenant between him and his Father, to be given to his people, in consequence of his sufferings and death.” Barnes has: “It may not refer here to the mere act of making prayer or supplication, but rather perhaps to the whole work of the intercession, in which the Redeemer, as high priest, presents the merit of his atoning blood before the throne of mercy and pleads for people.” ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie explains: “According to the law of intercession, as ordained and established by the Father, the Lord Jesus has ‘power to make intercession for the children of men.’ (Mosiah 15:8.) That is to say, he has the role of interceding, of mediating, of praying, petitioning, and entreating the Father to grant mercy and blessings to men. One of Isaiah’s great Messianic prophecies says: ‘He bare the sins of many, and made intercession for the transgressors (ISAIAH 53:12). Of this ministry of intercession Paul affirms: ‘It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us’ (Romans 8:34). And it is Lehi who tells us: Christ ‘is the firstfruits unto God, inasmuch as he shall make intercession for all the children of men; and they that believe in him shall be saved. And because of the intercession for all all men come unto God; wherefore, they stand in the presence of him, to be judged of him according to the truth and holiness which is in him' (2 Nephi 2:9–10)."⁴¹ ¶ Henderson notes: "So manifestly is the doctrine of atonement taught in this important section of the prophet, that Gesenius himself is compelled to acknowledge it in the following terms: 'Most Hebrew readers, who were previously familiar with the ideas of sacrifice and substitution, must necessarily have taken this view of the passage; and it cannot be doubted, that the apostolic representation of the death of Christ as an atonement pre-eminently rests upon this basis' (Comment, ii, Theil. p. 191)." Urwick wrote: "It is true, as the Epistle to the Hebrews says: 'The blood of bulls and of goats could never take away sins,'⁴² they were effectual only as types of the one great sacrifice offered for the sin of the world by the Lord Jesus Christ upon the cross; but the penitent Israelite, by means of them, obtained the hope of the forgiveness which God in Christ can grant."

FIRST POSTED: 21 May 2016

⁴¹ McConkie, Bruce R. A New Witness for the Articles of Faith. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1985.

⁴² Hebrews 10:4.

Isaiah 54

In the Book of Mormon, before quoting ISAIAH 54, the Lord teaches: “But if they [i.e., the Gentile nations] will repent and hearken unto my words, and harden not their hearts, I will establish my church among them, and they shall come in unto the covenant and be numbered among this the remnant of Jacob, unto whom I have given this land for their inheritance; And they shall assist my people, the remnant of Jacob, and also as many of the house of Israel as shall come, that they may build a city, which shall be called the New Jerusalem. And then shall they assist my people that they may be gathered in, who are scattered upon all the face of the land, in unto the New Jerusalem. And then shall the power of heaven come down among them; and I also will be in the midst. And then shall the work of the Father commence at that day, even when this gospel shall be preached among the remnant of this people. Verily I say unto you, at that day shall the work of the Father commence among all the dispersed of my people, yea, even the tribes which have been lost, which the Father hath led away out of Jerusalem. Yea, the work shall commence among all the dispersed of my people, with the Father to prepare the way whereby they may come unto me, that they may call on the Father in my name. Yea, and then shall the work commence, with the Father among all nations in preparing the way whereby his people may be gathered home to the land of their inheritance. And they shall go out from all nations; and they shall not go out in haste, nor go by flight, for I will go before them, saith the Father, and I will be their rearward” (3 Nephi 21:29). Then, after quoting ISAIAH 54 the Savior says: “For surely [Isaiah] spake as touching all things concerning my people which are of the house of Israel; therefore it must needs be that he must speak also to the Gentiles” (3 Nephi 23:2). The Savior also speaks about the Book of Mormon going forth among the Gentile nations with an invitation to baptism (3 Nephi 23:4–5). ¶ Elder Orson Pratt explained these verses in 3 Nephi 21, which I believe must be understood in order to comprehend ISAIAH 54 in its proper context. Elder Orson Pratt quotes 2 Nephi 16:6–10: “‘And thus commandeth the Father that I should say unto you: At that day when the Gentiles shall sin against my gospel’—that is the Gospel contained in this book which he promised to bring forth unto them [i.e., the Book of Mormon—GB]—‘and shall be lifted up in the pride of their hearts above all nations, and above all the people of the whole earth,’—you can judge whether this is true or not so far as the American nation is concerned—‘... and shall reject the fulness of my gospel, behold, saith the Father, I will bring the fulness of my gospel from among them.’” Elder Pratt goes on to explain that this removal meant moving away from Jackson County and eventually setting in the Rocky Mountains ... “There is one thing which I am now about to read which has not yet been fulfilled, and which we must fulfill before Zion is redeemed. I will read it—‘And then I will remember my covenant which I have made unto my people, O house of Israel, and I will bring my gospel unto them’ (3 Nephi 16:11).” Elder Pratt then explains the importance of taking the Gospel to “the remnants of Joseph,” that is, to the Lamanites. “The Lord said when their record [i.e., the Book of Mormon—GB] should come forth in the latter days that he would send his messengers to them ... After having foretold a great many things that should transpire in the latter days our Lord and Savior also spoke of that portion of the Gentiles which would repent and receive this book called the Book of Mormon, and he makes the following promise unto them—‘If they will repent and hearken unto my words, and harden not their hearts, I will establish my church among them’ (3 Nephi 21:22) ... This the Lord has done, and the Church now numbers over a hundred thousand right here [this was written back in 1875—GB] ... Another thing mentioned in prophecy is that they, ‘the Gentiles, shall assist my people, the house of Israel, the remnant of Jacob, and also as many of the house of Israel as shall come, that they may build a city, which shall be called the New Jerusalem. And then shall they assist my people, who are scattered upon all the face of the land, that may be gathered in unto the New Jerusalem. And then shall the power of heaven come down and be in the midst of this people; and I also will be in their midst. And then shall the work of the Father commence at that day, even when this gospel shall be preached among the remnant of this people. Verily I say unto you, at that day shall the work of the Father commence among all the dispersed of my people’ (3 Nephi 21:23–26).” Elder Pratt explains that members need to pray fervently for the conversion of the Lamanites which will lead to the building of the New Jerusalem. “The Lord says—‘They,’ the Gentiles, who believe in the Book of Mormon, ‘shall assist my people, the remnant of Jacob, that they may build a city, which shall be called the New Jerusalem’ (3 Nephi 21:23) ... [this gathering must take place] to all the tribes that dwell in the Territories of the United States, also to all those who are scattered through Mexico, and Central and South America, and the object of our going will be to declare the principles of the Gospel unto them, and bring them to a knowledge of the truth ... ‘then shall the powers of heaven come down and be in the midst of this people; and I also will be in your midst’ (3 Nephi 21:25) ... Now I do not say that this will be a period after his second coming in the clouds of heaven, but I believe that it will be a coming prior to that time, when he comes to manifest himself to all the nations and kindreds of the earth” (Elder Orson Pratt, Journal of Discourses, 17:297b–302a.). ¶ Does not the power of heavens so spoken off above seem to include the building of all these temples to the Lord? And the pouring out of the Holy Ghost? Does not the gathering of the Ten Lost Tribes seem to be included? So also the chapter heading for 3 Nephi 21 seems to indicate. So, who is the barren that didst not bear mentioned in ISAIAH 54? I believe Judah and Israel are meant and it is they to whom the Lord speaks in so much tenderness. The latter-day restoration and gathering of Israel has begun. All are being invited to come unto Christ. Truly, there is reason to shout for joy. Through the principle of telescoping, the Prophet Isaiah was permitted to see the restoration of the Gospel, the preaching of the same throughout the world, as well as the New Jerusalem and the millennial day.

vv. 1–5. After all that Israel has suffered she is invited to shout for joy for she is no longer the desolate wife. The Restored Church is commanded to enlarge her tent and strengthen her stakes, and gather Israel from throughout the nations. The Holy One of Israel is Israel’s husband.

1 ¶ AND then shall that which is written come to pass: SING, O barren, thou [that] didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou [that] didst not travail with child; for more [are] the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the LORD.

AND then shall that which is written come to pass: SING, O barren, thou that didst not bear. Targum (Ⓢ) has, “Sing, O Jerusalem, who was like a barren woman that beareth not.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “Rejoice thou barren, who bearest not.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓣ) has, “Give praise, O thou barren, that bearest not.” ¶ The expression “And then shall that which is written come to pass,” I would propose in this instance, is an allusion to the fulfillment of the promises in Rain in Due Season where the later-day gathering of Israel to her Lord is promised: “And shalt return unto the LORD thy God, and shalt obey his voice according to all that I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thine heart, and with all thy soul; That then the LORD thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the nations, whither the LORD thy God hath scattered thee. If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the LORD thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee” (Deuteronomy 30:2–4). The Hebrew sing [שִׁיר] from the root, [שָׂרָה] is translated by Gesenius as “shout for joy.” Jennings points out that indeed we have reason to sing—or to shout for joy—when we receive the news of the completed atonement. In Job 38:4–7 we read of mankind’s reaction to the Plan of Salvation in the premortal world—a plan whose foundation was Christ’s atoning sacrifice: “Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou hast understanding. Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the line upon it? Whereupon are the foundations thereof fastened? or who laid the corner stone thereof; When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?” ¶ ISAIAH 54:1 is intimately related to ISAIAH 49:21, “Then shalt thou say in thine heart, Who hath begotten me these, seeing I have lost my children, and am desolate, a captive, and removing to and fro? and who hath brought up these? Behold, I was left alone; these, where had they been?” Both allude to the lost ten tribes as well as the Lamanite nation. But it will not end there and rather continue forth unto the calling of all the tribes ending up with Judah. ¶ In ISAIAH 5 we can read the allegory of the Zenos regarding the olive vineyard. Why are we to weep with joy, it is because the Lord has once again restored His Church (Jacob 5:70) and called His servants for the last time to go forth into the vineyard calling both Jew and Gentile into the fold and grafting back the natural branches into the tree. All are invited to come unto Christ. The last shall be first and the first, last (Jacob 5:63). We are all called, but each one of us decides if we will be among the chosen. We decide if we will choose to believe the report (ISAIAH 53:1) or turn our backs on Christ. ¶ To travail with child means to bear gospel fruits. Many of the Gentile commentators have discarded the Jews and the rest of Israel. In the affectionate expressions of this chapter we find that while Israel has felt forsaken and desolate, that she will bring forth the fruits of repentance mentioned in Deuteronomy 30:3 and Jacob 5. The Lord will gather her with great and tender mercies. Keith observes: “The same call to sing and rejoice, in reference to the same period, is often addressed to the nation: ‘Sing, daughter of Zion; shout, Israel; be glad, and rejoice with all the heart, daughter of Jerusalem. The Lord hath taken away thy judgments. The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy,’ (Zephaniah 3:14–17). The view given of the verse is corroborated by other passages, as in Hosea 2, where Israel’s calamities are represented as arising from, and continuing during, her separation from God her husband; but by judgment she will be brought to return to the Lord, when she shall sing as in the days of her youth, and shall call the Lord Ishi [אִשִּׁי], my husband.” The Hosea quote is of particular interest as it points to Ephraim, the Northern Kingdom, or the Ten

Tribes who would soon be taken captive. ¶ Break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou [that] didst not travail with child. Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Rejoice with praise and be glad.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Break forth with shouts of joy, thou who sufferest not the pangs of child birth.” Instead of cry aloud, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has rejoice (Lamsa) / exult (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, for the first half, “Sing forth praise, and make a joyful noise.” ¶ Regarding צְהִל, As a horseman I could not pass up what Whitehouse says here: “... the verb rendered cry aloud is descriptive of a high-pitched voice (cf. ISAIAH 10:30), employed in Jeremiah 5:8 in reference to the neighing of horses. It is the natural expression of strong emotion, whether of joy or fear.” So also Gesenius, who defines צְהִל as: “an acute and clear voice; hence to neigh as a horse, (compare הִלֵּל and צָלַל), Jeremiah 5:8; to shout for joy, to cry out (for joy), used of persons, ISAIAH 12:6; 54:1.” ¶ Regarding barren, Wade explains: “The word is used here, not in the sense of one that has never yet had offspring (as in 1 Samuel 2:5), but of one who has been bereaved of her children and separated from her husband.” ¶ For more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the LORD. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Who was like a woman that conceiveth not: for more shall be the children of Jerusalem that was laid desolate, than of the inhabited city, saith the Lord.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “For many more are the children of the desolate than of her who hath a husband.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “For many are the children of the desolate, more than of her that hath a husband, saith the Lord.” ¶ Nägelsbach has: “For the Israel to which he speaks here is the שְׁמֵמָה ‘desolate,’ that is no more בְּעוּלָה ‘married,’ but is forsaken and repudiated by her husband.” The expression “Children of the desolate [בְּנֵי-שְׁמֵמָה]” is an interesting one. ¶ The Pulpit Commentary in Galatians 4:27 (where this verse in Isaiah is used as an allegory) explains that desolate is the same word used in 2 Samuel 13:20, “And Absalom her brother said unto her, Hath Amnon thy brother been with thee? but hold now thy peace, my sister: he is thy brother; regard not this thing. So Tamar remained desolate [שְׁמֵמָה] in her brother Absalom's house.”

Gesenius explains the word שְׁמֵמָה, as silent as well as desolate in the sense of laid waste. TDOT speaks of both psychological as well as geographical desolation. ¶ The Pulpit Commentary in Galatians has: “It points in the present case to the solitary and unhappy condition of a woman ‘forsaken by her husband.’” Most exegetes in Galatians speak of Sarah as being the barren who could not conceive, in contrast to Agar who was fertile. For those who may be interested, Govett, here in

Isaiah, does an excellent job of presenting that perspective. However, if we look at the scriptures carefully, we can note that it has been Israel who has now been the desolate and forsaken one. As the times of the Gentile nations come closer to being fulfilled, the gospel will go with much strength to all of the world. Jennings well notes: “We must not press this [what was said in Galatians] so far as to take the whole prophecy away from the Jew altogether, and apply it solely to the [Christian] Church, leaving Israel cast away permanently—that all Scripture clearly forbids. Nor, indeed, can this whole prophecy be applied to the Church; for, as in Christ, God never hides His face from her ‘in a little wrath’; nor is the figure of a married wife applied to the Church, but that of a ‘chaste virgin’ (2 Corinthians 11:2); so that the whole scope of Scripture demands that this address be seen as directed primarily to the penitent remnant, representing the redeemed nation [of Israel].” Paul also warned the Gentiles not to boast that they have replaced Israel, in Romans 11:17–26. ¶ Rabbi Rosenberg, leaning on Redak, observes: “the children of the married woman” This refers to the gentiles ... as opposed to the bereaved widow, who is desolate, symbolizing Jerusalem ... [and] alludes to the fourth kingdom mentioned by Daniel (Daniel 2:40), which will dominate the world prior to the coming of the Messiah.” As LDS we would say, compare it to Daniel 2:45, a kingdom to be established precisely before the Second Advent of Messiah. ¶ Horsley suggests: “The converted race of Israel is represented under the image of the wife turned out of doors for misbehaviour, forgiven and taken home again.” Certainly Judah and Israel have been repudiated—but not forever. Nägelsbach writes: “In so far Israel is despised, repudiated, forsaken by its husband. But from the broken shell issues the kernel that from the beginning was hid in the shell till the period of ripeness. And this kernel now enters on a new existence, in which it develops to a greatness and glory, in comparison with which the greatness and glory of its former stage of existence almost vanish. For the narrow house becomes a mighty edifice under which all nations of the earth find room.”

2 Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations; spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes;

Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Enlarge the place of the house of thy dwelling, and from the cities of the land do not keep back the inhabitants; multiply the people of the camp, and increase the number of thy governors.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “For the Lord said, Enlarge the place of thy tent and thy curtains; fix up; spare not; lengthen thy cords and make thy stakes strong.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the first half, “Enlarge the place of thy tent, and stretch out the skins of thy tabernacles.” ¶ Cheyne, leaning on Dr. Weir, points to Jeremiah 10:20, where the opposite thought is found: “My tabernacle is spoiled, and all my cords are broken: my children are gone forth of me, and they are not: there is none to stretch forth my tent any more, and to set up my curtains.” Leeson renders the Jeremiah text: “But now my tent is laid waste, and all my cords are torn asunder; my children are gone away from me, and they are not here; there is no one to stretch forth my tent any more, and to set up my curtains.” ¶ Henderson explains: “This beautiful metaphor is taken from the pastoral life, which, in the East, renders movable habitations absolutely necessary. The Orientals have two kinds of tents, the one larger, and the other smaller; but both constructed much in the same way. They are sustained by poles, more or fewer in number, according to the size of the tent, but the tallest is always in the midst; while the others suspend the covering round the sides. This covering is made of a stuff woven from wool and camel’s hair; it hangs down like a curtain over the side-poles, and is fastened by cords to wooden pegs, which are firmly driven into the ground. Other cords, fastened at the one end to the tops of the poles, and at the other to pegs or stakes, keep the tent steady, and secure it against the violence of storms. As the family increases, it is proportionally enlarged, and requires the cords to be longer, and the stakes to be stronger in proportion.

By אֹהֶל, tent, is meant the entire habitation; by מִשְׁכָּנָה, dwelling, the different compartments into which it was divided by the smaller curtains suspended from the roof.” Cowles says: “With the figure of oriental and nomadic life in tents before the mind, Zion is exhorted to enlarge her tent-room; to spread out far more widely the tent-curtains within which she dwells; to push this enlargement with unsparing hand; to make her tent-cords longer and her tent-pins stronger; for she must enlarge (‘break forth’) on every hand.” Keith writes: “The increase of the nation is here farther developed in an allusion to the usage with a tent. As an eastern family dwelling in a tent would require, in order to provide for an increase to their numbers, to extend the curtain or covering, and to lengthen the cords and strengthen the stakes which supported it, so Israel is represented as requiring enlarged room for her population which are said to burst forth on all sides.”

¶ Nägelsbach explains: “נָטָה here does not mean ‘to stretch or strain’ (ISAIAH 44:13), but ‘to expand ... The Prophet implies that Zion may become concerned lest her dwelling be too much extended, and that she would check the expansion. He therefore calls on her not to do so: אַל-תִּחְשָׁב ‘do not oppose, hinder it’ (ISAIAH

58:1). In other words, do not oppose the expansion of this “tent” but rather embrace it. ¶ For all the nations of the earth are to find their spiritual dwelling under this tent. Corresponding to the greatness of the tent, the ropes must be lengthened and the pins be set firmly. But it has been justly remarked that strengthening the stakes refers not only to the greater resistance required for a tent of greater dimensions, but also to the fact that this is to be no more a nomadic tent, but is to be a tabernacle continuing forever (ISAIAH 33:20).” ¶ Elder Merrill J. Bateman, who has frequently quoted ISAIAH 54:1–2, also explains that this verse includes an allusion to the Tabernacle built in the desert, during the time of Moses. And then tells us that as the curtains and cords are expanded, they represent the idea that temples will cover the earth.¹ ¶ Brewster writes: “The clarion call to ‘enlarge’ and ‘strengthen’ the stakes of Zion was given anciently to Isaiah (ISAIAH 54:2), repeated to the Nephites (3 Nephi 22:2), and reiterated in our day (D&C 109:59; 133:9). A stake is an ecclesiastical unit of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and covers a specific geographical area. According to the Lord, stakes are ‘curtains or the strength of Zion’ (D&C 101:21). They are places where the Saints of God may be instructed more perfectly in the doctrines of salvation.”² President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “Isaiah speaks of Zion as a tent, or tabernacle, having in mind the Tabernacle which was built and carried in the wilderness in the days of Moses, and the cords are the binding cables that extend from the tent, or tabernacle, to the stakes which are fastened in the ground. Now, the Lord revealed that Zion was to be built and surrounding her would be the stakes helping to bind and keep her in place ... Zion is the tent, the stakes of Zion are the binding pegs that support her.”³ Bishop Merrill J. Bateman shares: “[the tent] represents the gospel of Christ. [Isaiah] states that in the last days the cords of the tent would be stretched across the earth and stakes would be planted in every land. We literally are seeing that fulfilled today. As I have thought about these passages, I have thought of the awesome task of supporting the Brethren in carrying the gospel to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people.”⁴ President Ezra Taft Benson teaches: “In revelation the Lord states: ‘For Zion must increase in beauty and in holiness; her borders must be enlarged; her stakes must be strengthened; yea, verily I say unto you, Zion must arise

¹ Bateman, Elder Merrill, BYU devotional, 11 January 2000.

² Hoyt W. Brewster, Jr., Doctrine and Covenants Encyclopedia, p. 271, 328, 559; Isaiah Plain and Simple: The Message of Isaiah in the Book of Mormon, p. 263.

³ Smith, Joseph Fielding. Church History and Modern Revelation, 2:88.

⁴ Bateman, Bishop Merrill J. Stretching the Cords of the Tent, Ensign (CR), May 1994, p.65.

and put on her beautiful garments’ (D&C 82:14). Here the Lord declares a great purpose of a stake: to be a beautiful emblem for all the world to see. The phrase ‘put on her beautiful garments’ refers, of course, to the inner sanctity that must be attained by every member who calls himself or herself a Saint ... The Lord gives this explanation of the purpose of stakes: ‘Verily I say unto you all: Arise and shine forth, that thy light may be a standard for the nations; And that the gathering together upon the land of Zion, and upon her stakes, may be for a defense, and for a refuge from the storm, and from wrath when it shall be poured out without mixture upon the whole earth’ (D&C 115:5–6).”⁵

¶ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland, in one of my all-time favorite talks (part of which we quoted under ISAIAH 33:23)—warning against those who criticize the Church or lean on false doctrines—pleads: “I speak carefully and lovingly to any of the adults of the Church, parents or otherwise, who may be given to cynicism or skepticism, who in matters of whole-souled devotion always seem to hang back a little, who at the Church’s doctrinal campsite always like to pitch their tents out on the periphery of religious faith. To all such—whom we do love and wish were more comfortable camping nearer to us—I say, please be aware that the full price to be paid for such a stance does not always come due in your lifetime. No, sadly, some elements of this can be a kind of profligate national debt, with payments coming out of your children’s and grandchildren’s pockets in far more expensive ways than you ever intended it to be ... When erecting their sacred tabernacle in the wilderness of Sinai, the ancient children of Israel were commanded to make firm their supporting cords and strengthen the stakes which held them. The reason? Storms arise in life—regularly.”⁶

3 For thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left, and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles and make the desolate cities to be inhabited.

For thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left. Targum (ⓧ) has, “For thou shalt spread abroad to the south and to the north.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “Extend still farther to the right and left.” Instead of break forth, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has expand (Lamsa) / multiply (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “For thou shalt pass on to the right hand, and to the left.”

¶ Nägelsbach writes: “There appears in these words to be an allusion to Genesis 28:14, ‘and thy seed shall be as dust of the earth, and thou shalt break forth (וְיִצְרָא) to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south.” Several exegetes suggest that they shall expand on all sides. In Genesis, these words were given to Jacob (or Israel) in continuation of the Abrahamic covenant. This is also the meaning for us today.

Nägelsbach continues: “We learn from these passages that the seed of Israel shall not merely take possession of some nations, but of all nations, and not of lands by expelling the inhabitants, but actually of the inhabitants themselves. For these themselves shall become the seed of Israel.” And most of the seed, rather than being adopted into Israel, will be literal descendants who have been spread throughout the nations of the world, where the Lord would “gather thee from all the nations, whither the LORD thy God hath scattered thee”

(Deuteronomy 30:3b). ¶ And thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles and make the desolate cities to be inhabited.

Targum (ⓧ) has, “And thy children shall inherit the nations, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited.”

The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “And thy seed shall inherit nations and thou shalt inhabit wasted cities.” Instead of inherit the Gentiles; I prefer to translate גוֹיִם here as nations, as in the ASV. Govett quotes the John the revelator, wherein those of every tribe (Juda, Reuben, Gad, Asser, Naphtali, Manasseh, Simeon, Levi, Issachar, Zebulon, Joseph, Benjamin) are sealed and “After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands” (Revelation 7:1–9).

4 Fear not, for thou shalt not be ashamed; neither be thou confounded, for thou shalt not be put to shame; for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more.

Fear not, for thou shalt not be ashamed; neither be thou confounded, for thou shalt not be put to shame. The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “Be not terrified because thou hast been exposed to shame; nor blush because thou hast been reproached.” Instead of confounded, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has rebuked (Lamsa) / overcome (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) instead of confounded and blush has ashamed and confounded. ¶ Gesenius explains that בִּישׁוֹ not so much means blush but rather “paleness and terror.” Westermann points out that “With Israel and the nations round about her, suffering and shame went together as the outside and the inside of the same phenomenon.” Westermann goes on to explain that just as a barren woman suffered and also felt shame, so it was with Israel in her defeat. And we might say that military defeat was the small part and portion of it, compared to the knowledge that God had refused to continue, for the time, to be her God and to consider her His people. The shame spoken of here is that of Israel’s apostasy. We have heard the injunction often from the Lord, not to fear but to trust in His strength and in His arm. ¶ For thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more. The LXX (6) reads, “For thou shalt forget the shame of ancient times, and the reproach of thy widowhood thou shalt remember no more.” Horsley has: “... ‘the shame of thy youth—the reproach of thy widowhood.’ —‘the shame,’ her transgressions, described under the image of incontinence;⁷ ‘the reproach,’ the punishment. The pardon shall be so complete that the memory both of the offence and the punishment shall be obliterated.” Regarding barrenness, Luther explains: “This is a Hebraism. Since virginity is the greatest kind of disorder [not virginity but rather the unmarried state for a woman of marriageable age; or the state of barrenness for a married woman—GB], fertility receives the highest praise. Where there was no fertility, there was disgrace, as the mother of John shows, ‘Behold, the Lord has taken away my reproach’ (cf. Luke 1:25).” Delitzsch has: “It was no real widowhood, however, but only an apparent one (Jeremiah 51:5), for the husband of Jerusalem was living still.” ¶ Better, Kay explains that the shame of thy youth is associated with apostasy. So also Rawlinson who has: “Israel became a ‘widow’ when Jehovah withdrew his presence from her, when the Shekinah disappeared from the temple, and the temple itself was destroyed, and Jerusalem was a desolation, and the peoples captives in a far land.”

⁵ Benson, Ezra Taft. The Teachings of Ezra Taft Benson. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1988, pp. 149–151.

⁶ Holland, Elder Jeffrey R. “A Prayer for the Children,” General Conference, April 2003.

5 For thy Maker, [is] thine husband, the LORD of hosts [is] his name; and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel—the God of the whole earth shall he be called.

For thy Maker, thine husband, the LORD of hosts is his name. The LXX (6) reads, “For the Lord who is thy maker, whose name is the Lord of Hosts.” Instead, the Peshitta (5) has, for the first half, “For your LORD shall do thus to you.” The Douay-Rheims (2) has, “For he that made thee shall rule over thee, the Lord of hosts is his name.” Ibn Ezra has: “בועלִיךְ ‘Thine husband’ is here used for מלְכֶךָ ‘thy King,’ and עֹשֶׂיךָ ‘thy Maker’ for אֱלֹהֶיךָ ‘thy God.’” Rabbi Rosenberg, leaning on Ibn Ezra and on Redak explains: “These terms are grammatically plural, used as the plural of majesty.” Cowles has: “The magnificent thoughts of this verse are clothed in the richest poetical conceptions and in the finest style of Hebrew parallelism.—The God who made thee is thy Husband, and he is truly the Lord of Hosts, God of the celestial armies ... Thy redeemer is the Holy One of Israel, their very Savior, their dearest Friend, to be particularly appropriated by them as their own Holy One. He is also truly ‘the God of the whole earth’ ... In Hebrew life, the redeemer was nearest of kin, and especially bound to the sacred duties of personal protection, redress of wrongs and vindication of rights ... Next to that of husband toward wife, his was in Hebrew life the relation that combined in itself most of the elements of a near and faithful friend, bound to make any possible sacrifices and efforts for the welfare of his brother. In this sense Jehovah appears here as the Redeemer as well as the Husband of his people.” ¶ Keith reminds us: “This comparison is often employed in describing the restored favour of God to Israel: ‘I will betroth thee unto me forever; yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness and in judgment, and in lovingkindness and in mercies:’ and what is meant by this is taught when it is added, ‘I will say to them who were not my people. Thou art my people; and they shall say, Thou art my God’ (Hosea 2:19, 23, emphasis added). The same reference as here to the power of God, along with the reference to his relation to Israel as peculiarly their God, is often introduced, as if intended as a pledge that he was able to perform what he promised.” ¶ And thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel—the God of the whole earth shall he be called. The LXX (6) reads, “Even he who delivered thee, shall be called the God of Israel, in the whole earth.” ¶ Birks has: “The Redeemer hoped for ... [t]he Holy One of Israel has now made himself the near kinsman (Leviticus 25:48); and He it is that will ransom His people from their bondage.” In 1 Kings 20:28b we read: “Because the Syrians have said, The LORD is God of the hills, but he is not God of the valleys, therefore will I deliver all this great multitude into thine hand, and ye shall know that I am the LORD.” Just like the Lord is not just the Lord of the hills, nor is He simply the Lord of the valleys, so also the Lord, the Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel is not limited in His power: He is the God of the whole earth. And not just the earth, but worlds without number. The day will come when this shall be openly recognized, and every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess this truth.

vv. 6–10. The Lord speaks tenderly to Israel. This is the last dispensation, the dispensation of the fullness of times, where the Church will never fall away again.

⁷ Lack of chastity: “failure to restrain sexual appetite” (Webster).

6 ¶ For the LORD hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit, and a wife of youth, when thou wast refused, saith thy God.

For the LORD hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For as a woman forsaken, and afflicted in spirit, the Shekinah, the Lord, met thee.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “The Lord hath not called thee as a wife forsaken and disconsolate.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has mourning instead of grieved. ¶ Birks has: “The figure is that of a wife under double grief, not only as barren, but as rejected and disowned by her husband.” Leiser renders the verse: “For as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit did the Lord call thee back, and as a wife of youth, that was rejected, saith thy God.” Keith writes: “The act is represented as already past and done [prophetic perfect]—thy Maker is thine husband—the Lord hath called thee—as in other places, although the events were still future, a form of prophecy fitted to give increased assurance of the certainty of its accomplishment.” Alexander has: “Reduced to a prosaic form and order, this verse seems to mean, that Jehovah had espoused her in her youth, then cast her off for her iniquities, and now at last recalled her from her solitude and grief to be his wife again.” Orelli explains: “Israel was a wife of youth, the Lord’s first love, whom He only temporarily rejected.” It is this wife that the Lord so tenderly invites back to the fold in ISAIAH 54. In ISAIAH 50:1 (for those concerned with the implications of Deuteronomy 24:4) we spoke that the repudiated wife could be taken back by the Husband because she did not enter into a covenant relationship with another husband—and thus in this sense was not defiled. ¶ And a wife of youth, when thou wast refused, saith thy God. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And a woman of youth when she was forsaken.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Nor as a wife that hath been hated from her youth. Thy God hath said.” Instead of a wife of youth, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has a wife forsaken from her youth. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “And as a wife cast off from her youth, said thy God.” Cowles writes: “Thy Maker surely is thy Husband, for he now invites thee to return into this relationship, despite of its suspension because of thy past sins ... The spirit of the passage is, Thou shalt be recalled with renewed and yet stronger love, to a married life far more rich in its fruits of joy, and those fruits far more enduring.” Keith has: “The expression ‘a wife of youth,’ may denote the keenness of grief when forsaken or refused, as it is in the text, the affections being warmest in youth; or rather, it may refer to the circumstance that Israel was such, that it was in her youth as a nation that she was selected as the object of divine favour: or both ideas may be included, as in the following passage:—‘I remember thee, the kindness of thy youth, the love of thine espousals’ (Jeremiah 2:2).⁸ Skinner explains: “Although Zion is temporarily estranged from Jehovah, she is yet a ‘wife of youth’ holding a permanent place in her husband’s affections.” Note the expression אֱלֹהֶיךָ, thy God. Here the Lord is reminding Israel of His covenant relationship with her, as we saw in Rain in Due Season, “And I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people” (Leviticus 26:12). Israel may have been forsaken for a small moment, but she was not put away forever.

7 For a small moment have I forsaken thee, but with great mercies will I gather thee.

For a small moment [בְּרִנָּה קָטָן] have I forsaken thee.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “In a little anger have I forsaken thee.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “I left thee for a little while.” ¶ Wordsworth has: “In a little wrath] In an outburst of wrath, breaking forth like the Flood, to which there is a reference in what follows [ISAIAH 54:9], and which was of short duration.” Keith writes: “There is here a contrast between the sorrows and the future joys of the nation when gathered and blessed. Protracted in duration and grievous in character as has been her shame, it will yet be short and light in comparison of her glory: how great, then, must that glory be?” Luther explains that despite the brevity of our difficult moments, we tend to elongate them in our minds. The Prophet Joseph Smith was comforted by the Savior: “My son, peace be unto thy soul; thine adversity and thine afflictions shall be but a small moment; And then, if thou endure it well, God shall exalt thee on high” (D&C 121:7–8a, emphasis added). These words also remind us of “Reproving betimes with sharpness, when moved upon by the Holy Ghost; and then showing forth afterwards an increase of love toward him whom thou hast reproved, lest he esteem thee to be his enemy; That he may know that thy faithfulness is stronger than the cords of death” (D&C 121:43–44). For a small moment, then, puts mortality in the context of eternity. ¶ But with great mercies will I gather thee. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “But with great mercies will I bring together thy captivity.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But with great mercy I will compassionate thee.” ¶ There are few topics that give me more joy than that of the gathering of Israel. She is no longer considered the rejected

⁸ “Go and cry in the ears of Jerusalem, saying, Thus saith the LORD; I remember thee, the kindness of thy youth, the love of thine espousals, when thou wentest after me in the wilderness, in a land that was not sown” (Jeremiah 2:2).

לֹא עַמִּי not my people of Hosea 1:9, but rather, בְּנֵי אֱלֹהִים sons of the living God (Hosea 1:10).

8 In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment, but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the LORD thy Redeemer.

In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment. The Targum (T) has, “For a little moment I removed the presence of my Shekinah.” The LXX (G) reads, “In a short wrath I turned away my face from thee.” Instead of in a little wrath, the Peshitta (S) has in a raging wrath (Lamsa) / with great indignation (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “In a moment of indignation have I hid my face a little while from thee.”

¶ Henderson points out the paronomasia in the first two words, in a little wrath, כֶּזֶר קָצֵף. Gill says: “The Syriac version renders it, ‘great wrath’; and so Schultens thinks the word signifies ‘overflowing wrath,’ and the vehemency of it; to which agrees R. Menachem [Apud Jarchi, Kimhi & Ben Melech, in loc.], who interprets it, ‘the heat of wrath.’” Ibn Ezra explains: “The kingdom of Israel will remain forever (comp. Daniel 7:27); and the days of the exile [or we may add, the days before the restoration of the Gospel—GB], though many, will be like a moment in comparison with the everlasting days of the future happiness.” Young says, “The loving-kindness that God will show ... is eternal. The designation Redeemer suggests that mercy has indeed been shown ... The lesson, however, is true for each time when because of our sins the Lord removes His presence from us.” Indeed, it is us who hide from the presence of the Lord. ¶ But with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the LORD thy Redeemer. The Targum (T) has, “Yea, for a short time from thee, but with everlasting kindness, which shall not cease, will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer.” The LXX (G) reads, “But with everlasting kindness I will have mercy on thee.”

¶ Birks notes that both here and in ISAIAH 54:10, “... the sacred name stands with emphasis at the very close.” The Lord had to permit Israel to be scattered but with great mercies He gathers her. Indeed, the Lord stands with outstretched arms. Our Redeemer invites us to follow Him and be embraced by His everlasting kindness [חֶסֶד עוֹלָם].

9 For this, [is-as] the waters of Noah unto me, for [as] I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth, so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee.

For this, the waters of Noah unto me, for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth. The Targum (T) has, “This shall be before me as the days of Noah, when I swore by my Word, that the waters of the deluge, which were in the days of Noah, shall no more pass over the earth.” The LXX (G) reads, “The Lord who delivered thee hath said, ‘From the flood which was in Noah’s time this is my purpose.’” Instead of the first waters of Noah, the Peshitta (S) has days of Noah. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “This thing is to me as in the days of Noe, to whom I swore, that I would no more bring in the waters of Noe upon the earth.” ¶ Alexander writes [as do several others]: “Instead of בְּנֵי אֱלֹהִים [For waters—GB], one or two manuscripts have כִּי־יָמֵי all in one word, meaning as the days of Noah, and Kimhi speaks of this division as existing in some ancient codices of his day. This reading likewise appears in all the ancient versions but the Septuagint, and is preferred by Lowth (as in the days of Noah). It is also a remarkable coincidence that this expression occurs twice in the New Testament (Mathew 24:37, 1 Peter 3:20), but not in reference to this place or to the comparison here instituted. All the latest writers seem to be in favour of adhering to the common text, which is probably the only safe conclusion.” Cowles writes: “The case is like that of Noah’s flood in this respect, viz., that as God bound himself by a solemn oath never to drown the earth again with water; so had he bound himself never again (as before) to be wroth with and to rebuke his Zion.” Nägelsbach writes: “The Prophet supports the foregoing promise of ‘everlasting kindness’ by giving it equal rank with the promise made to Noah (Genesis 8:21 ff., 9:9 ff.). Jehovah Himself calls this promise an everlasting covenant (Genesis 9:16). And on this covenant, as on an immovable basis, rests the present stability of the earth. Here then the promise that the LORD will no more be wroth with Zion is put on a par with this covenant.” ¶ So have I sworn⁹ that I would not be wroth with thee. The Targum (T) has, “Thus I swear by my Word, that my anger shall not be hurled upon thee, O Jerusalem, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord, that will have mercy on thee.” The LXX (G) reads, “As I solemnly promised him at that time that I would no more be angry with the earth on thine account.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “So have I sworn not to be angry with thee, and not to rebuke thee.” ¶ Keith explains: “The expression, ‘I have sworn,’ implies that the Lord had given assurance in the most solemn way, and implies that all his declarations of ultimate peace to Israel would be observed as sacredly as his promise that the waters of the flood should not a second time destroy all flesh.” While there have been many periods of apostasy on the earth, the Lord has promised that with the restoration associated with the dispensation of the fulness of times, the Church would never fall away again.

⁹ שָׁבַע (to swear (denom. from שֶׁבַע seven; inasmuch as the septenary number was sacred).” Gesenius, W., & Tregelles, S. P. (2003). Gesenius’ Hebrew and Chaldee lexicon to the Old Testament Scriptures (p. 802).

10 For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace* be removed, saith the LORD that hath mercy on thee.

* KJV and Book of Mormon, peace; JST, people.

For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness [חֲסֶדִי] shall not depart from thee. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “rent” for removed, and ends with “O Jerusalem.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Nor in rebuking thee overturn the mountains; and that thy hills should no more be moved.” The Peshitta (Ⲥ) has “For the mountains shall be brought low” (Lamsa) / “Thou the mountains be abased” (BPE) and the hills bent downward.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “For the mountains shall be moved, and the hills shall tremble; but my mercy shall not depart from thee.” ¶ Alexander explains: “The meaning is not that God’s promise is as stable as the mountains, but that it is more so; they shall be removed, but it shall stand for ever.” Wade has: “A second interruption of God’s mercy to Israel is even more impossible than the removal of the unchangeable mountains.” Cowles has: “This declares not merely that the mountains shall sooner depart and the hills be sooner shaken on their foundations than God’s kindness shall depart and his covenant be shaken—(although it fully covers and implies this) but it means more, viz., that God’s kindness shall outlast the mountains and his covenant stand firm after the hills shall have been shaken to their deep foundations.” Birks has: “The rendering ‘may depart’ (Vitringa, Knobel) or ‘should the mountains depart’ (Henderson), is grammatically lawful. But the simpler version is confirmed by the words of our Lord himself,—‘Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away.’” Kay explains: “... the earth itself, with its granite mountains, shall decay; but not so God’s kindness [חֲסֶדִי].”

¶ Neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the LORD that hath mercy on thee [חֲסֶדִי]. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “So my kindness for thee shall not fail, nor shall the covenant of thy peace ever be changed.”

Instead of hath mercy on thee, the Peshitta (Ⲥ) has the Merciful One. ¶ Elder Russell M. Nelson taught: “Wearing the temple garment has deep symbolic significance. It represents a continuing commitment. Just as the Savior exemplified the need to endure to the end, we wear the garment faithfully as part of the enduring armor of God. Thus we demonstrate our faith in Him and in His eternal covenants with us. The Lord assured that even though ‘the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my people be removed’ (JST, Inspired Version, ISAIAH 54:10). Surely we would not ever want knowingly to discard from us an emblem of His everlasting covenant.”¹⁰ Henderson suggests: “That these promises cannot apply to the past history of the Jews as a nation, is evident from the fact of their present dispersion, which has continued nearly eighteen centuries.” But now, in the dispensation of the fulness of times, Ephraim and Judah will be brought back from their dispersion.

vv. 11–17. Elder Parley P. Pratt explains these verses: “Having traced the great restoration of the earth and its inhabitants, until we find them in the full enjoyment of the promises made to their fathers; and having learned that a future state is not a state of shadows and fables, but something tangible, even a more enduring substance; we shall now take a view of the division of their land, and the laying out of their city, even the holy city, where the tabernacle of God and his sanctuary shall be forever more; for of course this was the city sought for by Abraham and others, who found it not. This view is given in the last chapter of Ezekiel, where he divides the land, by lots to the whole twelve tribes; and lays off the city, and sanctuary in the midst, with its twelve gates, three on each side, the whole lying four-square. But in his 47th chapter, we have a description of a beautiful river, which will issue forth from the eastern front of the temple from under the sanctuary, and run eastward into the Dead Sea, healing the waters and causing a very great multitude of fishes spread from Engedi and Eneglaim, the fishers spread forth their nets; while the miry places shall not be healed, but shall be given to salt. And on either side shall grow all trees for meat,¹¹ whose leaf shall not fade, nor shall the fruit thereof be consumed; it shall bring forth new fruit according to its months, because of the waters issuing from the sanctuary, and their fruits shall be for meat, and their leaves for medicine. But to set forth more fully the building of the city, and the materials of which it will be built, we quote ISAIAH 54:11, to the end of the chapter: ‘O thou afflicted, tossed with tempest, and not comforted, behold, I will lay thy stones with fair colours, and lay thy foundations with sapphires. And I will make thy windows of agates, and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders of pleasant stones. And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children. In righteousness shalt thou be established: thou shalt be far from oppression; for thou shalt not fear: and from terror; for it shall not come near thee. Behold, they shall surely gather together, but not by me: whosoever shall gather together against thee shall fall for thy sake. Behold, I have created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, and that bringeth forth an instrument for his work; and I have created the waster to destroy. No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord.”¹² Some of these verses seem particularly pointed to the construction of the New Jerusalem, and to the Millennium, but also have application to Zion, or the restored Church. Evil forces will form against the Saints but the Lord will comfort and protect His disciples.

¹⁰ Elder Russell M. Nelson, Personal Preparation for Temple Blessings, Ensign (CR), May 2001, p. 32.

¹¹ Meat here means food, as in much of the Old Testament.

11 ¶ O thou afflicted, tossed with tempest, [and] not comforted! Behold, I will lay thy stones with fair colours, and lay thy foundations with sapphires.

O thou afflicted, tossed with tempest, [and] not comforted! The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “O distressed city that receiveth affliction, concerning her the nations say, She shall not be comforted.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “For he said for thee, Be appeased, Lord.’ thou afflicted and storm beaten! art thou not comforted?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “O poor little one, tossed with tempest, without all comfort.” ¶ Cowles explains: “In these verses the church appears first as a lone female, long afflicted, tempest-tossed, and not comforted: then as a city, walled and adorned magnificently; the very conception of Zion in that ancient age.” Wordsworth suggests: “Here is another allusion to the Flood.” Nägelsbach notes: “Now the blessing is extended to all. Zion was wretched, hunted, comfortless in her youth and widowhood. לֹא נִחְמָה [not comforted] recalls לֹא רָחַמָה [not having obtained mercy] (Hosea 1:6) ... What a contrast between this past and the future which the Prophet has in mind.” Barnes writes: “The idea is that of a ship that is driven by the tempest; or any object that is tossed about with a whirlwind.”

¹² Pratt, Parley P. A Voice of Warning and Instruction to All People Or, an Introduction to the Faith and Doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 4 December 1846), pp. 127–129.

¶ Behold, I will lay thy stones with fair colours, and lay thy foundations with sapphires. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “Behold, I lay the stoned of thy pavement with Mosaic (the Royal Polyglot reads סִבְיָ, ‘stibium’), and thy foundations with costly stones.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Behold I am preparing for thee carbuncles for thy building stones, and the sapphire for thy foundations.” Instead of fair colors, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has beryl. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, for the first half, “Behold I will lay thy stones in order.” ¶ Birks has: “The figure now changes, from a wife restored to favour and blessed with children, to a city after storms and ruin rebuilt in magnificence and beauty ... The true meaning is that the stones would not be coarse and rude, but costly and beautiful, like the sapphire foundations.” And it would not be just any city, there being an allusion to the New Jerusalem. Keith writes: “A similar but more detailed description of the holy, the new Jerusalem, is given in Revelation 21:18.” Cowles has: “God will rebuild her walls from their very base; will lay her stones in the fine paint used by the ancients upon and about the eye: will make sapphires her foundations; her battlements (not ‘windows’) of rubies (‘agate’) sparkling and gleaming in the sunbeams; and her gates of flashing gems (‘carbuncles’) and all her borders with stones most beautiful.—This passage is the quarry of thought and figure whence the Revelator John drew out his material for the New Jerusalem (Revelation 21). —Remarkably the Hebrew word, ‘I will lay,’ i.e., thy stones, is always used elsewhere for the quiet lying down of animals to take their rest. The conception seems to be pastoral—an image of peaceful repose. —‘Windows,’ from the word which means the sun, probably refer to the shining battlements and gilded towers which reflected the sunbeams.” I studiously avoid trying to determine what plants, animals or precious stones are meant from the Hebrew. But as a Chilean I could not help notice that for סִבְיָ, LHI, and several others, suggests what amounts to our national stone, “lapis-lazuli.” Whitehouse mentions: “The word here rendered by fair colours (פִּינִי) properly means the stibium, ‘antimony,’ or, more accurately stated, sulphuret of antimony, corresponding to the kohl used by the Orientals at the present day. This substance was used in painting the eyes and eyebrows of fashionable women (such as Jezebel in 2 Kings 9:30) in order to give them a more distinctive appearance. The stibium consisted of black metallic powder, which was applied partly in a dry state and partly as ointment to the eyelids and brows. It was supposed that the dark rim enhanced the brilliant appearance of the eyes ... Ewald and Dillmann held that the meaning of the passage is that instead of the stones being laid in ordinary mortar they were to be laid in this black stibium, so that they would gleam forth like a woman’s brilliant eyes.” Some exegetes point us to

